INCREASED INTEREST

Shown in the Tuberculosis Exhibition At City Hall

Large attendance characterized the lectures Saturday and Sunday at the tuberculosis exhibit. The subject for Saturday afternoon was "The treatment of tuberculosis in children."

Dr. H. C. Hallowell presided, and in opening said that he felt justified in assuming to express to the Quincy Women's Club the thanks of the community, for the interest and energy shown in bringing this exhibit to the attention of the people. Also for the establishment and maintaining a district nurse. If the Woman's Club did nothing more it justified its being.

We disagree on many things, and to find a thing upon which we all agree is really a rare thing. The new gospel is that tuberculosis is not heredity. It is contagious in a communitative way, and is preventative. How best to prevent, and how best to cure, is the object of these meetings. We have learned much as to its treatment. It does not need medication, but air, pure air, and sunlight; good food and nourishment do the rest.

Dr. Hallowell then introduced Mrs. Robert Williams, a delegate to the international tuberculosis congress at Washington.

Mrs. Williams spoke briefly of the work of this important congress, and of the enthusiasm shown at the meetings.

Frank E. Parlin, superintendent of schools was the next speaker. One of the points emphasized by Mr. Parlin was the development of good strong healthful bodies of the growing generation. If this disease is to be conquered we must cut off the influence of new cases. The best time is to begin with the youth. There are several necessary things to check the spread of tuberculosis,—fresh air, wholesome food, sunlight and rest. We also need some other things large lungs, good stomachs, strong circulation and good steady nerves. We give attention to the minds and neglect the body. We will never produce the best possible intellectual and morals until we give attention to the body. Athletics does more for temperance among young men than anything else.

We must begin with the children. Instead of having children four or five hours a day in school, bending their stomachs over desks, we want to send them to playgrounds where they can get air and sunlight. By keeping them in school leaning over desks, we restrict breathing, and draw the blood to the head. Instead of cultivating the brain which is not ready to take things they can not understand, we should send the children out into the air. It was nothing short of cruelty to send children to sit four or five hours in school.

We need to give careful attention to physical condition. We can do more to check disease on the playgrounds. Then children will convert the household. They are our missionaries, and do more in the home than elsewhere. No girl should graduate from the High school until she has had a course in plain housekeeping. Let us learn to live physically, and then we can live intellectually and morally.

Dr. Henry T. Bowditch of the Children's Hospital, the next speaker, said tuberculosis takes off one-seventh of the world's population and we cannot estimate what proportion are children. Ignorance is the source of all evil of all tuberculosis. It is right to suppose that parents are ignorant of the disease and that children take disease from their parents. Therefore education is necessary. That is what we want to do, by three things, food, air and sunlight. We direct that you open your windows. Not to send children to school too soon. Let them be animals and vegetate.

If a child is sick take him out of school and let him get his footing. His education will come later. From babyhood it is a continual fight to get fresh air. Good food associated with fresh air and sunlight will produce healthy bodies. The boys and girls are true missionaries. They can be educated to know which knife, fork, spoon and napkin is theirs. A child of four years can be taught by a sympathetic mind. You all have a mission to perform and we want your aid. You have a great opportunity and the results will be tremendous.

Tuberculosis is fought in three ways. Lets us help you to find out cases. Then you help us to help others to help themselves, and you have the keynote of success.

If you once try to live with your windows open, you will never go back to a closed house. Milk is the source of all evil in children. Do not wait too long before you call a doctor. An ounce of prevention is worth pounds of pain and suffering. It is your duty to bring children up healthy so that they may bring up their children.

Mrs. Emily C. Fisher, chairman of the Norfolk County Health Commission told of the program for the Civic Federation League for Nov. 12, 13 and 14.

SATURDAY EVENING.

Dr. Charles S. Adams of Wollaston presided at the evening session, and the speaker was Dr. W. H. Potter of the Harvard Dental School. His topic was "Hygiene of the mouth." His talk was illustrated by a large number of pictures thrown upon a screen by the stereopticon. These showed the process of decay of the teeth and how much they had to do with health.

Teeth were to grind the food for the stomach. Food lodges along the edges of the gums and causes decay. This could be prevented to a large extent by scrubbing. Teeth should be cleaned twice a day and with tooth powder once a day at bed time. A clean mouth was as important to health as a clean body. Great care should also be given to the teeth of children.

Attention was called during the evening to the following formular for a tooth powder:—First quality precipitated carbonate of calcium, 6 drams; perborate of sodium, 1 dram; powdered castile soap 20 grains; true oil of wintergreen, 5 drops. Mix

SUNDAY AFTERNOON.

Dr. J. T. Reynolds presided at the Sunday afternoon meeting, and the speaker was Dr. Cleveland Floyd, who spoke on "The conservation of na- of natural resources as applied to the problem of tuberculosis."

Dr. Floyd said this question was of great importance in regard to the economic and industrial position of our country. Our geographical centre will remain, but if our great natural resources are to last is the great issue of the day. At the pace we are living, the resources are being used up fast. This country is

PROUD DAY

For the Quincy Societies Which Took Part in Boston Parade

Boston witnessed on Sunday, a spectacle that she has never before seen in her history, and probably never will see again during the lives of those who took part in the celebration the gathering of 40,000 Catholic young men in military array.

The big Holy Name parade, that has been awaited and looked forward to for the past month, is now history, and it will always be remembered as one of the biggest events in the history of Boston.

There were over 40,000 men in line, representing societies from all the Catholic churches of Boston and the surrounding towns for many miles. But of all these, there were no better drilled companies than those that represented the good old "Granite City." All along the line of march applause greeted the companies from St. John's church, and it was well deserved, for the Quincy society made a fine showing.

The West Quincy and Atlantic societies also showed up well, and the people all over Quincy may well feel proud of the showing made.

The St. John's and Sacred Heart companies left Quincy on the same train, and were joined by the society from St. Francis church of South Braintree, in the South station. Led by Commander Edward J. Lennon and Rev. Julian E. Johnstone, they marched to their place on Marlborough street, to await the arrival of the 9th division. About 1.45 there was a stir and down the street came the ninth, headed by Mace Gay's band, Mayor William T. Shea of Quincy and Mayor John S. Kent of Brockton. The St. John's companies fell in behind Whitman and were followed immediately by the Sacred Heart and St. Mary's companies.

The local companies received great applause as they passed the reviewing stand, in which were Archbishop O'Connell, Cardinal Gibbons, Mayor Hibbard of Boston and other state and church dignitaries.

Many Quincy people were noticed along the line of march and they applauded liberally as the local companies passed. The last companies broke ranks about 6.45, and the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Boston diocese was over.

TWO CHARGES.

William Oswald, Jr., was arrested by Inspector McKay Saturday night for the larceny of a watch from Fred Evans at Quincy. In court he was held for the grand jury. Some time ago Oswald was in court for running a gaming place at Quincy and was fined $50. He was given time to raise the fine but later defaulted. This morning he was arraigned on the default warrant, and a $50 fine imposed.

Hallow'een Parties Were Numerous

Miss Idena Howarth of 22 Blake street, Wollaston, gave a jolly Hallowe'en party to fourteen of her young friends Saturday evening.

The first game was "The followings of the maze" the prizes were small, but created much laughter. This was followed by the singing of popular songs. Miss Louise Nash at the piano and Miss Andrea Dahl violinist. Mrs. Harry Howarth hypnotized four of the party which made no end of fun.

After the mind reading by Leslie Westcott, Mrs. Howarth and Miss Alice Thompson led the way to the dining room where apples, grapes, cake, individual pumpkin pies, candy and sweet cider were enjoyed.

The cake contained a ring which Miss Eleanor Roberts secured. George Roberts found a penny, and Mrs. Howarth the thimble. The centre-piece was a huge pumpkin and small ones for favors.

By the light of the jack-o-lanterns, ghost stories were told, and the game 'Wink-um ended the evening of mirth making. The decorations throughout the house were in keeping with Hallowe'en—in the parlor, oak boughs, yellow crepe paper with numerous small pumpkins; the dining room artisticly arranged with autumn leaves festoons of red and green paper, the lights softened with yellow shades.

At Wollaston.

The Phi Delta Alpha club of Wollaston held its annual Hallowe'en party Saturday evening in Odd Fellows' hall. At 8.30 the party assembled at the banquet table, which was artistically decorated with the club colors, green and gold. The tables looked extremely inviting and proved to contain many delicacies, prepared by the members of the club.

At the heads of the tables were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kay and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Johnson, who acted as chaperons. Among the principle delicacies were two mystery cakes, which contained rings, tape, buttons, and money. As each one ate his cake, he anxiously looked for the mysterious articles and the fortunate or unfortunate individuals who found something in their pieces were: Chester Allen, money; John Kay, button; George Stebbins, tape; Dick Jones, ring; Ethel Bland, ring; Grace Smith, tape, Gertrude Barlow, money; Myron Stebbins, button.

After the banquet was over the hall was cleared for games, which were enjoyed by all present. Later Harry Campbell and Fred Wood took turns at the piano, and dancing was enjoyed. The evening's fun ended with everyone around the piano singing the ever popular college songs.

HALLOWE'EN AT WOLLASTON.

Hallowe'en at Wollaston was a comparatively quiet one. The little ones were out with their jack-o-lanterns, and Newport avenue was covered with enough confetti for several ordinary weddings. A band of about 25 youngsters invaded the hill, bombarding windows with bean blowers and ringing doorbells but doing no malicious mischief. Early in the evening the members of the Quincy High football team, together with their lady friends assembled at the Wollaston school for a straw ride.

Miss Lindberg.

Simple were the services that marked the last tribute of the living to the dead, Sunday afternoon when all that was mortal of Hildur Theresa A. Lindberg was laid at rest in the family lot at West Quincy.

The services were held at her late home, 160 Elm street, at 1 o'clock and were largely attended. The funeral procession left the house at 1.30, for the Swedish Baptist church where the services were held at 2 o'clock, Rev. A. P. Hanson pastor of the church officiating.

The church was filled to the doors with relatives and friends to pay their last respect to the deceased. Rev. Mr. Hanson spoke of the life and character of her who lay so silently before him. He also spoke of her constant attendance at the church and of interest taken in the Sunday school, and how much she would be missed by those who had associated with her. The flowers were beautiful and completely surrounded the casket.

MAY ASK KAISER TO RELIEVE HIM

Chancellor Von Buelow Incurs Displeasure of German People

THE PRESS DEMANDS A CHANGE

The Emperor's Interview Which Has Aroused Ire of Other Nations Has Slipped Through Fingers of Officials Who Were Supposed to Know Better--Believed to Involve Germany In a Grave Domestic Crisis

Berlin, Nov. 2.—Chancellor Von Buelow's position appears to be almost untenable. Far and wide throughout the empire the newspapers of all parties discuss with varying degrees of mockery, amazement and regret the government's explanation of how what purported to be enormously important utterances of the emperor, affecting three great powers, passed through the hands of the chancellor and a long line of foreign office officials, without seemingly having been considered by any of them or even read by most of those responsible for the delicate foreign relations.

The emperor fully condones Prince Von Buelow's part in the affair, but the chancellor's authority and prestige with the country have been so shaken that he may again ask the emperor to relieve him.

All the Radical, Liberal and Socialist journals utilize the event to urge upon the country a demand for a ministry responsible to the parliament and the people, instead of the continuance of ministerial responsibility to the crown alone.

It is learned that the emperor handed the manuscript of the interview which appeared in the London Daily Telegraph and the authorship of which is still undisclosed to Baron Von Jenisch, who was attached to his entourage while the emperor was absent from the capital a short time ago, as the representative of the foreign office, with the direction to send it to Von Buelow.

The chancellor described the note from Von Jenisch, which accompanied the manuscript, as referring to the enclosure as an article, not as an interview, so that the chancellor did not consider it necessary to give it his personal attention. The manuscript consisted of a number of small flimsy-like sheets, the handwriting being difficult to decipher, and the chancellor referred it to Herr von Mueller, the minister at The Hague, who was acting as the chancellor's private secretary.

The latter, in his turn and without examining the document, sent it to the foreign office, where, in the absence of Herr Von Schoen, the secretary for foreign affairs, it was read by subordinate officials, who did not attach importance to its contents, and returned through the proper channels without further examination until transmitted by one of the imperrial secretaries to England, where, as The Taglische Rundschau, one of the newspapers that is read in court, aristocratic and military circles, described it: "It emerged gayly into the world, infuriating the French, Russians, Dutch and Japanese, chilling the British, exciting bitterness and nervous irritation on the part of our own people and undermining our neighbors' belief in our reliability."

The whole subject is likely to come up for debate in the reichstag, which will reassemble on Wednesday.

It is reported that Herr Von Schoen, secretary for foreign affairs, has also tendered his resignation in connection with the recent publication in a London newspaper of the emperor's interview.

London Press Comment

London, Nov. 2.—The London papers comment ironically upon what they describe as "ingenious semi-official explanations" from Berlin concerning the emperor's published interview and consider that the effect of these will be greatly to increase distrust of the German foreign office and its methods and probably lead to still greater ill-feeling between Great Britain and Germany.

The Daily Telegraph gives no further explanation of the affair, which, its Berlin correspondent declares, involves Germany in the gravest domestic crisis she has experienced since the dismissal of Bismarck.

Vessel Burned at Sea

New York, Nov. 2.—Steamer Admiral Schley, from Port Antonio, had on board the captain and crew of the schooner Lulie L. Pollard, New York from Fernandina, Fla., with a cargo of lumber, and which was burned at sea Saturday night. Captain Powell of the Pollard says the steward struck a match in the engine room to light the sidelight when there was an explosion which set fire to the entire forward house, containing two tanks of gasolene. The fire spread rapidly and the seamen were forced to flee to the stern without saving any of their effects.

Woman Charged With Arson

Oldtown, Me., Nov. 2.—Mrs. Bina Tourtellotte, aged 50, who works in the woolen mills, was arrested on the charge of arson, the warrant alleging that she set fire to the summer cottage of Charles H. Dray of this place at Northport campground last Thursday, causing the destruction of five buildings and a loss of $15,000. Mrs. Tourtellotte occupied apartments in this city in a block owned by Dray and spent last summer at Northport campground.

THE LABOR QUESTION

Republican Legislatures Always Conserved Wage Earners

Looking facts squarely in the face, the workingman of this state cannot fail to be convinced that in any inclination he may feel toward yielding to persuasion to vote for Mr. Vahey from a mere labor, non-partisan standpoint, he is influenced more by apparent or actual temporary depression in general, or in his own branch of trade, than by any evidence of anything the Democratic party of this or any other state has ever done for labor, except in the way of glittering promises. But any intelligent worker, if he reflect, will see for himself that the multitude of labor laws for his protection and aid which stand on the statute books of Massachusetts have been placed there by Republican legislatures and signed by Republican governors. Massachusetts is the banner state for salutary labor laws.

It is notably the Democratic states of the south where labor is less honored, where beneficial labor laws are conspicuous for their absence. Does the workingman of Massachusetts want to set Democratic campaign oratory over against the voluminous array of Republican performance crystalized into law, all passed by Republican legislators? Does he believe for a moment that the Republican party, which has set up for him and children a Gibraltar of protection, is going to turn back upon itself and an honorable record in this regard and be his enemy in the future? Or does he believe, as he must, that the same humane and liberal and helpful policy toward the men who give the state her industrial prosperity and distinction will naturally and logically and consistently be maintained in the future by the party which inaugurated it? If the Republican party had ever been a foe to the workingman or niggardly in its support of beneficial laws, there might be a shadow of reason for criticism of it and for credence for Democratic pretension. But the contrary is the unassailable fact and there can be no argument to controvert it. We believe that the Massachusetts workingman, on election day, will by his vote "speak well of the bridge which has carried him safely over," as it will continue doing just as long as he trusts to it.

Strange, isn't it, that Republican legislatures should pass voluminous laws for the betterment of the condition of labor and workingmen be living every day under their beneficent operation and then when some clap-trap Democratic spouter comes along and tells them that the Republican party is their enemy and, oppressor men can be found who will give them even a respectful hearing? And yet it is the cold fact that cheeky Democratic orators will stand up in the face of the liberal labor code of Massachusetts, passed by successive Republican legislators, and coolly tell an audience that there is no hope for them in this life except by going back on the party which has enacted all these laws and voting for the Democratic will-do-all-sorts-of-things-for-you sometime.

The Lawrence Telegram says that in Massachusetts the most fatuous rainbow-chaser does not expect the state to go for Bryan. But aside from that, it is of the utmost importance that it should go for Draper by a handsome majority and that the legislature should be of the decided Republican complexion which will make it efficient in staying Governor Draper's hands in the work of an economical and salutary conduct of all the detail of state administration. This fact should not be lost sight of for a moment in the interest naturally felt in the national campaign.

The Boston Globe finds that in many states the voters are discussing state and national issues separately and says that Massachusetts has as good reason as any other state for giving special consideration to state issues. While we can hardly see but there should be harmony between both discussions, the Republicans will welcome any discussion of state issues strictly which can be suggested. If there is any state in which the Republicans have reason to be proud of their state administration it is in Massachusetts.

It is up to the young man of Massachusetts, about to cast his first vote, to vote upon full full information. If he does, he will vote with the Republican party of progress, rather than with the Democratic party of erraticism, retrogression and decadence. He has only to read the record. The story of the Democratic party for half a century is as plethoric with black marks as the weekly report card of a bad boy at school.

Mr. Vahey's attempt to make Lieutenant Governor Draper a sponsor or an apologist for graft will fall flat upon all fair-minded citizens. He is not that sort of man. As Whittier once wrote of another eminent citizen: "There is nothing base or small or craven in his soul's broad plan."

It ought to be a sufficient answer to any intimation that Mr. Draper is in any way inimical to labor measures, that he signed most of those which were passed by the last legislature and vetoed none.

Mr. Vahey is achieveing a high measure of success imitating Mrs. Partington and her broom.

MADE A FINE SHOWING

Parade of Forty Thousand Catholics In Streets of Boston

Boston, Nov. 2.—What was probably the greatest parade of a religious character in the history of any New England city brought to a close yesterday the centenary celebration of the founding of the Roman Catholic diocese of Boston, which was begun on Wednesday last.

It is estimated that fully 40,000 men, representing the Holy Name societies of the Roman Catholic churches in the five counties which constitute the diocese, Suffolk, Middlesex, Essex, Norfolk and Plymouth, with over 150 priests, participated, marching to the music of 100 bands. The route taken was through the wide streets of the Back Bay section, and thousands of spectators witnessed the marchers, carrying simply the Stars and Stripes and the banners of the societies of their respective churches. Starting shortly after noonday it was long after dark before the last company had been disbanded.

Passing before the archepiscopal residence, the parade was reviewed by the highest dignitary of the Roman Catholic church in America, Cardinal Gibbons, who came here to be present at the closing exercises, and Archbishop O'Connell, together with a number of visiting prelates and monsignori, from a reviewing stand which had been erected for the occasion.

For a body of civilians who had received but little drilling the men made an excellent appearance and marched with almost military precision.

The day was begun with a solemn pontifical mass at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross. Last night in the same edifice the Te Deum service was held, bringing to a conclusion the celebration of the 100th anniversary of the Boston diocese.

GOT $4000 WORTH OF JEWELRY

But Burglars Overlooked Diamonds Valued at $15,000

Boston, Nov. 2.—Safe-breakers entered the jewelry store of Samuel J. Hahn at 1050 Washington street some time early Sunday and, smashing the safe with nitro-glycerine placed in holes drilled in the back, secured $4000 worth of jewelry and made their escape. A bag containing diamonds valued at $15,000 was overlooked by the thieves. The show cases were stripped of watches and jewelry.

Two white men, one believed to be a professional safe-breaker known to the police, and a negro had been seen about the store the past week and the police are seeking the trio as suspects.

Suspected of Smuggling Chinese

Pensacola, Fla., Nov. 2.—Suspected of having engaged in smuggling Chinese from Mexico to the United States, schooner Freddie W. Alton of Boston is detained here by customs officials. Captain Daly, master of the vessel, disappeared when the investigation began. The Alton sailed from Boston Sept. 1, steering straight for the Mexican coast, remaining off Vera Cruz for about fifteen days and then proceeding to Pensacola. The vessel carries a crew of twelve men.

Long Distance Wireless Telephony

Washington, Nov. 2.—Examinations by naval experts in wireless telephony, as to the sound which will carry the greatest distance, develops that the steam siren, under seventy-two pounds of steam pressure, will emit a blast which may be heard forty miles. Next comes the steam whistle, the sound of which is carried twenty miles. Among the softer sounds which carry a considerable distance is the whistling buoy, which has frequently been heard fifteen miles.

Sailors Not Enjoying Themselves

Amoy, Nov. 2.—Two thousand men of the second squadron of the American fleet were allowed to land yesterday and were served at the reception grounds with an European luncheon and a Chinese dinner. The men, however, are showing great disappointment because they are not permitted to leave the grounds, restrictions having been placed upon them because the authorities do not believe that the city is yet free from cholera and plague.

Car Cut Off Cab Seat

Boston, Nov. 2.—Thomas M. Brennan, aged 53, was almost instantly killed by being knocked from the seat of a hansom cab he was driving by an electric car. The seat of the hansom was cut cleanly off by the car. In the cab were Mrs. Frances Hoye and Mrs. Heaseman, who were on their way from the Hotel Touraine to visit Cambridge friends. Neither was injured.

Election Day In Newfoundland

St. John's, Nov. 2.—The general election for the colonial legislature is being held today, Premier Bond leading the government forces and Edward Morris the opposition. Both parties have full tickets in every district. While it is impossible to forecast the result, both parties express confidence in victory. The last house stood 28 to 8.

Korean Outbreak Subdued

Seoul, Nov. 2.—The thirteenth division of the Japanese army, after having been on duty here since the outbreak of hostilities with the Koreans, is embarking for Japan. This action is taken as significant of the termination of the trouble.

TRIBUTE TO MR. TAFT

How China Apologized For the American Boycott.

JUDGE SIGNALLY HONORED.

Recognition of His Efforts to Bring About Remission of Boxer Indemnity. National Friendship Reaffirmed and Commercial Amity Restored.

It was through Mr. Taft, when he was in Shanghai last fall, that the Chinese apologized for the American boycott that was instituted in the kingdom a few years ago and expressed their appreciation of the remission by our government of the indemnity granted because of the Boxer rebellion. When it became known that Mr. Taft was coming to Shanghai representatives of all the Chinese guilds in the city met and arranged to give him a suitable reception. The guilds in China control every branch of commercial activity and united form in every city and community a thoroughly representative body. Each of the scores of guilds in Shanghai took part in the demonstration to Mr. Taft. For the purpose the beautiful Yuyuen gardens in Bubbling Well road were obtained. Governmental cognizance of the greeting to Mr. Taft was through the vicarious participation of Tuan Fang, viceroy of the Liangkiang province, in which Shanghai is. The viceroy ordered his representative, the taotai tong, to spare no expense in arranging a suitable reception for Mr. Taft and to present the bills to him.

Americans long resident in Shanghai agreed that no such signal honors had ever been paid to another foreigner by the Chinese. A heavy rainfall, which began the previous night, threatened to mar or wholly prevent the garden party. At great cost and an expenditure of labor the committee completely roofed over with canvas a good share of the gardens, including long walks and paths, so that Mr. Taft and the other guests were enabled to move about freely, fully protected from the storm.

All of the speakers referred to the obligations under which China had been laid by the remission of the Boxer indemnity and the contributions made by Americans for the relief of victims of the recent famine in China. Mr. Taft was cheered and applauded for several minutes when he said:

"When I was here a little more than two years ago there was just a little bit of mist, a little bit of fog, in the clear sunshine of our friendship. But we gave assurances at that time which I am glad to say have been carried out on the one hand, and on the other there is every evidence that the mist has cleared away. The boycott is a thing of the past. It is a closed episode."

Two young Chinese ladies bore forward a massive silver bowl and presented it to Mr. Taft as a memento of his visit. The bowl, which was a rare specimen of Chinese silver work, was inscribed, "Presented to the Honorable William H. Taft, Secretary of War of the United States of America, as a Memento of the Garden Party Given In His Honor by the Chinese Residents of Shanghai."

Copious comments were printed by the eastern press upon the reception by the Chinese to Mr. Taft and its significance as a tribute to the man and as a renewal of the old time bonds of amity between the nations.

LABOR MOVEMENT IS NONPARTISAN.

Daniel J. Keefe, Sixth Vice President of the A. F. of L., Insists That President Gompers Has Been Misrepresented and Denies That Any Attempt Has Been Made to Swing Labor Vote to Bryan.

TAFT A FRIEND OF LABORING MAN.

"We insist that the labor movement shall remain as free and independent from political domination as it has ever been in its history."

That sentence is the keynote to a statement made by Daniel J. Keefe of Detroit, Mich., president of the International Longshoremen, Marine and Transport Workers' association and sixth vice president of the American Federation of Labor.

In his statement, which he made in answer to a query from the editor of the Buffalo Republic, Mr. Keefe says:

"I desire to say that the American Federation of Labor is not committed to any political party, nor has any candidate for president been indorsed by the executive council.

"I am of the belief that the general public does not fully understand the position of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor in the present campaign. The policy of the labor movement is nonpartisan and is as follows:

"We desire to refute here the aspersions that have been cast upon the executive council and particularly one of its members, President Gompers, that it is our purpose or his to dictate to the working people of our country how they shall cast their votes in the coming elections, nor has any one promised the vote of the working people to any particular party. We have strongly, clearly and emphatically, as it was our duty, presented the situation in which the working people of the country find themselves, the demands which labor has made upon both political parties as to necessary action, which they should take, the treatment they have received, and have appealed to the judgment and patriotism of the working people and the friends of labor throughout the country, since both political parties have spoken, to make their choice as their conscience may dictate.

"The misrepresentation of newspapers and others to the contrary notwithstanding, we repeat and insist, and we have so conducted and propose to so conduct our course, that the labor movement shall remain as free and independent from political domination as it has ever been in its history.

"The foregoing does not commit the American Federation of Labor to any political party and is nonpartisan, which permits union men to vote for whom they may please for president and other offices without fear of criticism. All of which I heartily indorse.

"Some of the members of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor no doubt will support and vote for Mr. Bryan, which is their individual right. I shall support and vote for Mr. Taft, who was admitted to membership in the International Brotherhood of Steam Shovel and Dredge Men on account of his strong advocacy of the enforcement of the eight hour law on all government work coming under the jurisdiction of the war department, and if the eight hour day did not become an established fact in connection with dredge work it was the fault of the workmen and not the fault of the secretary of war.

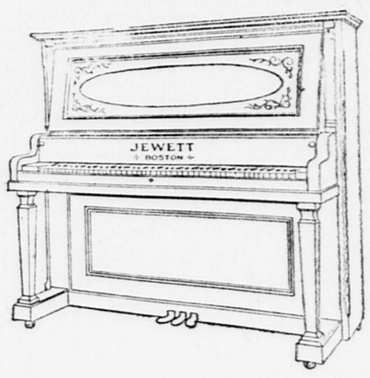

"I might add further that Mr. Taft, as secretary of war, has done more to inforce laws in favor of organized labor than all his predecessors."

New Models of the

JEWETT PIANOS

(Famous for Forty-Eight Years)

The progress of the Jewett piano has made notable changes in the piano situation. More Jewett pianos are probably sold in New England each year than of any other make of equal grade.

The growth in popularity of the Jewett is nothing short of marvelous. The reason for it can be found only in the wonderfully sweet, clear tone of this piano, its beautiful styles and excellent finish, and its great durability.

The new models are handsomer than any we have shown before. We recommend them as the best high grade pianos ever offered at these prices.

Uprights $375 to $450. Grands $650

Monthly payments accepted.

We have now in stock a large number

Second-Hand Pianos

Which we can sell at very low prices

If you want a good serviceable instrument at a very small expense it will pay you to see our rebuilt pianos. We can furnish used upright Pianos in excellent condition at one-half to one-third original prices—from say $150 up, and square Pianos at from $10 to $50.

And Time payments will be accepted.

Election Returns At the Y. M. C. A.

The Y. M. C. A. will receive election returns tomorrow night at the building on Washington street. The committee having the matter in charge have arranged to take the returns by telephone in the gallery of the hall, where they will be put on glass and thrown on the screen by the stereopticon.

Other features of the evening's program will be music by the boy's orchestra of seven pieces, illustrated songs, and refreshments. A good time is assured.

COLDEST OF SEASON.

Sunday was the coldest day of the season, the temperature at noon being 42 degrees. The coldest day of the season previous to Sunday was Saturday, when the temperature at noon was 47 degrees.

A year ago Sunday, Quincy had 50 degree weather, and it was not until Nov. 15 that the temperature went so low as on Sunday. The coldest November day last year was 38 on Nov. 30. The coldest November day for twelve years was Nov. 29, 1903, when the temperature at noon was 23 degrees.

OCTOBER CRIME.

The report of Probation Officer Francis A. Spear for the month of October shows that the total number of criminal cases before the district court that month was 205, an increase of 14 cases over October 1907.

Of the total, 107 were for drunkenness; 22 for larceny; auto laws and Lord's day act, 11 each; assault, 14; violation of fish and game laws, 12; liquor laws, 10.

SUNDAY RAID.

Chief Burrell with Inspector Goodhue and Officers Olson, Johnson, Holloran, Cahill, Phillips and DeCoste raided the premises of Antonio Paplie at 7 Brackett street Sunday night, and seized 6 quarter barrels of beer, 7 empty quarter barrels, and two cases of empty beer bottles. Paplie was arraigned in court.

Gym Stunts On Hallow'een

The senior and employed boys classes united in an impromptu Hallowe'en party at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Saturday evening. After subscribing a dime each for refreshments, which were prepared by H. Glover, L. Littlefield, and A. LeVangie, all proceeded to the gym. After a brisk wand drill, various races and other stunts were run off.

An obstacle race over and under the various pieces of apparatus created much fun and excitement. A team composed of Messrs, Ulrich, Morris Coulter and Tirrell were declared champions.

Prizes appropriate for the occasion were presented to the winners amid hearty applause. Winners received cabbages, while second men and relay racers got turnips, carrots, onions, etc.

After a good lunch it was voted to hold such a social the last of each month during the winter.

FUNERAL OF MANUEL COSTA.

The funeral of Manuel Costa, father of Capt. Charles P. Costa of the Central Fire station, and of Enos S. Costa of the Merrymount Granite Co., who died Saturday at 22 Phipps street, aged 88 years, was held this morning from St. John's church. Mass was celebrated by Rev. John J. Casey. Miss Mary McConaty was the organist and the Gregorian mass was sung by the regular choir. At the offertory, Joseph Burns sang "Domine Jesu Christi."

The burial was at St. Mary's cemetery, the bearers being James H. Sullivan, Patrick W. Driscoll, Michael Daly, Frank Clinton, Thomas Phelan and Thomas Cantfill. Representatives were present from the Land League and the Merrymount Granite Co. There were many beautiful floral tributes.

PARTY AT WEST QUINCY.

A surprise party was tendered to Charles G. Johnson at his home, 15 Buckley street, West Quincy, Saturday evening by a gathering of friends. Arthur Richardson presented him with a sweater having the colors and initial of the Morton A. C. base ball team. The party was a very jovial affair games being played and refreshments were served.

The gathering included: Misses Larson, Elvina Johnson, Julia Johnson, Hilda Loddenguard, Freda Johnson, Mary Hennessy, Elsie Mortenson, Edith Johnson, Nellie Anderson, Ellen Nelson, Rose Capiferri, Edith Nelson, Anna Hennessy, Ida Hallquist, Olga Lunquist, Olive Larsen, Mrs. Theo Sunnerberg, Elsie Johnson, Laura Jones, Ellen Anderson, and Charles Friberg, John Capiferri, Wilbur Richardson, Arthur Richardson, Henry Sandberg, William Anderson, George Freberg, Henry Dahl, John Johnson, Joe Mercurio, Arthur Mortruson, Fred Jackobson, Fred Allicoro, Charles Carlson, Theo. For Betterment Of Squantum

Squantum residents propose to be heard from, for they have organized into an association known as the Squantum Betterment Association. The organization was perfected Saturday evening at a meeting held at the bungalow of Mrs. James Foster. After some preliminary discussion on the needs of such an organization the following officers were elected:

President—Joseph J. Callahan.
Vice President—C. E. Carlson.
Secretary—George F. Sawyer, Jr.
Treasurer—A. F. Giesser.

Advisory Board—Charles Folsom, N. I. Coleman, W. J. Holmes, E. C. Nelson, William H. Chapple, James McManus, H. J. Berghans, Charles French and Baron Ferdinand Von Scholley.

Committee on Constitution and By-Laws—George T. Sawyer, Jr., Charles Folsom, C. E. Harper, N. T. Coleman, John Longhan, E. C. Nelson and C. W. Kokerda.

After the organization speeches were made by the newly elected officers and Messrs. Lawrence and Bestnick. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

The object of the association is to work for public improvements of that part of Quincy known as Squantum, and as it starts off with a membership of nearly two hundred, much can be accomplished.

Funeral of Robert P. Sullivan

With eight of the Iroquois club as bearers, the funeral of Robert P. Sullivan was held this morning from his late home, 255 Newbury avenue, Atlantic A requiem high mass was celebrated at 9 o'clock in the Sacred Heart church, Rev. J. E. Johnstone officiating. The choir sang Schmidt's requiem during the mass, John A. McGowan directing.

The church was crowded with relatives and friends, for "Bob" was well known throughout the city. The Knight of Columbus were present in a large numbers and others of the Iroquois club, who were not bearers.

The flowers were profuse in abundance, many large pieces being sent by relatives and friends of the family. There was a large standing wreath, marked "Bob" from the Iroquois club; gates ajar, marked "shopmate" from his fellow workmen at the Tubular Rivet and stud Co; a standing cross from the Knights of Columbus, and a huge standing wreath marked "Our First baseman," from the K. of C. baseball team.

The bearers were, Leo Ford, Leo Elcock, Thomas Elcock, Andrew Driscoll, William A. Carey, Daniel Driscoll, Alfred Bullock and David McIntosh. The burial was in the family lot in St. Mary's cemetery, West Quincy.

Going to the Dogs.

Dog-on that turtle, anyhow! He's most provoking slow;
If he were up to date he'd learn to use an automo.
Just like some men in business life, he to the dogs is going,
Because he will not ADVERTISE and keep his horn a-blowing.

QUINCY'S VOTE FOR GOVERNOR.

"As goes the city so goes the state and nation" is truer today of Quincy than of Hull. It has been verified in every State election since 1889, and in every presidential election since 1875.

During these years the State of Massachusetts has gone Republican fourteen years and Democratic four years, and so did Quincy. The Nation has gone Republican at six elections and Democratic at two elections, and so did Quincy.

Therefore the Quincy returns Tuesday will tell who is elected that day as Governor of Massachusetts and President of the United States. The vote in recent years has been:

Year	Republican Candidate	Vote	Democratic Candidate	Vote
1890	Brackett,	859	*Russell,	1095
1891	Allen,	1190	*Russell,	1373
1892	Haile,	1376	*Russell,	1546

Hon. Eben S. Draper Fit For the Governor's Chair.

EBEN S. DRAPER, the Republican candidate for governor, stands out as eminently one of the best types of the civilization and spirit of Massachusetts so far as it can be illustrated in the individual. Born on her soil, educated in her schools, from earliest manhood closely identified with one of her leading industries, thoroughly in touch with her institutions, devoted to her history and traditions, he is keenly alive to everything which makes for her development. Both by nature and training he is an ideal man to represent the honor and dignity of the commonwealth of Massachusetts in the office of governor. He is, moreover, a man of culture, a lover of literature and art—a man whom the cares of a busy industrial and commercial life have not hindered from refreshing and endowing his mind with the things which make for mental breadth and refinement. Study and reading he has supplemented by extensive travel, and, like all Americans who travel with their eyes and ears open and their minds in a state of constant receptivity as well, has absorbed broad ideas from a wide world, and no public question which may be submitted to him comes with its claim for attention to a man who is hedged about by a "pent-up Utica" of prejudice.

HE IS QUICK TO PERCEIVE, CAREFUL IN ANALYZATION, COGENT AND SOUND IN REASONING, DELIBERATIVE IN JUDGMENT, AND, WHEN HIS WAY IS MADE CLEAR TO HIS MIND AND CONSCIENCE, FEARLESS IN PURSUING IT.

During the period of his incumbency of the executive chair in the absence of Governor Guild the people of the state have come to know him for themselves and there has been no day but he has gained in their confidence and esteem and in their belief that he was "the right man in the right place," and that they do think so will be generally attested when the votes are counted on the night of November 3.

SKILLED IN THE LAW

Success of Mr. Taft as Solicitor General.

WON MANY NOTABLE SUITS.

Victorious In the Celebrated Alaskan Seal Fisheries Controversy—His Defense of the McKinley Bill—Refused Golden Offers For a Seat on the Federal Bench.

Mr. Taft's eight years of history making utility upon the bench of the Sixth federal circuit, during most of which period he was presiding judge, were prefaced by three years of high accomplishment as solicitor general of the United States. President Harrison picked him to be the legal representative of the United States in active litigation in 1890, when he was only thirty-three years old and still had three years of his elective term upon the superior court bench in Ohio to serve. Solicitor general of the United States at thirty-three! Scarcely more than a boy in years as ripened maturity is reckoned and already doing deeds of national moment—deeds of international moment, to be exact, for inside of two weeks of taking the oath he had put up to him the defense of the government in the Alaska seal fisheries controversy, at which the courts and the diplomats of three countries—the United States, England and Canada—had been dinging for fourteen years.

Briefly the sum and substance of it was this: We had captured and condemned to be sold the Canadian schooner Sayward for illegal sealing in Alaska waters. England and Canada supported the claim of the owner for damages, which we rejected. Pending arbitration the case was brought unexpectedly before the supreme court. It was clever tactics on the other fellow's part, and it put us in rather a pickle. While Canada would not be bound by an adverse decision if the case went against her—that is, she would not be compelled to accept the decision as final—should we lose the fact of our losing in our own court would count against us.

The new solicitor general sailed in. He read the documents. He clutched and held fast. When he emerged from the murk of international law, treaties, precedent and kindred clarities he had a 300 page brief ready to present to the court. It won for him and for the United States against two of the best lawyers in the land—Joseph H. Choate and Calderon Carlisle, Jr.

Then it fell to him to defend the McKinley bill in an action brought by an importing firm who objected to paying higher duties imposed by the bill and pleaded that Speaker Reed's way of counting a quorum, by which tactics the bill had passed the house of representatives, was unconstitutional. The importers urged that enough members present in the house, although constituting a numerical quorum, could break a quorum by not voting.

"If voting and not present is necessary to make a quorum, why is the speaker empowered to employ the sergeant at arms of the house to compel absentees to attend with the object of making a quorum?" queried Mr. Solicitor General Taft. The McKinley bill was saved.

The young solicitor general won, won, won and kept on winning for the government for the two years he was in office. Then President Harrison set him upon what Mr. Taft felt would be the track leading to his real ambition—the supreme court bench. He named him as circuit judge. Judge Taft accepted unhesitatingly. He did it in face of the well meant advice of friends who wanted him to be a money maker. Attractive partnerships were proposed to him by big law firms, partnerships that meant $40,000, $50,000 and $100,000 a year. The emoluments of the bench were only $6,000 annually. Judge Taft shook his head. "There are bigger and better things than money," was his reply to these gilded suggestions. He was then thirty-five. He was a poor man, but he had enough. He is now fifty-one and a poor man still by the standard of the dollar.

Mr. Taft at Yale.

Mr. Taft was seventeen years old when he entered Yale and had just passed his majority when he was graduated with the class of '78. Numerically '78 was the largest class in the history of the institution, with one or two exceptions. Of its 185 members 129 graduated. There are now ninety-six of the graduate members living. "While Mr. Taft dominated the class physically," writes the class historian, "his, even at that time, was a dominating mentality as well."

Scholastic and social honors came to him unstintedly. He was a member of Delta Kappa, Phi Theta Psi, Linonia, Skull and Bones and Phi Beta Kappa. In his freshman year he was president of the class boat club and a member of the Delta Kappa campaign committee and of the freshman class supper committee. With Roger Foster he tied for second place in the freshman scholarship, divided the first mathematical prize with John I. McDonald and won two first sophomore composition prizes. In the fall games, senior year, he pulled with the winning tug of war team. He prepared a philosophical oration at the junior exposition and at commencement. He was the salutatorian and also the orator of his class.

Taft Elected By Y. M. C. A. Boys

The past week in the boys' department o the Young Men's Christian Association has been full of activities. The boys orchestra rehearsed Monday night and are fast rounding into good shape. They have their regular rehearsal again tonight.

The Tan Sigma Kappa club met Tuesday evening and initiated three fellows. This club meets tomorrow evening for special business.

The Oyhu club met Wednesday afternoon and completed their plans for the Hallowe'en social held Thursday evening. This social was a great success and every one of the forty boys present enjoyed the evening.

Friday evening the students held a Hallowe'en social and all present enjoyed eating pumpkin pie and telling ghost stories.

Thursday and Friday were registration days for the "Boys' Election," and during the two days one hundred and two boys registered.

Saturday was election day. The polls were opened at 10 A. M., and the boy officials were kept busy until eight o'clock checking off the anxious voters. Great enthusiasm was shown by the boys and at the closing of the polls a large crowd were waiting to hear the returns. After careful counting the result was as follows:

There were 2 blanks for President, 8 for Vice President, 8 for Governor and 10 for Lieutenant-Governor. There was one defective ballot. This election was indeed a great success and accomplished a great work.

The Bible classes start this week and a large enrollment is looked for. The meeting Sunday afternoon was well attended, sixty boys being present. The boys are now fully organized and things are moving along in good order. The year 1908-1909 is indeed a banner year.

Norfolk County And Vicinity

STOUGHTON court, M. C. O. F., will hold a whist party and dance next Thursday evening in Foresters' hall. The proceeds will be given to the Working Boys' Home in Boston.

The funeral of Kenneth Woods of HOLBROOK was held Thursday from the home of his parents. Services were conducted by Rev. Edward Evans of the Winthrop church. The interment was in Central cemetery.

A large fire occurred in MILTON on Saturday evening, when the dancing pavillion of the Swedish American grove was destroyed. Boston apparatus was summoned to help fight the fire. The loss is estimated at $3,000. The cause is supposed to be the work of tramps or boys playing Hallowe'en tricks.

Anna Weinstren, 17, a domestic in WELLESLEY was robbed of her pocket book early this morning. The man who held her up has been arrested. He is 22 years old and says he lives in Brookfield.

CIVIC LEAGUE.

The annual meeting of the Massachusetts Civic League is announced for Nov. 12 when there will be reports from the committees on billboards, drunkenness, housing, playgrounds, probation and village improvement. The meeting is held at 3.30 P. M. at 3 Joy street, and Prof. Royce will lecture in the evening.

It is becoming more and more apparent that the vote of organized labor will be cast as individually this year as in any year. It will not be cast as a single ballot. And the individual members of the unions have shown that they understand which is the party whose policies protect American wages and the American standard of living.

made up of men and women, and if we are to continue great we must have men and women. To have these we must have health. Shall disease cause the downfall, and what disease if any? We turn to tuberculosis. It is snapping the vitality of the great resources of this country. We all have the natural resources to combat this disease: All have been touched by this plague. It is therefore a problem which comes home to us. It is more important than the resources that are demanding the attention of statesmen today.

We must have good living in the homes and hygienic conditions. Good habits and good occupations. The danger comes right home to us through the baker and milk man. Good home living, cleanliness of person, home and mouth, as little dust as possible, sunshine and fresh air are essential and the most effective means of preventing disease.

We find in large hospitals the first causes are morals; then drink; then consumption comes and ends it all.

Next to good living and good habits comes good occupation. Some occupations are more dangerous then others. Where there is a large amount of dust as in saw mills, coal heavers and in quarries there is danger. If there is danger we should take precautions.

The symptoms of tuberculosis are a cold, prolonged cough, loss of weight and night sweats. It is the neglect of these that has made many give up their lives.

Tuberculosis can be cured and we are doing it every day. An ordinary person requires three meals a day. A man sick with tuberculosis requires six. Three regular meals and two quarts of milk and half a dozen eggs, and 23 out of the 24 hours in the open air. If a man is faithful to this treatment it is half the battle. There is no necessity of the disease. It is the result of poor conditions in the home. It is a question of time, but it will come and the disease be stamped out.

E. G. Gay of the Y. M. C. A. said his association was one that was willing to do what it could with the young men in this work.

Dr. S. W. Ellsworth spoke briefly upon the material resourses in Quincy with its shore front, parks and woods, of which we were apt to attach little importance. They were very healthful.

W. Ward Whicher spoke briefly of the value of the talks by physicians, who had devoted much time to study, and who came here and told us how to get along without them. We want to bring it home, that conditions exist and remember that there are eight cases in Quincy among indigent families who have no place to put their sick people.

We want to learn what other places have done and what we ought to do. How to organize and keep in advance or abreast with the movement in other places. Help people to become interested. To organize for the benefit of the people who are coming after us.

SUNDAY EVENING.

The attendance Sunday evening was not as large as at the afternoon meeting.

James Duncan, secretary-treasurer of the International Granite Cutters' Union and first vice president of the American Federation of Labor, presided, and the speaker of the evening was Henry Abrahams, secretary of the International Cigar Makers Union.

The subject of the evening was, "Standard of living, and tuberculosis." Both Mr. Duncan's and Mr. Abraham's addresses were on the value of trade unions to tuberculosis. Shorter hours of labor and living wages meant more time at home for the workmen. They also meant better conditions of the home, less visiting to the saloons, and as a result of better conditions of the home it tended to keep down tuberculosis. Under long hours of labor and starvation wages, the workmen spent more time in saloons and less time at home.

The discussion following the speaking was led by Dr. D. B. Reardon.

This closed the very successful five days exhibition in Quincy.

Those to assist Saturday afternoon were: Mrs. Francis Abele, Jr., Mrs. Walter E. Piper, Mrs. William McCormick, Mrs. James H. Slade, Mrs. William Wilson.

Assistants Saturday evening were: Mrs. W. E. Simmons, Miss Almira Simmons, Mrs. W. E. Jameson, Mrs. W. O. Wellington, Mrs. Charles Jameson and Miss Bertha Badger.

Assistants on Sunday were: Mrs. T. B. Pollard, Mrs. J. W. Sanborn, Mrs. Wilson Marsh, Mrs. C. T. Hardwick, Mrs. F. J. Peirce, Mrs. Ralph W. Hobbs, Mrs. Charles Cherrington, Mrs. Crowell and Miss Marion Vogler.

QUINCY POST OFFICE.

—The value of the first vote of a young man is not simply to his party or to the state. It is of value to himself, because it is the actual and visible token of his citizenship and enrols him with men who order civic affairs. It is, or should be, a source of pride to him and the earnest of a new dignity; the guaranty of his importance as a factor in civil life.

—We examine in our dark-room with modern instruments. If we find disease we send you to a reliable oculist. Williams 1473 Hancock street.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Doremus, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

III—Lady Betty gets her first impression of America. On the dock she is rescued from reporters by the steerage hero, who tells her he is Jim Brett, employed at the Manhattan club, New York. In Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid New York home Betty meets Lieutenant Parker brother of the hostess, who is to take them to visit West Point.

IV—Vivace, a beautiful and expensive dog, is sent to Betty. Mrs. Ess Kay does not know who the donor is, and Betty does not tell her that it is Brett. Lieutenant Parker, whom Betty does not like, makes love to her.

V—Lady Betty has a good time at West Point despite Parker's proposal, which she rejects.

VI—In a walk in Central park Sally tells Betty her love story (she had been seperated years before from the poor man she loved by her family, the man becoming a monk) and advises Betty to marry only when she is sure of her love. They meet Brett.

VII—Betty is introduced to Mrs. Harvey Richmount Taylour, a typical young society woman.

VIII—At Newport Betty falls in love with Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid "cottage," the Moorings. Parker continues his attentions. Mrs. Ess Kay is chagrined on learning that Mrs. Van der Windt, Newport's leader, has planned to "cut" her and her acquaintance, Mrs. Pitchley. Mrs. Ess Kay relies on Lady Betty's presence to maintain her social prestige. She plans an entertainment to introduce Betty.

The sandy beach is so level you can patter out ever so far until you finally have to bob up and down for the rolling waves as if they were royalties.

I can swim a little, and Potter took me beyond the breakers. It was great fun under that arch of turquoise sky, with the sun dancing on the clear green water as if the millionaires of Newport had been sprinkling gold pieces. But the best of all was the floating platform about a hundred yards from the beach, where we sat and let the emeralds and pearls spray over us.

At home when you are at the sea your governess or some other person who thinks enjoyment ought to be measured off by rule sits on the shore looking at her watch, and when you have been in exactly twenty minutes she tells you to come out directly or you will catch a chill. I've always wondered what it would do to you if you stopped in for twenty-one minutes, though I never had the chance to try, but in America all that is quite different, as different as the very way they say "seaside," with their accent on the first instead of the last syllable.

Nobody thinks about watches. You just bathe and bathe as long as you feel like it. When you are tired of it you come out. Then you bake yourself in the sand for a little while if you like and run back to begin over again. It is heavenly. No other adjective half expresses it.

When we did really make up our minds to stop out for good and had dressed ourselves, feeling like goddesses just born of the foam (or gods, as the case might be), we all met—our party, the Pitchleys and my cousin—to arrange about what Mohunsleigh would do.

It seemed that Mrs. Pitchley had invited him to lunch, and as she had been so kind about the bathhouse he explained to Potter he thought that he couldn't very well refuse. About stopping on he would decide later, but he consented to drive with us in the afternoon in a motor car of Potter's that holds six. By that time he would have had time to send a wire to a friend of his in New York and to make up his mind what he had better do about going back.

When we got home we found Mrs. Ess Kay much better and up. She was inclined at first to be cross with Sally and Potter for taking me to the beach, but when she heard about Mohunsleigh, she forgot to be vexed, and seemed almost excited about him. I can't think why.

She asked lots of questions, very quickly, one after the other, brightening up when Potter told how he had invited Mohunsleigh to come to the Moorings, but looking quite strained and wild at the news about his lunching with the Pitchleys.

"You oughtn't to have let him go, Potter," she said.

Potter shrugged his shoulders—those square American shoulders of his. "Strange as it may seem to you, he wanted to. That settled it. I didn't monkey with the gunpowder."

Mrs. Ess Kay's lips went down at the corners and her eyes flashed.

"How easy it is to see that woman's game," said she. "Cora Pitchley knows that Mrs. Van der Windt and the committee will be only too anxious for us to go to the pink ball now, and she thinks she sees a way of getting there, too, after all. Mark my words, she's got her earl; it'll go hard with her if she doesn't stick to him. Betty, can't you do something? He's your cousin. You've a right to him."

"I don't know that I want him particularly," I confessed. "Mohunsleigh's a dear, queer old thing, and I'm fond of him, but we haven't seen much of him at home for years. And I know he can't be bothered with me."

"Anyhow, he certainly ought to be here," said Mrs. Ess Kay anxiously. "It will be perfectly loathsome if we have to sit still and see the Pitchleys gobble him up."

"Poor Mohunsleigh!" I exclaimed. "Why, what will they do with him?" And for a lurid instant I beheld Miss Pitchley and Carolyn as beautiful ogresses, with their lips red—too red.

"They'll go to the pink ball with him and by him. They couldn't without him. That's what they'll do," said Mrs. Ess Kay, as if she saw my cousin's whitening bones picked clean by the Pitchley family. "And we shall have to be intimate with them the whole time he stays."

"Oh, you needn't feel bound to for my sake. It isn't as though Mohunsleigh"— I began, but Mrs. Ess Kay snapped my poor sentence in two, as if it had been cotton on a reel.

"I have to think for all of us," said she. "Cora Pitchley is a climber."

We changed our dresses (Sally says one must be forever changing one's dress at Newport), lunched, and then at the door appeared a gorgeous white motor car lined with scarlet, which I had never seen before. As we all had on white, from head to foot, we matched it beautifully, and, feeling that we looked nice enough even to grace an accident, if it must come, we started to pick up Carolyn Pitchley and my cousin.

As I stood hesitating, somebody knocked.

Mrs. Ess Kay didn't go, for she wasn't quite herself yet, and, besides, she perhaps thought that in the circumstances Mohunsleigh ought to be brought to call before she met him informally. I don't know that any of us were as sorry as we ought to have been not to have her.

The Pitchley house, which is called the Chateau de Plaisance, is on a much grander scale than the Moorings. It thinks it is an old French chateau and tries to convey the same impression to beholders, as do several others of more or less the same sort. But it's a hopeless effort. The poor dears might as well give up and resign themselves once for all to being a blot on the exquisite blue and gold landscape, though perhaps if they can hold out two or three hundred years they may do better. The farther we went, along a glorious road called the Cliff drive, and the more charming colonial houses and delightful "cottages" I saw, the more I felt that the regular palaces were mistakes, with Newport for a setting and the sea for a background. I am glad that I didn't live at the time when all the real castles of the world were young and awkward. Perhaps they looked just as crude as these at first, though it's hard to imagine it.

When we went back the first thing that Mrs. Ess Kay asked was, "Well, what about Lord Mohunsleigh?"

"He's made up his mind to stop and send for his things," said I.

"You gave him my note? He's coming to us?"

"I gave him the note, and he's coming around presently to thank you for being so kind. But—he feels he had better stay with the Pitchleys. You see, it's like this. They happen to be sending a servant to New York today to do some commissions for Mrs. Pitchley, so the man will go to Mohunsleigh's hotel too. And as they're doing so much for him and Mrs. Pitchley and her husband know some friends of his at home, he thinks—but he'll tell you all about it himself."

"I told you so!" said Mrs. Ess Kay.

THE BAY STATE SOLID FOR TAFT

Average Republican Plurality Is 45,000 In Presidential Years

CONTEST FOR GOVERNORSHIP

Democratic Split Has Apparently Been Healed and Party Leaders Say That Vahey's Election Is Not Improbable --Draper's Attitude Toward Labor Attacked--The Outlook In Other New England States

Boston, Nov. 2.—With the Republicans conceded to be in complete command of the situation in Massachusetts on the national contest, interest in tomorrow's battle in this state centres on the size of the vote and Mr. Taft's plurality.

Eliminating the abnormal vote of 1896, when McKinley carried the state by 163,000, the average Republican plurality in Massachusetts since 1872 in a presidential canvas has been about 45,000. Four years ago President Roosevelt won the state by 92,000 in a total vote of about 445,000, with a registration of about 563,000. This year the registration has been scarcely more than 1 percent over that of 1904, or about 569,000, and it is estimated on this basis that about 450,000 voters will avail themselves of the right of suffrage.

Although Taft will carry the state, according to all political observers, Mr. Draper's contest with Mr. Vahey for governor is somewhat more in doubt. The Republican managers look for the election of Draper by a substantial plurality, while the Democratic leaders state that Vahey's election is not improbable. The Democrats are more united this year than for some time, and, while the campaign has not been fought with the vigor which characterized former contests, a split which took place in the party last year has apparently been healed and every effort will be made to poll the full party strength in Tuesday's contests. As Draper in his second campaign for the lieutenant governorship had a particularly hard contest against the Democratic aspirant, E. G. Brown, and only won by a narrow margin, his opponents this year have attacked his record and attitude regarding labor, and there will be considerable interest in the election as to the size of the vote and Draper's popularity in the cities where manufacturers' interests are prominent.

The registration in the thirty-three cities of the state has not come up to expectations and has fallen off from that of 1904 in Boston and eight other cities, although showing an increase of 31,000 between 1900 and 1904. The registration in the 321 towns shows only a slight increase over 1904.

Since 1900, when the congressional lines were rearranged, the Massachusetts congressional delegation has stood eleven Republicans and three Democrats. The Republican leaders claim that two of the Democratic congressmen, Mr. O'Connell in the Tenth and Mr. Peters in the Eleventh, will be defeated and that the delegation will show only one Democratic congressman. The Democratic managers, however, assert that both O'Connell and Peters will be re-elected and that the party candidates have chances for election in the Fourth and Fifth congressional districts. Both sides concede that the balance of the delegation will remain intact.

There is no senatorial contest at stake in the election of the incoming legislature, and it is regarded as probable that the ratio between the two parties, with the Republicans well in the majority, will remain about the same.

Independent Vote a Factor

Providence, Nov. 2.—The campaign in this state was practically brought to a close Saturday night. The present outlook is believed to be about the same as in 1904, when Potter (Rep.) won the contest for governor over Garvan (Dem.) by about 800 plurality, giving the Republicans control of the executive office after two years of Democratic rule.

This year Aram J. Pothier (Rep.) is pitted against Olney Arnold (Dem.) and it is conceded that the result will depend largely upon the independent voters, as exemplified by the Lincoln Union, comprising Republicans who have joined the Democrats on state issues alone and who demand the retirement of National Committeeman Brayton. The complexion of the assembly will also depend upon the action taken by these same independent voters, although it will probably have a Republican majority.

In the Pine Tree State

Portland, Me., Nov. 2.—By reason of a September election law established in the days when it was believed that Maine people would find it difficult to get to the polls in November, Maine's November voice will be but an echo of the September shouting. There has never been a year when the national election was so completely ignored by both the great parties as it has been this year.

Claimed by Both Parties

New Haven, Nov. 2.—Political activity is kept up in all the larger towns of the state by the party managers, as the fight over the governorship has entered the "roorback" stage. The flood of documentary matter continues to go through the mails, indicating that the attack and counter-attack upon certain candidates is being kept up. Chairman Kenealy of the Republican state committee says the state will be 25,000 for Taft and 15,000 for Lilley. Chairman Comstock of the Democratic state committee goes to the other extreme by predicting a landslide in the state for the state ticket and the winning of Connecticut for Bryan.

Lawmakers Need Not Go Home

Montpelier, Vt., Nov. 2.—But little interest is being shown in this state in the election tomorrow, which will be for presidential electors only, and the indications are that the four Republican electors will be chosen by about the usual majority of from 27,000 to 30,000.

Under a bill passed by the legislature last Friday, all members of that body, judges of the supreme court, members of the bar and all other persons whose duties are at the capital, are permitted to cast their votes at the state house instead of at their respective places of residence.

Interest In License Question

Concord, N. H., Nov. 2.—There have been no new developments as regards the political situation in this state. The chief interest has centred in the license question. All the towns in the state vote on the question of local option tomorrow and meetings under the auspices of the no-license faction were held yesterday in churches all over the state. Both Democrats and Republicans claim the election of their candidate for governor.

VENEZUELA WON'T YIELD

Castro May Fight Rather Than Revoke Obnoxious Decree

Willemstad, Nov. 2.—The Netherlands government fixed Nov. 1 as the limit of time for Venezuela to revoke the decree of President Castro, issued on May 14, prohibiting the trans-shipment of goods for Venezuelan ports at Curacao. Castro has refused to revoke this decree, but as yet, so far as is known here, The Netherlands government has not decided upon definite action.

The opinion is held among naval officers here that no direct steps will be taken within a week. Battleship Jacob Van Heemskerck and protected cruiser Friesland, which are now in this port, still have on board all the superfluous equipments which would be discarded in time of war.

Advices from Maracaibo state that it was reported on Oct. 24 that Castro had ordered the mobilization of 50,000 troops to be ready Nov. 2. Two days later there were rumors in Maracaibo that General Rolando, who previously had been charged with leading a revolutionary movement in Venezuela, was crossing the frontier with 20,000 men from Cucuta, Colombia. No further account of this movement could be learned because mail and telegraphic communications with Cucuta were suspended the following day.

Other advices reaching Willemstad again report the serious illness of Castro. There was some talk of a trace of poison having been found in his food. The residents of Caracas and other Venezuelan cities look for the blockade to be inaugurated by the Dutch warships this week.

Alarm is increasing among the residents of the port of La Guaira in view of the extensive military preparations which have been going on to meet the threatened action of The Netherlands government.

Once Wealthy, Died In Poorhouse

Worcester, Mass., Nov. 2.—Dr. John W. Sill, believed to be of a noble English family, died in the poorhouse here. Sill was born 75 years ago on the island of St. Helena. He served in the English army and with the Union army in the Civil war. He spoke French, German, Spanish, Arabian, Hindu and English fluently. Over a year ago he gave away considerable wealth to friends and relatives and disposed of his interest in estates in Canada and Wales. Overcome by the shock of being rejected by relatives to whom he gave his money, it is claimed, and his health failing, he was glad to seek refuge in the poorhouse last March.

Held as Fugitive From Justice

Boston, Nov. 2.—Augustus M. Brown, aged 41, of New York city, was arrested by Boston officers as a fugitive from justice, it being represented that the New York officers hold a warrant against him on the charge of the larceny of $1500, alleged to have been obtained in payment for worthless stocks.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Fire started by Hallow'een roysterers destroyed the Belton, Tex., compress and 1000 bales of cotton. The damage is $250,000.

Mrs. Mary Campbell, 30 years old, was found dead of gas poisoning at her home at Boston. Appearances indicated that she committed suicide. Her body was found by her husband when he returned from work.

Byron B. Foss, aged 45, a mill worker, was killed by a train at North Anson, Me., while walking on the railroad tracks.

Governor Guild of Massachusetts has fully recovered from the attack of gastritis with which he was afflicted last week.

MACK CLAIMS 333 FOR BRYAN

CHAIRMEN'S WORK COMPLETE

Taft Manager Says Republican Success Is Certain In Some States Claimed by Democrats--Labor Vote Counted Upon to Aid Bryan--No Positive Way In Which to Forecast Result In New York

New York, Nov. 2.—At both Republican and Democratic headquarters in this city it is announced that the work of the respective organizations in the campaign of 1908 is at an end. National Chairman Hitchcock of the Republican committee and National Chairman Mack of the Democratic committee are going home to vote and will return to this city tomorrow afternoon to receive returns at headquarters. Hitchcock goes to Newton, Mass., and Mack to Buffalo.

Sunday was a quiet day, details of correspondence left over from the flood tide rush being about the only business attended to. Mack and Hitchcock adhered to the forecasts given out on Friday and Saturday, the Democratic chairman contending that Mr. Bryan will receive 333 votes and Hitchcock announcing himself as positive in his belief that Mr. Taft will have 325 votes in the electoral college. As only 242 votes are necessary to elect, both chairmen are figuring on wide margins for their respective candidates.

While the national chairmen believe that all has been done that can be done to elect their chiefs, the candidates themselves will continue in the fight until practically the last minute. Taft, after spending yesterday in Buffalo, went this morning to Cleveland, where he will speak this afternoon, and will then go to Youngstown, where he speaks tonight, hurrying thence to Cincinnati to vote and hear the results of the election.

Mr. Bryan intends to put in today campaigning in northwestern Kansas and will be at Lincoln this evening for a home coming demonstration.

At Republican headquarters it was asserted that Mack's estimate of 333 votes for Bryan had been expected in view of the same claims made earlier in the campaign. It was further said that Mack had included in his list states that were practically conceded by state leaders to be Republican.

Mr. Mack declared that "the only thing that can defeat Mr. Bryan is the corrupt use of money." He said he had sent his last instructions to state chairmen to get out their vote early and to see that it was fairly counted.

"We are through," said Hitchcock. "Our fight is won. It was made on the plans agreed upon at the beginning of the campaign."

Mr. Hitchcock announced that there had ceased to be any doubt as to Republican success in such states as Indiana, Ohio and New Jersey—all claimed by Mack—and it was added by a member of his staff that the Republican national committee is as sure of New York as it is of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Mack said that his claim that Bryan and Kern will receive 333 votes in the electoral college is based on reports received from state chairmen and from private sources. State Chairman Conners has predicted that Bryan will receive more than 40,000 plurality in the state and that Chanler will get more than 100,000.

The Democratic national committee bases its belief that Bryan will be elected on the following four reasons, which have been incorporated into a statement by Chairman Daniels of the literary bureau:

"Bryan will be elected because the Democracy today presents a united front. Further, the Democratic party will be augmented by thousands of Republicans dissatisfied with the mistakes of twelve years of Republican administration.

"This army of voters will be further strengthened by a new force in the American politics—the labor vote. Assuming there were to be a strict party line-up at election, the labor vote itself would turn the scales to Democratic success. The labor party has put all its eggs in the Democratic basket and it must win to save them.

"Mr. Bryan himself has gained wonderful strength in the last few years in all parts of the country and thousands of voters who neither understood him nor his aims now place their absolute trust in him and his policies.

"The Democratic national committee has brought all the elements of the party together. It has the labor vote, and its remarkable accessions of strength from the Republican ranks, together with Mr. Bryan's strength with the masses, are the reasons why this national election will turn to Democracy."

Mr. Mack, in a statement last night, again attacked the Republican party for not immediately making their campaign contributions public.

The New York campaign is practically at an end. Both Democratic and Republican state leaders claim to be confident of success. Close political observers who have canvassed the state from end to end, however, frankly admit that they are in doubt and that there is no positive way in which the result can be forecasted. From everywhere come reports of Republican defection from Governor Hughes, but the Republican leaders do not place very much stock in these and say that whatever votes Hughes loses in his own party will be more than offset by gains from among the Democrats and independent voters.

The Democratic leaders say they have been confident of victory from the very start of the campaign.

The Independence League party, managed by W. R. Hearst, has a complete state ticket in the field, and its leaders have been concentrating practically all of their fire on Mr. Chanler, who was Hearst's running mate two years ago, and there is some interest in the strength the new party will show.

Washington Deserted by Voters

Washington, Nov. 2.—Such an exodus from the national capital of voters entitled to the right of franchise in various states has not been known in any political campaign since that of 1896 as has been taking place in the last four or five days. A careful canvass of the several executive departments shows up to noon Saturday that approximately 3700 voters had already gone to their homes and that many hundreds more left Washington Saturday night and yesterday. It is estimated that 1500 more will leave for nearby states today.

President Roosevelt, Secretary Loeb and several White House attaches who hold voting residences in New York will leave Washington tonight. All members of the cabinet now are in their respective states except Secretaries Wright and Metcalf. The former failed to register in Tennessee and the latter is confined to his residence by a serious illness.

The unusual number of government employes who this year are embracing the opportunity to cast their ballots indicates the intensity of interest taken in Washington in the result of tomorrow's election.

Washington in the campaign of Speaker Cannon. Telegrams from the speaker to friends here express confidence in the result of tomorrow's balloting, not only so far as he himself is concerned, but also as to the Republican national ticket. Cannon expresses the belief that the Republicans will have in the house of the Sixty-first congress a comfortable working majority.

Big Prohibition Vote Promised

Chicago, Nov. 2.—With the assertion that the vote for the Prohibition party tomorrow will be twice as large as the largest ever before cast for the party, Chairman Jones announced that the Prohibition national committee has been assured an income of $25,000 a year for the next four years with which to carry on its work. Jones says that the financial backing for the party has been pledged by 1000 prominent persons.

"With the widespread interest shown in the work of suppressing the liquor traffic and the votes taken from the old parties by Eugene W. Chafin, we will force the Prohibition issue as the dominant question in national politics," said Jones. "Every prospect is for a wide desertion from the Republican and the Democratic to the Prohibition ranks."

CONSERVING OUR NATIONAL RESOURCES

Concerted Movement Receiving Support of Lawmakers

Chicago, Nov. 2.—Pledges of active support of the conservation of the natural resources movement have been received by the officers of the Conservation League of America from more than one-third of all the Republican and Democratic candidates for congress, and President Fisher declares that the league has every reason to be gratified with the results of its first national campaign.

In addition to the signed declarations of support, which number 257, the league has received letters and telegrams from a considerable number of congressional candidates expressing approval of its policies and assurance of support.

The campaign has also been carried into the state assemblies, and 684 candidates for the lower houses and 206 candidates for state senates in different states have pledged their aid to the movement.

The conservation of natural resources on a country-wide scale had its inception in the suggestion of President Roosevelt and received impetus last May, when the policies to be pursued were outlined at a conference in Washton. The league now includes thirty associations, diverse in character, but united by a common interest in the intelligent development and effective conservation of the natural resources of the nation in forest, field and stream.

Bomb Throwing at Waltham

Waltham, Mass., Nov. 2.—Detectives have been called in and the police are hard at work to solve the mystery of the throwing of a bomb which exploded in front of the home of Dr. Edmond R. P. Fourtin. The bomb tore a hole in the concrete leading to the side entrance of the doctor's office, broke many windows in the house and surrounding buildings, tore off shingles and destroyed much property inside Fourtin's office. Dr. Fourtin can offer no solution as to the cause of the outrage.

Wheels Will Go Round if Taft Is Elected.

SO SAY MANUFACTURERS.

The National Association of Manufacturers, through its organ, American Industries, has just completed a canvass of its 3,000 members throughout the United States in nearly every line of trade to ascertain the country's commercial status twelve months after the panic. The canvass was not made to serve any political purpose, and the forthcoming election was not mentioned, but the members of the association have taken advantage of one of the questions to declare that prosperity depends upon the election of Taft.

The canvass was made by means of letters sent out two weeks ago. Four questions were asked of the members relating to the exact condition of trade at present, the percentage of increase in business in the last ten months, the possibilities for future improvement and any suggestions which might serve to better future conditions. Everybody answered the last question by suggesting that Taft be elected.

Agricultural implements show the largest percentage of increase and vehicles the lowest. The textiles show a small percentage of increase with a rather unfavorable outlook, while leather and its manufactures and the lumber industry are fairly satisfied and optimistic. Very little attention is paid to the tariff as a disturbing element, but a number of manufacturers, especially those interested in railway supplies and allied trades, complain against pending or threatened railway legislation.

The steel trade and the movement of pig iron, which form the most accurate barometer of trade conditions, make a distinctly encouraging report, as 70 per cent of the iron and steel plants in the association report conditions good, 78 per cent have had an increase during the last ten months, and 85 per cent have reason to believe that prospects for the immediate future are reassuring. Machinery, including all classes throughout the country, shows present conditions 68 per cent good, and 76 per cent of the machinery manufacturers have had an increase since Jan. 1 last. Only one manufacturer of agricultural implements is pessimistic regarding the future.

In food products 89 per cent report business good, 94 per cent have had an increase, and all are optimistic for the future. Lumbermen report 85 per cent good, and 80 per cent have had an increase, while 93 per cent of them are hopeful for the future. Of the leather manufacturers 91 per cent report good, 94 per cent have had an increase, and 93 per cent are optimistic.

Other percentages from the various trades reporting conditions good, an increase of business and good possibilities for the future are as follows:

Tools and hardware, 77, 87 and 92; drugs and chemicals, 83, 80 and 82; paper and printing, 75, 76 and 94; textiles, 68, 71 and 89; vehicles, 52, 56 and 85.

"Nearly every issue of the trades papers all over the country reports the reopening of steel, cotton and woolen mills and the increase in the working forces of some of these already open. There are fewer idle persons in the United States now than at any previous time since the beginning of the scare last November. Aside from the chance—the very remote chance—that Bryan may be elected there is not a cloud on the business horizon, so far as I can see at this moment.

"Let it be remembered that in the shape in which it presents itself tariff adjustment will cause no perceptible halt in the revival of trade. By its platform and the repeated promises of its candidate the dominant party is pledged to revision. Just as I have urged, the revising is to be done by an extra session of congress just as soon as the new president enters office in March, 1909. The adjustments will be done in the interest of the American manufacturer, the American worker and the American consumer and not in the interest of the manufacturers and workers of Great Britain, Germany, Japan and the rest of Europe and Asia."

As a resigner Mr. Taft probably holds the record. He resigned as assistant prosecutor of Cincinnati to become internal revenue collector, resigned to become superior court judge, resigned to become solicitor general of the United States, resigned to become federal circuit court judge, resigned to head the Philippine commission, resigned to become secretary of war and finally resigned that to run for president.

Each of Mr. Taft's three brothers is a lawyer, although Charles P. finds more fun in running a newspaper than he does in law, and Horace has made schoolteaching his life work, being the head of the Taft school in Watertown, Conn. Henry W. Taft is one of the leaders of the New York bar.

If Tom Watson has found the lost Populist platform, as he contends, he should forward it to Lincoln, Neb., without delay. It is William Jennings Bryan's personal property. His initials will be found carved in the southwest corner of the cheap money plank.

COLD, HARD TRUTH

Protection the Best Labor Measure That Stands

Amid all the noise and clamor of the "howling dervishes" of the free-trade Democracy there stands out in full view of the workingman of this country, whether he be a union or non-union man, the absolute, central truth that it is the protective policy of this country which is his greatest friend. No Republican tariff has ever been a "Chinese wall," as free traders who would deride any tariff at all would have us believe, but is designed to set apart and does set apart and protect American industries and American workingmen from all conditions which would place them on a par with those of Europe. The Republican party does not claim, and never claimed, that any special tariff bill is "sacred," or that it is not subject to revision when the exigencies of the time may require, and it can be revised with justice to American industries and to all who are involved in their conduct; but it does claim, unequivocally, that the protection principle is "sacred"—in that it is the one strong bulwark which protects the American product and workingman from invasion and ruin. The Bryan policy, which would have razed the American dollar to 40 cents and which would "raze every custom house in the country," would bring a day to the workingman of this country from which he would not recover in a generation.

And this fact is patent, and may well be considered thoughtfully by every labor union in this country—that if it were not for the protective policy of the Republican party they would be powerless to secure either any betterment of wage schedules, or to maintain existing ones. This fact cannot be made too emphatic and it cannot be refuted. No free trader can successfully assail it. The Republican party is committed to a revision of schedules, but is adamant against the destruction of the protective principle. Its candidate for governor is a fair and even conspicuous representative of the immediate and enlightened policy of his party upon the tariff issue, as is the honored governor.

When Mr. Whitney was the candidate of the Democratic party for governor, with his pet theory of "Canadian reciprocity" (especially as to provincial coal), Mr. Draper denounced this alleged "reciprocity" as practically and utterly impossible, at the same time saying that while he was an ardent advocate of protection to the American workingman and to all American manufactures, he did not regard any tariff schedule as "sacred" or immune from proper amendment by the congress. He maintains the same position today. Whatever may be thought by anybody of Mr. Whitney's attitude as to Canadian reciprocity and his effort to make people think that Canadians were crying for it, his whole proposition was knocked higher than Gilroy's kite, a few months later, by the semi-official announcement from Canada that the Canadian government were not at all in sympathy with any reciprocal movement. The workingman who is deluded by the cleverly-masked free trade argument has only himself to blame if he have cause to regret his mistaken support.

As to the saying by Mr. Vahey that the state pays more for property when it buys it than it is worth the Taunton Gazette naively says that this is undoubtedly true—that cities, as well as states are easy marks in that respect and do not buy property as foxily as railroads and other corporations, which keep in the dark and let unsuspected agents do the buying for them at better terms than could be obtained if the sellers knew who the real purchasers were. This is the real truth of the matter, although Mr. Vahey, for campaign purposes only, would have us believe that any high prices paid for anything are concocted for "Republican graft."

The great crops are lessening the number of idle freight cars in the west and if the voters of Massachusetts want to make their manufactures here in Massachusetts fill freight cars here they will vote for the policies which will keep the factories and workshops busy. The free trade tendencies of the Democratic party will not do it, and the time to realize this is before one is beguiled into voting for that party, with its scarcely veiled intentions.

It will be recalled that early in his administration as acting governor Mr. Draper set himself solidly against the grist of appropriation bills which would have seriously depleted the state treasury and used his power of veto without regard to any consideration personal to himself or his political fortunes. With him it was the state first and his determination to protect the treasury from unwarranted raids.

Mr. Frothingham's able career and graceful conduct of the intricate and diplomatic duties of speaker of the house give ample promise to the incoming council of having a dignified and genial presiding officer. Mr. Frothingham is yet a young man and one of the type of young men whom the Republican party and the people of the state delight to honor.

Where are all the Democratic war horses of the state? Has their blood grown cold in their veins that they do not scent the battle? So far, we haven't heard a single snort.

After considerable agonizing labor, one of Mr. Vahey's mountains seems to have brought forth a very diminutive mouse.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

Vote!

Vote early!

Vote the whole ticket!

As goes Quincy in the election tomorrow, so goes Massachusetts and so goes the United States.

The special committee of the City Council will preambulate the Milton and Quincy line this week with the Selectmen of Milton. They will use an automobile.

On Tuesday, election day, the shipyard whistle for beginning work in the morning will not blow until 8 A. M., and the gates will not be opened until 7.40 A. M.

Election returns will be received in a number of places Tuesday night. The Y. M. C. A. will have a direct line to Boston and will throw the returns on a screen with a stereopticon.

"Public landings on our water front," and "Train service" are the special subjects assigned for the monthly meeting of the Board of Trade on Wednesday evening.

Election returns will be received at the Senic tomorrow night direct from one of the Boston newspaper offices. The new manager, H. A. Chenoweth, presents a great bill this week.

Councilman A. H. Gilson has returned from his Southern tour with a Tafts lecturer illustrating Tafts visit to the Orient. Dr. Gilson travelled ovor 3200 miles during the seventeen days he was away.

At a recent meeting of directors of Quincy Cooperative Bank, a semi-annual dividend at rate of five and one-half per cent per annum was declared. The bank enters upon the last half of its twentieth year of uninterrupted success, with assets of over $400,000, and a larger constituency than ever before. Shares in fortieth series now for sale.

A very pleasing program was presented at the musical service held Sunday evening at Bethany church under the direction of Mme Ellen Beale Morey. The chorus choir was assisted by Mrs. Emma S. Moore, Miss Winnifred White, Mrs. Anna N. Adams, Mr. James S. Whyte and Mr. James B. Forrest.

GLEASON—LAWRY.

Mr. Lafayette Gleason and Mrs. Elizabeth Lawry of South Quincy journeyed to South Braintree on Saturday evening and were quietly married by Rev. C. F. Hill Crathern. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Gleason.

On their return there was a reception to a few friends at the pretty residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Gleason on Independence avenue, when a wedding supper was served. The house was decorated with chrysanthemums.

—Medford collected nearly $2,000 at its tag day Oct. 24th, the result of the hard work and generosity of the people of the town.

A TIE SCORE

Quincy High Holds Brockton And Score Was Six to Six

Quincy and Brockton struggled through two 20-minute halves in their game on Saturday and at the end the score was just 6-6, each side having scored one touchdown and kicked a goal.

It was the closest and at the same time the most loosely played game seen in Merrymount Park this season. At times there were flashes of good football, both individually and collectively.

But on the whole it was a game that did not show the football that either team is capable of playing, and neither team seemed able to stop the other from gaining.

But the reason that more scores were not made was because both teams fumbled continuously, and again because the forward pass refused to work effectively for either side.

Both touchdowns were made in the first half, and on straight line plunges, which seems to show, that, if the forward pass had been dropped, when it was evident that it was not working, more touchdowns might have been made.

The game began with Brockton kicking to Quincy. Hendry received the ball on his own 15-yard line and ran it back to the 25-yard line before he was downed by Mooney. The local team then lost the ball on a forward pass, but got it back again, when Bockton was held and forced to kick.

Howe then slid off outside of left tackle and reeled off 25 yards. "Russ" Bates followed in the same place and went over the line for Quincy's first and only touchdown. "Venus" made it 6-0 by kicking a pretty goal.

Quincy then kicked off to Brockton, Casey rushing in hard for 10 yards. They were held and forced to kick, but Quincy fumbled and Brockton started again. Francis went round the end for 20 yards and Casey on a trick play made 15 more. With these two men carrying the ball, the visitors' progress was fast. Casey finally went across the goal line and then kicked the goal evening up the score.

Quincy just had time to kick to Brockton when the referee blew his whistle, and the first half was over. Score 6-6.

Brockton chose to receive the kick again, and Casey took the ball. The pigskin then went from one team to another on wretched forward passes, but Brockton finally succeeded in getting the ball on Quincy's two-yard line, and a first down, too. But right here the most spectacular play of the day was pulled off. Brockton was held three times on the two yard line and the ball went to Quincy.

On a trick play "Venus" Carlson opened up a big hole, and out of this hole shot a man carrying the ball. It was "Russ" Bates and he came through at full speed. Only one man stood between him and a victory for his team. It was up to Rapp, the Brockton quarterback to save the game, and he did his duty well. Bates couldn't get by him and his 50-yard run went for nothing. For on the next play, a forward pass, the ball hit the ground and Quincy lost 5 yards.

They then kicked to Brockton and it looked as if there was to be something doing for awhile. The visitors got 15 yards on a forward pass and Casey got 20 through centre, followed by 10 more by Francis round the end. Here they were stopped in their progress, and the ball went to Quincy on downs. The whistle blew before Quincy had time to rush the ball. Score 6-6.

Howe, "Russ" Bates and "Venus" Carlson played a good game, while Hendry who took Gore's place at quarter was not far behind. Casey, the huskey Brockton fullback was the whole team for the visitors. Without him Brockton would not be in it, for he is a powerful player both on the offensive and on the defensive. Rapp and Francis also played a good game for Brockton.

Foot Ball And Other Sports

The Fore River Soccer football team had an off day Saturday, the game scheduled for Quincy with the Coats team being postponed, because the Fall River Rovers were playing off a tie in the American cup series. The local team is scheduled to play the Coats team at Pawtucket on next Saturday afternoon.

The local High school football team faces Rindge Manual Training school tomorrow at Merrymount. Rindge is the fastest team that has been scheduled to appear at Quincy and a good game can be looked for. Clapp will probably be back in the game again tomorrow and his presence will add some necessary dash to the team.

Galvin Forcing The Fighting

The comments of Joseph H. Smith in the Boston Traveler, add new interest to the Congressional contest in this district. He writes:

There is going to be an election over in the 10th congressional district, and judging from the record of the two candidates, there will be no danger that anybody will imagine a couple of deaf and dumb men are running for that chair in Washington.

After a contest marked by much vivacity, not to say violence, vituperation, street rows and a general fracture of the peace, Joseph Battleship O'Connell grabbed the nomination away from Frank J. Linehan, who is something of a reverberating statesman himself, and who is not believed to possess a forgiving disposition, nor to care too much for regularity when he belives the "regular" candidate has given him a fuzzy deal.

The candidate on the Republican ticket is J. Mitchel Galvin, to whom the nomination came unsought; in fact, it is not taxing credulity to say the nomination was left on his premises like a foundling, when he was not looking; and "Mitch" took it in and made up his mind to give it hospitable treatment. He is probaly the only Rpublican in the 10th who could hope to get a look in in that district. It is no exaggeration to say that he is making Mr. O'Connell sit up and take notice, and he already has the vociferous victor of the Democratic caucuses moving around with uneasy celerity.

IS NO AMATEUR.

"Mitch" Galvin is not an amateur in the game of politics; he knew and played the game in Boston when the O'Connell was doing odd jobs for elder statesmen of the Lomasney type. He knows all the tricks of the trade. and he hasn't got a spot his antagonist can put his finger on; his record is clean. While there may be a lot of the Clan O'Connell in the district, there are a few Galvins who know how to take care of their chief and how to avoid bear traps.

"Mitch" Galvin has a host of friends, for he is loyal and reliable, genial and generous. "Mitch" has a ready tongue and a pretty wit, and he is able to take care of himself in a debate or contest without vilification or violence, and most people after all prefer decency and decorum in a candidate, to megaphone and bludgeon tactics. Besides "Mitch" has courage and gumption and will fight fair.

The majority of the voters in the tense 10th are more or less Celtic in blood and have a warm spot in their hearts for a candidate who goes to battle with a laugh, who is able to turn the laugh on a sour apponent, who meets them on the level and whom they know can represent them in office with knowledge, address, experience and the manners of an honest gentleman.

GALVIN A SINGER.

If ever "Mitch" tunes up and starts in to sing an old Irish balad or come-all-ye, it will be all day with Joseph B.; for the Galvin has a voice like a Kerry thrush or a Wexford starling and he puts heart, soul and lungs into his music. It's worth going miles to hear "Mitch" pipe up "A Fine Ould Irish Gentleman," and the way he chants "Molly Bawn," or "My Snow-breated Pearl" is not only a liberal musical education, but has a strain in it that would move the stony gizard of a Connaught landlord. The fact is "Mitch" Galvin is a problem that "Joe" O'Connell will find it hard to solve; its Greek against Greek, Athens against Boetia, and the bludgeon and strong-arm that were effective in the Linehan fight will not go far in this.

"Mitch" Galvin has a good presence, a ready tongue and a well-stored memory; he is not untrained in the arts declamatory and elocutionary; and he knows how to quote and recite some piece of classic oratory, a poem or some famous speech in a way calculated to carry an Irish audience off its feet. These facts are mentioned to show that the fight is not as one-sided as it looks at first sight; and when the political record of Joseph is considered, his Springfield activities recalled, and the everything-but-altruistic disposition of his foes is remembered, the advocate of battleships and the chum of Hobson has not as easy a thing ahead of him as perhaps he imagines.

ALWAYS ON THE JOB.

Moreover, "Mitch" is industrious, persistent and on the job all the time; he can kiss as many babies, blarney as many girls and collogue in thee vernacular with as many of the boys as all clan O'Connell together, and "Joe" can make up his mind that he will find "Mitch's" unfaltering trail in his favorite pastures a good many times before the sun goes down on November the third.

It's a good fight in the 10th all along the line. "Mitch" Galvin is forcing the fight, and "Joe" O'Connell is on the defensive. "Mitch" is too well known to be blackguarded with impunity; he is pretty handy with back talk himself; his friends, who are numerous, will not stand for any abuse of him; and, without a field for his particular and favorite political weapons, "Joe" is pretty helpless. And there you are.

One thing that sticks out of the gaiety in the 10th is the fact that Congressman "Joe" is fighting for his life, with a pretty good chance of going into the Down and Out club. It is a case of "Leather away, boys; the more wigs on the green, the better the fun." Galvin aboo! The Minstrel Boy to the war has gone.

A MARKED REPROACH

The Lack of Interest In the Election of Rulers

It is the lamentable and discreditable fact that in the presidential election four years ago there were upward of 3,000,000 citizens of this free country, eligible to vote, who refused or neglected to exercise their right of suffrage. It cannot be assumed that, strictly speaking, none of these men cared what became of the affairs of their country or state; but for all actual or moral effect they might as well have been Fiji islanders or Hottentots as American citizens.

Neglect of the suffrage is an indirect blow at free government, or at best it evinces a very scant appreciation of the boon of one of the greatest privileges accorded to mankind. If one will not by his vote aid the better forces of society his negative action helps the worse by just so much. At the present juncture, if the voter be inclined to sulk like Achilles in his tent as to national issues, it is of supreme importance that he should at least interest himself in the things pertaining to the conduct of the state. This comes home to him every day in the roads over which he travels, in the education of his children, in his industrial and commercial concerns and in his tax levy, as to which, ten to one, the man who neglects his suffrage complains the most.

Even if he be one of those mistaken persons who think that "politics" is only for "politicians," he should take a second and better thought and realize that politics is really the science and method of government; that the men who are to be voted for for state offices two weeks hence are the men who are to make and execute the laws which are to directly and intimately affect his labor, his business, his home and his pocketbook, and that it behooves him to spend one hour or a fraction of one in saying by his vote what he desires the policy of the state shall be and whom he prefers shall execute it. It is up to him to wake up to the fact that his vote does not simply help to give political preferment to any man or set or men, but that it records his will as to the conduct of the state's affairs and is the only thing which gives him the right of criticism if matters do not go to his liking thereafter. When the millions of other countries are begging for popular government, it is a shame and a disgrace that in this country of the free ballot there should be 3,000,000 or 4,000,000 men with their civic souls so dead that they neglect and hold in so small esteem the high privilege of a freeman.

According to some of the Democratic organs there is a disposition on the part of the Republicans to ignore state issues. This is true in no sense whatever. They welcome discussion of any which can be adduced and are ready to put the Republican record beside the Democratic upon any matter of state administration. There is no important piece of constructive legislation for years which has not been originated, fathered and pushed to enactment by the Republican party and few which have not run up against the Democrats in both branches as obstructionists, either by actual opposition or by filibustering tactics. The party is perfectly ready to call the Democratic bluff, but that party is too wise to precipitate a discussion in which it would find the bulk of facts against it.

The boys of the Spanish war and the citizens of Chelsea will not forget in a hurry the prompt and splendid service rendered by Mr. Draper in two conspicuous exigencies. As a citizen at the time of the breaking out of hostilities with Spain his keen foresight anticipated the possibilities of suffering and the need there would be of quick and efficient relief; and he was the leading spirit in the movement of the Massachusetts Volunteer Aid association, which raised a fund of $200,000, and among other things equipped the hospital ship "Bay State." His immediate and forceful action at the time of the Chelsea catastrophe is too recent history to need recounting.

Such municipalities as shall have occasion to go to the legislature during the coming winter for helpful legislation will not underestimate in advance of how much benefit it will be to them to have in the executive chair a man of Mr. Draper's long and practical experience.

Before he votes the workingman of Massachusetts should ask himself which party it is that has placed upon the statute books the numerous laws enacted for his benefit. A little reflection will tell him and he cannot afford not to be honest with himself in the matter.

Mr. Draper carries into his public acts the same frankness as he shows in his private intercourse. He says just what he thinks and means and acts what he believes without a tinge of what the late Wendell Phillips' wife called "shilly-shallying."

The editor of the Lawrence Tribune has dreamed that the Republican editors of the state are worried for fear Mr. Draper will be defeated. He should eschew welsh rarebits; they are not good for him.

Was there ever a campaign in this state before when the Democratic newspapers had so little to say in advocacy of the gubernatorial candidate of their party? If so, we do not recall it.

There is far too much of a tendency in this state to give credence to glittering Democratic promises and to forget Republican performances as illustrated by statutes.

Quincy Bids For New Submarines

A Boston paper reports that bids were opened at the Navy Department, Washington, on Monday for the construction of eight submarine torpedo boats, for which Congress has appropriated $3,500,000. There were three bidders—the Electric Boat Company of Quincy, Mass.; the Lake Torpedo Boat Company, Bath, Me.; the American Laurenti Company of Philadelphia.

The Electric Boat Company bid for both boats of 435 tons displacement from $414,000 to $444,000, according to the classes and number of the boats built on the Atlantic coast. For constructing the same boats on the Pacific coast their prices range from $446,000 to $461,000. For a boat of 375 tons displacement their price ranges from $360,000 to $300,000 and for the same boats constructed on the Pacific coast from $388,000 to $403,000.

The Lake Torpedo Boat Company bid on boats of 518 tons displacement from $455,000 to $400,000, the same boats built on the Pacific being from $482,500 to $500,000.

On vessels of 410 tons displacement the price was from $382,500 to $410,000 built on the Atlantic coast and from $425,000 to $435,000 built on the Pacific coast.

The bid of the American Laurenti Company of Philadelphia, Penn., was for one or two boats of 532 tons displacement at $437,500.

Free Lecture On Playgrounds

Mr. Joseph Lee, of Boston, who is actively associated with Jacob Riis, Dr. Gulick, Miss Jane Addams and many other prominent persons in the playground movement will speak in the High School hall next Monday evening, November 9, at 7.45 o'clock upon the subject of "Play and Playgrounds." Mr. Lee is one of the vice-presidents of the Playground Association of America, is "the father of playgrounds" and is doing more to protect the natural rights of children and to promote the healthy development of the rising generation than any other man in the state. The lecture will be free to the citizens of Quincy and fathers and mothers are especially invited to be present. Be sure to remember and reserve the evening.

At the meeting of the Massachusetts Civic League on Nov. 12, Mr. Lee will make his annual report as chairman of the committee on playgrounds.

DEMOCRATIC RALLIES.

Two well attended Democratic rallies were held last night, one in Keating's hall and the other in the rooms of the Fore River Football club. The speakers at the Keating's hall rally were James F. Burke, William T. Donovan, William Kelly and Candidate Edward J. Parker. There was an overflow in attendance.

Before going to Keating's hall Mr. Parker went to the Point rally and addressed the large gathering there. He said he was confident of victory and hoped that he would be supported by the citizens of Ward Two in the election.

FAVORABLE REPORTS

Several Orders Passed by Council Under Suspension Of the Rules

A regular meeting of the City Council was held Monday evening. The meeting was of little over an hour in duration but considerable important business was transacted. A number of orders that were before the Finance committee were reported and passed.

Councilman Ferguson and Hogan were the only absent members.

TRANSFERS WANTED.

A communication was received from the School Committee asking for a transfer of $250 from its appropriation for "fuel" to that for "Transportation." Referred to Finance Committee.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the Chief Engineer asking for a transfer of $120 from the appropriation for "purchase of hose," and $49 from the appropriation for "horses and harnesses" to the appropriation for "Miscellaneous." Referred to Finance Committee.

The application of C. A. Erickson for a license to collect junk was received, but action refused, as it was filed after May 1.

PETITIONS.

A petition was received from the Old Colony street railway for a relocation of its tracks on Farrington street, between Elmwood avenue and Squantum streets. Referred to Committee on Streets, who later reported an order for a public hearing Dec. 7.

Petitions were received from the Electric Light Co. for a location for poles on Whitwell street, Roslin avenue, Hancock, Cross and Cranch streets. Referred to Committee on Streets.

A petition was received from the Telephone company for attachments on Elm avenue. Referred to committee on Streets.

Applications for licenses as auctioneers were received from James F. Burke and Charles H. Johnson. Laid on the table until later when they were granted.

Councilman Abele presented a petition for refund of sidewalk assessment in front of 211 Whitwell street on estates of Carl Pierson and Anna Nelson. Referred to Finance Committee.

FINANCE REPORTS.

The Committee on Finance reported on the following matters:

Ought to pass on the order appropriating $250 to concrete the basement of the Ward Four engine house. Rules suspended and order passed.

Ought to pass on the order appropriating $100 for fire alarm box on the corner of Farnum and Edison streets. Rules suspended and order passed.

Ought to pass on the order appropriating $800 for repairs of the Atlantic fire station. Rules suspended and order passed.

Ought to pass on the order appropriating $1,500 for miscellaneous expenses and contagious diseases of the Board of Health. Rules suspended and order passed.

Reference to the Executive on the order refunding Ellerton T. Williams for poll taxes paid twice. Report adopted.

Ought to pass on the order transferring the receipts of the highway department to the appropriation for that department for 1908. Rules suspended and order passed.

A loan order for $1,150 to cover appropriations made by the above orders. Read and ordered to a second reading.

REFUND OF TAXES.

Leave to withdraw on the petition of the executor of the estate of Catherine Neagle, for refund of taxes illegally assessed. Report accepted.

Councilman Moir moved a reconsideration. In support of his motion he made an earnest plea for the poor widow. The councilmen were visibly affected by his earnest plea.

Councilman Whiton shattered Councilman Moirs argument when he asked if the petition did not come from the executor of Catherine Neagle, which meant that she was dead. If assessed illegally it should be refunded.

Councilman Bryant said the time had expired when the money could be refunded.

The motion to reconsider was lost.

A RECESS.

Councilman Teasdale moved a recess of five minutes.

Councilman Bryant opposed and amended the motion by granting the Committee on Streets permission to retire.

The motion for a recess was voted.

Then the lights went out.

Councilman Bryant moved a recess of five minutes until the lights could be fixed. Motion lost.

Councilman Bryant doubted the vote, and asked for the roll call on the motion.

The President ruled that four should ask for the roll call, and only two had asked for it.

The motion for a recess was lost on a rising vote.

NEW WATER SUPPLY

Councilman Abele offered a resolve that the Commissioner of Public Works inform the council as to the feasibility of supplying water from the Quincy reservoir for manufacturing purposes. To what extent it would be practicable and the estimated cost of doing so. Adopted.

MORE LIGHT.

Councilman Cantfill offered an order for a light on the corner of Bradford and Eliot streets. Referred to Executive.

Councilman Freeman offered an order for a light on Lincoln avenue. Referred to Executive.

Councilman Bryant offered an order transferring the receipts from estates for gypsy and brown tail moth work to the appropriation for gypsy and brown tail moth. Order adopted.

BIG VOTE

Quincy Expected To Cast 500 More Votes Than Ever Before

Nearly 5000 votes will be cast in the City of Presidents today. This is 500 more than in any previous election. The vote during the first three hours after the polls opened was tremendous, about one half of the entire registered vote being cast.

The progress of the voting today is shown by precinct one of Ward One, where the total vote by hours is compared with the same hours for four years:

Hour	1904	1905	1906	1907	1908
7 A. M.	68	70	61	66	103
8 A. M.	119	130	125	117	178
9 A. M.	188	160	172	157	251
10 A. M.	227	220	203	182	288
11 A. M.	269	249	215	197	314
12 M.	282	269	243	214	331
1 P. M.	322	288	290	252	383
2 P. M.	360	334	316	278	416

It will be seen that the number at 7 A. M. was 35 ahead of the last Presidential election in 1904; at 8 A. M., 59 ahead; at 9 A. M., 63 ahead, and so on.

In precinct two the vote was even larger than in precinct one, being 97 at 7 o'clock, 224 at 8 o'clock and 291 at 9 o'clock.

Thus at 9 o'clock 542 votes had been cast in Ward One out of a total of 1145.

VOTING STRENGTH.

Quincy has this year 5,693 names on the voting lists, which is 493 more than a year ago and 559 more than at the last Presidential election. There were in November, 1904, a total of 5,134; in November, 1905, a total of 5,149; in November 1906, a total of 5,238; in November, 1907, a total of 5,220 and today 5,393.

Here is a comparison with November and December last year:

	1908 Nov.	1907 Nov.	1907 Dec.
Ward One, pre. 1	507	469	490
Ward One, pre. 2	638	534	566
Ward Two, pre. 1	348	302	324
Ward Two, pre. 2	471	441	465
Ward Three, pre. 1	551	521	544
Ward Three, pre. 2	452	422	436
Ward Four, pre. 1.	452	427	467
Ward Four, pre. 2	487	473	500
Ward Five	1005	926	947
Ward Six, pre. 1	404	378	388
Ward Six, pre. 2	378	329	332
	5693	5220	5459

NUMBER TO VOTE.

The total vote at the last State election was 3,690 out of a total of 5,220; less than 70 per cent. At the last Presidential election 4,465 votes were cast out of a total of 5134; about 87 per cent. If a similar per cent is cast this year the total vote will be above 4,900, possibly 5,000.

The total vote for four years has been:

Ward One, Pre. 1,	401	380	360	319
Ward One, Pre 2,	416	383	401	345
Ward Two, Pre 1,	253	183	219	186
Ward Two, Pre 2,	371	293	341	279
Ward Three, Pre 1,	471	428	424	382

Returns from the several wards of the city at 1 o'clock showed that at that hour 4,300 votes had been cast. The total vote of the city at the last Presidential election was 4,465. As the voters have three more hours to vote the grand total of the day will not be far from 5,000. Ward One leads the wards today with a total vote cast of 852 at 1 o'clock, with Ward Five a god second with 820 at the same hour.

WARD ONE.

The voting in the Quincy ward is progressing swiftly and quietly. With one exception in each precinct the regularly appointed officers are on duty. Andrew Johnson is serving in place of William J. Walsh, and Joseph E. Bean in place of Luke J. Coyle.

One man whose name has been on the precinct two list for seven years was surprised to find he was not registered now, and lost his vote.

That the Australian ballot is not fully understood by some voters was evident when an Adams street voter sought the help of an election officer.

WARD TWO.

The ward in the Fore River district is having a big rush. The Fore River workmen and those going to Boston on early trains all voted early, which made the total number of votes cast, one of the largest in the history of the ward. In precinct one, 200 votes were cast in the first two hours, and precinct two had 40 more in the same period of time.

The regular election officers in both precincts were on duty, with one exception, Deputy Michael T. Sullivan serving as warden in place of William F. Cain in precinct one.

Things went rather slow in the first precinct of Ward Two after 8.30. At 8.00 o'clock 200 votes had been cast, and at noon only 37 had been added. About 50 more are expected during the afternoon. At precinct two there was quite a rush all the morning and at noon the booths were full. At 12.30,, 340 votes were in and before 4 o'clock 50 or 60 more are looked for.

WARD THREE.

In Ward Three the business is rushing in both precincts. In precinct one the vote is about the same as last year, 150 votes being cast in the first hour. At 9.30, 214 was the total number that the ballot box registered. The vote in precinct two is a little higher than usual, 80 votes being cast in the first hour, and 100 more in the following two hours. The report is that E. J. Parker is going strong in this ward and will probably carry it by a good-sized majority.

The regular election officers are serving in both booths. The noon hour is expected to bring out a large vote in this district.

The total vote in precinct two, the Republican precinct at 1 o'clock, was 330.

In precinct one at 2 o'clock the total vote cast was 432.

WARD FOUR.

There is no extraordinary rush in either precinct of Ward Four. In precinct one at 7 o'clock 73 voters had passed in their ballots, and at 9.15, 175 votes had been cast.

Precinct two seemed to be doing better than one, 121 votes being the number at 7 o'clock. At 10 o'clock it had advanced to 201, and Mayor Shea made it 202 by casting his vote at one minute past ten. It was rather amusing to hear the inspector ask Mayor Shea what his name was. A smile went round when he said William T. Shea, 12 Common street, and then took his ballot.

The election officers are changed somewhat from the regular list in precinct two, William Gelotte and Joseph Flaherty acting as warden and clerk respectively in place of William H. Teasdale and Charles C. McCue. John D. Smith and Dennis Falvy are serving as inspectors in place of Thomas H. Shortle and John F. Sullivan. In precinct one the officers remain unchanged.

In Ward Four as in Three, a large vote was cast during the noon hour from the men who work in the quarries.

In precinct two, the Republican precinct, the total vote at 1 o'clock was 335.

In precinct one at 1.30 the total vote was 328.

WARD FIVE.

Wollaston, the banner Republican ward of the city, is getting out a phenominal vote today. The voting started in early and for the first two hours there was no time when the booths were not all occupied. During the first two hours 600 votes were cast. Then the vote fell off, and it was a few minutes past 11 o'clock when the 700 mark was reached.

Another rush was looked for between 12 and 1 o'clock, and the estimate is that 925 of the 1005 registered vote will be cast.

That the voting is way ahead of last year will be seen when it is remembered that the total vote of the ward at the November election 1907 was but 724 votes.

It is believed by tellers on duty that straight tickets as a rule are being voted, which means a large majority for Langelier for Representative.

As usual, the ballot box in this ward, did not work. It registered up to 20 votes all right. Then the figures on the dial refused to move.

This year is the last that the ward will vote in one precinct, as under the law it must be divided into two precincts, the total registered vote having exceeded 1000.

The railroad track will probably be used as the dividing line. There are now 388 registered voters east of the track and 617 west of the track. The growth of the ward however is on the east side.

There was quite a rush between the hours of 12 and 1 o'clock, and at the latter hour the vote cast had reached a total of 820.

WARD SIX.

Atlantic, the home ward of Candidates Langelier and Coombs, is doing itself proud today, and is getting out the largest vote in its history. Voting commenced lively in both precincts, and business in the voting line was good up to 10 o'clock.

At that hour, precinct one had cast 253 votes. This was 38 more than at the November election 1907 at the same hour, and 21 more than at the Municipal election 1907 at the same hour.

The total registered vote of this precinct is 404, and it is believed 90 per cent. of this vote will be cast.

In precinct two the vote at 10

MORSE GAINS STRONG POINT

Charge of Misappropriation Is Thrown Out by Court

AUSTIN NOTE FOR $100,000

Bank Said to Have Not Been Hurt by the Proceeding--Morse Declared by Counsel to Be Neither a Welcher Nor a Coward--Curtis Erred In Placing Too Much Faith In Morse's Financial Responsibility

New York, Nov. 3.—An election day verdict by the jury which is considering the cases of Charles W. Morse and Alfred H. Curtis, former officials of the National Bank of North America, on trial in the United States court here, charged with violation of the national banking laws, has been rendered improbable. Some time was taken up yesterday with arguments on various motions, and the beginning of the summing up was delayed long beyond the time which had been tentatively set. Today, it now appears, will be occupied with the concluding arguments by the prosecution and the defense, so the case is not likely to go to the jury until some time on Wednesday.

The attorneys for Morse and Curtis began the final moves in the case by securing the dismissal of the counts in the indictment against their clients referring to the Calvin Austin loan of $100,000, in connection with which misappropriation had been charged.

Morse discounted the Austin note despite the fact that Austin claimed the note had been discounted at the National Bank of North America and the proceeds used by Morse without his consent. This took from the government's case one of the more important allegations of misappropriation. It is understood that the counts were thrown out on the ground that the bank was in no way damaged by the transactions.

With this matter decided, the summing up for the defense proceeded.

Mr. Littlefield addressed the jury in behalf of Morse and Mr. Olcott argued in extenuation of the irregularities laid at the door of Curtis. Littlefield in his defense of Morse laid great stress on the intent of his client, which he declared had always been of the best. His client, he protested, was "neither a welcher nor a coward." In the thickest of the storm, he said, Morse had stood firm, making good every promise and carrying out every agreement. He had met all his obligations; the $210,000 overdraft note had been paid, dollar for dollar with interest, and not a single depositor had suffered the loss of a penny through the operations charged against Morse, Littlefield declared.

In opening his argument for Curtis, Olcott reviewed the blameless antecedents of his client and called attention to the high regard in which he was held by the banking fraternity. If he had erred it was only in reposing too great a faith in the financial responsibility of Morse, Olcott declared. In accepting the latter's guarantee, said the attorney, Curtis had been guided by the fact that through him the bank had benefited to the extent of $134,000, made in ice stock transactions. No motive whatever could be advanced as to why Curtis should endanger his bank, said Olcott.

At this point the advanced hour caused an adjournment to be taken until today. This morning the jurors were taken under guard to their various polling places in order that they might exercise their privilege as voters.

After Olcott has concluded his summing up for Curtis United States District Attorney Stimson will sum up for the prosecution. The indications are that Judge Hough will not make his charge before Wednesday morning, the case going to the jury at its conclusion, probably in the afternoon.

AMERICAN VS. FOREIGN SHIPS

Question of Carriage of Government Stores Again Comes Up

BOSTON SHIPOWNERS PROTEST

Vessels Flying Our Flag Ask Much Higher Rates Than Foreign Rivals and Cannot Secure Contracts as a Consequence--Difficult to Make Arrangements Which Will Be Fair and Satisfactory to All

Washington, Nov. 3.—Boston shipowners are again aggrieved by an alleged action of the navy department in chartering British steamers to transport coal from the United States to Guantanamo. One Boston firm has written the president protesting against the non-employment of American ships for this purpose, and the letter has been referred to the navy department. Secretary Newberry has made reply, and this particular incident is closed as far as the government is concerned.

The question of American versus foreign ships for the carriage of government stores is an old one. It has been before one department or another, usually the navy department, a great many times. None of the underlying facts appear to have changed, however; neither is there prospect of improving the situation, judging by the latest information the navy department has upon it.

The plain fact is that American shipowners cannot or will not offer transportation at rates anywhere near as low as those of their foreign rivals. On various desks in the navy department today are bids from shipowners of all nationalities, and invariably the American figure is so high that the navy department could not accept it without laying itself open to severe criticism.

For example, bids have been asked for the transportation of coal to various points in the Pacific ocean. British, Norwegian, German and other lines offer a rate of $4.25 a ton or a little more. The lowest rate of any American steamship company is $7.25. To close with an American concern for, say, a 9000-ton cargo, would be to make a bold present of $27,000 to the American line.

Not only would such a contract practically constitute a ship subsidy, against which a very large element of the taxpaying community would protest, but it would be a violation of the simplest of business principles. In the view of the navy department such a contract would be indefensible before the country. President Roosevelt and other executive officers of the government recognize the desirability of favoring the American merchant marine, and would be glad if they could learn of any legitimate way in which to do so.

The situation is a delicate one. The enemies of ship subsidy, or even of an extension of the present limited system of postal subsdy, were powerful enough in the last congress to prevent the passage of the bill which Postmaster eneral Meyer urged in the interest of our foreign trade. The deciding votes over a measure like this come from the interior states, which are represented by men who, while strong protectionists as far as the customs tariff is concerned, show a reluctancy to extend the benefits of that system to the sea. No presentation of facts has yet been able to overcome the objections of congressmen of this class, although the ocean mail bill came nearer success last year than ever before.

The very inability of American lines to meet the competition of foreign ones, figuring as closely as they can, is in itself an obstacle to governmental aid. The margin between the cost of operation of American and foreign ships is so great that congress hesitates to cover it by legislation for fear of placing an unbearable burden upon the business of the country.

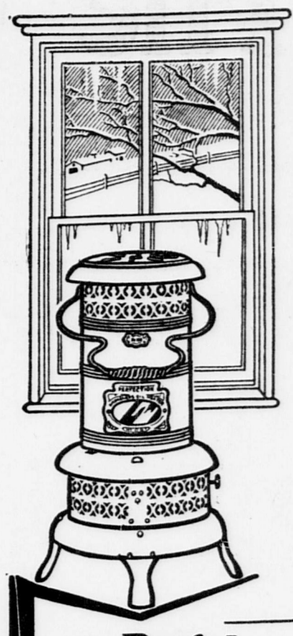

A former president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce once suggested that the only business solution of the problem was to permit Americans to buy foreign ships at their pleasure and to man them as they pleased with foreigners, say Norwegians, pay foreign wages and feed the men according to the European scale.

No doubt the suggestion embodies the only business principle upon which the American merchant marine can obtain its share of the foreign carrying trade, without a resort to subsidy (or taxation); but it is repugnant to the American sense of the proper way to maintain the shipping industry and, moreover, would be in violation of existing law.

The problem is too important to remain quiet, and doubtless congress will be assailed with it until some solution is reached. The present episode supplies fresh evidence of the difficulty of making a new arrangement which will be fair and satisfactory to all concerned.

Murder In First Degree

New Haven, Nov. 3.—The jury in the cases of Ralph Carfaro and Joseph Campagnolo, on trial here for the murder of George Sheehan, brought in a verdict of murder in the first degree. Sheehan was walking on Barnes avenue on the night of Aug. 15 in company with his fiancee when the couple were accosted by Carfaro and Campagnolo. After a few words, Campagnolo struck Sheehan with a pitchfork and Carfaro shot him.

PRESIDENTIAL FIGHT IS CLOSE

Great Majority For Taft If He Carries Doubtful States

HEAVY VOTE IS BEING CAST

All Eyes on the Empire State, In Which Managers of Both Parties Claim Its Thirty-Nine Electoral Votes--Fight For Presidency Not the Only Issue of Importance--How Leaders Registered Votes

New York, Nov. 3.—Throughout the land today the ballots are falling. All the speeches have been made and all prophecies uttered. Nothing remains but the counting of the votes.

According to reliable information received here at the latest moment, the fight today between the two leading aspirants for the presidency is close. The result, even today, is in doubt, despite the enthusiastic declarations of party managers that "it's all over but the shouting." Add to the electoral votes conceded to Mr. Bryan those of the doubtful states, and he will win. The states conceded to the Republican candidate have, however, a larger number of electoral votes than those admittedly Democratic. If Mr. Taft is victorious in the doubtful states his majority will be very great.

The electoral vote in the last presidential election, in 1904, was as follows:

	Roosevelt.	Parker.
Alabama	—	11
Arkansas	—	9
California	10	—
Colorado	5	—
Connecticut	7	—
Delaware	3	—
Georgia	—	13

While the fight for the presidency is attracting the greatest amount of attention here and elsewhere, it is by no means the only issue of importance today. A new house of representatives, the lower branch of the Sixty-first congress, is being elected. In twenty-eight states governors are being balloted for, and some of the states will choose legislatures which will elect United States senators. The terms of thirty-one senators—eighteen Republicans and thirteen Democrats—will expire on March 4. Among them are Platt of New York, Stone of Missouri, Smoot of Utah, Stephenson of Wisconsin and Perkins of California. In twenty-three states a total of ninety proposed constitutional amendments, laws, questions or propositions are being voted upon. This does not include Michigan, where a revision of the present constitution has been submitted to the electors for adoption or rejection. Of general interest in this connection is the vote in South Dakota on the question of repealing the "one year residence" act passed by the last legislature in order to stop rapid divorces.

The number of tickets in the states varies from one to six. Only the Democrats have tickets in the field in South Carolina and Louisiana, while in Ohio the voters have the privilege of choosing among seven sets of candidates for the state offices. An interesting feature of the contest in Utah is the presence of the so-called "American party," opposed to the influence of the Mormon church in politics. The Prohibition party has tickets in twenty-one states, the Socialist in twenty-seven, the Independence party in twelve, the Socialist Labor in six and People's or Populist party in five, including Nebraska, where the Populists have fused with the Democrats. The Socialist Labor party has a "proxy" candidate for president, the real nominee being Martin R. Preston, who is confined in a Nevada jail on a charge of murder. The proxy is August Gilhaus of New York.

Here in New York state the fight for re-election made by Governor Hughes is almost overshadowing the national contest. Other states are also seeing today the finishes of bitter local contests. In Connecticut Congressman Lilley of submarine boat fame has as opponent Judge A. Heaton Robertson. New Jersey and Pennsylvania have been able to give their undivided attention to national and local issues, neither state electing a governor today. In Illinois Governor Deneen's claim to another term in office has been contested by Former Vice President Adlai E. Stevenson. The congressional contest that has attracted most attention has been that between Speaker Cannon and Henry C. Bell, the Democrat who has his eyes on Uncle Joe's seat.

In Minnesota two descendants of Scandinavia are trying for election as governor. The Democrat is Governor John A. Johnson of national fame, and his Republican opponent is Jacob F. Jacobson. Missouri's leading candidates for the governorship are Congressman William S. Cowherd, Democrat, and Attorney General Herbert S. Hadley, Republican, who have had to yield a large share of the limelight in their state to the fight that is being made by Governor Joseph W. Folk for the senatorship. Senator Stone is seeking re-election, and the Republican aspirant for the place is Richard C. Kerens. In Mr. Bryan's state the candidates for governor are A. C. Shallenberger, Democrat, who beat Omaha's "cowboy mayor," Jim Dahlman, in the primaries, and the incumbent of the office, George L. Sheldon. The Ohio fight has been waged with great bitterness and zeal, the Republican nominee in Mr. Taft's home state being Governor Andrew L. Harris, who is opposed by Judson Harmon, attorney general in Mr. Cleveland's cabinet.

Reports from Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia and other large cities say that the voting both in the city precincts and in the country districts is heavy, the apathy that marked the greater part of the campaign being succeeded by the efforts of the politicians to "bring out the vote." At the headquarters of both parties in this city this is hailed as an encouraging sign, figures being combined in numerous and bewildering combinations to prove that one or the other of the candidates will be successful in landing the big prize.

The headquarters of all the minor parties are exceedingly busy places today. The Independence party men, Socialists and Prohibitionists declare that their respective candidates will poll votes greatly in excess of those conceded to them by the old party men. This feeling is especially marked at the Independence and Socialist quarters, where the followers of Messrs. Hisgen and Debs assert that the returns will astonish the country.

Concerning the presidential situation, the prophecies of professional political prophets made weeks ago are being fulfilled today. They repeated then the ancient axiom, "As goes New York so goes the Union." Time has confirmed their diagnosis of the situation. All eyes today are on the Empire state. The managers of both parties claim its thirty-nine electoral votes, and all declare they see victory for their respective state candidates. The voting is being done rapidly up the state, some of the districts having already reported the polling of their full votes. The city moves in a more deliberate manner, however, and the streets are filled with animated, busy groups of party workers. In a great majority of the polling places the voting is slow, indicating, according to experienced politicians, much "scratching" or voting of split tickets.

Taft Deposits His Ballot

Cincinnati, Nov. 3.—The strain of his speechmaking tours could be detected in Mr. Taft's voice when he responded to the greetings of those who turned out to see the Republican candidate for the presidency cast his ballot. Since his arrival in his home city after his nomination Cincinnati has not had much opportunity to pay attention to Mr. Taft, and today a crowd assembled at the voting place to greet him. To inquiries about his health Mr. Taft replied that he felt all right, and he answered questions about the outcome of the battle with the smiling assurance that he felt no fear. He was not kept waiting in order to cast his ballot, the crowd making way for him readily. As his portly form passed through the group of bystanders numerous hands were thrust out to him with good wishes. Before passing on Mr. Taft grasped as many as he could, thanking their owners for their greetings. The casting of his ballot required only a short time.

Bryan Greeted With Cheers

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 3.—Long before the arrival of William Jennings Bryan at his polling place he was awaited by enthusiastic Democrats and spectators of all political faiths. When his familiar form was seen approaching a cheer broke forth that was smilingly acknowledged by Mr. Bryan. He was seemingly in good health and spirits, showing little sign of his strenuous campaign work. After bowing to the crowd and grasping the hands of those near him the Democratic candidate cast his vote. Before leaving Mr. Bryan asserted his entire confidence in the success of the national and state Democratic tickets, paying especial attention to Nebraska.

Demonstration For Roosevelt

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Nov. 3.—President Roosevelt's entry today into the village from his home at Sagamore Hill was made the occasion of a great popular demonstration. The president is personally popular with the residents of the village, and they made a place for him at the local polling place with great alacrity. He took only a few seconds to mark and deposit his ballot. When one of the bystanders ventured to shout "Three cheers for Taft!" the president turned on him one of his famous grins. Mr. Roosevelt declared his great confidence in the success of the Republican ticket, both state and national.

Hughes Votes at New York

New York, Nov. 3.—Governor Charles E. Hughes, candidate for re-election on the Republican ticket, deposited his ballot in a small shop near his home in this city. He was immediately recognized by the crowd in and around the polling place, and a place was made for him at the head of the line. Like the president, he took but a few seconds to cast his vote. Mr. Hughes' campaign managers are very busy today discounting the predictions of enormous Democratic majorities in this city. They declare that the governor's vote in his home town will astonish those who are forecasting his defeat. There seems to be, however, around Tammany hall an easy air of confidence in Chanler's election.

Chanler Votes For Himself

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Advices from Red Hook, near which Rokeby the home of Lieutenant Governor Lewis S. Chanler, Democratic candidate for governor, is situated, say that the casting of the ballot of Mr. Chanler was a quiet performance, unmarked by ceremony.

Washington Is Dead

Washington, Nov. 3.—With the greatest interest, personal, official and financial, in the result of the election, the national capital is debarred from taking any active part in its determination. The city today is dead, absolutely and unqualifiedly dead. The great mass of officeholders have gone home to vote—that is, the male officeholders, who retain their legal residences in their former homes, have done so. Many of the female clerks, secretaries and stenographers have also improved the opportunity of taking a holiday, and as a result Washington is spending its usual quiet election day.

BOYCOTT AGAINST JAPANESE GOODS

Chinese Merchants Who Disregard It Are In Danger

Hong Kong, Nov. 3.—The rioting which resulted here yesterday from the attempt of those involved to force the local merchants to continue the boycott against Japanese goods has been suppressed by the soldiers who were called out to patrol the business districts. One Chinese who offered armed resistance was shot.

The riots were organized primarily by the students of this city and the disturbance is evidently widespread. At Singapore similar riots have occurred and a number of merchants said to have shown a desire to discontinue the boycott and otherwise favor Japan have been branded as traitors and in several instances marked by having their ears slit.

It is alleged that a league has been formed secretly and has pledged itself to give any man who slits the ears of a so-called "traitor" $15 and, should he be thrown into jail, to see that he is held up to the public as a martyr and to pay him a dollar a day while in prison. Should one of the traitor merchants be killed, it is alleged that the league agrees to pay his slayer $200.

At Canton there have been hints of the same trouble and a number of Russians have been hired to attack merchants. Vigorous measures to suppress the rioting have been taken.

Edna Hopper Keeps Auto

New York, Nov. 3.—Judge Holt denied a motion directing Edna W. Hopper, the actress, to turn over to Charles E. Littlefield, receiver for the bankrupt brokerage firm of A. O. Brown & Co. the automobile and life insurance policy which Albert O. Brown, head of the firm, presented to his fiancee before the collapse of the firm. But Holt also granted an injunction restraining Miss Hopper from disposing of the property within thirty days after a trustee in bankruptcy is appointed. Meanwhile, the actress can use the automobile as much as she pleases.

Railroad Failed to Settle

Portland, Or., Nov. 3.—Charging that the Central Railway company is insolvent and has defaulted in the payment of interest instalments since Jan. 1, 1907, on mortgage bonds to the amount of $500,000, the American Trust company of Boston filed foreclosure proceedings in the federal court and the road has been placed in the hands of receivers.

The Newfoundland Election

St. John's, Nov. 3.—The returns at hand from yesterday's general election for the colonial legislature are limited to results from two districts only, both of these showing slight losses for the government in the popular vote. It is not likely that the complete returns, showing the results in the thirty-six districts, will be received before Thursday.

Servia's Peaceful Attitude

Belgrade, Nov. 3.—The Servian government, acting upon the advice of the powers, has issued an official repudiation of any hostile designs on Austria-Hungary, together with a declaration that Servia awaits the issue of the international congress hopefully, trusting in friendly powers to plead her just cause.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

Mrs. Charles Coe of Billings street spent a few days last week at Littleton, N. H.

Beale street between Newport avenue and Farrington street is being resurfaced.

Mrs. E. M. Chase of Appleton street left last Saturday for a short trip to New Hampshire.

Glenn A. Fuller has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $2618 and no assets.

The Elks' club will receive the election returns tonight by a special wire, beginning at 6.30. The rooms will be open to members and their friends who desire to get the returns.

There are just 100 names on the ballot in use at today's election. A careful perusal of the ballot, however, shows that there is no confusion in the picking out the candidates desired.

The Westland quartet, of which Miss Alice Coe of Billings street is the contralto, received a rousing ovation at New Bedford last week when they sang at one of the popular churches.

The annual meeting for the collection of garments of the Needle Work Guild will be held Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock at the home of Mrs. Perry Lawton, Presidents hill. It is hoped all members will be present with the finished garments or will send them to the meeting.

At the Mothers' Association meeting at Bethany chapel Wednesday afternoon, the devotional exercises will be conducted by Mrs. C. T. Sherman. A paper on "Health through exercise" will be read by Mrs. D. E. Wadsworth and there will be solos by Mrs. Albert E. Avery of Braintree.

At the executive board meeting of the Quincy Choral society, Mr. Arthur S. Wonson of Gloucester was unanimously elected conductor for the twelve rehearsals and concert planned by the society. Mr. Wonson is a musician of exceptional ability, well known in Boston musical circles, and has conducted the Gloucester Choral association for the past six years. This chorus usually numbers two hundred singers and splendid work has been done by them. It is likely that the Quincy Choral society will begin the study of the oratorio of Elijah at the first rehearsal on Wednesday evening.

The boys in Atlantic have amused themselves lately smashing electric light globes. This sport may be excellent target practice but it is not only unfair to the residents of an unlighted street but also to the Electric Light company. The last globes to go were on Atlantic and Walker streets. As it happened, a citizen who lives on Walker street caught the boys in the act and armed with their names he made the fact known to the police. So far nothing has been done about it.

Newsy Budget From Shipyard

On account of the rain last Friday fully one thousand men did not report for work in the shipyard and hundreds of those who did got so thoroughly wet walking from the street cars away up on Washington street to the shipyard that they had to return to their homes, because they could not stand it to do a day's work in their respective shops wet through to the skin. This represents a large financial loss.

The following names have been assigned to the artillery tugs for the quartermaster's division of the War Department of the United States:

No. 159, General Robert Anderson.
No. 160, General Richard Arnold.
No. 161, enGeral R. B. Ayres.
No. 162, General J. M. Brannan.
No. 163, General Harvey Brown.
No. 164, General G. W. Getty.
No. 165, General R. H. Jackson.
No. 166, General A. M. Randol.

The above-named vessels are at the present time under construction at the shipyard, two of them being already launched and nearing completion alongside the company's long concrete wharf.

William R. Thomas, candidate for Representative from 5th Norfolk district, composed of Wards 1, 2, and 3, was a visitor at the shipyard last Saturday as the guest of George H. Corliss. Mr. Thomas was very much impressed with the magnitude of this great industry.

Orders have been issued by the Navy department that the battleships New Hampshire, Missouri, Idaho, No. Carolina, Montant and the three scout North Carolina and the three scout cruisers, Chester, Salem and Birmingham, are to be painted slate color. There has been for a long time criticism of the white on the hulls and the spar color (yellow) on the upper works with which the ships of the navy have been painted in time of peace. The idea of painting the ships slate color is to try a war-time color in time of peace so that manaeuvers may be accomplished profitably. With white it is practically impossible to do any effective searchlight work at night, as the ships are very easily discovered. There is furthermore an objection to the patchy look of the white paint after it has been on a short time. Neither the white nor the yellow are so lasting is the slate color.

Mr. Charles N. Richards of the U. S. Senate stationery department at Washington, came on to cast his vote as usual in his home town and pay a brief visit to his Quincy friends.

IT'S YOUR KIDNEYS

Don't Mistake the Cause of Your Troubles. A Quincy Citizen Shows How to Cure Them.

Many people never suspect their kidneys. If suffering from a lame, weak or aching back they think that it is only a muscular weakness; when urinary trouble sets in they think it will soon correct itself. And so it is with all the other symptoms of kidney disorders. That is just where the danger lies. You must cure these troubles or they may lead to diabetes or Bright's disease. The best remedy to use is Doan's Kindney Pills. It cures all ills which are caused by weak or diseased kidneys. Quincy people testify to permanent cures.

Mrs. E. Burke, living at 143 Quincy St., Quincy, Mass. says: "I consider Doan's Kidney Pills an excellent remedy for Kidney trouble, both my husband and myself having used them and the results were of the most satisfactory nature. Mr. Burke had such a severe pain in his back that he could hardly do his work, but Doan's Kidney Pills fixed him up in good shape. They were procured at the Cox Drug Store and have our highest recommendation."

* Elected.

Big Vote In the City

Between 10 and 12 o'clock there was a lull in voting in both precincts but between the latter hour and 1 o'clock there was brisk voting.

Both Langelier and Coombs claim the ward. Last year Coombs carried it, but the circumstances were somewhat different then from this year, and Langelier is picked as the winner.

VOTE ELSEWHERE.

Braintree is casting a very large vote, which is said to be strongly Republican. The total registration of the town is 1,539 and at 1 o'clock 1,300 had voted.

At noon a very large vote had been cast at Dedham.

RAILROAD UNEARTHED.

A relic of by-gone days was unearthed Monday by Felix Favoritte at Wollaston. He was doing some excavating on the Whittier estate, corner of Elmwood and North Central avenue. Four feet from the surface he uncovered some railroad ties and rails, and was somewhat surprised as a result of his find. According to Charles R. Sherman, years ago when the Old Colony railroad was built, the railroad people had permission for a certain time to take gravel from the hills in that vicinity, and a railroad track was laid for that purpose. The track found by Mr. Favoritte is probably a part of this old line.

Pretty Wedding At Bath, Maine

The Bath Daily Times has a more extended report of the Mason-Hussey wedding:

At the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Mason at Bath, Maine, occurred the marriage of their daughter, Miss Annie Louise, to William F. Hussey, son of Mrs. B. F Hussey of Waterville, in the presence of only the relatives and immediate friends, but was followed by a largely attended reception. The ceremony was performed in the south parlor where an arch of evergreen had been formed in the bay window. Hemlock boughs and white chrysanthemums formed the decorations and a prettier arrangement could not be imagined.

At 8.30 the strains of the well known Lohengrin march rendered by Miss Annie Ritchie at the piano were heard and a few seconds later there was a rustle and soft footsteps were noted as the wedding procession came into the room. It was headed by the two ribbon boys, Masters Langdon and Walter Hill, each taking their places opposite sides of the arch and then came the ring bearers, the Misses Louise Hill, a cousin of the bride, and Lillian Mason, a sister, who took their places beside the boys, thus forming an aisle. They were followed by Miss Ethel Mason, a sister of the bride, who was the bridesmaid and who wore a handsome gown of white net over yellow and carried yellow chrysanthemums. Following her was the bride, one of the prettiest seen in Bath for many a day, in her gown of white messaline trimmed with Oriental lace and handsomely embroidered Princess. She also wore a long veil caught up with white lilacs and carried a shower bouquet of roses. The groom and his best man, C. Howard Cook of Bath met the party at the arch.

The bride was accompanied by her father who gave her away.

Following the service came the reception at which Mr. and Mrs. Hussey were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Mason, parents of the bride, W. W. Mason, the bride's grandfather, and Miss Hattie Harper of Cambridge, Mass., a cousin.

The gifts were numerous and beautiful, forming a large collection which was greatly admired by the guests and which will give Mrs. Hussey a most excellent start when she goes to housekeeping, for a majority of them were not only ornamental but useful. One, however, which was greatly admired was a sunburst of pearls, the groom's gift to the bride, and which she wore during the evening. Another gift was silver teaspoons and tablespoons from Mr. Hussey's associates in the engineering department of the draughting rooms at the plant of the Fore River Ship and Engine Co., of Quincy, where he is employed.

REPUBLICAN RALLIES.

The Republican rally at St. Mary's hall last night, was not as well attended as might be desired, but a fairly good crowd listened to the three speakers. Former Representative Edward J. Sandberg presided, and the speakers were J. Mitchell Galvin of Boston candidate for Congress, John F. Madden of Beverly and Louis F. R. Langelier of Quincy candidate for Representative in the order named.

Mr. Galvin was the principal speaker, and he spoke at length on his past record, and told what he intended to do in the future. He also paid his respects to Congressman O'Connell and denied the allegation that he was a "political renegade."

Mr. Madden and Mr. Langelier spoke briefly for Candidate Galvin and asked for the support of West Quincy on election day.

Another well attended rally was held in A. O. H. hall on Franklin street. Walter E. Piper, who was a candidate with Mr. Thomas for Representative, presided and spoke briefly.

The speakers were John F. Madden of Beverly, Speaker John N. Cole of the Massachusetts, Candidate Galvin, Candidate Thomas, and President W. M. Chase of the City Committee.

Speaker Cole reviewed the good work of the Republican party in the State and compared it with Democratic rule in Southern states. He had tributes for President Roosevelt, Candidate Taft and Candidate Galvin.

Candidate Galvin made a good appearance, and was enthusiastic over Roosevelt and Taft, and came out squarely for Republican policies. He also paid his respects to his Democratic rival.

Candidate Thomas made quite a lengthy address, discussing local and National issues including the tariff, bank guarantee, the ship subsidy, etc.

BEATING CAUSED DEATH

Woman Succumbs to Injuries Received at Hands of Thugs

Lawrence, Mass., Nov. 3.—As the result of an autopsy held by Medical Examiner Dow on the body of Mrs. Margaret Smith of Methuen, aged 53, found dead in the rear of her boarding house on Broadway, it was decided the woman came to her death as the result of an assault in which she was beaten over the head.

Mrs. Smith, who was employed as a weaver in the Arlington mills, was returning home late Sunday night with her husband when the two were set upon by five men. Smith was rushed into an adjoining alley, while his wife was dragged in another direction. While the thugs were beating Smith the latter heard his wife cry out for help. An officer and one of the nearby tenants came to the scene on hearing the cries and the assailants fled. Robbery is believed to have been the motive of assault.

The murder occurred in the city of Lawrence, near the Methuen line, and the officers of this city have taken the case up for investigation.

Great Britain Denies Advice on the Boer War

London, Nov. 3.—The plan of campaign for ending the Boer war which was drawn up by Emperor William and sent to Queen Victoria, according to the interview with the emperor that appeared last week in The Daily Telegraph, was not communicated to the British war office.

This matter has angered the Irishmen, who effect to see an attempt to rob their fellow-countryman, Lord Roberts, of the glory attached to his success, and William Redmond, the Nationalist, questioned War Secretary Haldane on the subject in the house of commons.

The secretary replied that the war office archives contained no such document, and that he could find no record of its ever having been in the possession of anybody connected with the department.

Confession of Wicked Pair

Detroit, Nov. 3.—After confessing their guilt to the police yesterday, John Kurka, a teamster, and Mrs. Anthony Schultz were arraigned in Hamtramck township and pleaded guilty to the charge of murdering Mrs. Schultz' husband, who was a half-brother of Kurka. The latter said that the crime was attributable to an illicit affection between himself and his half-brother's wife. Kurka had been living in the home of the Schultz couple. Schultz was murdered in his bed a week ago with an axe. The body was taken to the western suburbs of Detroit, where it was later found hidden under a pile of straw.

Receivers For Big Corporation

Norwich, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Receivers have been appointed for the Hudson River Electric Power company by Judge Ray. The corporation was organized in 1903 and controls the Hudson River Water Power company, Hudson River Electric company and Hudson River Power Transmission company, together with various sub-companies, owned by the last two named, supplying central and eastern New York state with power. The authorized capital stock was $10,000,000, of which $5,390,000 was issued. The total funded debt of the corporation, according to its last statement, was $9,683,500.

A Long Time In Office

Fitchburg, Mass., Nov. 3.—The special committee which was appointed by the school committee to consider the resignation of Joseph E. Edgerly as superintendent of schools last night recommended that action on the resignation be indefinitely deferred. This is taken to mean that Edgerly will continue to fulfill the duties of his office, which he has held for thirty-three years. He resigned last month on his 70th birthday, giving as a reason that it was in fulfillment of a resolution made many years ago.

Held on Murder Charge

Augusta, Me., Nov. 4.—Fred Davis was arrested by City Marshal Fletcher this morning after a long hearing, charged with the murder of George Dunham, found dead Saturday in Chelsea, near the Soldiers' home. Lillian Chamberlain, who claims to be Davis' wife, was held as a witness.

Actress Killed by Morphine

Alameda, Cal., Nov. 3.—Miss Ida Beamer, an actress said to belong to a wealthy family in Pennsylvania, died in a sanitarium in this city from the effects of an overdose of morphine. The police believe the woman committed suicide because of a love affair.

Moro Leader Laid Out

Manila, Nov. 3.—A force of constabulary from Iligan, sent in pursuit of Moros who have been causing depredations in the province of Misamis on Mindanao island, overtook the outlaws, killed the leader and is following the rest of the band.

Strikebreakers Join Unionists

Rumford, Me., Nov. 3.—Seven strikebreakers came here last night to go to work in the mills of the International Paper company, but they had barely arrived when six of them went over to the union ranks and declined to go to work.

La France SHOE for WOMEN $3 to $4

The COMPANIONSHIP of COMFORTABLE SHOES

A shoe that hurts your foot is like an ill-natured companion—keeps you in a bad temper, too. A shoe that really fits the foot is a strong aid to solid comfort, and therefore to good cheer.

Women who wear La France shoes are cheerful women because their feet are always comfortable. They are contented women because they know that their shoes present a graceful and aristocratic appearance.

They are economical women because La France shoes are made of the finest and most carefully selected materials and by workmanship which has no superior in the shoe-making industry—therefore they wear far longer than you would expect such dainty shoes to last you.

Come in and try on a pair of these famous shoes at the very first opportunity.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it falls to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Quincy Gives Large Pluralities to All Republican Candidates

Eugene C. Hultman Elected Senator, and William R. Thomas and Louis F. R. Langelier to the House

"As goes Quincy, so goes the Nation and the State" was again exemplified at the election on Tuesday. Quincy went strongly Republican for President, so did the Nation; Quincy went strongly Republican for Governor, and so did Massachusetts.

Taft's total in Quincy was practically 3,000 votes, to be exact 2996, while Bryan had only 1411, less than half as many. Tafts vote was 543 larger then Quincy gave Roosevelt, while Bryan received 71 more than Parker.

For Governor, Draper received 2393 and Vahey 1647, a plurality of 746 for the Republican ticket. The vote of Draper was 638 larger than was given Gov. Guild, while the vote of Vahey was less than the vote of Moran in 1906.

For Lieutenant Governor, Frothingham led Draper 261 votes, and he had over twice as many votes as Barton, his rival.

Large pluralities were also given to Olin for secretary of state, Chapin for State treasurer, Turner for State auditor, and Malone for attorney general.

J. Mitchell Galvin, the Republican candidate for Congress run close to Taft, and ahead of all the Republican State ticket. His total was 2800, and may give him the election.

Senator-elect Hultman also has reason to feel proud of the endorsement of his home city. He received 2,852 votes to 1,313 for Foley, his Democratic rival.

County Commissioner Merrill and Register of Probate Cobb had a walkover, having no Democratic rivals.

The Representative districts were not at all close, and Quincy will send two Republicans, William R. Thomas and Louis F. R. Langelier, in place of a Republican and a Democrat. Both enter upon their first year. Thomas won by about 350 votes, carrying both precincts of Ward One, and won in Ward Three by a few votes. Parker had a slight lead in the Quincy Point ward.

Langelier won by over 200, although Coombs was elected last year by 22 votes. Langelier carried Wollaston by over 450, and also carried the Atlantic ward, while, Coombs led in both the West Quincy precincts and caried the ward by nearly 300.

The vote in full for all candidates, by precinct is given on another page.

NEW ENGLAND VOTERS' CHOICE

DRAPER IS ELECTED GOVERNOR

Democratic Opponent Polled Much Larger Vote Than Expected--Lilley Wins In Connecticut by About 10,000--Quinby Carries New Hampshire and Pothier Rhode Island --Figures In Maine and Vermont

Boston, Nov. 4.—The Republicans won the Massachusetts election, sending sixteen Taft votes to the electoral college, placing Lieutenant Governor Eben S. Draper in the gubernatorial chair, choosing the balance of the state ticket, re-electing all the present congressmen and retaining firm control of both branches of the legislature.

Taft and Sherman carried the state by 100,000 and Draper defeated James H. Vahey, the Democratic leader, by about 75,000. Roosevelt's plurality in Massachusetts four years ago was 92,076. The Republican state ticket elected was as follows:

Governor, Eben S. Draper, Hopedale lieutenant governor, Louis A. Frothingham, Boston; secretary of state, William M. Olin, Boston; treasurer, Arthur D. Chapin, Holyoke; auditor, Henry E. Turner, Malden; attorney general, Dana Malone, Greenfield.

The voting, despite the short and somewhat listless campaign, exceeded expectations, especially in the towns. An ideal autumn day undoubtedly was a contributing factor, the voters evidently having thoroughly familiarized themselves with the issues and flocked to the polls in large numbers.

The size of the vote for Vahey was a feature of the election. Assuming the leadership of a party that had scarcely recovered from the turmoil and schism of last year's Springfield convention, and with scarcely any campaign fund, Vahey succeeded in drawing to his support 150,000 voters, nearly double the number who favored the party candidate a year ago. Vahey proved far more popular among the party followers than Mr. Bryan, and led the presidential nominee in nearly every community in the state.

Despite the fact that Mr. Hisgen, the presidential nominee of the Independence League, was a native of Massachusetts and received last year, when candidate for governor, over 75,000 votes, the support of the new party in national politics in Massachusetts was very meagre, polling scarcely more than 20,000.

Taft and Bryan had a hot fight in Boston and for a long time ran neck and neck, due to the heavy registration in the Republican wards and a comparatively light vote in the Democratic districts. Four years ago Parker carried the city by nearly 10,000 over Roosevelt. This year the margin between the presidential candidates was a matter of a few hundred votes. Taft also ran well in other cities of the state, where the voting was unusually heavy.

There were few contests in the congressional districts, the closest being in those which have been represented by Democrats during the past six years.

Connecticut

New Haven, Nov. 4.—The great size of the Republican victory in Connecticut was evident this morning when William H. Taft was found to have a plurality which will be greater than that given to President Roosevelt four years ago. The plurality is 38,450. His vote is 111,599, as against 73,149 for Bryan. Debs polled 2804 votes and Chafin, the Prohibitionist, 2280.

The plurality for Mr. Lilley, against whom a great fight was waged, was 16,004 over Judge A. Heaton Robertson, his Democratic opponent. The Republican gains extend to the legislature. In the senate Senator Donovan, Democrat, was defeated in Norwalk by Mr. Silliman.

Rhode Island

Providence, Nov. 4.—The returns indicate that the entire state ticket of the Republicans is elected and that the legislative vote will show substantial Republican gains in both houses. Pothier is elected governor. In the First congressional district the contest between Sheffield, Republican, and Granger, Democrat, is still undecided. Of the thirty-eight cities and towns in the state, fifteen voted for license and eight voted no-license.

New Hampshire

Concord, N. H., Nov. 4.—The returns from New Hampshire this morning comprise barely one-half of the state on an estimated vote approximating 85,000, but they plainly foreshadow that the state has duplicated the tremendous vote of four years ago for Roosevelt and gives Taft its electoral vote by about 18,000 plurality.

The state ticket discloses Democratic gains, some over the vote of two years ago, when there was no election by the people, and Henry B. Quinby, Republican candidate for governor, has won by a narrow margin. The larger centers are slow in returning their vote.

Vermont

White River Junction, Vt., Nov. 4.—Vermont remains strongly Republican, although by a smaller plurality than that which was given to President Roosevelt in 1904. The Democrats, on the other hand, made substantial gains, the Bryan vote this year being about 16 percent greater than that given Parker in 1904.

The principal Democratic gains were made in those cities and towns where the labor vote is a factor, such as Rutland and Barre, where the great granite quarries are located. The Bryan gain, however, was not confined to any one section, but was marked throughout the entire state, although in some localities it was much more pronounced than in others.

There had been no campaign conducted in the state by either party, and the voters were extremely apathetic. Only presidential electors were chosen.

Maine

Portland, Me., Nov. 4.—Taft and Sherman were given a plurality of 32,000 in Maine out of a total vote for the two leading parties of 103,000. Bryan's vote was estimated, at 35,725, Taft's 67,203. The vote of both parties was below the average of the past thirty-six years, while the plurality was about 6000 in excess of the average.

PACIFIC COAST FOR TAFT

Republicans Win In California, Oregon and Washington

San Francisco, Nov. 4.—There was no state election in California to complicate the issues, and the Republican national ticket carried the state by about 40,000 majority. In 1904 Roosevelt carried the state by 115,822 over Parker. The solid Republican delegation has been re-elected without change, and a Republican state legislature insures the election of a Republican to succeed Senator Perkins. The proposition to remove the state capital from Sacramento to Berkeley has been rejected.

Washington

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 4.—Washington's five electoral votes will be cast for Taft, the Republican candidate having carried this state by a popular majority of 30,000, reducing Mr. Roosevelt's majority in 1904 by 43,442. Samuel C. Cosgrove, Republican, has been elected governor, and the state's legislature will remain Republican by a large majority.

Oregon

Portland, Or., Nov. 4.—Returns from all parts of the state indicate that Taft has a large majority. There was no state election.

Bryan Loses In Utah

Salt Lake City, Nov. 4.—Utah is Republican again this year by a heavy majority, that of the national ticket being much greater than for the state candidates. Spry, the Republican candidate for governor, was elected. The legislature will undoubtedly be Republican, insuring the re-election of Senator Smoot.

Oklahoma

Guthrie, Okla., Nov. 4.—Oklahoma has continued loyal to the Democratic party, but the majority has been reduced materially and Bryan's lead is estimated at 25,000. The five members of congress, four Democrats and one Republican, have been re-elected. The legislature is two-thirds Democratic.

Idaho

Boise, Ida., Nov. 4.—Meagre reports showing only the trend of the voting indicate that Taft carried the state by 20,000 and the entire Republican state ticket has been elected. Brady for governor should have 8000 plurality on the basis of present indications. The legislature is in doubt.

South Dakota

Sioux Falls, S. D., Nov. 4.—Returns are sufficient to show that the Republicans made a clean sweep of the state on the national and state tickets. They will have a big majority in the legislature, assuring the election of a Republican successor to Senator Kittridge.

Kentucky

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 4.—Kentucky has gone Democratic by a vote of 230,000 in a total vote of 430,000. The Republicans have lost two of their congressmen, giving the state now nine Democrats to two Republicans. There was no state election.

Kansas

Topeka, Kan., Nov. 4.—Kansas is again in the Republican column this year. Mr. Taft's majority in the state is 20,000, much less than Mr. Roosevelt's majority in 1904. Walter R. Stubbs, Republican, has been elected governor.

North Dakota

Bismarck, N. D., Nov. 4.—North Dakota has gone Republican, giving Mr. Taft 40,000 of its 70,000 votes. This is a Republican falling off of 28,322 since the last presidential election.

Wyoming

Cheyenne, Wyo., Nov. 4.—This state's three electoral votes will be cast for William H. Taft, but his popular majority is considerably below that of Mr. Roosevelt.

Louisiana

New Orleans, Nov. 4.—As usual, Louisiana is solidly Democratic by a very large majority. There was no gubernatorial election.

Nevada

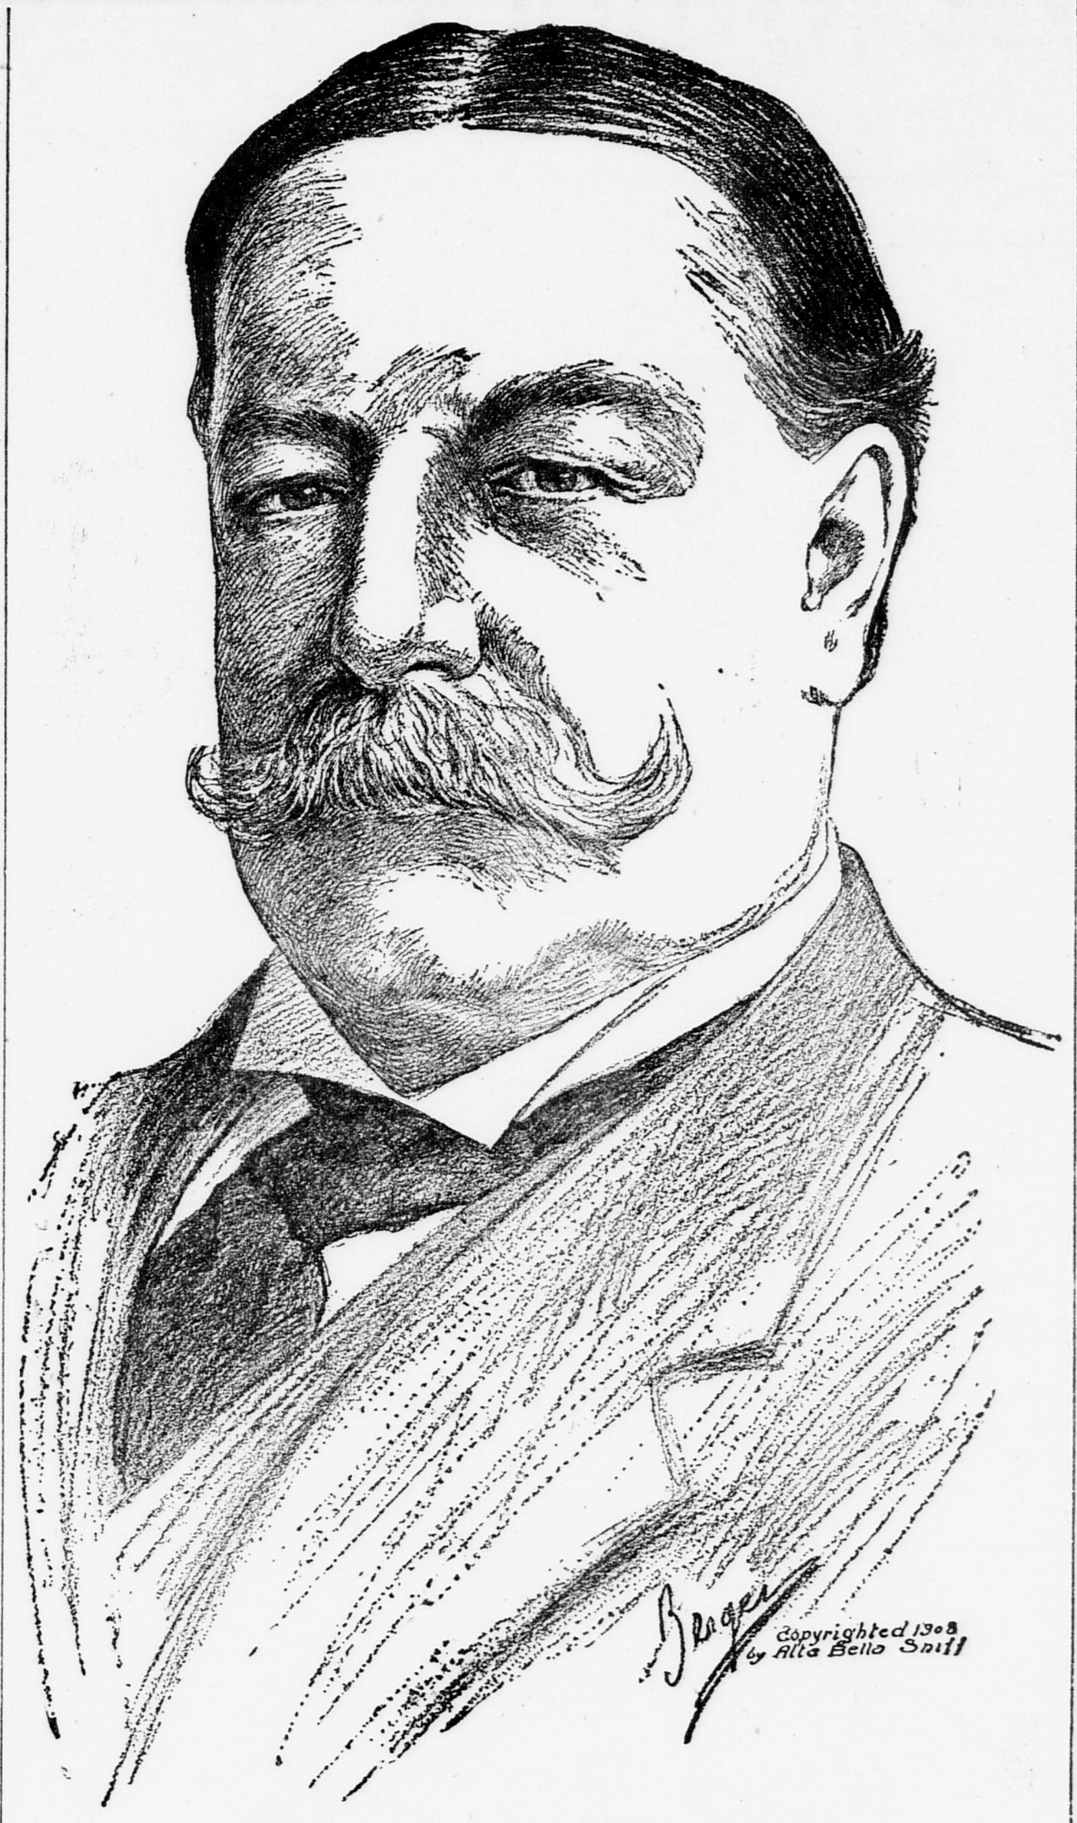

Boise, Ida., Nov. 4.—Idaho has gone Republican on both state and national issues. James H. Brady has been elected governor.

Idaho

Reno, Nev., Nov. 4.—Indications are that Bryan will carry Nevada by a substantial majority.

Montana

Helena, Mont., Nov. 4.—The three electoral votes of this state will be cast for Bryan.

(Legal Title ~ Incorporated 1892.)
The Directors of the YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION of Quincy, with a firm faith in the great value of the work which is being done for the young men and boys of our city, make their appeal for donations and bequests toward paying the mortgage indebtedness on the new Association Building. When the building is free from debt it will serve as an Endowment, as there is a goodly income from the dormitories.
Should the Donor prefer, such sum as might be given could be used as an Endowment for an educational class or classes, the Boys Department, or as a special fund in other ways, and could be designated with the name of the Donor.
The Treasurer, WILLIAM F. CUMMINGS, 7 Clive Street, Quincy, or the General Secretary, ERNEST G. GAY, will be happy to answer inquiries.

OUR HOSPITAL
(Legal Title: City Hospital of Quincy)
INCORPORATED 1889
The Trustees of the City Hospital of Quincy respectfully appeal for donations and bequests for the Endowment fund. This now amounts to over $60,000, but a fund of at least $100,000 is urgently needed.
Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000) will endow a Free Bed to which such name may be given as the Donor may desire, but any sum for this noble institution which stands ready to serve us all in the hour of need will be most gratefully received.
The Secretary, TIMOTHY REED, Adams St., Quincy, or the Treasurer, RICHARD D. CHASE, Savings Bank Building, Quincy, will be very glad to confer with any one or to answer any inquiries.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE

TAFT WINS PRESIDENCY

New York, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Nebraska In Republican Column

New York, Nov. 4.—The next President of the United States will be William Howard Taft, Republican, of Ohio. The next vice president will be James Schoolcraft Sherman, Republican, of New York.

This is the verdict returned by the majority of the 15,000,000 voters of the United States. The Republican candidate has repeated Mr. Roosevelt's feat of carrying every northern state, giving him a clear majority in the electoral college of 141 over William Jennings Bryan, the Democratic candidate. Mr. Taft will receive 312 electoral votes to Mr. Bryan's 171. Oklahoma, the state created since the last presidential election, has enrolled itself, as was expected, in the Democratic column.

The states considered doubtful before the election have gone as follows: Maryland, Republican; Indiana, Republican; Nebraska, Republican; New York, Republican; Ohio, Republican; and West Virginia, Republican. In most of these states the vote is close.

Pennsylvania has gone Republican by 200,000 majority and New Jersey by 10,000, the figures in 1904 being 505,519 and 80,598 respectively. Connecticut is Republican save in a few cities and towns, but Congressman George L. Lilley, the Republican candidate for governor, ran behind Mr. Taft. His majority is 10,000, whereas the Republican presidential candidate has carried the state by 20,000. This is below Mr. Roosevelt's figure in 1904, and the same thing is true of practically every state in the Union that has been carried by both Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Taft.

The lower house of the Sixty-first congress will be Republican, but by a reduced majority. With returns from some districts still in doubt and others contested it appears now that the house will remain safely Republican. The senate will remain Republican. Speaker Cannon has won his fight for re-election, but by a reduced majority.

Most of the great cities of the country have gone Republican, with the exception of New York and Chicago. In each of these cases, however, the rural Republican majority has been sufficiently large to offset the Democratic urban vote. St. Louis has gone Republican, while the rest of Missouri is heavily Democratic.

Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, the great central states, with an aggregate of sixty-five electoral votes, have gone Republican despite the fight made to bring them into the Democratic column. The success of Mr. Taft in these states, considered vitally necessary to his election, has carried with it the success of the Republican state tickets. Governor Deneen in Illinois and Governor Harris in Ohio, Republican candidates for re-election, retain their seats, and Congressman Watson will succeed J. Frank Hanly in Indiana. Republican hopes of carrying Kentucky proved vain in spite of the victory of Wilson, Republican, in the gubernatorial contest last year. The greater part of the state's congressional delegation will be Democrats.

The Pacific coast states, California, Washington and Oregon, have given their votes to the Republican candidate, but Nevada, which voted against Parker in 1904, gave its votes this year to Bryan. Montana, the Dakotas and Minnesota are again Republican, but Governor Johnson's personal popularity has sufficed to seat him again in the gubernatorial chair of the North Star state. Wisconsin, Michigan, Iowa and in fact the entire west and northwest are Republican, but, as noted above, by lowered majorities.

The "solid south" is still solidly Democratic, Mr. Bryan polling the usual large majorities. Only in Maryland has the Republican party made serious inroads on the Democratic vote, and in that state not sufficiently to change the result. Delaware, about which some doubt was expressed before the election, has gone Republican. The New England states have gone for Taft and have elected Republican governors, but the vote in Rhode Island, where the Democrats made a strong fight, is very close. In Massachusetts the Independence party candidate for governor made a poor showing, running far behind the vote of Thomas L. Hisgen last year.

New York city has been carried by Bryan and Chanler, the Democratic candidates for president and governor winning in all five boroughs. Of the city's 630,000 votes Mr. Bryan has received 390,000 and Mr. Chanler 400,000. The gures for the entire state are as follows: Taft, 830,000; Bryan, 790,000; Hughes, 815,250; Chanler, 804,750.

The electoral vote is as follows:

Loss From Roosevelt Vote But Bryan Drops Away Behind Parker

THE EMPIRE STATE

Hughes Wins by More Than 50,000 Over His Democratic Opponent

New York, Nov. 4.—Governor Hughes won by over 50,000 the biennial battle of High Bridge which was waged again as the regiments of ballots were marshalled.

Hughes came down to the city from up-state with an indicated plurality of about 121,000. Chanler's plurality south of High Bridge was approximately 68,000. The vote of two years ago was increased by about 140,000. Chanler surprised the Democratic leaders by an expectedly large vote in the rural districts, but lost tremendously in the city and county of New York, where his followers had expected at least 100,000 plurality.

Reports from all parts of the state indicate that the vote was heavy, the efforts of both gubernatorial candidates to bring out the ballots being rewarded with success. Both the old parties polled full votes, their strength not being seriously affected by the Independence, Socialist and other minor parties. Shearn, Independence party candidate for governor, ran ahead of Wanhope, the Socialist nominee.

The state's congressional representation will be divided, as at present, among the two parties, with one change, Hillquit, Socialist, being elected in the Ninth district in place of Riordan, Democrat. The next legislature will be Republican in both branches, insuring a Republican successor for Senator Thomas C. Platt, who will leave the senate in March.

New York and Buffalo are the only two large cities of the state that have gone Democratic.

"I need not say that I am greatly pleased with the result of the election," declared Governor Hughes. "I felt certain that the people would indorse the administration of President Roosevelt by electing Secretary Taft, and I consider my own re-election as an approval of the policies pursued by the state administration during the past two years."

New Jersey

Trenton, Nov. 4.—William H. Taft has had a close call in this state, being made the choice for the presidency of only 5000 more voters than approved of Mr. Bryan's candidacy. Hudson, Hunterdon, Salem, Sussex and Warren counties have gone Democratic.

Newark has gone Republican by 5000, but Bryan rolled up a majority of 10,000 in Jersey City. Trenton, the centre of the pottery industry of the state, has endorsed Taft's recent utterances in favor of raising the tariff on pottery products by giving him a majority of 500. Camden has gone Republican by 500. Paterson is Democratic by 1000.

The great falling off in the Republican vote from 1904 is attributed by the leaders of both parties to the general support of Bryan by the labor union members. This was especially noted in the northern counties, in the manufacturing centres of the state.

There was no election for governor, but a new legislature, ten congressmen and sheriffs were chosen. There is a Republican loss and a Democratic gain of one in the state delegation to the lower house, Townsend, Democrat, defeating Parker, Republican, who ran for re-election in the Seventh district.

Delaware

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 4.—Taft's indicated plurality in Delaware is 3000 and the Republican state ticket headed by Simeon S. Pennewell for governor and William H. Heald for congress is elected by about the same plurality except Davis, Republican candidate for attorney general, is probably defeated by Andrew C. Gray, Democrat. The successful candidate is a son of Judge George Gray and the popularity of his father counted strongly for him in all three of the counties.

Pennsylvania

Philadelphia, Nov. 4.—Pennsylvania went Republican by 100,000 majority. In 1904 Roosevelt carried the state by 505,519, and two years ago Stuart, Republican, was elected governor by 48,435. This city, Pittsburg, Harrisburg, Altoona and other cities have given Mr. Taft pluralities, but Scranton, Wilkesbarre and towns in which the so called "labor" vote is strong have gone Democratic.

The election in Pennsylvania turned a most entirely on national issues, the highest state officer voted for being a judge of the superior court. For that office William D. Porter, Republican, has been elected by a majority of 50,000 over Webster Grim, Democrat.

SOLIDLY REPUBLICAN

Deneen Wins In Illinois, Watson In Indiana and Harris In Ohio

Chicago, Nov. 4.—Illinois has been carried by the Republican party by a plurality of 120,000, giving the state's twenty-seven electoral votes to Taft and Sherman. The state Republican ticket has also been successful, Governor Charles S. Deneen winning from former Vice President Adlai E. Stevenson by 100,000.

The next state legislature will be Republican by a majority on joint ballot of 38, a loss of 24. This means the re-election to the United States senate of Albert J. Hopkins.

There will be a decided change in the congressional representation of Illinois. The present delegation from the state includes twenty-four Republicans and one Democrat. The figures in the Sixty-first congress will be seventeen Republicans and eight Democrats, six of the latter being from Chicago. Speaker Cannon has been re-elected in the Eighteenth district.

The voters of the state have endorsed the proposed constitutional amendment authorizing the state to issue bonds of $20,000,000 for the construction of a deep waterway beginning at or near Lockport, Ills., to a point at or near Utica, Ills., in the Illinois river.

Indiana

Indianapolis, Nov. 4.—The endeavors of the Democrats to place Indiana in the ranks of their party, causing the state to be considered doubtful some time before the election, have not been successful. The Hoosier vote has been given to Taft and Sherman by a small majority, reducing the Republican majority of four years ago by two-thirds.

Congressman James E. Watson has been elected to succeed J. Frank Hanly as governor, leading Thomas F. Marshall, his Democratic opponent, by a small majority. The state congressional representation, eleven Republicans and two Democrats, will remain unchanged, but the legislature is Republican by a slightly reduced majority. The term of Senator Hemenway, Republican, will expire in March.

This city disappointed the hopes of John W. Kern, Democratic candidate for the vice presidency, who resides here, by going Republican. Kern would not discuss the result of the election, saying that he would issue a formal statement later.

Ohio

Columbus, O., Nov. 4.—Secretary Taft's home state has given him a plurality of over 100,000. The strong Democratic fight did not avail to carry the state for either Mr. Bryan or Judson Harmon, candidate for governor, but pulled down the Republican vote.

The fight made by Governor Andrew L. Harris, candidate for re-election, for local option was an important factor in the result, as was foreshadowed in the county elections. The governor's activity lost him votes among the so-called "liberal" element, the loss showing in the returns from Cincinnati, Cleveland, Toledo and other cities.

Cincinnati Crowd Cheers Taft

Cincinnati, Nov. 4.—The Republican ticket had a close call in Mr. Taft's home city, the party's majority of 40,193 in 1904 being reduced this year to 5000. Two years ago it was 7119. Mr. Taft received the returns at the home of his brother, Charles P. Taft. When his success at the polls was announced the house was surrounded by a cheering crowd calling for a speech from "the next president." Mr. Taft announced that he would make a formal statement in the near future.

Bryan Loses Home State

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 4.—Indications are that Nebraska has gone Democratic by a plurality not far from 10,000 for Bryan and a plurality scarcely less than this for Shallenberger (Dem.) for governor.

The tremendous gain for Bryan in the city of Lincoln was the wonder of the election. Not only did Bryan reverse a Republican plurality of 1600 in his home city, but he carried it by a plurality of something in excess of 600.

Bryan Silent on Election

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 4.—"I do not desire to discuss the result of the election at the present time," said Mr. Bryan after the returns were received here. "At a later date I shall probably have something to say, but now I must beg to be excused." The Democratic candidate's own city gave Mr. Taft a majority. The result in Nebraska was a great disappointment to Mr. Bryan.

Michigan

Detroit, Nov. 4.—With Taft and Sherman carrying the state by a large majority, generally estimated at about 100,000, the successful candidate for governor of Michigan is not known. Returns from the state are slow. Lawton T. Hemans, the Democratic candidate for governor, has an undisputed lead over Governor Warner, but the Republican leaders assert that the late returns will overcome this lead.

Close Vote In Colorado

Denver, Nov. 4.—With thousands of scratched ballots yet to be counted and returns on straight ballots complete in no city, town or county in Colorado, conditions are such that it is impossible to give even an idea of how the state has gone. Outside of Denver and Pueblo, Bryan and Taft are running neck and neck on straight ballots. It is not likely that definite statements of results can be made before late today.

Minnesota

Minneapolis, Nov. 4.—Governor John A. Johnson's efforts in behalf of the Democratic national ticket have not succeeded in giving the electoral vote of the state to Mr. Bryan, but have availed in re-electing him by a small majority. Of the state's 275,000 votes Mr. Taft polled 172,500, his majority being 90,000 below Mr. Roosevelt's majority of 161,464 in 1904.

Wisconsin

Milwaukee, Nov. 4.—Mr. Taft's plurality in this state is estimated at 75,000. Governor James O. Davidson has been re-elected, and the state's congressional delegation, nine Republicans and two Democrats, will remain the same in the next congress. The legislature will be Republican, and Senator Stephenson will be re-elected.

Iowa

Des Moines, Nov. 4.—Although the Democratic vote which stayed away from the polls in 1904 turned out in full force yesterday for Mr. Bryan, it was not sufficiently strong to carry the state. Taft's majority in Iowa is 43,000. B. F. Carroll, the Republican nominee for governor, was successful.

West Virginia

Wheeling, Nov. 4.—Returns come in slowly, but enough have been received this morning to indicate a slight advantage for Taft, although the margin is so slight that the state can still be called doubtful.

THE SOUTH STILL SOLID

Usual Democratic Majorities Have Returned In Dixie Land

Baltimore, Nov. 4.—Maryland's split electoral vote of four years ago, seven Democratic and one Republican, is this year solidly Democratic. The election is close, Mr. Bryan's plurality being about 5000. The Democrats have gained one congressman. The state delegation in the Sixty-first congress will contain four Democratic representatives and two Republicans. This city has gone Democratic by a close vote.

Texas

Austin, Tex., Nov. 4.—William H. Taft did not make as good a showing in this state as President Roosevelt, who polled 51,242 votes in 1904. The vote this year is approximately as follows: Bryan, 220,000; Taft, 20,000. Thomas M. Campbell, Democrat, has been re-elected governor.

Georgia

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 4.—Georgia's thirteen electoral votes will be cast for William J. Bryan, and the state representation will continue solidly Democratic. The state election was held in September. The Taft vote in this state fell 10,000 below that of Mr. Roosevelt, which was 24,003.

Tennessee

Nashville, Nov. 4.—Bryan's majority in Tennessee will be something over 26,000. The Democratic state ticket is elected by about 22,000. The congressional delegation remains unchanged with eight Democrats and two Republicans.

Missouri

St. Louis, Nov. 4.—Missouri has reversed the Republican victory of 1904 and is again in the Democratic ranks by a majority of 30,000. St. Louis went Republican by a small majority. William S. Cowherd has been elected governor.

Maryland

Baltimore, Nov. 4.—Latest Republican advices are that Taft has carried Maryland by about 3000. Returns from the counties are still far too incomplete to warrant positive figures, but those given are believed to be nearly correct.

Florida

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 4.—Albert H. Gilchrist, Democrat, has been elected governor of Florida, and the Democratic national ticket has carried the state by a majority of 25,000, the Republican vote showing a loss of 3000 since 1904.

South Carolina

Charleston, S. C., Nov. 4.—The Republican party polled only 2000 of the 58,000 votes in this state, running slightly behind the figures of four years ago. M. F. Ansel has been re-elected governor without opposition.

Virginia

Richmond, Va., Nov. 4.—The Old Dominion is still safely within the Democratic ranks by a very large majority. Taft polled only 30,000 votes in a total of 130,000, a Republican loss of 17,880 since 1904.

North Carolina

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 4.—The Democratic national ticket has carried North Carolina by a majority of 40,000, the total vote being 210,000. W. W. Kitchin has been elected governor.

Alabama

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 4.—Bryan, 90,000; Taft, 13,000, are the election figures in this state. Mr. Taft polled 9472 fewer votes than Mr. Roosevelt did in 1904.

Arkansas

Little Rock Ark., Nov. 4.—Arkansas has given Mr. Bryan a majority of 30,000, an increase of 12,436 over the vote polled by Mr. Parker in 1904.

Mississippi

Jackson, Miss., Nov. 4.—Mississippi's ten electoral votes will go, as usual, to the Democratic candidate. Bryan's majority is over 50,000.

Doctors Declare Dust Disseminates Disease.

It indicates a sluggish condition of the business blood.

Dust accumulates where trade decays.

QUINCY MAN for SENATOR

Representative E. C. Hultman Elected by Tremendous Plurality.

Representative Eugene C. Hultman was elected as Senator from the First Norfolk district by a plurality of over 3,000, his total vote in the district being 6,723 against 3,711 for Foley. Senator Hultman received most loyal support all over the district, especially in his own city, which gave him a plurality of 1539.

He carried every ward and precinct in Quincy, except Ward Four, which gave Foley a plurality of 123. He also carried every town in the district except Randolph, the home of candidate Foley, which went Democratic by 101 votes.

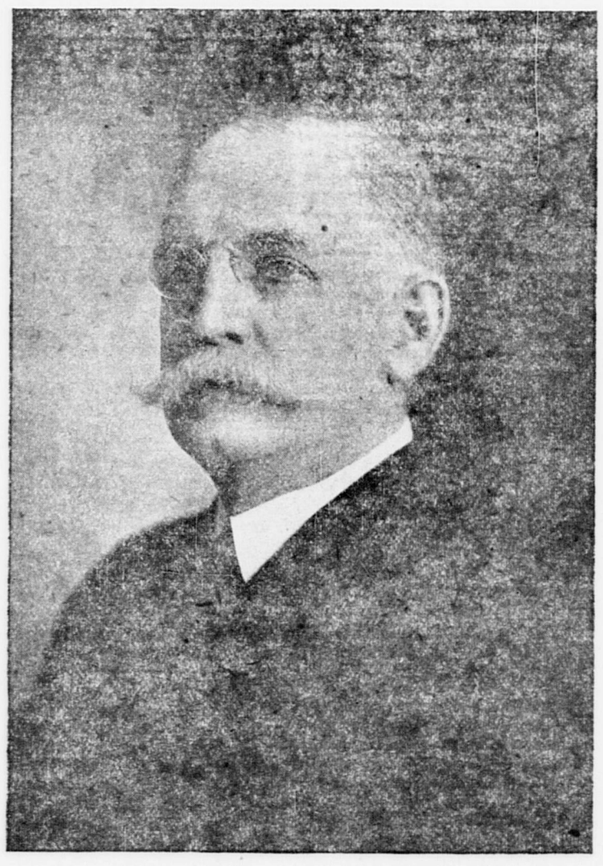

Last year Senator Jenney carried the district by a plurality of 3,442. Randolph was also the only town that went Democratic last year, but it was a little closer than this year.

Senator Hultman has every reason to feel proud on his handsome vote and election, and the Daily Ledger extends hearty congratulations on his victory.

The full vote of the district was:

GALVIN MAY WIN.

Up to the hour of the Daily Ledger going to press the result in the Tenth Congressional district was still in doubt. Late returns Tuesday night gave the election of O'Connell by 1,200 votes. Later official returns continued to whittle this down until this noon, it was given out by the Election Commissioners of Boston that if O'Connell won it would not be by more than 10 votes.

At one time this morning it was announced that a mistake in one of the Boston precincts had credited O'Connell with 50 votes that should have been credited to Galvin. This would have elected Galvin. Later, however, this was found not to be true. All this goes to show what a persistent campaign Mr. Galvin put up.

This is even more apparent when it is understood that in 1906 O'Connell carried the district by 4,358.

At the Galvin headquarters at 2 o'clock it was said that they had not made up any figures as they were waiting for word from the Election Commissioners who were going carefully over the official returns.

At all events it will go down in history as the closest contest ever held in the Tenth district since Quincy became a part of it.

So close is the result that there is no question but what a recount in the whole district will be necessary.

The early press returns were as follows:

	Galvin (R)	O'Connell (D)	Stevens (Free Trade)

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

Joseph Ripley and family of Atlantic moved to Billings road, Norfolk Downs, this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gutterson of West Elm avenue entertained several of their friends at Hallowe'en.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Linnell of Davis street are spending a couple of days with friends in Reading.

A cow owned by Angus White, corner of Hollis and Brook avenue, Wollaston, has been killed, as it had the rabbies.

Miss Lisabelle Linnell of Davis street was the guest on Wednesday and Thursday of Dr. Percy Stiles of Newtonville.

Miss Gertrude Cleaves of East Elm avenue read at an entertainment given in Steinert hall, Friday evening. This is Miss Cleaves' second year at the Royal School of Elocution.

James C. Shaw of the Fore River Co., who recently sailed for Japan, received word just before sailing that out of his class of 500 at Cornell he had received the most promising position.

Galen Bowditch, the veteran, cast his fiftieth annual Democratic vote Tuesday and feels proud of it, as he well may, for it is quite a distinction to vote for one party for fifty consecutive years.

A special meeting of the Quincy Yacht club has been called for next week to see if the club will authorize the issue of bonds to the amount of $8,000 for the purpose of alterations to the club house. Also to amend the by-laws so as to provide for life membership.

Mrs. Isabella Cameron received a letter recently from her brother John I. Flowers containing the following clipping: Mr. John I. Flowers of Clipper, Washington, raised an Early Rose potato that weighed five and a quarter pounds, also a Wolf River apple that weighed one and one-eighth pounds. It was perfect in shape and measured 15 inches in circumference. Mr. Flowers formerly lived in Quincy.

HERE'S A SQUARE DEAL FOR YOU!

We have just taken up a new line of men's hose which are becoming famous throughout the whole country because of their marvelous wearing qualities. We have investigated this hosiery and know it has unusual merit, and so we are asking each person who has trouble with holes coming in the toes of his socks, to come and buy just one pair of half-hose made with the

This will cost you just 25c.

Then, after you have given them a thorough, fair test, if you don't say they are the best wearing socks you have ever worn, come again, bring the pair back and we'll refund your money.

If you think you might not like the looks of these new socks, come and see. You don't have to buy them. Just come and see them first.

WHY DO WE MAKE THIS OFFER? Because we know this is the greatest wearing hosiery ever made. We have tried them, and all to whom we have sold them say they are best thing they ever saw. We know a single trial pair will convince the most particular person. Let us show YOU.

Norfolk County Solid for Taft

Norfolk county was swept as usual by the republicans in the Presidential election. Taft carried every city and town in the county. In almost every town he had a big lead over Bryan, winning by not less than a hundred in nearly all cases. In no town in the county did Hisgen get 100 votes, only Quincy giving him over this number.

Quincy Returns Were Late

The vote of Quincy surpassed anything in the history of the city. In 1904 a vote was polled which was thought to be high enough to staid for a record for several years to come. The summary below shows that in 1904, the total number of votes cast was 4,465. This year the vote went up to the surprising total of 5,048 which is 583 more than 1904.

There were gains in every ward and precinct, except Ward Four, where, in precinct one there was a loss of 4 votes and in precinct two a loss of 10, making a total loss of 14 votes. This was more than offset by the gains in Wards 1, 2, 5, 6.

The gain over 1907 is more than twice as big as the gain over 1904. The total in 1907 will be seen to be 3,696 and in 1908, 5,048, making a total gain of 1,358.

These figures show that a great interest is being taken today in the affairs of the state and nation and that hard work is done to get out the vote for the candidates.

THE RETURNS.

More than ever was it manifest election night that the time for dividing Ward Five into two precincts can not come too soon. The official returns from all the precincts of the city but Ward Five had been received a few minutes past 11 o'clock. About that time word was received from Wollaston that the election officers had struck a snag in the last block counted, and it was necessary to count it over several times.

Nothing more was heard from that ward until 12.15, when a telephone message said the returns would arrive in an hour. It was 1,20 A. M., however, before they arrived.

As a rule the returns came in very promply, Ward Four, precinct one, was the first to arrive at 8.03, and was followed a few minutes later by both precincts of Ward One. The others came along about as fast as they could be handled until 10.08. Then there was a wait of an hour before the second precinct of Ward Three arrived. Then there came another long wait for Ward Five.

Unofficial returns received long before this however showed that both William R. Thomas and Louis F. R. Langelier had won in the representative contests.

There was but little excitement about City Hall, and there were but very few persons about after 9 o'clock.

AT THE SCENIC.

A large crowd attended the Scenic last night, as it was advertised that the election returns would be received by direct wire from a Boston paper. The returns came from all parts of teh country, and they came in as promptly and correctly as could be expected. As they were sent on the wire, they were immediately put on a plate and flashed upon the big moving picture screen.

AT Y. M. C. A.

There was a large attendance at the rooms of the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday evening to hear the returns from the election. Returns were received by telephone giving the result all over the country. Thes were promptly thrown on a screen by the stereopticon. There was also a musical entertainment during the evening and refreshments were served.

PRESIDENT ELIOT RESIGNS.

President Eliot has resigned as president of Harvard college. His resignation has been accepted to take effect May 1, 1909.

The four-days' sale at the dry goods and furnishing store of G. W. Wheeler opened this morning. The many patrons of Miss C. S. Hubbard, who formerly occupied the store would hardly recognize the store so extensive are the changes that have been made. The store has been thoroughly renovated and a handsome new front added. This front gives two large show windows in which are displayed samples of the fine line of goods carried by this store.

Among The WOMEN'S CLUBS of Quincy and Vicinity.

[A Wednesday Feature.]

Mrs. Laurance H. Sturtevant of Presidents hill entertained the Junior Friday club on Monday afternoon at the home of her mother Mrs. J. Henry Emery, Adams street. The meeting was in charge of Miss Grace Isaac the subject being "Around the Bay of Naples."

Miss C. Belle Kenney of the Quincy Mansion school was a delegate Tuesday from the New England Women's club to the federation meeting at Bridgewater.

The Alliance of First church at its meeting next Monday afternoon in the chapel will have a real Unitarian subject. Rev. George S. Bodge will read a paper on Theodore Parker, who is always an interesting personage to Unitarians.

Sewing meetings are being held every week by the ladies of the Quincy Catholic club, preparing warm clothing for distribution among the needy of St. John's church. A special meeting of the club was held Tuesday evening to complete arrangements for the dancing party Thursday evening, which will be the opening social event of the season.

One of the leading musical and society events of the season will be the concert given in Colonial hall on the evening of Monday, November 30th, by the "Westland Ladies' Quartet"-of of Boston, with pianist and reader. The first appearance of this quartet in Quincy is awaited with much pleasure and interest, as two of our prominent singers are members of this organization; Miss Alice Gertrude Coe of Atlantic and Mrs. Emma Schufeldt Moore of the Bethany church, Quincy. There is to be a long list of patronesses.

The next meeting of the Whatsoever Circle King's Daughters, will be held Nov. 9, at 7.45 with Mrs. Whiton, Arlington street, Wollaston.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

The November business meeting of the directors of the club will be held Thursday morning at ten o'clock at the club house.

Next week Tuesday the meeting will be in charge of the Visiting Nurse committee Mrs. John F. Welch, chairman. Club members should not fail to attend, for the address by Rev. Allen A. Stockdale of Boston is one every one should hear. His subject will be "Shall the Corners of a Man's Mouth turn up or down?" Life is such that many mouths droop at the corners that perhaps might be made to do the reverse if the view point could be changed.

The meeting will begin promptly at half past two and close with a social and tea.

The Quincy Women's club is much gratified at the interest shown by the townspeople in the tuberculosis exhibit last week at City hall, several thousand attending and much good is sure to result. A tuberculosis club will probably be formed soon to work in Quincy to help stamp out the disease.

DAUGHTERS OF REVOLUTION.

Adams Chapter Daughters of the Revolution held their November meeting, at the John Adams birthplace, on Monday afternoon. It was the first meeting after the summer vacation and there was a large attendance of members and friends. The Vice Regent Mrs. Frank F. Brewer presided.

Mrs. Flora Adams Darling founder of the society and Mrs. Mary A. Chapman a former State Regent and a member of the State Council were elected honorary members of this Chapter.

Mrs. Eleanor W. F. Bates of Rosindale read an exceedingly interesting paper on the "Evolution of the little Secretary Drawer," also by special request a poem, "Mary's Sampler."

The social hour followed during which tea, cocoa, sandwiches and cake were served by the committee Mrs. W. F. Cummings, Mrs. Antoinette Paige and Miss Mary Hinkley.

DAY NURSERY ASSOCIATION.

The regular monthly meeting of the Quincy Day Nursery association was held Tuesday in the Woman's club house. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Bennett vice president from Ward 5, presided.

Voted that a vote of thanks be sent Mr. Patch for his kindness in furnishing ice to the Day Nursery during the summer.

Voted that the name of Mrs. Eugene C. Hultman be added to the list of directors.

Voted to appoint Mrs. Babcock a delegate to the meeting of Federation of Day Nurseries.

It was voted that on Saturday, Nov. 21, from 2 to 5 P. M., there should be a house warming at the new nursery that will take the form of a donation party. Arrangements for the same to be in charge of the following committee: president, secretary, Mrs. Simmons, Mrs. Royal, Mrs. Gilson and Mrs. Dasha.

FEDERATION MEETING.

A pleasant all day attracted many club women to the Federation meeting Tuesday at Bridgewater, the Oussamequin club being hostess for the day, Mrs. George M. Webber, president, extending greetings at the opening of the meeting.

Mrs. Maragaret J. Blair, spoke on "Home Making as an Art," saying in part women re beginning to realize the beauty, the dignity, the breadth of opportunity home-making offers and also the irksomeness and very poor results gained when these responsibilities come to untrained women.

The ability of the industrially educated girl to plan every detail of her home from its location, architecture, sanitation, etc., to its minutest detail. The great need for good training in household economics not alone as a n esesntial for the woman who performs the duties herself but for the one who depends upon maids, is pointed out for without such training she cannot competently direct them.

So soon as women generally realize what a very interesting thing housekeeping is, a different attitude toward it will set in. Every life has its sordid elements. There are pots and pans, if I may call them so, in every vital endeavor. Even the writing of books and the painting of pictures have their dishwashing moments, and those of you who have tried to get worthy bills through the legislature will agree with me that the high vocation of public reformer has its seamy side.

The last era in education was the era of the specialist, but even now that is passing, and the value of a broader training is urged by the best educators. Especially is this broader training desirable for women, and, if women specialize at all nowadays, they are apt to specialize in being a woman, with all her arts and sciences in a subjective place.

The afternoon session opened with a musical program, a group of songs by Mrs. Elizabeth Cary Lord, accompanied by Mr. George S. Dunham.

Mrs. Lilias Folger told of the International Congress on Tuberculosis. The paper of the afternoon was on "Organized Work for the Home."

Caroline L. Hunt favored organization and cooperation. She said: I hope that as our organization adds to itself state federations, district federations, city federations, separate clubs and individual women, it will turn its attention more and more in the direction of those forms of work for which organization is not only desirable, but indispensable. And I hope that, of the united activities upon which the clubs will enter in the future, a larger and larger per cent will be in connection with those labors which fall to woman, either naturally or because of expediency, and which constitute her duties, responsibilites and obligations.

United action within narrow limits was the rule in the old-fashioned home, and the co-operative activities by which the needs of that home were supplied developed and put a premium upon the best of human qualities and characteristics, upon unselfishness, generosity and helpfulness. When home industries were abandoned, and women began to buy rather than to make, it seemed for a time as if they were coming to find it necessary, even for the maintenance of home, to develope the bargaining spirit, to become shrewd, calculating and suspicious. But within the field of competition into which they have been forced, women are creating for themselves centers for cooperation and the traits of character which are then being developed are similar to those which the old-fashioned home brought forth, and are more valuable than the practical results of the cooperative activities, more valuable than pure food or clean streets, or satisfactory garbage disposal.

Only by united action for the benefit of all homes can women preserve the ethical and moral stimulous of the home of the past, while enjoying the comforts and conveniences of the home of the present.

NEIGHBORING

Miss Caroline Ticknor who told so interestingly of her visit to the homes of literary people in England at a meeting of the Quincy Women's club last season is to speak to the New England Women's club next Monday afternoon at Perkins hall, Boston, on "Glimpses of Literary People."

Wheaton Seminary club has entered upon its twenty-first season. The November meeting will be held on the 14th when a lecture, will be given on "A trip to the Lamassery of Himis," an experience of travel in Thibet, by Prof. Elizabeth Kendall of Wellesley college. There will also be piano solos by Mr. H. G. Tucker.

TOUCHING THE POCKETS.

Bishop Lawrence, urging clergymen to observe Prison Sunday, says: "If the Gospel will not touch some men's hearts the warning of heavier taxation will touch their pockets; and the neglect of the prisoner means the increase of taxation."

Commenting upon this, the Massachusetts Prison association, in a pamphlet just published for free distribution, says:

"How much it means to the taxpayer is not easily or commonly realized. The direct cost of crime to Massachusetts taxpayers is found in three different departments: in the expenditures for the police for detecting crime; for the courts, for trying the criminals, and for prisons and reformatories, for caring for those who are kept in confinement.

These expenses are paid in three different taxes; in those of cities and towns, for police; in those of counties, for some of the court expenses and for the maintenance of some of the prisons, and in the state tax, for other judicial expenses and some of the prison expenses.

The total net cost to the taxpayers for crime expenses, for the detection, conviction, and punishment of criminals, is slightly in excess of five and one-half million dollars annually.

This is substantially one-tenth of the entire amount raised by taxation by the state, the counties, and the cities and towns. It is the largest single expense, excepting that of our educational system."

EASTERN STAR VISITATION.

Quincy chapter, No. 88, O. E. S., held its 114th regular meeting at Electa hall on Monday evening. The chapter was called to order by Mrs. Cora A. Remick at 5.30, and the general order of business was transacted. The chapter was then declared at ease and march formed, in which 100 visitors and members proceeded to the banquet hall, where C. C. Whittemore the well known Boston caterer had prepared an excellent menu.

At 8 o'clock the official visitation and inspection was held by D. G. M. Mrs. Emma S. Carter, accompanied by D. G. M. Mrs. Alice Davenport and suite. The hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion with palms, potted plants, flowers and flags.

FREE HOME FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

Oct. 25th, a meeting was held at 200 Huntington avenue, Boston, concerning the annual fair of The Free Home for Consumptives, 428 Quincy street, Dorchester, to be held in the ball room of hotel Somerset, Commonwealth avenue, Boston, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, December 3, 4, 5. Miss Elizabeth A. Power, president, presided, and gave an interesting report of the work of the Home and stated that three patients had been discharged as cured during the past week. A number of tables had reported and twelve tableaux portraying Colonial days had been arranged for and the Dorothea Dix children were in readiness for their entertainment for Saturday afternoon. The New England kitchen will be under the supervision of the hotel chef. The Home is a free one, and is open to all poor Consumptives without regard to age, stage, nationality, color or creed. No paid patients admitted. Help a most worthy charity.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Doremus, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

III—Lady-Betty gets her first impression of America. On the dock she is rescued from reporters by the steerage hero, who tells her he is Jim Brett, employed at the Manhattan club, New York. In Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid New York home Betty meets Lieutenant Parker brother of the hostess, who is to take them to visit West Point.

IV—Vivace, a beautiful and expensive dog, is sent to Betty. Mrs. Ess Kay does not know who the donor is, and Betty does not tell her that it is Brett. Lieutenant Parker, whom Betty does not like, makes love to her.

V—Lady Betty has a good time at West Point despite Parker's proposal, which she rejects.

VI—In a walk in Central park Sally tells Betty her love story (she had been seperated years before from the poor man she loved by her family, the man becoming a monk) and advises Betty to marry only when she is sure of her love. They meet Brett.

VII—Betty is introduced to Mrs. Harvey Richmount Taylour, a typical young society woman.

VIII—At Newport Betty falls in love with Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid "cottage," the Moorings. Parker continues his attentions. Mrs. Ess Kay is chagrined on learning that Mrs. Van der Windt, Newport's leader, has planned to "cut" her and her acquaintance, Mrs. Pitchley. Mrs. Ess Kay relies on Lady Betty's presence to maintain her social prestige. She plans an entertainment to introduce Betty.

Chapter 10

WHILE we were motoring Mrs. Ess Kay had been terribly busy with her secretary, getting invitations ready for a violet tea.

She was giving the tea, she explained, to introduce me to Newport society, and she was having a violet one because it was not the right time of year for violets.

I meekly suggested that as a reason for giving some other kind of tea, but she said not at all. She wished to have that kind because violets were hard to get, though not impossible. I would see when the time came that she could get them. And I should also see, if it were indeed true that I did not know, what a violet tea was. She wanted it to be a surprise for me. She thought I would like it.

I hadn't long to wait before learning the true inwardness of a violet tea, for Mrs. Ess Kay was determined to get me "out" as soon as possible, and it seems that in America the time to bring a girl out is at a tea. At least that is one way, and as Mrs. Ess Kay was even then planning to give something very big just before the much talked about "pink ball," so as to "take the shine off that grand affair," she wished to get the teacups washed up before she sent out the next invitations.

I'm sure mother wouldn't take as much trouble for a house party to meet the king and queen as Mrs. Ess Kay did for that violet tea, and I daren't think even now, though it happened weeks ago, of the money she must have spent.

For one thing, she and Sally and I had to have violet dresses. She would buy mine (I don't see how I should have done it if she hadn't, especially as Vic wrote just then that mother felt poorer than ever, and that man hadn't yet proposed), and it was beautiful; pale violet silk muslin, trimmed with violets and their leaves. Then violet and silver livery was ordered in a great hurry for the four footmen—to be worn on one afternoon, and no more! But these things were mere sketchy details, compared to other preparations.

One room, where tea was to be served, was entirely draped with violet silk, from the palest to the darkest shades, and for the smaller of the two drawing rooms—the one where Mrs. Ess Kay would stand to receive her guests—wire frames were made from measurements to fit and cover all four walls. I couldn't imagine what these frames were for at first, but when their hour came they were padded with moss and covered with fresh violets. The curtains were taken down from the windows, and a network of violets was hung up in their place, with an effect of great loveliness when the light streamed through the screen of flowers. And even this was not all, for a soft thick mat of grass and moss was spread over the polished floor, with a sprinkling of violets. All of the furniture was taken away and instead, along the wall, were placed banks of artificial moss and violets. No doubt these would have been real, too, but when crushed they would have stained the dresses of those that sat upon them. Altogether, the room was turned into a woodsy bower of violets, and I was given a great bunch of the dear flowers to carry.

There had been only a week in which to prepare these sensational effects, but everything was finished in time and without flurry. Already I knew a great many of Mrs. Ess Kay's friends, and on the day of the tea it seemed that each person whose acquaintance I had made had remembered me with a cartwheel of violets. All my flowers were placed in vases on tables in the big drawing room, adjoining the bower of violets, and as a card was attached to each bunch, pinned on the masses of violet satin ribbon which trailed from it, each giver could have the pleasure of seeing how his gift compared with his neighbor's. It was a wonderful display—a violet show. And, as Mrs. Ess Kay had said, "it was not the right time of the year for violets."

We stood on our feet for hours, smiled yards of smiles, and said the same things over and over again so many times that I began to feel like a phonograph doll which I saw in my first New York shop. Only when I ran down nobody wound me up, and I had to go on by myself as best I could, which was fatiguing and made the machinery squeak.

But everybody said it was a huge success. The New York papers had each more than a column about the "function," as they called it, and Mrs. Ess Kay was piously happy.

I had thought we were very gay before, but after the violet tea, from getting up to going to bed, we never had a moment that hadn't its own appointed place in the procession of hours, like the bead in a long rosary.

After breakfast we went to the Casino to play tennis, to listen to the concert or pretend to and to gabble. There we would meet everybody we knew, and it was odd to see the calm but slightly conscious air of superiority with which the everybodies, going in or out, passed the poor nobodies assembled to watch the Casino entrance. Just as the middle and lower class people stand till they are ready to drop only to see the queen drive into the park or leave Buckingham palace dreadfully bored to open a bridge, so these Americans jostle each other to see their millionaires and especially millionairesses going to enjoy themselves. Fancy if Londoners reduced themselves to a state of collapse for the pleasure of seeing Mr. Beit take off his hat to Mrs. Wertheimer! But the millionaires in America seem to be like our aristocracy, only more important, for the nonmillionaires take a great deal more trouble to stare at them than the common people do at us.

After the Casino there was always the beach, and the most delightful things happened at the beach. It was never twice the same. Then we would lunch with some one or some one would lunch with us at the Moorings. Afterward there would be a drive, calls to make, perhaps two or three wonderful "at homes" or concerts, with great singers and entertainers from New York, twenty minutes' rest and then a scramble to dress for dinner, with a "dinner dance" to follow, or amateur theatricals.

Of course, as I haven't been presented yet and don't know anything about what the season is like in town, except what Vic has told me, I can't judge of the differences at first hand, but then Vic has told me a lot, and I have heard Stan and Loveland talk, besides one seems to know one's own country and country people by instinct without having actually to see what they do, and I'm sure that even in the smartest set at home they don't dream of bothering their heads to think of such original entertainments as in America.

In England there are just two or three kinds of parties. You give a crush, which is grand if you have a big house, or you ask a few bright, particular ones and enjoy yourself. Or in the country you have a house party and pick out the men because they can shoot and the women because they are pretty, or else, if it's winter, you hunt and you have theatricals. But the Americans at Newport turn up their noses at that slow, old fashioned kind of thing. They lie awake nights (I'm sure they must) to think of something so original that nobody else can ever have had anything the least like it before. It is better, too, to have it very sensational and startling. If you are invited to a party, you never know a bit what it will be like, whether you will dance in a barn and eat your supper on horseback out of decorated mangers, whether there will be captive balloons at a garden party, whether a Noah's ark will have been rigged up on a miniature lake or whether you will have a pair of skates provided for you and find yourself cutting figures on the ice in a gorgeously illuminated skating rink, with the thermometer up to goodness knows how many degrees outside.

Of course, in a place where everybody gets nervous prostration trying to outdo everybody else in originality and extravagance, it wouldn't be like Mrs. Ess Kay to let herself fall behind.

She simply made up her mind that her big entertainment should be the affair of the season before she decided what form it should take. She thought instead of sleeping for several nights and began to wear the expression on her face which I have in motor cars when I think we are going to telescope with something twice our size, and am trying to prepare for eternity with a pleasant smile on my lips. She ate scarcely anything, telephoned a good deal and took phenacetin in hot milk. Then suddenly it came to her—I mean the idea.

GLOUCESTER.

The Greatest Fishing Center In the United States.

Everything smells of fish in Gloucester. It is not an odor to which any of the natives object. Nor do visitors find in it anything of which to complain, for it is the pungent ozone of the sea, the smell of fish freshly caught. Gloucester has really never known anything else, for since its beginning, approaching three centuries ago, it has always had fishing for its chief industry, and today it is the greatest fishing center of the United States and, according to the belief of many, of the world.

When a two masted schooner, laden to the gunwales with its cargo of fish, comes into the wharfs the fish are carried in great tubs. Over these stand a company of experts, men who have cleaned hundreds of thousands of fish and who can make the quick cuts and do the scraping with incredible speed. Running to each tub is a hose, and after the waste has been removed an instant under the high pressure of water from the hose cleans out the fish completely and makes it sweet and ready for the next step in the operation. Codfish is dried and salted before being sent to the market, and the work is also done on the wharfs. Here are ranged hundreds of tables exposed to the bright sunlight. The cleansed fish are piled up in such a manner that the warm rays get a most admirable chance at them.

From the open air drying tables the fish are shifted to the boxing and packing establishments, which are also located along the water front, and then they are made ready to be shipped to all parts of the world.—Springfield Union.

INSOMNIA.

Curious Way In Which It Affected a Woman's Imagination.

"I can't stand this any longer, doctor," said the nervous woman. "If the patient in the next room to mine, No. 22, doesn't keep quiet at night I must change my room or leave the sanitarium altogether."

"What's the trouble?" asked her physician.

"She has one of these squeaky old wooden bedsteads, and every time she turns over it awakens me. Last night she did nothing but toss to and fro, and I didn't get a single wink of sleep."

"I'll see to that at once," he assured her. "A woman in your condition certainly must have absolute quiet at night. I'll have the patient in No. 22 sleep on the roof. The fresh air will be better for her anyway."

The next morning the nervous woman appeared in the consultation room of the sanitarium in radiant mood.

"How did you sleep?" asked the doctor.

"Perfectly," she replied. "I'm so much obliged to you. It made a great difference."

"I knew it would," he said gravely.

He was telling the truth, because he knew the power of the imagination in disease, especially of the nerves. As a matter of fact, No. 22 had not been occupied at night for three weeks. The patient had been sleeping on the roof all the time.—Exchange.

TAFT IN THE ISLANDS

Why McKinley Sent the Judge to the Philippines.

STRONG, HONEST AND TACTFUL

In the beginning of our occupation of the Philippines the problems there were military. Nothing of civil functions could be essayed until the rebellion had been put down. In the midst of this the first Philippine commission was sent out to look over the situation "as bearers of the blessings of a liberating rather than a conquering nation," as President McKinley wrote. The commissioners decided that it was a bad mess.

Mr. McKinley was advised to try to do nothing by civil power, but to give a military governor full sway. This would have been a fatal error. Any continuance of the military government beyond the time when its stern restrictions were required to induce peace and maintain it would still further have jeopardized the trust of the natives in our good faith. And it had already been so strained that it would stand no more tension.

The people at home, too, were growing thoroughly out of conceit with "the little brown brother." Our appetite had become sated of military conquest. Too many long, narrow boxes were shipped over sea and land for interment in village churchyards, too many mothers mourned sons, done to death by bullets or bolo, to support general conviction in the doctrine of expansion. We thought we had no prototype of Cromer, no giants of colonial administration upon whom Mr. McKinley might call to "lay the foundations of a superior civilization, with specific reference to the needs of the people to be governed and with definite reference to the welfare of the islands, both material and moral," as he had put it.

There was dearth of men wholly in harmony with the president's conception of what our national duty to the Filipinos comprised, who would constantly bear in mind that it was liberty they wanted, liberty that they should have, as Mr. McKinley had promised, pledging our faith as a nation—liberty, as he wrote, "of the whole Filipino people and not of a decimal fraction of them, who through the leadership of education and property have acquired a domination over the great mass."

Mr. Taft had not been thought of. If his sentiments on the Philippine question was known it was patent that he was neither a believer in Mr. McKinley's policy nor in our ethical right to be in the islands. Said the president one day to the then secretary of state, William R. Day, "I want a man who is strong, honest and tactful, a man of education and executive ability, a man who is fearless, but conservative, who will get along with the army people."

"Judge Taft fills the bill if he will take the job," said Mr. Day in a stroke of inspirational genius. They sent for Judge Taft, who was then on the supreme court bench, and told him what was wanted. He shook his head.

"I cannot be of use to you there, Mr. President," he answered. "I didn't want to take the Philippines. It was a mistake." The president regarded him musingly for a moment, then, "Nor did I want to take them," said he. "I had to. There was nothing else to do. We must build a new nation out there. I want you to help us."

Secretary of War Root added his persuasions. He showed both sides of the medal to Judge Taft. Perhaps he was motived more shrewdly than he affected, for he descanted upon the difficulties of the task compared with the congenial and relatively easy work that Judge Taft had upon the bench, with the almost ultimate certainty of being elevated to the supreme court. He must forego all this, said Mr. Root.

But what a chance offered in the Philippines to do, to create, to disprove the infallability of some of England's pet theories of colonization, to bring into being a nation. Such arguments turned the tide. Judge Taft accepted one of those duties "which," to quote him, "is an entirety and not fulfilled until it is entirely fulfilled."

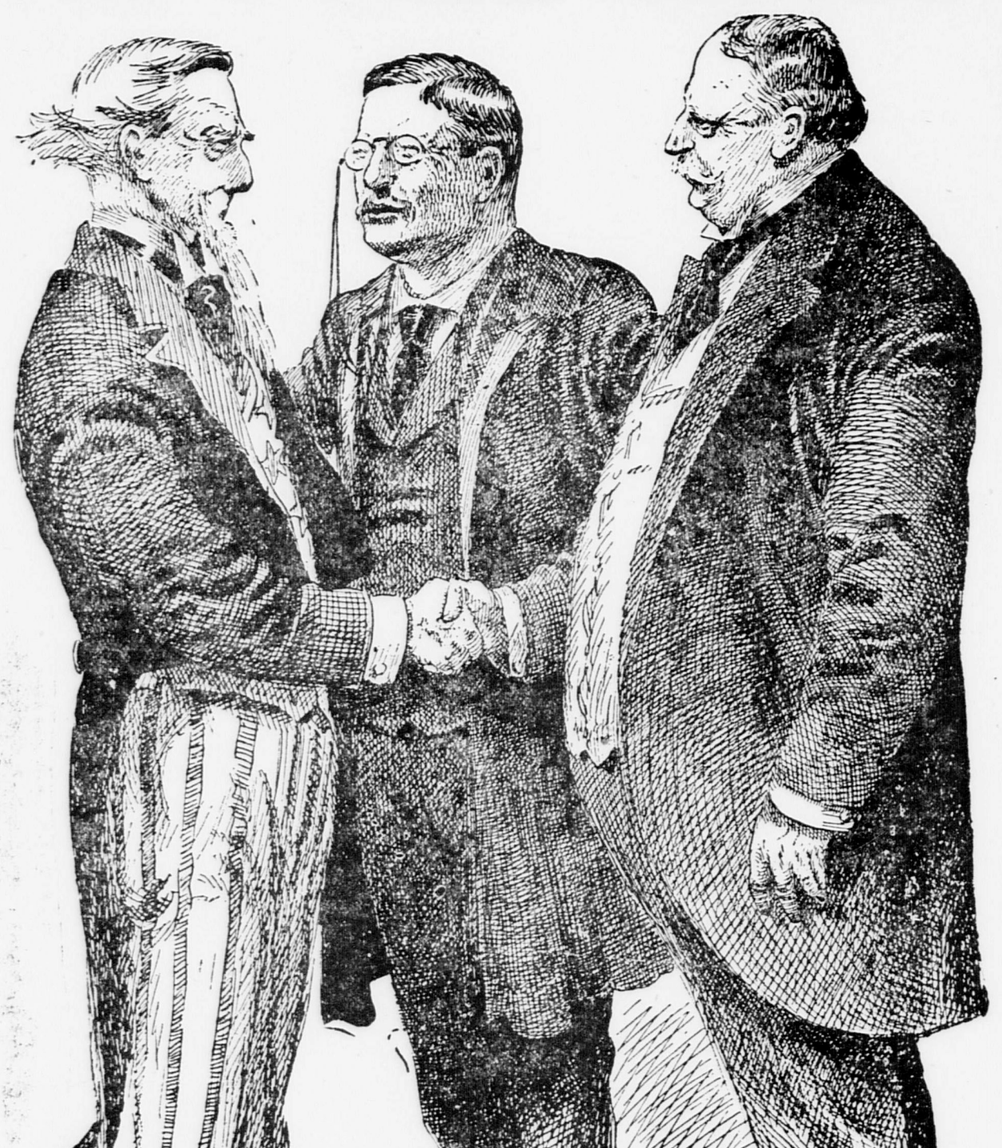

As he took ship, and always afterward, there was in his mind the concluding paragraph of the instructions given him by the president:

"A high and sacred obligation rests upon the government of the United States to give protection for property and life, civil and religious freedom and wise, firm and unselfish guidance in the paths of peace and prosperity to all the peoples of the Philippine Islands. I charge this commission to labor for the full performance of this obligation, which concerns the honor and conscience of their country, in the firm hope that through their labors all the people in the Philippines may come to look back with gratitude to the day when God gave victory to the American arms at Manila and set their land under the sovereignty and the protection of the people of the United States."

Altruistic, perhaps, but Mr. Taft is an altruist. It needed an altruist to compass the requirements specified in the quotation to the letter and pave the way for the fulfillment of Mr. McKinley's "firm hope," as Mr. Taft has done.

The Republicans will revise the tariff, and they will revise it so that no American workingman shall suffer loss of wages or pay more to fill his dinner pail.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

Now for the city election.

The sale of tickets for the lecture on Constantinople on Friday evening at the Point church, has been large.

Mr. McDowell of Field street returned from Taunton on Monday evening to vote in Quincy.

Albert C. Bruff, of the Portland Cement Co., came home Tuesday to put in his little vote for his friend Thomas.

Mrs. Mable Jilbert of 19 Baxter street is slowly recovering from her recent illness, Her many friends will be pleased to see her out again once more.

George L. Gill Rebekah lodge will entertain the deputy and other visitors, and work the degree on several candidates, at it meeting in I. O. O. F. hall on Thursday evening.

Eight competent sales ladies are to be in charge of the rummage sale, corner Washington and South streets, on Wednesday and Thursday of this week. See advertisement in another column.

Carpenter Chisholm has broken ground on Bay View street for another 5-room house. This is the fourth one of this style just built and they sell or rent as soon as finished. This indicates the style of house in demand at Quincy Point.

People of Quincy are interested in political affairs at Constantinople. There has recently been an overturning by the "Young Turks," and Rev. Charles A. S. Dwight, who lectures Friday evening in the Point church, spent eleven years at Constantinople, and carefully studied the conditions of life there. His lecture is illustrated by the stereopticon.

Some of the officers of the Fresh Air Camp Association of Quincy, are anxious to secure better playgrounds for the children of our city. In some places the city employs individuals who are trained to teach children how to play right. Wherever this has been done, juvenile crime has been greatly lessened. Our city has four public playgrounds and two parks for games. Perhaps in the near future we may see special instructors, sand-piles, and athletic apparatus, in all three places.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it falls to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

AT THE ELKS CLUB.

There was a large attendance at the Elks' club Tuesday evening to receive the election returns. These returns were received by telephone and immediately written on a blackboard. Long toward the latter part of the evening when the result of the local contests had been settled, some peculiar bulletins were posted. One of these said that Galen Bowditch had been arrested for repeating. Others said a prominent Braintree politician had been killed in a riot. All of these created much merriment, especially as some of those present took everything posted to be gospel truth.

Rindge Too Fast For Quincy High

In the most interesting game of the season, Rindge Manual Training school defeated the local High school team 16 to 0 at Merrymount Park on Tuesday afternoon.

Quincy deserves great credit for the excellent showing made against the Cambridge team, for Rindge has one of the fastest teams around Boston. The Rindge team is practically the speediest eleven that has played on the local field this season, not even excepting the Everett team. Combined with this speed is weight and good coaching, which combination is hard to beat. The reputation of Rindge on the gridiron created a widespread interest among the local fans and the largest crowd of the season saw the best of the season.

Quincy was not as powerless against the visitors as the score may seem to indicate, for time and again they got first down only to lose the ball on a fumble or be penalized for a wretched forward pass and forced to kick.

Rindge kicked off for a starter and the ball went to C. Carlson, who was downed in his tracks. Quincy was not able to pierce the line or skirt the ends of the opponents, and "Venus" Carlson punted. Then the Rindge team showed its speed, for with O'Brien, Hadley and Maricle carrying the ball in turn, they went slam bang through Quincy at will. Maricle went over from the 10 yard line on a tackle plunge, for the first score of the game, after about two minutes of play. O'Brien failed to kick the goal.

Rindge chose to receive the kick, and Aitchison ran it back five yards before he was downed. From their own 30-yard line the Rindge boys pushed the ball steadily down the field and looked good to score, but a sudden stand by the local team on the 35-yard line gave the ball to Quincy on downs. Rindge got it back at once, however, for a forward pass landed it right in the hands of one of the visitors. Rindge then rushed the ball to the one yard line, and again Quincy held for downs.

"Russ" Bates dropped back to punt. He was back of his own goal line and it was necessary to get away a good kick. But Blake made a frazzle and sent the ball spinning over Bates' head. Gore saved a touchdown and made a touchback by falling on the ball. Quincy then kicked out from the 25 yard line and O'Brien ran it in for 20 yards, before Gore tackled him. Quincy then got the ball on a fumble, but was forced to kick, the quarter back getting the ball. Clapp nailed him before he started.

Rindge now tried the forward pass, but Hill got in the way and grabbed the ball. The local boys couldn't gain and punted to O'Brien. Rindge was then held for downs, but Quincy lost 15 yards when a forward pass hit the ground and was forced to kick again. Rindge was not to be beaten out of a touchdown this time and by straight football they went down the field and over the line, Corr carrying the ball. O'Brien kicked the goal.

There was just time to kick off when time was called. Score 11-0.

The second half began with Rindge receiving the kick. Hadley was nailed by Gore after a 15 yard run, but an onside kick went to Clapp. It was hold and kick now as it was getting rather dark. Rindge had the best of the kicking and finally got the ball to the 20 yard line. From here Hadley went round the left wing for a touchdown, giving a clever exhibition of dodging and blocking, holding off three men in succession with the straight arm. No goal was kicked.

The game was nearly over now, and here Quincy made her best gains. If there had been about five minutes more to play the locals might have scored but the whistle put an end to their expectations. In the lest few minutes of play Quincy, went through Rindge at will, Bates going into the line with a bang for 20 yards, and Hill getting a forward pass for quite a gain. But time was called before they became dangerous. Score 16-0.

Gore, Clapp and "Venus" played best for Quincy, and Hadley, O'Brien, Maricle and Corr showed up well for Rindge.

CONVINCING FACTS.

There is no use denying the fact that Johnson Bros., are surely giving genuine bargains in food values. It will be hard indeed to find a store that is giving such excellent quality at such low prices.

Everything the best that money can buy, is their standard; and their customers know from past dealings that that is absolutely true. Now with our discount system, it is still more of an inducement to trade with us, and you will be surprised to find how fast your discount checks will count up.

We are displaying every day a choice assortment of Cut Meats, with the prices marked in plain figures, so that every one can see what they are paying for or we will cut it to your order, whichever you prefer.

We are pleased that so many of our customers have helped us to make this system a success, for it means a whole lot to them as well as to us. We do not think that any one objects to carrying home a purchase especially when they are paid to do so, which we are doing, with our discount check system.

We are receiving new seasonable goods every day, and it will be to your interest to visit our store and do business with us.

Beef, Lamb and Fresh Pork are all lower and we have a choice lot of Fresh Killed Chicken and Fowl constantly on hand, direct from William A. Drake of Braintree.

A tempting line of New Canned Goods, packed expressly for us.

An excellent stock of New Cereals, Buckwheat, Pan Cake Flour, and all the leading brands of Bread and Pastry Flour.

All kinds of Bottled Goods, Jellies, Jams, Olives and Pickles.

Fresh Hot House Lettuce, Choice Celery, Radishes, Cucumbers, and Fruits of all kinds.

Remember, that every day is BARGAIN day at Johnson Bros., so keep in the road, for all roads lead to our store.

And, remember that we give you 5 per cent discount on all cash purchases, if you take the purchase home, or 2 per cent discount when you ask us to deliver it.

Yours for Quality,

JOHNSON BROS., City Square, Quincy.

Recount of Votes For Congressman

J. Mitchell Galvin, the Republican candidate for Congress in this district is much pleased with the vote of Quincy on election day, and is confident when the figures of the district are revised by the recount that he will have a plurality.

	In 1904	In 1906	In 1908
Democratic	1619	1455	1406
Republican	1999	2230	2800

It will be seen that the Democratic vote is decreasing each year while the Republican vote is increasing rapidly. The vote for O'Connell this week was 213 smaller than the Democratic vote of 1904, while the vote for Galvin is 801 larger than for the Republican candidate in 1904; a net gain of 1014 for the Republicans. Galvin's vote in Quincy was practically twice as large as that of O'Connell—2800 to 1406.

The figures of the district as compiled by the election commissioners of Boston, give O'Connell a total of 16,539 and Galvin 16,498, as follows:

Boston	Galvin (R)	O'Connell (D)	Stevens (Free Trade)
Ward 13	310	1942	59
Ward 14	1270	2015	53
Ward 15	842	1854	98
Ward 16	1025	1757	154
Ward 17	987	2070	86
Ward 20	4679	3273	377
Ward 24	3240	1947	310
Milton	745	255	84
Quincy	2800	1406	167
Total	16498	16,579

O'Connell carried Wards 13, 14, 15 and 17 of Boston by large pluralities while Ward 16 was closer, and gave him but 132 plurality. The balance of the district was strongly Republican, including Quincy, and Milton and Wards 20 and 24 of Boston.

Steps have already been taken for a recount in the entire district and some changes are expected in the South Boston wards.

Senator Hultman A Vote Getter

Senator-elect Hultman is almost as great a vote getter as President-elect Taft. Perhaps he would have received more votes than Taft, had his name been first on the ballot. Taft received 2,996 votes in Quincy, and Hultman received 2,852. No other Republican who had a Democratic rival, aside from Mr. Taft, received as many votes as Mr. Hultman. The West Quincy precincts, which are strongly Democratic, were the only ones which did not give Mr. Hultman a plurality.

The same is true of Hyde Park as of Quincy,—Taft received in that town 1490, Draper 1,209, Frothingham 1,449, Congressman Weeks 1,452, and Hultman 1,462. Mr. Hultman was second, and 10 ahead of Congressman Weeks who is very popular in that town.

Senator-elect Hultman also ran ahead of Draper and Frothingham in Braintree. He is to be congratulated therefore not alone for his victory but for his tremendous vote.

The vote of the senatorial district was: Hultman, 7,823; Foley, 5,611.

BOARD OF TRADE

Discuss Quincy Train Service And Need of Public Landings

The Quincy Board of Trade held its regular monthly meeting Wednesday evening in the Adams building. President Piper was in the chair. Communications from different sources were read and discussed by the different members.

The first of these communications was from the Brockton Board of Trade, in regard to the River and Waterways Congress, the Brockton Board desiring the cooperation of the local association. It was voted to cooperate with the city and Citizens' Association, in this matter.

A communication was received from Secretary Murray of the interdepartment committee on statistics, inquiring whether or not the local board had any statistic committee, from which statistics could be received. It was voted to reply in the negative.

A letter from the Boston Gear Works was read, concerning the lighting in the vicinity of the plant. E. J. Sandberg and T. L. Williams were appointed to confer with the City Council in the matter.

M. F. Bellows of Newark, N. J., sent a letter asking the opinion of the board about establishing a business school in Quincy. It was voted to reply that in the opinion of the board, such an enterprise would not be a paying proposition, because of the proximity to Boston and because of the excellent business system now in vogue in the local High school.

The subject of sloyd work in the Quincy schools was brought up, the members listening to an interesting report from James M. Nowland, who told what was necessary for establishing a sloyd plant and the approximate cost of such a plant. It was decided to refer the subject to the School Committee, to be considered very seriously and carefully.

Public landings was the next thing brought up and caused quite a lot of discussion. Messrs. Crane, Peterson, Foster, Richards, Branch, Frisk, Sandberg and Whitman took part in the discussion, and all seemed to think the matter important and that it could not be decided upon quickly. E. J. Sandberg and F. F. Crane were appointed a committee to act in conjunction with the waterfront committee and look into the matter.

The present train service was also discussed, President Piper and Secretary Stetson being appointed to act with the present committee on train service and investigate.

F. F. Crane then read some facts and statistics, about the canal between Brockton and Newport, which proved to be very interesting. He was then appointed on the new statistics committee with Messrs. Frisk and Williams.

SURPRISE PARTY.

On Tuesday evening at the home of Charles Friberg, Jr., 270 Granite street, there was a very pleasant gathering of friends to attend a surprise party. John Capiferri made the presentation speech. The present was a handsome half moon stick pin with a green stone and four chip diamonds. During the evening games were played. Music included solos by G. Friberg, F. Naterdee, and a few high class selections by Richardson's quartette. The committee included Charles Johnson, John Capiferri, Wilham Anderson and George Friberg. At 10 o'clock refreshments were served.

—The Governor's Council includes but one Democrat, Edward P. Barry. Councillor Bemis of this district won a handsome victory over the railroad interests.

National Craving For Fresh Air

Quincy people will have the pleasure next Monday evening of listening to Mr. Joseph Lee of Boston, on the subject of "Play and Playgrounds." The Outlook says: "The special efforts of Mr. Joseph Lee in obtaining permissive legal enactments and appropriations, and making the playground work practically efficient, merits the appreciation of all."

Special invitations have been extended by the School department to Mayor Snea, Senator-elect Hultman, Representative-elect Thomas, Representative elect Langelier, President Hobbs and members of the City Council to attend the lecture, and the movement is receiving considerable encouragement.

"The reaction from cramped and congested conditions of life in cities, and the all-compelling craving for fresh air, and all that this means morally, intellectually, and socially, have demanded recognition from business men, educator, and social workers. The dominant aims of the Playground Congress were eloquently and logically portrayed in the address of Mrs. H. H. Heller, of Omaha, Nebraska, and in the Secretary's report.

"The primary use of a playground is to foster ideals—ideals of physical well-being and health, ideals of law and order, ideals of social morality and good fellowship. For this reason the lawless, uncared-for, unsupervised playground is being abandoned. The playground is becoming a social centre, not only for children, but for adults. The Field House serves as one means to this end. Entertainments, fairs, and festivals contribute their share.

"There exist many communities among us of from five thousand to fifty thousand people who are new to this freer soil of America, who retain the language and customs of their native lands—Germany, Italy, Sweden, Norway, Hungary, Lithuania, Greece, Russia, and Turkey. They are ardent in their new Americanism, but know nothing and care less for puritanism; they bring with them memories of picturesque and wholesome play-festivals of their respective fatherlands. They have something to contribute to the social well-being and amenities of American life of the future.

"In a vivd account of the National Festivals of Chicago, Miss Amalie Hofer made a valuable contribution to our civic appreciation of the wholesome National gifts which the newcomers are bringing us, and on Thursday and Saturday afternoons every attendant at the Congress had an opportunity to share the happy enjoyment of the public school children in their picturesque and merry illustrations of folk-dances. Automobiles carried members of the Congress to the tiny apologies for gardens and the wee playgrounds of New York; and all who gazed upon the miles of assembled childhood lining such thoroughfares as Avenue C and Rivington Street were stirred deeply, even to utter heart-weariness, at the dire needs of these children even in the perfect mild sunshine of early autumn. Governor Hughes's hearty, manly, and encouraging words were supplemented by those of Mayor Hibbard, of Boston, and other political and social leaders.

"Dr. Gulick, as President of the Association during the past year, has added largely to his well-known and great contribution to the available store of health and vitality of Young America. As Dr. Gulick has wisely said, the immediate need is now to make the work of the National Association intensive rather than extensive. Teachers and superintendents are to be trained, and methods and equipment devised to meet new requirements. A playground well administered is the best inducement to the establishment of others.

"Nor are the needs of rural districts to be forgotten. The country playgrounds has been shown by Mr. Myron T. Scudder to be a potent means for increasing the contentment and happiness which is being considered by the Commission recently appointed by President Roosevelt. There is probably no way in which the generous dollar will bring such large returns. The presentation of a playground to a city or town, said one of the speakers, "seems one of the easiest and most appropriate ways for a man to erect a memorial to himself or a friend which will be more permanent than a tombstone and quite as useful."

HALLOWE'EN PARTY.

On Saturday evening the Sunday school of the Universalist church, held a Hallowe'en party in the church vestry. There were a large number of the scholars, friends and parents present, the scholars dressing in costumes making it a very interesting and amusing time for all. Some of the costumes were Little Red Riding Hood, Topsy, Gypsy girl, Bohemian girl, Japanese girl, brownies, clowns, and many original makeups, with the sports to make it really Hallowe'en night.

At 8 o'clock refreshments were served after which all kinds of Hallowe'en games and pranks were indulged in until 9 o'clock when all parted for home after a most enjoyable time. Much credit is due to Mrs. Robert G. Reed, who planned and took charge of the party, for its success.

Large Funeral At Atlantic

One of the largest funerals Atlantic has ever seen was held on Wednesday, when all that was mortal of Patrick H. Golden was laid at rest. A requiem high mass was celebrated by Rev. John P. Cuffe, who has known Mr. Golden for many years.

Mr. Golden was a well-known and highly respected citizen, and this was evidenced by the large number that filled the church to its utmost capacity. He was born and bred in Atlantic and has lived there all his life, working in the Wollaston Foundry until he was forced to give up on account of his health. A large delegation of fellow workmen attended the funeral.

There were many beautiful floral tributes, showing the esteem and good will in which Mr. Golden was held. Pieces were sent by relations and friends and from the Wollaston Foundry, Tubular Rivet Co., and Div. 17, A. O. H.

Mr. Golden is survived by a wife, two sons and four daughters.

The bearers were Cornelius M. Duggan, William Moran, Daniel Keating, James Sullivan, Patrick Madigan and John McKenna. Also honorary bearers from the A. O. H. The burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, West Quincy.

Quincy Continues A Republican City

Quincy Republicans are elated over the Republican pluralities at the election on Tuesday, as they showed the city to be two to one Republican. The Presidential vote was 2,996 for Taft to 1,411 for Bryan, over two to one; and the vote for Lieutenant Governor was 2,654 for Frothingham to 1,312 for Barton, also over two to one. Gov. Draper was cut some and his total was 2,393 to 1,647, a plurality of 746.

But 17 cities and towns in the State gave a larger Taft vote than Quincy, while 19 gave a larger Bryan vote. Yet 21 cities are larger than Quincy in population by census of 1905.

Cities like Holyoke, Fitchburg, Waltham, Chelsea, Everett, Gloucester, Medford, Melrose and Pittsfield, did not cast as large a Taft vote as Quincy, and consequently will not have as large a representative in the State and other conventions of 1909.

GAS FOR CITY COUNCIL.

The frequency with which the fuse burns off and leaves the City Council in darkness would seem to make it advisable to provide some means of lighting the Council Chambers with gas at such times instead of keeping the Council meeting in darkness until the City Messenger can telephone the Electric Light Co., and a man arrives to put in a new fuse.

On Monday evening the Council chamber was in darkness for over fifteen minutes, save for the single lights on the President's, Clerk's desk and reporter's desk.

The Council chamber is piped for gas and the chandeliers are all in place ready to light, but it is some trouble to get out a long pole and light them.

It would be a very simple matter to connect the chandelier by a battery and spark oil, so that in case the lights were needed it would only be necessary to turn on the gas to press a button and instantly flood the Council chamber with light. Perhaps the Commissioner will look into the merits of the proposition.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

It was about 20 above zero at sunrise this morning, and therefore sharp and cold. At 8 o'clock the mercury had only risen to the 28 degree mark.

The high wind Wednesday raised clouds of dust in the street and the appearance of the street watering car was very welcome to the store keepers.

A card system for court records is being made out at the district court. It takes some time to index the cases, but it will be very handy when completed.

The hearing before the special commission on separation of the grades at Water and Saville sreets will be held at City Hall, Saturday morning.

J. H. Neal, the auditor of the Boston Elevated Railway, will be the speaker at the November meeting, next Tuesday, of the Wollaston Unitarian club. The talk will be illustrated.

The new grand master of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, A. F. & A. M., paid an official visit to Wollastou lodge at its regular communication Tuesday evening. The Master Mason degree was worked.

Members of Rural lodge will meet at 2 P. M. on Sunday to join with Wollaston lodge in divine services at the Wollaston Congregational church. Massachusetts lodge and St. Stephens chapter have also been invited.

County Commissionioner John F. Merrill had the distinction of receiving the largest vote in Quincy gives to any candidate, his total vote for the city being 3363. He carried every ward and precinct in the city by a large plurality, and also swept the whole county burying his opponent McDonald deep with ballots.

Eight tables participated in the weekly whist tournament at the rooms of the Granite City club Wednesday evening. There were quite a number who secured over 60 percent. The first prize went to A. B. Hillman with 71 percent, and the second to W. W. Ewell with 67 per cent. Henry P. Furnald served the lunch the menu including Waldorf salad, crullers, hot rolls, crackers, cheese and coffee.

IT'S YOUR KIDNEYS

Don't Mistake the Cause of Your Troubles. A Quincy Citizen Shows How to Cure Them.

Many people never suspect their kidneys. If suffering from a lame, weak or aching back they think that it is only a muscular weakness; when urinary trouble sets in they think it will soon correct itself. And so it is with all the other symptoms of kidney disorders. That is just where the danger lies. You must cure these troubles or they may lead to diabetes or Bright's disease. The best remedy to use is Doan's Kindney Pills. It cures all ills which are caused by weak or diseased kidneys. Quincy people testify to permanent cures.

Mrs. E. Burke, living at 143 Quincy St., Quincy, Mass. says: "I consider Doan's Kidney Pills an excellent remedy for Kidney trouble, both my husband and myself having used them and the results were of the most satisfactory nature. Mr. Burke had such a severe pain in his back that he could hardly do his work, but Doan's Kidney Pills fixed him up in good shape. They were procured at the Cox Drug Store and have our highest recommendation."

A CLOSE FIGHT IN MARYLAND

Official Count May Be Necessary to Determine the Result

THE ELECTORAL COLLEGE VOTE

Indications That Taft Will Have Sixty-Seven More Than a Majority--Bryan Has Two Less Votes Than He Received In 1896--Republicans Have Good Working Majority In Both Branches of Congress

New York, Nov. 5.—Practically complete returns indicate that William H. Taft of Ohio, as president-elect, will have a vote of 309 in the electoral college. This is within sixteen votes of the forecast made by National Chairman Hitchcock and sixty-seven more than a majority out of the total electoral vote of 483.

The most important news of the late returns indicates that Maryland, after vacillating during yesterday and apparently being safe for Democracy, has been swung into the Taft column. The unofficial figures give Taft the state by 149 votes.

Maryland was the last of the doubtful states to be heard from. Indiana and West Virginia, as well as Montana, turned out to be safely Republican. Colorado went for Bryan.

The Democrats do not concede the loss of Maryland and will be satisfied with nothing short of an official count.

Mr. Bryan has a total of 174 votes, two less than he received in 1896. In 1904 Parker received only 140 votes, in 1900 Bryan received 155 votes and in 1896 the Nebraskan received 176 votes.

Mr. Taft's electoral votes compare with 336 received by Roosevelt in 1904, 292 received by McKinley in 1900, and 271 received by McKinley in 1896.

No changes of material interest have been reported in the congressional returns. The Republicans will have about the same working majority in the Sixty-first congress as at present, and Joseph G. Cannon of Illinois undoubtedly will succeed himself as speaker. Representatives Overstreet of Indiana and Hepburn of Iowa are the most conspicuous among those who have failed of re-election.

The senate retains its present complexion, although there will be a material change in the personnel of the upper body of the national legislature.

National Chairman Mack of the Democratic party issued a statement last night in which he declared that he did not believe Bryan would again be a candidate for the presidency. He said he believed that the Nebraskan might be a candidate for the United States senate in 1911, providing the legislature of his state is Democratic in that year, when the first vacancy occurs.

The latest returns indicate that in the national house of representatives the Republicans will have 208 members and the Democrats 172, with eleven districts missing.

Mr. Taft's plurality in the state of New York, according to corrected returns, is 203,495, more than 28,000 in excess of Roosevelt's plurality of four years ago. Governor Hughes was re-elected in New York state by 71,159. The returns as between president and governor indicate a heavy splitting of tickets. The proportion of scratched ballots was about the same in the upstate districts and in Greater New York.

The latest returns were watched with a great deal of interest, not in the belief that they could have any possible effect upon the national result, but because of local conditions. The heavy vote in Ohio made figures extraordinarily late, owing to the immense size of the ballot. Taft carried his own state, however, by 50,000 plurality, a reduction of more than 200,000 from the Roosevelt vote of four years ago. The Democratic state ticket in Ohio, headed by Judson Harmon for governor, appears to be safely elected. The state legislature, which is to choose a successor to Senator Foraker, appears to be in doubt as between the Republicans and Democrats.

In Indiana Taft was successful in carrying the state by about 8000, but the entire Democratic state ticket, headed by Marshall for governor, was elected. The congressional delegation from the state shows a gain of seven Democrats.

The returns from West Virginia, owing to the mountainous character of the country, are slow in coming in. A sufficient number of counties and districts have been heard from, however, to show that Taft has a safe plurality.

Colorado yesterday shifted from the doubtful column to the Bryan list. The legislature, which is to choose a successor to Senator Teller, also is apparently Democratic.

Mr. Taft's phenomenally large vote in New York state continues to attract attention. It is taken by the Republican managers of the state and country as indicating that the Empire state, with its thirty-nine electoral votes, can no longer be regarded as debatable ground in a presidential contest, but is safely Republican.

Mr. Bryan's victory in his home state of Nebraska was a sweeping one. Five of Nebraska's six congressmen will be Democrats, while in the legislature only eighteen Republicans seem to be elected out of a total of 133 senators and representatives.

President Roosevelt's view on the election follows:

"This administration has meant a steady effort and progress which should never be allowed to deviate into an unwise radicalism on the one hand, nor into an unwise conservatism on the other. The nomination of Mr. Taft was a triumph over reactionary conservatism, and his election was a triumph over unwise and improper radicalism."

Democratic Governor of Ohio

Cincinnati, Nov. 5.—A plurality of about 50,000 for Taft was the election day expression of the voters of Ohio, who, however, at the same time chose the head of the opposition state ticket by a plurality of probably 20,000. More than half the precincts of the state are included in the figures that show these results, no estimate being considered and later differences will be simply as to the size of the plurality, there being no question of the certainty of the result. The slow count delayed knowledge of the decision as to legislature and both parties claim a majority in that body, which will settle the United States senatorship. The same slow count delayed decision as to the remainder of the state.

Nebraska Loyal to Bryan

Lincoln, Nov. 5.—Returns on the election in Nebraska are far from complete, but seem sufficiently definite to confirm the first report that the Democrats had won a sweeping victory. While the pluralities for the victorious party are not phenomenally large, they are complete, the state ticket and candidates for congress in most instances running parallel with Bryan, who will have a plurality of not fewer than 10,000 votes, and Shallenberger (Dem.) for governor and the rest of the Democratic ticket will have about 9000.

But the Democratic victory does not stop there. Five of Nebraska's six congressmen are Democrats, only one Republican, Hinshaw, in the Fourth district, escaping defeat by 700 votes.

Gain For Indiana Democrats

Indianapolis, Nov. 5.—A radical change in Indiana's representation in the house of representatives was the most striking feature of the election. The latest returns give the Democratic party eleven members and the Republicans two. This is a gain of seven members for the Democrats. Taft carried the state for president by about 8000. Thomas R. Marshall and the entire Democratic state ticket are probably elected by a plurality of about 15,000. The state legislature is probably Democratic, which means that a Democratic successor to Senator Hemenway probably will be chosen. The name of John W. Kern is mentioned for the place.

Missouri

St. Louis, Nov. 5.—The electoral vote of Missouri is in doubt, late returns reducing the lead held by Bryan yesterday, so that it is impossible to say definitely who has carried the state.

The complexion of the next legislature is also in doubt, though the indications are that the Democrats will control it by four or five votes on joint ballot. This would assure the re-election of William J. Stone to the United States senate.

The Republicans have apparently elected Herbert S. Hadley for governor by at least 8000 plurality and the probabilities are that he has carried the entire state ticket with him.

Democrats Carry Colorado

Denver, Nov. 5.—Estimated pluralities by counties indicate that Bryan and the entire Democratic state ticket, headed by John F. Shafroth for governor, carried Colorado with pluralities in the neighborhood of 5000. The Democrats probably will control the legislature by a narrow margin, insuring the election of Charles J. Hughes, Jr., as United States senator to succeed Senator Teller.

New Jersey's Revised Returns

Trenton, Nov. 5.—Revised returns give Taft a plurality in New Jersey of about 70,000. One of the surprises of the returns was the small plurality given Bryan in Hudson county. Unofficial figures place the plurality at 1700. Four years ago Parker had 1338. Kinkhead and Hamil, Democrats, won in the Ninth and Tenth districts for congress.

Quinby's Election Certain

Concord, N. H., Nov. 5.—Complete returns of the vote for governor show a majority for Henry B. Quinby for governor. The vote stands: Quinby (Rep.), 43,638; Carr (Dem.), 40,250. All five members of the governor's council will be Republicans. The Republicans will have nineteen of the twenty-four seats in the state senate, and a majority of 125 in the house of representatives. The returns from the vote for presidential electors show a plurality of about 18,000 for Taft.

Late Returns From Maine

Portland, Me., Nov. 5.—Estimates of Maine's plurality for Taft and Sherman were confirmed by practically complete returns. With but seven small plantations missing, which in 1904 gave Parker forty and Roosevelt seventy-one votes, revised returns give Taft a plurality of 31,402. The total vote of the two great parties was 10,000 larger than four years ago, when Parker received 27,630 and Roosevelt 65,437 votes.

Delaware Goes Republican

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 5.—The returns from rural districts are unusually slow in coming in, but enough information has been received to show that the entire Republican state ticket, with the exception of Davis, for attorney general, has been elected. Gray (Dem.), for the latter office, has probably been chosen by 2000 plurality.

Closest State In Union

Baltimore, Nov. 5.—With fifteen precincts on the eastern shore still to hear from indications are that Taft carried Maryland by perhaps less than 200. Both Democrats and Republicans claim victory. It may require the official count to determine the results finally. Probably Maryland is the closest state in the Union.

Over 60,000 Plurality For Taft

San Francisco, Nov. 5.—California probably gave Taft a plurality of more than 60,000 votes and in addition re-elected all eight Republican congressmen and chose a Republican legislature. Of the numerous constitutional amendments, the proposal to remove the state capitol from Sacramento to Berkeley was defeated.

The West Virginia Vote

Wheeling, Nov. 5.—While fuller figures show that Taft has carried West Virginia by a safe plurality of several thousand, the state ticket may not have gone through with him, Bennett (Dem.), for governor, having 1000 plurality the better of the argument in probably half the state.

CUBA'S WELFARE ALWAYS AT HEART

Death of Palma, First President of the Republic

Santiago, Cuba, Nov. 5.—Tomas Estrada Palma, the first president of the Cuban republic, died last night. He was born at Bayamo, Cuba. He took part in the Cuban revolution of 1868-78, during which his mother was captured and, it was said, starved to death by the Spaniards. He became president of the Cuban republic, but was captured in 1877 and imprisoned until hostilities ceased in 1878. He married a daughter of President Guardiola.

During the last revolution against the Spaniards he was delegate at large and minister plenipotentiary in the United States for the junta.

On Feb. 24, 1902, he was formally elected president of Cuba following the American-Spanish war and was inaugurated May 20 of the same year. In the four years of his administration Cuba grew and prospered to an extent that even surprised the Cubans, and on May 20, 1906, he was inaugurated for a second term.

Not long after this, however, the revolutionary spirit broke out anew in the island and by August the insurrection was well under way. On Sept. 14, following a conference between President Roosevelt, the secretary of war, the secretary of the navy and the assistant secretary of state, two American warships with several hundred marines on board were ordered to Cuban waters. The affairs of Cuba have since been guided by the United States.

De Sagan Dodged Creditor

Paris, Nov. 5.—Judgment in the sum of $1300 was obtained in this city against Prince Helie de Sagan on certain protested notes given by the prince to a dealer in antiquities, through whose agency he purchased in 1900 a number of souvenirs of General Marceau, paying therefor $8000. Prince de Sagan married Countess de Castellane, who was Miss Anna Gould of New York.

Roosevelt as an Editor

New York, Nov. 5.—In its issue of next Saturday The Outlook will confirm the published report to the effect that President Roosevelt will become associated with that publication after his retirement from office. According to the announcement he will be associated with the editorial staff of The Outlook after March 5 as "special contributing editor."

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

We were at lunch when she thought of it, and luckily there were no visitors except Mrs. Pitchley and Carolyn, Mohunsleigh and Tom Doremus. It was bad enough even with them, for she half sprang up, then sat down again, first going red, then going pale, and we all thought she was getting ready to faint. But as soon as she could speak she said, when we shrieked at her, "It's nothing—nothing. I've just thought of something, that's all."

Afterward, when she and Sally and Potter and I were alone together, she told us that at last she had got the inspiration for her big entertainment.

It was two days after the violet tea, so it was quite time she should get it, she said, and she had been dreadfully worried because the invitations ought to go out almost at once. The famous pink ball at the Casino was for the 23d, and she wanted to have her party the night before, so that everybody would be worn out, and the ball would fall flat.

"But we've got our cards all right now," said Potter. "Why do you want to queer the show?"

"I intend to show Mrs. Van der Windt what I can do," she answered.

"Suppose a lot of the people you want refuse you, so that they can be fresh for the ball?" Sally suggested.

"They won't," said Mrs. Ess Kay, "when they have seen what I shall say on the invitations."

Then she got up, went to her desk, took out some engraved cards which she had ready, all but filling in the date, and wrote something in one corner. "What do you think of that?" she asked Sally.

Sally took the card, looked at it for a minute, laughed and passed it on to me, while Potter came and stared over my shoulder.

She had written across the card: "Fancy Dress, with Masks. A Visit to the Maze; and Aladdin's Cave."

"Do you think that will bring them?" she inquired, with a triumphant and mysterious air.

"I think it will," said Sally.

"You know your business, old girl," remarked Potter. "They'll want to know what it means, and they'll be bound to come and find out. What is your idea, anyway?"

"I'll tell you another time," said Mrs. Ess Kay. "I should like it to be a surprise for Betty, just as it will be for the people outside. She'll enjoy it more."

I didn't tease to know the secret, though I was really curious, especially about Aladdin's cave, which seemed to promise something gorgeous. The mystery was religiously kept, but there was plenty of excitement in sending out the invitations.

There were endless discussions between Mrs. Ess Kay and Potter, and, though she seemed so angry with Mrs. Van der Windt and several other members of the ball committee for trying to make a stand against her, she was perfectly ruthless about the names she would scratch off the lists her secretary was continually making out and revising for her.

I heard her say that she wouldn't have dreamed of asking the Pitchleys if they hadn't "got hold of" Mohunsleigh, and that Cora Pitchley, whatever else she might be, was the cleverest woman in Newport to have scooped in all the honors. Though to this day I can't see exactly what she meant, for she never would explain.

Anyhow, whatever the superlatively clever thing was Mrs. Pitchley had done, there was no longer a question of her being kept out from the pink ball or anything else. People were charming to her, and we met Mrs. Van der Windt herself at the chateau at a luncheon party with a vaudeville entertainment afterward and also at a dinner. Mrs. Van der Windt seemed to like my cousin, Mohunsleigh, very much, too, and gave a moonlight motor car picnic especially for him, with only a few people asked besides ourselves and the Pitchleys and Tom Doremus.

Mohunsleigh had not expected to stay more than a few days, but when he found that the friend he wanted to visit in California was detained in New York on business and Mrs. Pitchley and everybody urged him very much to stop, he decided that he would. I didn't suppose that Mohunsleigh would care for frivolities after all the years he has spent tramping about in strange countries, killing things, but he appeared to be perfectly happy and nothing bored him so long as the Pitchleys were there.

When Mrs. Ess Kay was making out the list of invitations for the great blowout, as Potter called it, Mohunsleigh happened to stroll over to the Moorings alone. He came to tell us that he had made up his mind to stay, and why.

"You see," he exclaimed, "I hadn't an invitation for any special time from Harborough. It was a sort of standing thing, given when we met in Damascus last winter. I was to come when I could, and be always welcome—that sort of thing, don't you know. I cabled the day I sailed, and didn't get any answer, but I hadn't been in New York two hours when I'm blessed if the beggar didn't walk in on me at the Waldorf. Jolly glad to see me and all that, but had to hang on in New York for a bit on some business or other. Now he thinks he can't get off for a fortnight or so, and as what he's got on isn't my sort of racket, I might as will be here as anywhere else, perhaps a little better."

"What Harborough is your friend?" inquired Mrs. Ess Kay, with interest. "The new San Francisco millionaire?"

"Don't know how new he is," said Mohunsleigh, "or even whether he's a millionaire, for it's the sort of thing one doesn't ask a chap. But if he isn't a millionaire, he can spend money like one, for I've seen him do it. A deuce of a good fellow he is; don't know a better anywhere."

"It's Jameson B. Harborough, isn't it?" asked Sally, and I was quite surprised to hear her ask the question, for she never seems to take any interest in a man just because he is a millionaire, as so many of the other people I meet do.

"Yes; those are his initials," said Mohunsleigh, looking bored.

"Then it is the millionaire, Katherine," went on Sally, quite eagerly. "Don't you think, as he's said to be such an interesting, original sort of person and such a friend of Lord Mohunsleigh's besides, that it would be nice if you gave Lord Mohunsleigh a card to send him for your party on the 22d?"

"Why, yes, that's a very good idea of yours, Sally," exclaimed Mrs. Ess Kay. "I shall be delighted. I'll give you the card now, Lord Mohunsleigh, if you don't mind."

Lord Mohunsleigh said that he would be very pleased, but he couldn't tell at all whether his friend went in for that sort of thing—had an idea he didn't and rather fought shy of society shows, though, of course, Harborough was a gentleman and all that.

"Anyhow, you send him the card and write him a line saying we should like to meet him," persisted Mrs. Ess Kay.

Accordingly, Mohunsleigh slipped the card in its crested envelope into his pocket, and we heard nothing more of it for awhile. Then, when I at least had forgotten the conversation in the wild rush for pleasure in which we lived, he said one day to Mrs. Ess Kay and Sally that his friend would be so much obliged if the invitation might be kept open. Harborough couldn't be sure until the last moment whether he could come or not, but would be delighted to do so if he might be allowed to decide at the last moment.

All Newport was soon talking about Mrs. Ess Kay's mysterious fancy dress party, which wasn't exactly a ball, but was—nobody knew what. People wondered about the maze and Aladdin's cave, and those who were asked were sure they would be something to be remembered and talked of through coming seasons, while those who were not were equally certain that the great mysteries would turn out to be stupid and childish. The pink ball, which had been the one absorbing topic of conversation till Mrs. Ess Kay's invitations appeared, became a matter of secondary interest, and Mrs. Ess Kay and Mrs. Pitchley both began thus early to be avenged.

Potter surprised me one morning with the design of a fancy dress, which he announced that he'd been inspired in the night to sketch for my benefit. According to him, I was to represent the frost sprite in glittering white garments, with a long veil like a trail of sparkling mist. I thought it rather suggestive of a diamond dusted Christmas card, but Mrs. Ess Kay was so charmed with the idea that she begged me to have it. "Potter will be broken hearted if you don't, and besides it will cost you next to nothing," she said.

It was the latter consideration rather than the first which decided me to give my gracious consent. Mrs. Ess Kay telegraphed to a costumer, who was also an artist. He came, made a few practical alterations in Potter's design and arranged costumes for Mrs. Ess Kay and Sally. Afterward when my bill came in, which it didn't do till I asked for it, it certainly was ridiculously small, a mere nothing even for me, but I couldn't help having some uncomfortable suspicions, and I have them still.

AFTER TWO SCORE YEARS

LOSS IS CONSIDERED SERIOUS

Resignation Came to Corporation Without the Slightest Warning and Is Accepted Only After Two Weeks of Conference--Name of President Roosevelt Has Been Mentioned as Head of Ancient University

Boston, Nov. 5.—"President Eliot has resigned!" To the whole body of Harvard alumni this report came as a tremendous shock. The loss of the services of this titanic figure in Harvard's affairs, while certain to come within a few years, was regarded as very serious, and the suddenness of it was overwhelming.

No explanation is vouchsafed in the brief announcement that was given out by the corporation. It simply stated that President Eliot had resigned, and quoted his resignation, as well as the formal vote of the corporation and a brief notice following. The resignation is to take effect May 19, 1909.

This notice gave no concrete reason for the action of Harvard's head, but one may read between the lines that Eliot felt that his action would be only a matter of time, and sentiment dictated that it take effect at the conclusion of forty years of service as the head of America's oldest college. The bare facts of Eliot's resignation were given out from the officers of the board of overseers at 50 State street.

When Eliot's resignation came to the corporation last month it was absolutely without previous notice on his part and was received with a regret that can only be imagined. The board was placed in a position of the utmost difficulty, but after two weeks of conference, its members arrived at the conclusion that a proper regard for the president's wishes required them to relieve him of the arduous duties of his office; and the resignation accordingly was accepted.

In taking this action the members of the board of overseers expressed their sincere confidence in his unimpaired ability to administer the affairs of the university to the satisfaction of the governing boards and faculties.

Naturally the question now foremost with every Harvard alumni is: "Who will succeed Eliot?" In the past, appreciating the fact that this event sooner later must come to pass, the names of many people have been mentioned as possible heads of the great university.

Among these none has figured more prominently than President Roosevelt. Another name not infrequently heard is that of A. L. Lowell, trustee of the Lowell institute. In the management of that institution he has shown an executive ability which, together with his educational attainments, his writings and researches, have attracted wide attention.

It is stated officially that the election of a successor to Eliot will engage the attention of the governing boards of the university during the time that remains before the expiration of his term of service. In accordance with the established procedure, the election will be made by the corporation and its choice will be communicated to the board of overseers for its consent. In view of the heavy responsibilities attached to the choice of successor to Eliot, the action of the governing boards will be deliberate, and the time of its occurrence cannot now be predicted.

The Yankee In Heavy Seas

Washington, Nov. 5.—Heavy seas are prevailing in the vicinity of Spindle Rock, at the entrance of Buzzards bay, on which the cruiser Yankee is grounded, according to a dispatch received at the navy department. Captain Marsh, the commander of the vessel, expresses the opinion, however, that further damage to the vessel is not likely.

Found Fortune In Oats

Marietta, O., Nov. 5.—William Bay sold a farm for $5000, placed the money in a bag of oats, drove home and lost the bag from the rear end of his wagon. Harry Wehrs, driver of a delivery wagon, picked it up, started to feed his horses some of the oats and found the money. He returned the money and was rewarded with $5.

Guests Safely Escaped

Brookfield, Mass., Nov. 5.—Fire which started in the basement of Hotel Metropole here early this morning rapidly spread throughout the building, a three-story wooden structure. The guests escaped in safety. As nearby property was in danger, a call was sent to North Brookfield for assistance.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Altondi Crudale, 8, was knocked down and killed at Cranston, R. I., by an automobile owned and driven by W. G. Reed, a Providence manufacturer.

The Park house and a dwelling adjoining were burned at Princeton, Mass., together with much of the furniture. It is suspected that the fire was of incendiary origin. The loss is $15,000.

EDITORIAL.

Business men of Quincy are well pleased over the election. Already business has started to pick up,now that confidence is restored. Several men were hired on at the Fore River Works on Wednesday and Thursday mornings and the West Quincy stone sheds have enlarged their gang of workers. Business will boom now.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

A few flakes of snow fell Wednesday afternoon.

Dancing party tonight of the Quincy Catholic club at Music hall.

It is probable that a special meeting of the City Council will be called for Monday evening to declare the result of the election in Quincy of last Tuesday.

Antony J. Thomogany of Quincy who was in probate court at Dedham Wednesday, had his name change to Antony J. Thompson because so many call him Thompson.

James C. Elcock, a well known resident of West Quincy, passed away Wednesday at his home on Furnace avenue, aged 50 years. Mr. Elcock was engage in the Granite business at Fields Corner, Dorchester.

The Hyde Park vote for Senator was overlooked on Wednesday. Hultman received 1462, making his total 7,823, while Foley received 495, making his total 3,611.

The boating season is ended; it has been a successful season. The boat-shops will do quite a brisk business the coming winter, as many sportsmen are to have new crafts built.

Representatives Herbert W. Burr, Samuel W. Mildram and William B. Willcutt were reelected representatives from the 24th Suffolk district, and the new bridge over the Neponset river will continue to be an issue.

"Convincing facts," is the title given by Johnson Bros. to their new advertisement which appears in today's Daily Ledger. It only needs for one to read what they have to say to understand that the facts enumerated are of great importance to close buyers of household necessities.

A large audience should greet Rev. Charles A. S. Dwight on Friday evening when he lectures at the Point church. He is a well known pastor, traveler, writer and author. He recently spent eleven years at Constantinople and knows the Turk, the Ottoman Empire and the "Gate of Felicity."

After several all day sewing meetings and much individual effort, the ladies of the Fragment society of First church are ready for their fair which is to be held in the chapel on Wednesday afternoon and evening of next week. Besides useful and fancy articles, a supper served at six o'clock will be an attraction.

A. N. LaBrecque Is Endorsed

A large and enthusiastic attendance was present at a special meeting of the Houghs Neck Associates held Wednesday evening in the Association clubhouse. Henry W. French, the president, was in the chair.

The first business was the election of a membership committee. The following were elected to work for the increase of membership: P. F. O'Brien, John R. S. Ross, Henry W. French, A. F. Baird and Capt. Ross Y. Woodbury.

Harry Stackpole was appointed chairman of the music committee, and George Urann chairman of the entertainment committee. Both of the above named have power to select four assistants to act on their committees.

Amendments were made in the by-laws relative to the calling of special and regular meetings.

William P. Taylor tendered his resignation, as secretary, but no action was taken in the matter. Alfred N. LaBrecque was elected secretary pro tem.

The most important business of the evening now came up, namely, the consideration of the candidacy of Alfred N. LaBrecque for the City Council from Ward One. After considerable discussion it was voted to give him the unanimous support and endorsement of the Associates. James E. Wall was appointed chairman of a political committee to manage the campaign of Mr. LaBrecque in Houghs Neck.

PROBATE COURT.

Judge Flint held probate court for Norfolk County at Dedham on Wednesday and transacted the following business:

Wills allowed: Of John Monahan of Dedham, Johanna O. Wilson of Hyde Park, Mary Farquhar of Randolph, Henry H. Brown of Brookline, Frank O. Pierce of Foxboro, Robert Scott, Jr., of Hyde Park, Annie E. Hewins of Medfield, Lucy E. Hall of Brookline, Charles Gould of Walpole, Mary S. Perkins of Quincy, Mary E. Pinneo of Brookline.

Administrations granted: On the estates of Emma Wardle of Dedham, Russell E. White of Holbrook, Winthrop H. Dame of Brookline, Patrick H. Hallissy of Norwood, Josephine Alden of Randolph, and Russell E. White of Holbrook.

Inventory: Estate of Susan Lawrence Weymouth.

Accounts were also allowed on several estates in surrounding towns.

—Chelsea voted no-license, 2,041 to 2,193, a no majority of 152. Interest in the license question overshadowed even that in the presidential race. This vote on local option was taken in Chelsea by authority of the legislature which established a board of control in the city after the great fire of April.

—In Connecticut Congressman George L. Lilley, Republican, who was the central figure in a recent submarine investigation by his colleagues in the House of Representatives was elected Governor.

—In Maine Frank E. Guernsey was elected for the unexpected term of the late Congressman Lewellyn Powers.

Work on the new Coddington school is progressing rapidly and will be ready for occupancy early in December.

MOTHER'S MEETING.

The Mother's Association held its November meeting on Wednesday afternoon, with a good attendance, Mrs. W. H. Doble, president, in the chair. After a brief opening talk and business session, Mrs. Albert E. Conn read a most interesting report of the quarterly meeting of the International Union Maternal Association of Boston held at Park Street church, to which she was a delegate. Mrs. C. T. Sherman in the devotional exercises, gave many helpful thoughts on the "Spirit of Thankfulness." Mrs. Albert E. Avery, president of the Philergians of Braintree, was the soloist and sang most charmingly "The Lord is Mindful" by Mendelssohn, a "Lullaby" by Frank Lynes and "The Lost Chord" by Arthur Sullivan. The paper of the afternoon was given by Mrs. Dexter E. Wadsworth, entitled "Health through Exercise" and the audience greatly appreciated the fine thought throughout the whole paper. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Henry H. Schulze and Mrs. Victor E. Miller. Mrs. Ernest E. Branch had charge of the children.

QUINCY CHORAL SOCIETY.

The first rehearsal of the Quincy Choral Society on Wednesday evening was a great success. Eighty-five singers attended, many of them having splendidly trained voices, and it is likely that the chorus will number at least one hundred in a week or two. The study of the oratorio of Elijah was begun, under Mr. Arthur S. Wonson, the work throughout the evening showing a ready spirit on the part of the singers to put themselves entirely under the influence of the conductor. Mr. Wonson expressed himself as highly pleased with the chorus, and believes that the members have every reason to feel assured of a most successful season's work. Miss Florence G. Olney again proved herself a most efficient accompanist, and the rehearsal as a whole was one to reflect great credit on every member present. The study of Elijah will be continued on Wednesday evening, November 11, at Electa hall.

A GREAT RECORD

DR. LEONHARDT'S INTERNAL PILE REMEDY MAKES 98 PER CENT. OF CURES.

Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid has been tested in several thousand cases, and was successful in all but two per cent. Hem-Roid's wonderful record is due to the fact that it is an internal remedy. The cause of piles is internal, and it is too much to expect to cure piles with ointments, suppositories or operations. Hem-Roid cures the internal cause.

BRYAN "BEATEN TO A FRAZZLE"

President Refers to Election For Definition of Southern Word--Taft to Take a Rest After Arduous Campaign--Bryan Says That Personally He Shall Find as Much Joy In Being Out of Office as If He Were In

Washington, Nov. 5.—The president was in a very cheerful frame of mind yesterday and told the newspaper men that the election of Taft wholly carried out a prophecy made by him in a letter written to Senator Lodge, dated Oct. 26, 1908. In this letter the president said:

"Prophesy is very bad until after the event. Nevertheless, I must send you a line to say that I think the situation is steadily improving in Ohio. East of the Alleghenies I believe we shall have a larger popular plurality than four years ago; in other words, that Taft's purality will be greater than mine, and I think that our electoral vote will be larger east of the Alleghenies than four years ago, because I think the chances slightly favor us in Maryland, although this presents a good deal of guesswork. West of the Alleghenies I think we shall see a heavy falling off in the majorities as compared with 1904, but I do not anticipate the loss of any electoral votes excepting in Missouri and Nevada, and I am inclined to think that we have an even chance of carrying Kentucky."

Over one thousand telegrams and many letters of congratulation on the result of the election poured into the White House yesterday for President Roosevelt. He was busy all day reading these messages and dictating replies to them. No callers were received during the day.

The president said there seemed to be some doubt throughout the country regarding the meaning of the word "frazzle," which he used recently in referring to the campaign by saying: "We've got them beaten to a frazzle." He explained that it was a common word in the south and he had used it since he was a boy. "To those who do not know what I meant by the word 'frazzle,'" said the president, "the best definition I can give is to refer them to the election returns."

Taft to a Take Rest

Cincinnati, Nov. 5.—Yesterday morning W. H. Taft gave hearty expression to the gratification he felt on his election as President of the United States. Business, labor and agriculture, he declared, had supported him. His success, he said, should be also the success of the country, if his ability and endeavor could make it so.

"Please say that I am perfectly healthy, but tired," was the message Taft wished uttered for him last night. With Mrs. Taft he enjoyed the hospitality of the C. P. Taft family yesterday, going forth only once, and then to receive the plaudits of thousands of his fellow-townsmen as they lined the streets and filled the windows for blocks in the line of march of the parade of the Woodward high school pupils, faculty and trustees.

Mr. Taft made the principal address at the cornerstone laying of the new building of this school, from which he graduated when a boy. The function gave the city an opportunity to pay its first daylight tribute to the president-elect and full advantage was taken of it. Taft did not refer to the election or politics in his brief address, but confined himself to the history of the school, which held for him many fond memories.

A speech to the Women's Foreign Mission society of the Methodist Episcopal church, in annual session here today, and a banquet of the Cincinnati Commercial club tonight constitute the public functions which will occupy Taft before he leaves for Hot Springs, Va., Friday.

"I am going away for a complete rest for at least two weeks," said Taft. "I am not going to hold political conferences, neither am I going to consider cabinet construction, nor political appointments during this time. It is to be a period of as near rest and quiet as I can make it."

Bryan's Consolation

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 5.—While not caring to discuss at this time the political effect of the Democratic victory in his home state or analyze the cause, William J. Bryan, in an informal talk to a number of friends who called on him, expressed his pleasure at the result in Nebraska and the satisfaction afforded him to learn of the election of so many of his political and personal friends.

A delegation from Lincoln visited Bryan at Fairview to express to him their confidence and devotion and to assure him that such was the sentiment of a majority of the people of his city and state. Bryan, in responding, said:

"I am highly gratified over the results in this state. The national defeat has not been such a disappointment when we have had so many things to console us. I hope I have convinced my friends that running for office has only been an incident to my work. My heart has never been set on holding office, but I wanted to do certain works and it looked as though the presidency might offer the opportunity to do that work. I am sure that in private life I can have the chance to do something. One is not required to hold office in order to do big things; one is simply required to do those things within his reach, and that much is within the reach of each of us.

"Personally, I shall find as much joy being out of office as I would be in office. I hope still to be of influence to bring about needed reforms. I appreciate very much the confidence and loyalty of the people near us. It has been the greatest comfort that the election has given us. The fact that those among whom we live have shown this confidence we appreciate more than I can tell you. It has been very kind in you to come out here and visit us on this day."

The defeat he sustained did not weigh heavily on Bryan. He has no other immediate plans than to rest at home following his canvass.

Confidence In Taft

Berlin, Nov. 5.—The newspapers generally greet the election of Mr. Taft with satisfaction, and those read by well-informed commercial classes publish eulogistic reviews of his career, with expressions of confidence in the coming administration.

Paris, Nov. 5.—The published comments on the American election are brief, but they are all favorable. That Mr. Taft's election means the continuation of the policies of President Roosevelt, but in a less strenuous manner, is the general opinion.

London, Nov. 5.—The London papers testify to what they term the wisdom of the American people in choosing an eminently "safe" man of tried administrative capacity for their new president—one who will continue the Roosevelt policy.

The Mothers' and Teachers' association of BROOKLINE meet at the Harvard church on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. E. S. Tead spoke on "The Essentials of a Christian home."

The Wampatuck club of HINGHAM kept open house the night of election and received the returns. Ex Gov. John D. Long spent a part of the evening at the club.

The Business Men's Association of NORWOOD meet in Odd Fellows' hall Tuesday evening and received election returns John Guild and Cornelius M. Callahan spoke.

Metropolitan lodge I. O. O. F. of HYDE PARK held its meeting in Central Hall on Tuesday evening. The second degree was conferred on five candidates and the fourth degree on two. It was voted to celebrate the tenth anniversary with a banquet Nov. 17.

The Evangelical Congregational church of NEEDHAM held a musicale last night in the church. The program was very pleasing.

RECOUNT PETITION.

Papers are being circulated in every ward of the city asking for a recount of the votes cast on Tuesday for Congressman from the Tenth district. The recount will probably be held Saturday evening. As a rule the election officers of Quincy make but few mistakes, and but little change from the returns made by the election officers is expected.

—The city of Gloucester voted to adopt the new plan for city government by commission as outlined in the charter presented to the voters, by a plurality of 362.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

SOCIETY EVENT

Pretty Party At Dance of The Quincy Catholic Club

The social season of the winter of 1908 was inaugurated Thursday evening by the Quincy Catholic Club, when a dancing party was held in Music hall in the aid of charity. It was one of the prettiest and most select parties ever held at Music hall, the ladies being dressed in fancy evening gowns and the men in evening clothes. The hall was beautifully decorated with flags and bunting, and the strains of Cuff's orchestra poured forth upon the merry dancers from behind a mass of potted palms which covered the stage.

There was a brief concert from 8 to 8.45 and then dancing was enjoyed until 12. There was a mixture of square dances and fancy dances, for young and old held forth, and young and old mingled with each other so that every one had a good time.

The floor was in charge of John W. Walsh, and he was assisted by the following aids, who also acted as ushers: C. C. Hearn, T. J. O'Connell, D. J. Deasy, L. J. McMaster, G. B. Gavin, L. W. Lyons, W. L. Russell, W. J. Biganess, T. J. Dunphy, T. J. Carey, J. A. Dasha, J. J. Deasy, R. E. McDonnell, E. L. Bean.

There were about 150 couples on the floor, and a large number in the balcony, who, not wishing to dance, simply came to watch the terpsichorean artists trip the light fantastic. It was a representative gathering of Quincy Catholic society, all parts of the city being represented.

During the first part of the evening the officers and directors of the club received the guests, being stationed in the corner of the hall at the right of the platform.

Among the well known guests present were, Rev. John J. Coan, Mayor William T. Shea, Representative Rednor P. Coombs, Edward J. Parker, Mrs. Richard A. Lynch, president of the Ladies' Aid, Daly Industrial Home, Miss Julia Dolan, treasurer of the same society; and Mrs. Mary McCartly, president of the Ladies' Catholic Club of Boston.

The patrons were prominent Quincy gentlemen representing all walks of life, viz: Hon. William T. Shea, John W. McAnarney, Thomas H. McDonnell, Henry McGrath, John H. Dinegan, Eugene W. O'Connor, John Cavanagh, Dr. George M. Sheahan, Edward J. Parker, Dr. Daniel B. Reardon, John Nolan, Dr. James H. Maloney, Dr. C. J. Lynch, Frank F. O'Reilly, Timothy J. Collins, Dr. J. P. Murphy, J. J. McAnarney, Michael T. Sullivan, John Golden, Robert E. Foy, John Heaney, John Lyons, John Mahon, John O'Hara, John Harkins, Joseph D. Griffin, Michael T. Walsh, Maurice P. Spillane, D. J. S. McCurdy, E. J. Dunn.

The Quincy Catholic Club while it is primarily designed as a charitable society, has also the object of promoting sociability among its members and among Catholics in general. It is composed of ladies connected with St. John's church and was organized about a year ago. Last May their first dancing party was held, and it was an unqualified success. This year's success surpassed that of last May, if possible, and is due to united efforts of the officers and directors. These are Miss Mary L. Gavin, president; Miss Eliza C. Sheahan, vice president; Miss Agnes M. Deasy, recording secretary; Miss Sarah Dunphy, financial secretary; Mrs. Daniel J. Deasy, treasurer; Mrs. Joseph A. Dasha, Miss Sarah Mundy, Mrs. T. J. O'Connell, Mrs. John Lyons and Mrs. W. L. Russell, directors.

Ices were served during the evening by Miss Margaret Ford, Miss Esther Dasha, and Miss Margaret Brown.

Buggy Harness For E. J. Sandberg

Ex-Representative Edward J. Sandberg was tendered a surprise party Thursday evening by a large party of his lady and gentlemen friends. The affair was held at Electa hall, and proved to be most enjoyable. During the early part of the evening Mr. Sandberg was presented with a handsome buggy harness. The presentation speech was made by ex-Representative Harry S. Nicol, and Mr. Sandberg responded, speaking in his usual happy vein.

After the presentation, dancing was in order. Refreshments were served during the evening.

Plans For The Launching

On the day of the launch of the battleship North Dakota, November 10, yard admission to view the launching will be by red ticket only and through the Hospital gate only, on Howard avenue at the lower end. This applies not only to the general public, but to the friends of the company's employes, friends of the government employes, and friends of the employes of the Electric Boat Company.

The company's employes themselves or employes of the government offices or the Electric Boat Co. may view the launch from any part of the yard they wish, but they will not be allowed to bring friends into the yard except through the Hospital gate and by ticket.

It is desired that entrance to the yard for those holding tickets to the launching platform be exclusively through the pattern storage gate, which is the gate about half way down Howard avenue.

The launch for all visitors with red tickets must be witnessed from the south side of the battleship slip where the company has provided a clear and open space and where the launch can be viewed to the best advantage.

Safety requires that all visitors remain back of the fence until after the vessel is in the water. If they then desire to visit the yard the gate through the temporary fence erected will be thrown open for that purpose, although all shops will be closed, and it is requested that no visitors be taken inside the shops on that date.

Those having friends to witness the launch and visiting the yard afterward are requested to leave the yard not later than one hour after the launch.

On November 10, the day of the launch of the North Dakota, work will start as usual in the morning, except as interfered with by men detailed on the launching and except for the fact that no S department men, except test gangs and others concerned in the launching will work on the North Dakota at all that day. The yard whistle will blow at 11.30 A. M., and there will be no further work in the yard on that day.

It is expected that George M. Corliss of the A department, candidate for the Republican nomination of councilman in Ward Two, will poll a heavy vote at the caucuses on Tuesday next.

Barge Asland is discharging a cargo of coal at the company's coal wharf.

Midnight Fire In Business Section

The alarm from Box 35 at 12.05 this morning, called the department to a stubborn fire in the rear of Plumer's hall block on Hancock street. The fire started in a blind stairway leading from the rear of the store of William St. Pierre to the basement. It had made good headway when discovered and it was fortunate that it was discovered early. Had the fire had ten minutes more headway the whole building would probably have been doomed.

The fire made a dense smoke that penetrated every part of the building, and into the hall above, where it did considerable damage. Lines of hose were laid from the hydrant at the corner of Hancock street and Revere road, and carried through the front of the building, and the firemen were soon able to drown it out.

The firemen found a lot of old hay at the head of the stairs, and the air was penetrated with a kerosene oil smell. Chief Williams has not as yet determined the cause of the fire, but will make an investigation. He estimates the loss at $500, largely due to smoke.

Roxbury Bride Wollaston Groom

John Pratt Bainbridge youngest son of Mrs. Alice Bainbridge of Wollaston, and Miss Mabel Foster, daughter of Mr. Albert J. Foster president of the People's National bank of Roxbury, were united in marriage on Monday evening at the home of the bride, 41 Winthrop street, Roxbury.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Edward Anderson of Quincy. Miss Agnes Foster of New York, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and Philip M. Bainbridge of Brooklyn, N. Y., a cousin of the groom acted as his best man.

Following the ceremony there was a large reception, attended by several hundred guests from greater Boston, New York and the western states. There was a display of many and very beautiful presents.

After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Bainbridge will reside in Cambridge.

Mr. Brainbridge is note teller at the People's National bank and was at one time connected with the Mount Wollaston bank in this city and well known here.

Legality Questioned On Schoolhouse Loan

The City Treasurer was up against a snag when he attempted to borrow money for the addition to the Lincoln school building.

The City Charter provides that no money shall be appropriated for a school building until the plans have been approved by the School Committee. In this case the School Committee sent a letter to the City Council committee on Public Buildings approving the sketches of Charles A. Brigham, also stating that the complete plans and specifications would probably be approved when ready.

This has always been the method of procedure, as the architect never makes complete detailed drawings until the order appropriating the money has been passed.

The counsel of the bankers, with whom the loan was to be placed, turned the loan down, as the letter from the School Committee did not read "plans" instead of "sketches," claiming that under the city charter the order was illegal. It would seem, therefore, that a new order appropriating money for the addition would have to be passed.

MILTON.

The birthday party Monday evening under the auspices of the Mission of Our Saviour church was a very enjoyable affair. There was a short entertainment. This was followed by refreshments and a social hour.

The memorial service to the late Rev. F. W. Fitzgerald at the Mission church Sunday evening was largely attended. Rev. Mr. Fitzgerald was formerly lay reader at the church, afterward going to China where he died.

J. E. Quimby has gone to Pinehurst for the winter, where he represents the American soda fountain company. Mrs. Quimby, who is at present the guest of her mother at Worcester, will join him later.

Mrs. Fautau dropped dead Wednesday at her home off Squantum street. Her death was due to heart failure.

The Selectmen will probably call a special meeting at an early date to take action on removing that old freight car at East Milton which is doing duty as a freight house. There is a promise in the air, made nearly two years ago, to move the car, but it has never been fulfilled. The Selectmen will probably take the matter before the railroad commissioners.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Sheldon have gone to New York on a brief trip.

BLOW TO LIQUOR TRADE.

Providence, R. I., has probably received more or less interstate liquor trade from Quincy as well as other no-license cities. A Providence dispatch of Wednesday to a Boston paper will be of interest:

The police commissioners today hit the liquor trade here the hardest blow in its history, wiping out as liquor dealers at one stroke 156 licensed places, including all of the department stores that sell liquor and 12 wholesalers.

The move vitally affects many no-license towns in Massachusetts, which have been supplied by wholesalers from Providence under the interstate commerce laws that Massachusetts laws have been powerless to oppose.

More than any other city in Massachusetts Worcester is affected, for many of the wholesalers had agencies there, operating under the federal laws and Massachusetts express charters. To aid Worcester in its effort to keep liquor out of its confines, the commissioners have taken the licenses away from all those firms that sold goods there.

No such liquor crusade has ever before been inaugurated in Providence and the city is stirred to its depths. The police commissioners acted under the law passed at the January session of the Legislature, which limited the number of licenses to one in every 500 of the population.

All of the larger department stores had wine departments, where liquors were sold in packages. For the best interests of the city the commissioners decided that these stores could very well dispense with these departments, and notice was, therefore, served on them that they must eliminate them.

Whether complaint was made from Worcester or whether aid was secretly asked for Worcester in its no-license battle, is not known, but it is generally believed here that the Worcester cold water advocates conferred with the Providence officials and secured their assistance. At any rate, when the list of those who lose their licenses was announced today it contained the name of every firm that has attempted to do an interstate business.

Providence began nearly two years ago to shake off the name it had borne for so many years as a "wide-open" town, and when the law was passed it was expected that some such action as has been taken today would be taken, but it was not known when the commissioners would act or against whom. Some of the largest firms in the city are affected and will be compelled to close immediately.

OFFICIAL LIST

Democratic Contest For Mayor But E. R. Stone Has a Walkover

The list of candidates to be voted for at the Municipal caucuses next Tuesday, with the exception of ward committees, are published in the Daily Ledger today.

On the Democratic ticket there are two candidates for Mayor, namely William T. Shea and George H. Wilson. But one candidate is seeking nomination for Councilman at large or for School Committee at large. Wards One and Five have no candidate for Ward councilman, Ward Two has four, Ward Three has two, Ward Four has four, and Ward Six has one. There is no candidate for School Committee from Ward Six.

There was more or less talk at the time of filing nomination papers about the legality of the papers of George H. Wilson for Mayor, but as his name appears on the ballot the papers were probably corrected.

On the Republican ticket full nominations for every office are made except Councilmen from Ward Four. No nominations were made there.

There is but one candidate for Mayor, Eugene R. Stone, who is the nominee. There are rival candidates for School Committee at large. There are also seven candidates for Councilman at large for the five places.

Ward One has five candidates for the Council, Ward Two has four, Ward Three has seven, Ward Five has four, and Ward Six three. There are also two candidates for School Committee from Ward Six.

Active Campaign For No-License

A well attended meeting of the Citizens No-License League was held Monday evening in the office of R. D. Chase, Savings Bank building. President George A. Sidelinger presided. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—George A. Sidelinger.
Vice President—William F. Cummings.
Treasurer—Wendell H. Hull.
Secretary—Arthur W. Hall.

Provision was made for committees to solicit funds, to distribute no-license literature, to arrange for rallies in each of the wards, and for the usual large rally at Music hall, and to manage an active campaign to secure a large "No" vote.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

Winter begins Dec. 22.

The days are now about ten hours long; sunrise at 6.24; sunset at 4.32.

The public schools were closed today because of the Norfolk county teachers' convention.

Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton of Elm avenue entertained a party of friends from Boston Hallowe'en night.

Hearing on separation of the grades at Water and Saville street, tomorrow morning at City Hall at 10 o'clock.

The special committee of the City Council and Selectmen of Milton are perambulating the Quincy and Milton boundary line today.

Ice forms nearly every night, a reminder that there is a long cold winter before us. The mercury goes quite low every night as it is in the twenties at sunrise.

In those parts of the city which have three deliveries of the mail daily, both afternoon deliveries are now one hour later, which should give better service, as letters arriving late in the afternoon will be delivered that day.

Mrs. John Crossley of Old Colony avenue, who went to the Homoeopathic hospital last week, where a serious operation was performed, is holding her own, and friends hope soon to hear that she is convalescing.

The City Flower store and Wheeler's dry goods store are attracting much attention. Nothing in the way of remodeling and making an old building up-to-date has given better results. The building is an ornament to City Square.

Arthur B. Hultman, who is a candidate for nomination for Councilman from Ward Two, advocates among other things strengthening the police protection in the Point district. He is also in favor of the proposed extension of the street railway tracks for the Fore River employees, through Chubbuck street and Des Moines road, so that the public generally may have the benefit of it as well as the employees of the company.

A SPLIT VOTE IN MARYLAND

State Is Claimed by the Leaders of Both Parties

MISSOURI IN THE TAFT COLUMN

Latest Figures Show 319 Republican Electors and 156 Democratic--The Hopes of Socialists, Prohibitionists and Independence Party Not Realized--Hannon, For Governor, the Only Democrat to Win In Ohio

New York, Nov. 6.—The general membership of the electoral college which will choose the next President of the United States yet remained uncertain when the official canvassers in Maryland abandoned their task last night. According to the best information obtainable the proportionate number of Republican and Democratic electors will be determined by a division of Maryland's eight votes. Half of the city of Baltimore and two of the twenty-three counties outside of that city are still to be counted, but there is a strong indication that the state's vote will be split. In any event the margin of victory will be so small that the state is claimed by the leaders of both parties. The indications are that seven Bryan and one Taft elector have been chosen.

Though the splitting of a state's electoral vote is unusual, it will be recalled that in 1904 Maryland elected one Republican and seven Democratic electors.

Missouri appears to be safely for Taft, to whom the latest returns give a plurality of 300, with the prospects that the few districts to be heard from will double or triple these figures.

Conceding Missouri to Taft and leaving Maryland to be split between him and Bryan, the figures show 319 Republican electors assured and 156 Democratic.

Latest congressional returns indicate that the next congress will be composed of 216 Republicans and 175 Democrats, a majority for the Republicans of 41.

In regard to the votes of the minor parties—Socialist, Prohibition and Independence parties—it appears that the Socialists are disappointed in their widely avowed expectations of casting a "million for Debs," and in some states have even fallen below their vote of four years ago. In general, however, their vote showed a material increase.

As for the Prohibition vote its totals present a great disappointment to those who expected that the "prohibition wave" which has swept a number of states and hundreds of localities into the "dry" column during the past two years would show surprising increases in the vote of the party which makes legal prohibition of the liquor traffic its chief issue.

THE FIGHT OF HIS LIFE

Cannon Will Not Secure the Speakership Without Opposition

Washington, Nov. 6.—The organization of the new house of representatives, which must be effected soon after March 4 if President-elect Taft adheres to his promise to convene congress in special session for revision of the tariff, is already on the minds of the next Republican members-elect.

That there is to be a determined effort to defeat Joseph G. Cannon for re-election to the speakership is well understood. Cannon's friends here are saying that he undoubtedly faces the fight of his life. Several men are expected officially to announce their candidacies for the speakership within the next few days, and if they come along with such announcements the house cannot be expected to do much at the coming short session except "log roll" over the speakership and pass the appropriation bills.

Charles N. Fowler of New Jersey, who has been chairman of the committee on banking and currency for some years, is the first of the ambitious members-elect to announce his candidacy against Cannon.

There has been more or less talk since last spring to the effect that Mr. Taft, if elected president, would quietly exercise his influence against the re-election of Cannon as speaker. An impression has prevailed that he would favor Theodore E. Burton of Cleveland for the place. Charles E. Townsend of Michigan will, his friends say, be a candidate for the speakership. Weeks ago he sent letters to a large number of his friends among the Republican candidates who were likely to be elected soliciting support.

Some fifteen or twenty Republican nominees in the northwest and trans-Mississippi states were compelled to promise their constituents before election that they would oppose the nomination of Cannon for speaker by the Republican caucus. It may turn out that they will have a candidate of their own from that section of the country.

It is evident that even if Cannon obtains in advance pledges enough to assure his re-election as speaker there will be a determined effort to force a revision of the rules of the house. The sentiment in favor of shearing the speaker and the committee on rules of some of the arbitrary popwer now exercised has grown rapidly within the last six months.

Judson Harmon's Distinction

Cincinnati, Nov. 6.—At Tuesday's election Ohio polled a vote that surpasses the million ballots deposited four years ago, making a new high record for Ohio voters. Enough was known early Tuesday night to make it evident that the Republicans had given a heavy plurality for Taft, and Harmon (Dem.) had won for governor, but exact figures were slow in coming in. The big ballot which had compelled the making of special boxes and some increases in the booths was in part responsible for this slowness, but the large number of Taft-Harmon votes cast caused much of the difficulty.

Taft carried Ohio by probably over 70,000, while Harmon won by about 20,000. Such figures as have been received on minor candidates indicate the probable victory of all other Republicans on the state ticket. The Republicans are also believed to have carried the legislature.

Honesty Has Nothing to Fear

Cincinnati, Nov. 6.—Speaking last night to the Cincinnati Commercial club, of which he has been a member for fifteen years, William H. Taft brought every member of the club to his feet in an address sounding the keynote of prosperity for the country for the next four years.

"Every business man who is obeying the law may go ahead with all the energy in his possession; every enterprise which is within the statutes may proceed without fear of interference from the administration when acting legally, but all interests within the jurisdiction of the federal government may expect a rigid enforcement of the law against dishonest methods," was what Taft said.

Republican Majority In Congress

Chicago, Nov. 6.—The Republican party, will, according to present returns from all congressional districts in the United States, control the next national house of representatives by a majority of forty-one. The figures so far received show the election of 216 Republicans and 175 Democrats, a gain for the latter party of nine. The majorities in several districts are reported as extremely close and it is supposed that in a few instances the official count may change the figures given above.

Bryan Congratulates Taft

Cincinnati, Nov. 6.—"Please accept congratulations and best wishes for the success of your administration. W. J. Bryan."

"I thank you sincerely for your cordial and courteous telegram of congratulation and good wishes. William H. Taft."

Sherman's Campaign Expenses

Utica, N. Y., Nov. 6.—Vice President-elect Sherman forwarded to Albany, for filing with the secretary of state, a statement of his expenses in the campaign just closed. The statement shows that his total expenses were $2800.

Van Dyck Pays $10,000 Fine

Washington, Nov. 6.—Edwin M. Van Dyck, former ink expert of the bureau of engraving and printing who, with Victor G. Bloede, president of the Victor G. Bloede company of Baltimore, was charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States in connection with certain ink contracts with the bureau, entered a plea of guilty in two counts of the indictment. Justice Gould fined Van Dyck $10,000, which was double the amount imposed on Bloede recently for his share in the affair, because Van Dyck was a government employe. Van Dyck paid the fine and the two remaining counts of the indictment were then dismissed.

Wilbur Wright Honored

Paris, Nov. 6.—Frenchmen united last evening in honoring Wilbur Wright, the American aeroplanist, whose remarkable achievements in this country have placed him in the forefront of the distinguished men who have been solving the problem of the air. Wright was the guest of honor at the dinner of the Aero Club of France, at which Minister of Public Works Barthou presided, and the occasion was made memorable by the presentation to him of the Aero club's gold medal and the special medal of the academy of sports.

King Acquitted of Murder

Worcester, Mass., Nov. 6.—A verdict of not guilty of murder was returned by a jury in the case of Arthur L. King, who was charged with the murder of Aide G. Azeen, an Armenian pedler. King's counsel entered a plea of self-defense. It was alleged that Azeen had attempted to assault Mrs. Margaret Clements at her home in Clinton and that King went to the assistance of the woman. Azeen is said to have drawn a razor and cut King on the hand, whereupon King fired the fatal shot.

Locomotives In Collision

Andover, Mass., Nov. 6.—A local passenger train from Lawrence and Andover for Lowell collided with a locomotive which was just leaving the roundhouse at Lowell Junction, smashing both locomotives. Joseph W. Wheatley suffered a scalp wound which required surgical treatment. Other passengers suffered from bruises and slight cuts caused by their sudden contact with the backs of seats and by showers of glass from broken windows in the cars.

REST AND RETIREMENT

Eliot Will Enjoy Life While Health and Faculties Remain Good

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 6.—In an informal talk to a large gathering of Harvard students who serenaded him at his residence last night, following a football mass meeting, President Charles W. Eliot discussed his resignation and spoke also regarding the selection of his successor.

"I have heard a number of reasons suggested as the explanation of my resigning," said Eliot. "Now I am not sick. I am not tired and I am in good health so far as I am aware. My faculties and help are still good, I am glad to say. My resignation is meant to precede the time when they may cease to be so.

"When a man has reached the age of 75 it is time to look for rest and retirement. Dr. Arnold of Rugby used to say that a man was no longer fitted to be head master of a public school when he could no longer go up two steps at a time. Now I can still do that.

"I do not like to have my coming retirement spoken of with regret. It is touching to find that feeling, but I think it is something to be looked forward to with hope. We must all set to work to find some young, able, active man to carry this university to a higher plane than it now occupies. It has been the foremost American university for 270 years.

"The occupation which has been mine for a lifetime has been a most pleasant one, and I regret that it is about to terminate. Forty years of service has been given me in the pursuance of a profession that has no equal in the world. This university has grown into great proportions. It is now the task of all of us to find a man who can enlarge it still more and make it still greater. We shall find him."

After Eliot had retired indoors with a "good night," the students sang "Fair Harvard." In the midst of the song the president reappeared on the porch and joined in the singing, after which he again said "good night" and withdrew.

STEAMER QUICKLY WENT TO BOTTOM

Big Freighter and Her Cargo Are a Total Loss

New York, Nov. 6.—Freight steamer H. M. Whitney of the Metropolitan steamship line was sunk last night in the East river while on her way to Boston. The vessel, valued at $500,000, is a total loss and it is not believed that any of her cargo, valued at $300,000, can be recovered.

In trying to avoid collision with a tug and several scows the steamer collided with Steep rock. A great hole was made below the water line. The inrush of water was so rapid that in less than a minute the fires were put out and nine stokers who were in the engine room had to flee for their lives.

An effort was made to beach the steamer on the Sunken Meadows, but this had to be abandoned. The crew escaped in lifeboats. As they were rowing away the freighter went down in ten fathoms of water.

Last winter the H. M. Whitney met with an accident at almost the same place, striking table rock, further up the river. That time, although a hole was made in the steamer, she did not sink, but rested on the rocks. It took two weeks to get her off and then it cost $125,000 for repairs, the harbor police say.

The H. M. Whitney was built in 1890. She had a length over all of 271.8 feet and her gross tonnage was 2706.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Attorney General McCarter of New Jersey has tendered his resignation to Governor Fort. He gives press of private business as his reason for resigning.

Professor Otis T. Mason, head curator of the department of anthropology of the National Museum at Washington, died at that city as a result of paralysis. He was 70 years old and a native of Eastport, Me.

Mme. Emma Calve, the grand opera star, is prostrated by illness at Pittsburg. She has been suffering from grip and to this her collapse is attributed.

Calvin W. Miller, a lineman, was electrocuted while at work among high-tension wires near Framingham, Mass.

Pensions for retired missionaries were provided for in the closing session of the Women's Foreign Missionary society of the Methodist Episcopal church.

The Union Telephone and Telegraph company, having a telephone system in Rock Island and Moline, Ills., and Davenport, Ia., and capitalized at $550,000, has gone into the hands of a receiver.

It is said that, following the successful maneuvers of the American navy, the British government is planning to send a fleet of warships around the world.

Statistics with reference to registration in the various departments of Yale university show the total to be 3448, the largest registration in the history of the university.

Seven laborers were killed on the Grand Trunk Pacific, twenty miles east of Winnipeg.

Chapter II

It is the day after, and I have been scribbling down in a hurry all the things that happened to me in Newport meanwhile, for somehow most things have seemed to lead up to that.

I knew no more than anybody outside about the mystery of the maze and Aladdin's cave. The secret was wonderfully kept, although there was a constant undertone of excitement running through the house for days beforehand, and an army of workmen were busy in "the grounds," as every one calls them, first putting up a gigantic marquee and then working inside it. One man told Mrs. Ess Kay that he had been offered a hundred dollars by a New York newspaper to tell what was the nature of his work at the Moorings, but either the bribe wasn't enough or else he was impeccable.

All under the house runs a great cellar. I knew this from the first, because one broiling hot day soon after I came Sally took me down to get cool after I had dressed for somebody's "at home" and looked like a freshly boiled lobster. It's a series of rooms, perfectly ventilated, with rough walls and cemented floors. One of the rooms is of enormous size, and there are stone pillars dotted about here and there for supports. There is one other that is rather large, but the rest are small. One is used as if it were an icehouse. There are others for wine, and there are some storerooms. For a week before the great affair men were working down there all day and toward the last far into the night. Big boxes and bales were lugged downstairs and didn't come up again. Not a hint went around of what was going on, but I was sure that Aladdin's cave was in mysterious process of manufacture.

There seemed quite a pressure on the atmosphere for days at the Moorings, except in Sally Woodburn's rooms, for I've noticed that she is never excited by social events. They seem of little real importance to her, I suppose, compared with the past, which she has always in her thoughts. When I was with her I felt calmer, but with others or when I was alone (which seldom happened for more than ten minutes at a stretch) I was as much excited as anybody. Partly it may have been the effect of climate, for the air in America certainly does make you feel always as if something wonderful was going to happen to you around the next corner, and partly it was the effect of Potter.

Potter was most disturbing and is still, for that matter. He has the air of feeling that he, and he alone, has a right to me, and it's quite a lesson in tact keeping the peace between him and other men who feel it their Christian duty to be a little nice to a young foreigner.

But I am thinking now of the time before the great affair. It really was a strain wondering what it would be like and whether it would be a grand success or whether it would fall short of all the brilliant expectations when the mystery would be revealed.

At last the night came. The invitations were for 10 o'clock, and people could not resist the temptation to come soon after the hour and begin. Mrs. Ess Kay stood in the early English drawing room (that's the style it's furnished in, or she believes it is) receiving without a mask and dressed to represent Queen Margaret of Navarre, from whom she says that she is descended. She had another dress to put on afterward, so that none of the guests would recognize her and she could have fun with the rest, but no one knew about that except Sally and Potter and me.

We others didn't appear at first, because we had no costumes to change with, but by and by, when a lot of people had arrived, we mingled with them.

As soon as any one came in Mrs. Ess Kay would say, "How do you do, my Lord of Leicester, or my noble George Washington," or whatever the person might be trying to be. "So glad to see you. You must go and have a look at the maze. Do you know how to find it? Just through that curtain. You can't miss the way."

Then the gorgeous masker would cross the hall and disappear behind a great curtain of tapestry that covered an open doorway leading to the garden. But he hadn't to go out of doors. A canvas covered, winding passage took him to the vast marquee, which was, of course, the maze. But why it was the maze and what happened to you in the maze after you had got in I didn't know any more than the outsiders. That was the fun of it for me, of course, and it really was fun.

Sally had only taken enough pains about her dress to save annoying Mrs. Ess Kay. She was a White Carmelite, with a veil over her face instead of a mask. But Potter had made a tremendous fuss about himself. He was Flame, which he said was appropriate in the circumstances, as he had got so used to playing Fire to my Frost he felt quite at home in the character. And he was very magnificent. He had designed the costume himself, for he fancies himself at that sort of thing, and my white sparkling robes and his scarlet satin and carbuncle embroidery and copper and gold fringes did look rather effective side by side.

He made that an excuse for insisting that I should go with him into the maze, although a tall Hamlet and a Henry V. of England both wanted to take me.

Potter whisked me away from them somehow, and we passed under the tapestry curtains while one of the two Hungarian bands Mrs. Ess Kay had hired played a waltz which made me long to dance.

"This way to the maze; this way to the maze," a man dressed like a beefeater was continually saying. He stood just outside the door, in a kind of canvas vestibule lined with greenery, so that it looked like the entrance to a bower.

The passage to the marquee had been made so beautiful that I couldn't help crying out to Potter with admiration. Not an inch of the canvas showed, for we walked through a sort of tunnel of roses all lit up with invisible electric lights. It was like the way to fairyland, and the floor was covered with a mat of artificial grass, like they have for stage lawns, Potter said.

I thought when we came to the end of the rose tunnel we should find ourselves in a big open space in the marquee, but when the tunnel stopped we were in a narrow alley between tall green bushes, set so thickly and so close together that we couldn't see what was on the other side. Above us, instead of the canvas roof of the marquee (which must have been over all), a violet mist seemed to float, with a very faint, soft light filtering through it, like blue moonlight. I suppose it must have been ever and ever so many thicknesses of blue gauze, with shaded lights hanging above, but the effect was mysterious and alluring.

We had only gone a little way when we arrived at a tiny house built apparently of red flowers, and there was a red light coming out of the one little window. "The Witch of the Woods Lives Here," said a card on the door.

We pushed, and inside was a room with a young woman in white, crystal gazing as hard as she could. She had also a velvet cushion on which you laid your hand, and she told your character and your fortune. Some people in historical dress were ready to come out just as we were going in, and one of them said: "It's Mme. Cortelyn. Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox must have given her at least $500 or she wouldn't have come a step."

We had our hands done, and the Witch of the Woods told me that I had come from "across the water," but that I would marry a man on this side, and then she saw some one in the crystal who looked so exactly like Potter Parker that I wished I had stopped outside her red house.

AS PREDICTED BY LAWYERS

Verdict of Guilty Returned In Case of Morse and Curtis

A MISAPPLICATION OF FUNDS

Both Men Convicted on That Charge, as Well as For Making False Entries In Books of Bank--Mercy of Court Is Recommended For Curtis--Locked Up, Pending Their Appearance For Sentence

New York, Nov. 6.—Charles W. Morse, until a year ago a dominant figure in the world of finance, and Alfred H. Curtis, former president of the National Bank of North America, were found guilty last night in the criminal branch of the United States circuit court on charges of misapplication of funds and falsifying the books of the bank. There was a charge of conspiracy against the prisoners, but the jury acquitted them on this count.

Within five minutes after the jury had rendered its verdict Judge Hough had refused to entertain a motion for bail and had committed the two bankers to the Tombs. Hough said that he would hear any motions the lawyers for the prisoners desire to make today. His decision made compulsory the incarceration of Morse and Curtis in cells in the prison until today.

The federal statutes provide a minimum penalty of five years' imprisonment for falsifying the books of a bank and a penalty of two years' imprisonment for misapplication of funds. No alternative but imprisonment is provided for conviction on the charge of falsifying the books of a bank. The maximum penalty on this charge is ten years' imprisonment.

The scene in the courtroom was a dramatic one. Mrs. Morse and Mrs. Curtis had remained in the courtroom nearly all day awaiting the verdict. Mrs. Curtis showed signs of giving way to her emotions a number of times, and once, when the jury returned to the courtroom to seek instructions about the manner in which the conspiracy charge should be considered, Mrs. Morse broke down and sobbed.

A large crowd had hurried into the courtroom to hear the verdict. Foreman Elder, responding to the customary question of the court clerk, read the verdict. Morse and Curtis stood before the jury while Elder was reading the verdict and their wives sat near them, leaning forward in tense attitudes to catch every word.

"We have agreed upon a verdict in the case of both defendants," said the foreman in a subdued voice. "On the charge of conspiracy we find them not guilty."

"On the charge of misapplication of the funds of the bank we find both defendants guilty. On the charge of making false entries in the books of the bank we find both defendants guilty. In the case of Alfred H. Curtis the jury wishes to make a strong recommendation to the mercy of the court."

A stifled sob of relief escaped Mrs. Curtis as she heard the recommendation for mercy for her husband. Curtis heard the verdict stoically, but Morse was unable to conceal the disappointment he felt. Mrs. Morse kept her eyes on her husband, forgetting herself and being concerned only on his account.

There was a momentary hush after the verdict had been read. This was broken by a buzz of excited conversation in the courtroom and a few minutes later the lawyers for the defendants were making the customary motions for a new trial, for bail and for permission to take an appeal to the circuit court of appeals.

Judge Hough said that he would hear the motions today, when the prisoners are arraigned before him to be sentenced. He then dismissed the jury, and in a very short time after the verdict had been rendered the courtroom had been cleared of spectators. Morse and Curtis were accompanied as far as the Tombs prison, several blocks away, by their wives. The prisoners were then locked up for the night.

There has been wide interest in the joint trial of Morse and Curtis on charges growing out of the failure of the National Bank of North America. It was brought out in the testimony that Morse made large loans from the bank through so-called "dummies" and that Curtis enabled him to do so. The money thus obtained was used to finance the Morse ice pools and steamship operations.

The feature of the trial was Morse's appearance on the stand. For a day and a half the financier occupied the witness chair and endeavored to explain the transactions which brought him to trial. The clever manner in which he parried the questions of the federal attorneys won him the admiration of the spectators. It had been confidently predicted by lawyers, however, that the jury would return a verdict of guilty.

Two Hundred Persons Drowned

Amoy, Nov. 6.—A small steamer, carrying 600 passengers from Amoy to Tungan, a few miles distant, sank last evening. Two hundred of the passengers were drowned, Chinese junks rescuing the others.

LA FRANCE SHOE FOR WOMEN

Very often we hear women say that their shoe troubles would be over if they could find a shoe that would look as well in daily wear as it does when they first see it and try it on in the store.

We advise every woman who has this feeling to find out about La France shoes. This shoe is not only one of unusual beauty and general merit, but it keeps its lines and looks shapely, graceful and beautiful long after ordinary shoes present a wrinkled, rundown and generally disreputable appearance.

The reason for this is in the quality of the materials used and the extremely skillful, workmanlike manner in which they are put together.

Every woman who sees these shoes and tries them on immediately becomes keenly interested in them. We would like to have you come in and let us interest you.

Are you troubled with foot discomfort? If so, ask to see the La France Flexible Welt—they are something new in an extremely elastic leather sole which adapts itself to every movement of the foot, and affords an amount of ease and comfort found in no other model.

Every Piano Buyer this fall should see the New Models of the

JEWETT PIANOS

Famous for Forty-Eight Years)

The progress of the Jewett piano has made notable changes in the piano situation. More Jewett pianos are probably sold in New England each year than of any other make of equal grade.

The growth in popularity of the Jewett is nothing short of marvelous. The reason for it can be found only in the wonderfully sweet, clear tone of this piano, its beautiful styles and excellent finish, and its great durability.

The new models are handsomer than any we have shown before. We recommend them as the best high grade pianos ever offered at these prices.

Uprights $375 to $450. Grands $650

Monthly payments accepted.

We have now in stock a large number

Second-Hand Pianos

Which we can sell at very low prices

If you want a good serviceable instrument at a very small expense it will pay you to see our rebuilt pianos. We can furnish used upright Pianos in excellent condition at one-half to one-third original prices—from say $150 up, and square Pianos at from $10 to $50.

And Time payments will be accepted.

List of Candidates for City Election

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

Nov. 8 will be Y. M. C. A. Sunday.

An old well established business is advertised for sale.

City caucuses next Tuesday to nominate candidates for Mayor, the City Council and the School Committee.

The lowest November noon temperature for twelve years was on Nov. 29, 1903, when the mercury stood at 22.

Edward W. Hearne, the State secretary, will speak Sunday morning at Bethany Congregational church.

A parish social under the auspices of the Galahad Brotherhood will be held at Christ church next Tuesday evening.

Mrs. George Sherwin of Clive street has returned from a pleasant visit spent with relatives in Fitchburg, Mass.

Gordon Sherwin of Clive street has accepted a position with the jewelers, Maynard and Potter on Boylston street.

Another opportunity Saturday night to get registered as a voter before the Municipal election. Registration will close next Wednesday night.

An inquest was held before Judge Avery this morning on the death of Charles Smith, a section hand who was killed by the cars at South Weymouth Oct. 22.

Miss Spear will direct a class in sight singing and voice cultivation from 7 to 8 P. M. in Colonial hall, on consecutive Thursdays except Dec. 24 and 31.

Lt. Col. Henry L. Kincaide, assistant inspector general, M. V. M., will address the Men's Club of Christ church next Monday evening on "The advantages of military training to young men."

The funeral of James C. Elcock was held this morning from St. Mary's church, and was largely attended. Mass was celebrated by Rev. William Duffy with music by the regular choir. The burial was at St. Mary's cemetery.

The electric light on Walker street once more shines out from a splendid new bulb which the electric company replaced Tuesday after a week of darkness on that particular corner. Judging from the penalty that awaits the culprits, no more bulbs will be broken in Atlantic for a while.

Atlantic polled a good vote Tuesday and nearly every citizen turned out to do his duty. Other wards had carriages and automobiles flying about carrying voters to the polls, but Ward Six came out with an unexpected weight and "shank's mare" was the only conveyance visible in the political foreground.

The Woman's Guild of Christ church will hold a parish reception in the parish house Saturday, November 14, at 7.30 P. M. at which the amount realized from the penny-a-day collection will be announced. All members of the parish and friends who have so generously contributed, and also all members of the several organizations are cordially invited to be present.

Grade Crossing Hearing Postponed

The hearing before the special commission appointed by the superior court to determine how the grades shall be separated at the Water and Saville street crossings of the railroad, adjourned until Saturday, has again been postponed. This time the postponement is at the request of the Commonwealth.

Word comes from ex-Governor Bates that the hearing will not go on. Both the city and railroad company are ready to proceed but the commonwealth is not, and the hearing will be adjourned until a later date.

Norfolk County And Vicinity

Miss Ruth E. Putney of MEDWAY was accidentally drowned Wednesday in a pond at Torrington, Ct. The girl was subject to fainting spells, and it is believed that while in one of these faints, she fell from the boat she was in.

Charles Cushing, aged 39, died Wednesday at his home in WEYMOUTH. Mr. Cushing was prominent in the fraternal organizations of the town, being an Odd Fellow and a Red Man.

Frederick Eddy, a well known resident of FOXBORO, is reported missing from his home. Mr. Eddy works in East Orleans, and left for that place Oct. 28, but has not been seen since.

Edward Fahey, aged 12, of RANDOLPH, was accidentally shot Wednesday with a shot gun. With his chum he was hunting in the woods and while climbing a cliff the gun was accidentally shot off, hitting the Fahey boy full force. He will recover.

SOCIABLE AT WOLLASTON.

The first sociable of the season was held in the vestry of the Wollaston Unitarian church on Thursday evening by the Ladies' Alliance. A harvest supper consisting of cold meats, escalloped potatoes, apple sauce, relishes, pie and coffee was served. The evening's entertainment was devoted to charades, acted by the young people and guessed by the audience. The vestry was appropriately decorated with pumpkins and autumn flowers.

SPECIAL OF CITY COUNCIL.

Mayor Shea has called a special meeting of the City Council for next Monday evening. There are four matters on the call. These are to act on an order appropriating money for additions to the Lincoln school building, to act on a loan order to provide funds for the Lincoln school addition, to act on the loan order for $1,150 and to receive the returns from the election of last Tuesday.

Free lessons in embroidery are being given every afternoon this week at Wadsworth's store and classes are being formed.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

CONTRACT NOT VIOLATED

Employes of Douglas Shoe Company Protest to the Union

Brockton, Mass., Nov. C.—Employes of the W. L. Douglas Shoe company held a mass meeting and appointed a committee of one from each department to go before the Brockton joint shoe council and open negotiations for a renewal of the contract between the Douglas company and the Boot and Shoe Workers' union.

The meeting was held in the vacant No. 1 factory of the concern and was attended by about 1500 of the 4000 employes of the company. All the speakers referred to the fact that the Douglas company has leased a factory in Springvale, Me., for five years, with a prospect that a portion of the company's business will be removed from this city.

In addition to the appointment of the committee to confer with the Brockton joint shoe council resolutions were adopted, taking the ground that the company has not violated its contract with the Boot and Shoe Workers' union, as claimed by the general officers of that organization. It was pointed out also that about 50 percent of the employes of the company are out of work and it was said that over 2000 of these had received notices from the company not to expect employment in the near future at least.

FRANCE DEMANDED GERMAN APOLOGY

New Proposal May Settle "the Casablanca Incident"

Paris, Nov. 6.—The belief is held here that France and Germany will speedily come to an understanding on the questions which have arisen over the arrest of German deserters by the French authorities at Casablanca, on which occasion, Germany charges, an official of the German consulate of that city was attacked.

During the early part of October Germany made representations to the French government on what is now known as "the Casablanca incident" and demanded that France make expression of regret for the occurrence. As the matter has been pushed to the front in the last few days, France transmitted to Germany a proposal which she felt could be accepted with good grace by both countries. Advices received from Berlin indicate that Chancellor Von Buelow looks favorably upon the proposal, and there seems to be little doubt now that an amicable agreement will soon be reached.

The Paris papers adopt a more optimistic view with regard to the situation. They believe that the crisis is past, and that, unless some unforseen complication arises, the settlement will not be long delayed.

Prince Von Radolin, the German ambassador to France, and Foreign Minister Pichon conferred together last evening and it is stated that their interview has materially advanced the work of finding a solution of the problem.

Will Employ Foreign Crews

Antwerp, Nov. 6.—Steamers Kroonland and Finland are in the future to fly the flag of Belgium. The Kroonland was transferred from the American to the Belgian flag yesterday and the same thing will be done with the Finland upon her arrival from New York. The Red Star company can thus employ foreign crews on these two vessels, the wages of foreigners being lower than those demanded by Americans.

Journey No. Without Danger

New York, Nov. 6.—Word of the safe arrival at Montevideo of the flotilla of United States lightships and tenders now on its way to waters of the Pacific was received by the United States lightship board at Staten Island. The voyage is one which presents elements of risk much greater than those under which the battleship fleet now on its round-the-world cruise traveled.

No Light on Dunham's Death

Augusta, Me., Nov. 6.—The coroner's jury held an inquest at Chelsea on the death of George Dunham, an inmate of the National Soldiers' home at Togus, whose body was found at his house on "Hayseed avenue" under suspicious circumstances. The jury found that Dunham came to his death "by violence at the hands of a party or parties to the jury unknown."

Transport Sheridan's Cargo

San Francisco, Nov. 6.—The United States army transport Sheridan sailed for Manila, via Honolulu and Guam, with 719 casual troops, 100 marines from Mare Island, 155 cabin passengers, Filipino currency valued at $6,000,000 and a full cargo of supplies, including a large shipment of turkeys, chickens and delicacies for Christmas.

Trains Collide at Boston

Boston, Nov. 6.—The Troy mail and Belmont local trains were in collision just outside the North station, the locomotive of the local crashing into the side of the in-bound train from Troy. About thirty passengers in the cars were badly shaken up, but no one was seriously hurt. The damage to the rolling stock was slight.

Bridge Needs Strengthening

New York, Nov. 6.—The reports of the engineers commissioned to look into the safety of the new Queensboro bridge, spanning the East river over Blackwell's island, show that the bridge is safe for foot and trolley travel, but that it must be strengthened before elevated railroad tracks are laid across it.

New Superintendent Wollaston Post Office

The Wollaston station of the Boston postal district has a new superintendent, who assumed his duties this morning. John H. McDougall, the assistant superintendent at the Quincy office, has been appointed in place of Martin H. Burns, who has been transferred to the Quincy office. Supt. McDougall entered the Quincy office over fifteen years ago as a special delivery messenger, and his advancement has been rapid. But it has been merited, as he has rendered faithful and efficient services. His salary is now $1,500.

DEATH OF MRS. C. P. DODGE.

Many Quincy people will be saddened by the intelligence of the death Thursday, in Winchester, of Mrs. Chester P. Dodge, at the age of 31. On Tuesday of last week a little girl was born to her, and though conditions at first were normal her state shortly became such as to cause her relatives grave apprehension. Earnest efforts were made to check the disease but without avail.

Mrs. Dodge was for some time a resident of Quincy, making her home with her sister, Mrs. A. E. Sproul. After graduating from our High school she began teaching in Beverly. Her marriage shortly followed, and for the past five years her home has been in Winchester. She leaves a husband and five children. The funeral will take place Saturday, to be followed by interment at Rockport, Mass.

The Social Realm

And autumn slow enters so silent and sallow,
And millions of warblers that charmed us before
Have fled in the train of the sun-seeking swallow,
The blue-bird, forsaken, yet true to his home,
Still lingers and looks for a milder to-morrow,
Till, forced by the horrors of winter to roam,
He sings his adieu in a low note of sorrow.

Members of the Krow Eldeen society of the South M. E. church showered Mr. and Mrs. Harry Porter of Randolph with linen, Tuesday evening. There were about twenty-five friends in the party and a general good time was in order. Ice cream, cake and fruit were served during the evening.

Mr. Arthur S. Wonson conductor of the Quincy Choral society was most cordially greeted by the members at their first rehearsal on Wednesday evening. Mrs. Wonson, who is one of the most popular of the young society matrons of Gloucester, was an interested guest. She is the possessor of a soprano voice of rare brilliancy and had consented to sing at the Quincy Women's club on Tuesday next, but was obliged to cancel the engagement on account of a cold. Her friends hope to hear her there however, before the season is over.

RECEPTION TO NEW RECTOR.

Rev. William E. Gardner, the new rector of St. James' Episcopal church, Cambridge, and Mrs. Gardner, were tendered a reception in the parish house Thursday evening, says the Transcript. In the receiving line were Joseph S. Burton, senior warden and Mrs. Burton; and Edwin T. Sheffield, junior warden, and Mrs. Sheffield. Those who poured were Mrs. C. D. Wilder, Mrs. J. B. Palmer, Mrs. J. E. Irvine and Mrs. William P. Richards. Fully four hundred parishioners and others attended, among them Dean George Hodges and Professor Edward S. Drown from the Episcopal Theological School; Rev. F. E. Marble, D. D., Rev. Daniel Evans, Rev. Louis DeCormis, D. D., Rev. Allen Jacobs and Rev. Charles L. Sleight, several of these being accompanied by their wives.

GRADE CROSSING HEARING.

Ex-Governor Bates and Senator Wellman, two of the special commissioners on the elimintion of the grade crossings at Water and Saville streets came to Quincy this morning. City Solicitor McAnarney was the only representative of the city present at the hearing.

Gov. Bates announced that the hearing was adjourned at the request of the Attorney General of the State. The date of the adjournment was fixed for Monday, Nov. 30.

HOSPITALS FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

The Massachusetts Commission on Hospitals for Consumptives has secured sites for the three hospitals it is to build. These three sites are at North Reading, Lakeville and Westfield. Each hospital will hold 150 patients. Ground has been broken for the North Reading, or Martin's Brook Sanatorium, which will be ready for occupancy next summer; plans are now being made for the hospital at Lakeville ,and work on the Westfield hospital will be taken up soon.

All this means that probably within a year there will be at the disposal of the state 450 beds for consumptives in addition to those already available at the State Sanatorium at Rutland and at the State Hospital at Tewksbury. It is of the utmost importance that each city and town throughout Massachusetts should have accurate knowledge of all cases of tuberculosis in each district, especially as regards those most dangerous advanced cases, which are such a menace to the health and life of a community.

It is the object of this commission to provide a place where such advanced and moderately advanced cases of consumption can be properly treated. It will be impossible to do this without the hearty cooperation and support of all cities and towns in Massachusetts, represented by local boards of health, the medical profession and anti-tuberculosis associations and committees.

OCTOBER WEATHER.

L. A. Wells of the Blue Hill observatory reports:

The weather of October was remarkable for its extremely high temperatures and for the lack of rain during the greater part of the month. The mean temperature of 55.3 degrees was 5.5 degrees higher than normal and the highest for October in 58 years, which is the length of the temperature record in Milton. Summer temperatures were experienced on several days and the thermometer rose above 80 degrees on four days. The highest recorded was 83 degrees on the 16th, while the lowest was 28 on the 31st.

The long drought of September continued until the 25th of October, but because of the heavy rains between the 25th and 30th, the total precipitation of 4.85 inches was .40 inch greater than the average amount for October and the largest for any month since December, 1907. With the exception of a light fall on the 11th, there was no rain from the 2d to the 25th, and the total amount for the year to date is now about seven inches below the normal.

October had less relative humidity than usual, less cloudiness and a decided excess of sunshine. There was about the usual amount of wind and the predominating direction was northwest. A brilliant aurora was seen on the evening of the 12th, and lightning occurred on the 26th and 27th.

HEAVY PERCENT

Over 88 Per Cent Of Quimcy Voters Visited The Polls On Tuesday

In the presidential election of 1908, the biggest vote in the history of the city was cast. It may be interesting to know which ward had the highest percent, and which had the fewest number of absentees at the polls.

Ward One, precinct one, took the lead in percent with 92 of the total registered vote. With a total of 507 voters in this district, only 39 were missing.

Although only 35 were absent in Ward Six, precinct two, still there are fewer voters in that district, so the percentage there was smaller.

Ward Two, precinct two, is a close second to the banner precinct of the city. Out of 471 voters, 431 came to the polls, which leaves 40 absentees and gives a percentage of 91.

Precinct one of this some ward does not rank with two, having only, 84 percent. But there are 63 less voters in precinct one and this accounts in part for the low percent.

Precinct two of Ward Four was the lowest of all with 83 percent. There are a large number of voters in this precinct, but they did not come out as they should.

The total number of absentees was 648 out of 5,693 voters, which gives a percent of 88 for the whole city. The percents in precinct one of Ward Two 84, and in precinct two, Ward Four, 83, bring the total percent down. If these two districts had the average percent of the other wards, the grand total percent would be over 90.

However 88 is a good percent and shows that lots of work was done in the different parts of the city.

The following summary shows the number of names on each precinct list, the number to vote in each precinct, the number of absentees in each precinct, and the percentage to vote in each precinct:

	On List	1908 Voted	Absent	Per cent
Ward One, Pre. 1,	507	468	39	92
Ward One, Pre 2,	638	570	68	89
Ward Two, Pre 1,	348	295	53	84
Ward Two, Pre 2,	471	431	40	91
Ward Three, Pre 1,	551	488	63	88
Ward Three, Pre 2,	452	396	56	87
Ward Four, Pre 1,	452	393	59	86
Ward Four, Pre 2,	487	409	78	83
Ward Five,	1005	896	109	87
Ward Six, Pre 1,	404	359	45	88

IN A PREDICAMENT.

Lawyer McKay is looking with blood in his eye, for the man who walked off with his new $3 derby, this morning, leaving in its place a derby that had done long and faithful service. What is worse still, the head piece left behind is too small. The derby disappeared from the district court room in somewhat mysterious manner.

A brother attorney offered him twenty-five cents to wear home an old straw that had been ornamenting the probation officer's room, but the fee was not large enough. Several of the officers, lawyers and newspaper men who were present offered valuable suggestions for the recovery of the missing head piece, but they were scornfully refused. A civil suit is apt to result if the derby does not turn up soon.

CALA DAY

Invite All Your Friends To Battleship Launching

Next Tuesday should be a gala day for Quincy, as thousands of people will be here to witness the launching of the largest battleship ever built in the United States. Quincy people should invite all their friends as there are many vantage points outside the shipyard where they may witness the launching.

For the safety of the thousands who will attend the launching of the North Dakota, all persons not holding launching stand tickets will be confined to the enclosure south of the ship. Admittance will be through the gate near the hospital on Howard avenue, which will be opened at 10.45.

Holders of tickets for the launching platform will be admitted through the gate on Howard avenue nearer the office building.

The vessel will be launched between 11.45 and 12 o'clock. It is possible that the yard will be policed by a company of marines from the Charlestown navy yard.

RECOUNT PETITIONS.

Petitions asking for a recount of the vote cast for Congressmen at the election last Tuesday were filed yesterday afternoon with City Clerk Keith by J. Mitchell Galvin. The recount will be held Monday morning. No change is looked for the Quincy vote.

Petitions asking for a recount were also filed by Congressman O'Connell. The registrars announce that the recount will be held Monday morning at City Hall at 8 o'clock.

AFTERNOON FIRE.

The alarm from Box 126 at 1.20 this afternoon was for a grass fire in the rear of the Brackett estate on Hancock street. The grass is very high there, and the fire was dangerously near the old stable. While the apparatus was there word was received of another grass fire off Granite street, and the Central station combination responded.

SPECTACULAR FIRE.

The alarm from Box 175 at 6.25 last night was for a very spectacular fire in the woods off Quincy avenue. While trees were ablaze from top to bottom making a very pretty sight.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Doremus, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

III—Lady Betty gets her first impression of America. On the dock she is rescued from reporters by the steerage hero, who tells her he is Jim Brett, employed at the Manhattan club, New York. In Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid New York home Betty meets Lieutenant Parker brother of the hostess, who is to take them to visit West Point.

IV—Vivace, a beautiful and expensive dog, is sent to Betty. Mrs. Ess Kay does not know who the donor is, and Betty does not tell her that it is Brett. Lieutenant Parker, whom Betty does not like, makes love to her.

V—Lady Betty has a good time at West Point despite Parker's proposal, which she rejects.

VI—In a walk in Central park Sally tells Betty her love story (she had been seperated years before from the poor man she loved by her family, the man becoming a monk) and advises Betty to marry only when she is sure of her love. They meet Brett.

VII—Betty is introduced to Mrs. Harvey Richmount Taylour, a typical young society woman.

VIII—At Newport Betty falls in love with Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid "cottage," the Moorings. Parker continues his attentions. Mrs. Ess Kay is chagrined on learning that Mrs. Van der Windt, Newport's leader, has planned to "cut" her and her acquaintance, Mrs. Pitchley. Mrs. Ess Kay relies on Lady Betty's presence to maintain her social prestige. She plans an entertainment to introduce Betty.

X—Mrs. Ess Kay plans a fancy dress ball, the features of which are to be Aladdin's cave and the Maze. An invitation is sent to Mohunsleigh's friend, Jameson B. Harborough, a new San Francisco millioniare. Betty is to appear as a frost sprite.

After this we kept losing ourselves in different green walled paths and suddenly coming on booths where variety entertainments were going on or funny cardboard pagodas, where celebrated Japanese artists did your portrait in five minutes on rice paper, or silk tents with conjuring shows. And there was a place where you fished in a small, round pond with magnets and caught little metal frogs with jewels in their heads, which you picked out. Farther on was a miniature eastern bazaar, where girls in gauze danced while you drank Turkish coffee and pushed spoonfuls of sherbet under the lace on your mask. And there was a cinematograph entertainment of a bull fight, which I wouldn't look at, and some martyrs being reluctantly eaten by lions, and Otero dancing.

All the masked people we met were enjoying themselves very much and saying this was the best thing for years. And it really was fun. But at last I thought we must have seen it all, and I wanted to go out. Besides, I was tired of being with Potter, who would be sentimental, though I begged him not.

"How do you propose to escape?" he asked. "This is a maze. The proper dodge in a maze is to be lost, and I am lost. So are you. We're lost together."

"But I want to be found now," said I. "We've been lost long enough There are lots of other things to do."

"And there's all night to do them in," said Potter. "I dare say we shall be lost for an hour or so yet. We've been wandering around from one path to another, and we've never seen the same thing twice, so perhaps there's a lot more to explore."

"You must know," I said. "It wasn't kept a secret from you as it was from me. You must have been through this maze heaps of times, and of course you know the way out."

"If I did I've forgotten it," Potter coolly remarked. Then he changed his tone. "You make me forget everything, Betty—everything but yourself."

"You're not to call me Betty!" I said crossly, for I was tired of having conversations like that. And I thought that I would be having much more fun with some one else, for what is the good of wearing a mask if you are only to talk with people you know?

"There's something else I'd a great deal sooner call you," he half whispered. "Come into this little dell where the fountain is and the orange trees, and let me tell you."

"I don't want to know," I said.

"Yes, you do. Come along, anyhow and I'll pick you an orange. Perhaps there'll be something nice inside it like there was in the toad's head."

I wasn't to be bribed in that way but he took hold of my hand and pulled, so that I had to go with him unless I wished to resist and be silly Several people were coming toward us around the twist of the path, and one tall man ahead of the others, dressed very plainly like a Puritan, was looking hard at us. Rather than make a scene I went quietly with Potter, but as soon as he had whisked me into the little dell with the orange trees and the fountain, he pushed one of the trees and it moved forward in a groove, so as to block up the entrance and hide the dell from any one who walked along the path.

"That's not a bad trick, is it?" said he. "I had that arranged on purpose."

"On purpose for what?" I was silly enough to ask.

"To bring you here and get you to myself. This is Betty's bower, but nobody knows it except you and me."

With that he pulled off his mask and made as if he would help me to do the same with mine, but I stepped back and almost tumbled over into the fountain. Perhaps I would if he hadn't caught me round the waist, but instead of letting go when he had steadied me on my feet he drew me closer to him. I gave a twist and a little angry cry, and just then, to my joy, some one from outside pushed the orange tree back in its groove so as to leave an opening again.

I darted out and caught a glimpse of the tall Puritan man, who was apparently engaged in pulling the tree forward so as to close the gap and shut Potter in.

It was so quick that I hardly had time to understand whether it was being done for my sake or not, but I didn't stop to think; I simply ran. I met harlequins and queens, kings and columbines hunting in couples (the green alleys were only broad enough for two), but I pushed by them and went flitting down path after path, though voices called after me and people pretended to shiver with cold as Frost passed.

Then, suddenly, "I think this is a way out," said a voice I knew, speaking just behind me. It was the voice of my brown man. I could have recognized it among thousands. But when I looked it was the tall figure of the gray Puritan who had helped me to get away from Potter Parker.

I didn't answer a word, not even to say "Thank you" or "Is this really you, Mr. Brett?" I just went in the direction he said, and in another minute I was out under the Italian pergola, draped with roses and wistaria, that runs for a long way overlooking the sea. Then I glanced over my shoulder, and he was there, but hesitating as if he hadn't decided whether to come with us or go back.

When I saw this I did stop and mumble in a low voice, "It is you, isn't it, Mr. Brett?"

"Yes," he answered. "I hope you forgive me."

"Oh, I thank you," said I. "I—wanted to come away. But how did you know that—and how did you know me?"

"I couldn't help seeing that you were being pretty well forced to do something you didn't want to do," he replied, coming a few steps nearer, and there seemed to be nobody under the pergola except just us two. "I don't suppose I had any right to be angry at seeing that happen, but I was. So I did what I did on the spur of the moment. As for recognizing you—I—well, you're rather tall, you know, and have a way of holding your head that—that isn't easily forgotten."

"I'm sorry I'm so badly disguised," I said, laughing. "But I'm glad you knew me. I'm so glad, too, that I'm out here. I began to have—quite a stifled feeling. How lovely it is in this pergola, isn't it? Do you think we might walk for a few minutes—and get cool?"

"May I walk with you?" he asked in a humble sort of way that gave me a funny little pain in my heart.

"Please do," I said quickly, and as cordially as I could—far more cordially than I would have spoken to any man in Mrs. Ess Kay's set. "It's nice to see you here tonight."

"You must be very much surprised."

I had said "Yes" before I stopped to think, and then I was sorry because it showed that I was thinking he did not belong in such a scene as this. But it was too late to go back, so I went on instead. "It's a good surprise."

"It's more than kind of you not quite to have forgotten a waif like me," he said.

"I shall never forget you," said I. "Why, of course, I couldn't." And I noticed that my voice sounded quite earnest, just as I felt, but I wasn't sure that I ought to let him know—even if he was poor and unlucky—that I did feel so sincerely about it. "There's Vivace, you know, for one reason."

"What about Vivace?"

"Oh, you needn't pretend, because I was sure you gave him to me, and I wanted so much to write to that club and thank you, only I thought as you had put no name, perhaps I'd better not. I must tell you now, though, I can't think how you came to be so kind."

"It was one of the greatest pleasures I have ever had. You were kind not to be offended with me. I didn't mean to take a liberty. I thought you would like the little chap."

"I love him dearly. Often I should have been dreadfully homesick if it hadn't been for him. He always seems to understand if I feel gloomy, and he does his dear little brindled best to cheer me up."

"Vivace is a lucky and happy dog."

"But don't you miss him?"

"No. For I like to think that you have him. You see, you were very kind to me when I was in a hard position and a good deal down on my luck. There was nothing I could do to show how I appreciated it—until I thought of Vivace. It was our little talk on the dock about 'finding a lost dog' that put the idea into my head."

"I guessed as much," said I, laughing. "It was that made me sure at once who it was I had to thank for Vivace. And—I was glad he had been yours. After what I'd seen you do on board ship, you know, I—I honored

Our method of supplying your requirements in Furs has made The Dunlap-Cooke Canadian Furs famous as the Furs of Quality. The Canadian Climate produces the finest furs known to commerce, because of the long, cold winters. The fur-bearing animals of Canada are provided by nature with a coat that is warmer, finer and more lustrous than temperate climates can produce.

The Duty on Manufactured Canadian Furs is 35%—We receive our Canadian Furs in the Raw State Duty Free. We have our own fur stores in Canadian centres; here we receive the raw furs from the trappers. We are the only Canadian Fur concern with a store in the United States. In this respect the strength of our position is unequalled. When you buy direct from us you save middlemen's profits and secure skins taken in prime season from the best sections, because we know where and when to buy the best that Canada offers.

OF QUINCY, MASS.
(Legal Title—Incorporated 1892.)
The Directors of the YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION of Quincy, with a firm faith in the great value of the work which is being done for the young men and boys of our city, make their appeal for donations and bequests toward paying the mortgage indebtedness on the new Association Building. When the building is free from debt it will serve as an Endowment, as there is a goodly income from the dormitories.
Should the Donor prefer, such sum as might be given could be used as an Endowment for an educational class or classes, the Boys Department, or as a special fund in other ways, and could be designated with the name of the Donor.
The Treasurer, WILLIAM F. CUMMINGS, 7 Clive Street, Quincy, or the General Secretary, ERNEST G. GAY, will be happy to answer inquiries.

OUR HOSPITAL

General Improvement Shown In Commercial Conditions

REPORTS OF MANUFACTURERS

Will Add to Their Present Force More Than Two Hundred Thousand Workingmen by First of Next Month--Increase of Over Half a Million With Continuance of Good Business--Prosperity Returning

New York, Nov. 7.—The National Association of Manufacturers publishes in the current issue of American Industries, its official magazine, a continuation of the statements on trade conditions contributed by its 3000 members, representing every branch of industry. The first series of these statements showing improvement in commercial conditions appeared in the Oct. 15 issue of the magazine. The series now published indicates a continuation of this improvement and for the most part an optimistic view of the business outlook.

Telegrams were sent prior to the election to a number of the association's members, asking them to state specifically how many workingmen would be added to their present force by Dec. 1 if nothing occurred to shake their commercial confidence. A resume of the information contained in these replies is given by the magazine as follows:

"The percentage of replies received indicated that an average of 135 men each will be added to the majority of manufacturing plants in the association by Dec. 1. The percentages show that at least one-half of the 3000 members of the National Association of Manufacturers expect to add to their present force more than 200,000 workingmen.

"Taking this as a basis," says the article, "it is safe to assume that the 13,000 manufactories which, according to the census of 1900, employed an average each of 100 men or over, will add at least 50 percent to their present force, making a total in round figures of 650,000 men. In other words, with the continuance of business confidence, the important manufacturing interests of the country will be enabled to increase their present force by more than half a million workingmen to meet the market demands for their products.

"In securing this information, Democratic and Republican manufacturers alike were addressed. No attempt was made to limit the canvass to any particular industry or to any particular section of the country, and the queries sent to manufacturers were based solely upon actual business conditions and business possibilities for the future.

"Although this information, showing as it does, in concrete and convincing form, the real proofs of a returning prosperity, was secured prior to the election, it was not used because of the association's desire to avoid any semblance of partisanship."

IN NEW ENGLAND

Every Indication That Business Conditions Are Improving

Ware, Mass., Nov. 7.—The Stevens woolen mills here will resume operations next Monday. The plant has been shut down for four months.

Taunton, Mass., Nov. 7.—Cohannet mills Nos. 1, 2 and 3, the Nemasket mills and Canoe River mills, all owned by the New England Cotton Yarn company, will go on a full time basis next week, together with the company's mills in Fall River and New Bedford. All the mills of the concern have been on short time, varying from 30 percent of the capacity last spring to 70 percent this fall. The company employs 6000 operatives.

Taunton, Mass., Nov. 7.—At the Mason Machine works notices have been posted informing the employes that the running time will be increased four days of eight hours to five eight-hour days on Monday next. The plant employs 400 hands.

Wakefield, Mass., Nov. 7.—The Harvard Knitting mills of this town have just entered on a six days' schedule, after running on a four-day schedule for the past month.

Fall River, Mass., Nov. 7.—Notices have been posted by the Stevens cotton mills announcing that, beginning next Monday, the carding, spinning and weaving departments are to be operated nights as well as days.

Cleveland Promises to Be Busy

Cleveland, Nov. 7.—Cleveland manufacturers and business men are looking forward to an early resumption of business somewhat near the volume of 1907. It is stated by several manufacturers that they have had many conditional orders on hand for some time and that they will begin filling them as soon as possible.

Improvement In Business

New York, Nov. 7.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says that seasonable weather has stimulated retail trade, while manufacturing plants are more active and numerous undertakings have been started. Sentiment is more hopeful regarding the commercial future, orders being placed for remote delivery, which is a noteworthy improvement over the conservative attitude formerly conspicuous.

FOR FIRST TIME IN YEARS

Our Government to Have a Ship Stationed at Constantinople

Washington, Nov. 7.—As a fitting recognition of the ambassadorial rank of the American mission to Turkey, the state department has decided to station at Constantinople the gunboat Scorpion as a dispatch boat for Ambassador Leishman, a privilege enjoyed by various European nations. Permission has been granted by the sublime porte allowing the vessel to pass through the Dardanelles to Constantinople. It is declared at the state department that no significance attaches to the dispatch of the vessel to the capital of Turkey.

The Scorpion is now on her way to Constantinople, the latest news from her reporting the arrival of the vessel at the Azores. All of her heavier guns have been taken off, leaving only those to be used for saluting purposes aboard.

It has been a number of years since the American government has had a ship stationed at Constantinople, but on various occasions other vessels have been permitted to pass the Dardanelles and anchor at Constantinople.

LAST MESSAGE OF ROOSEVELT

What the Chief Executive Will Ask From Congress

Washington, Nov. 7.—President Roosevelt's last message to congress is well under way. It will ask for all those things which the president has heretofore wanted, and which congress has not yet had time to get around to.

The tariff will not be mentioned. It is fully understood that this subject is a legacy to be grappled with by the new administration, and Mr. Taft will work upon this feature of his first message at Asheville during the winter, and have it in shape before his inauguration.

Among the things that President Roosevelt will ask for from congress are:

Extension of the powers of the interstate commerce commission in the matter of controlling rates, appropriation for continued enforcement of the uniform railroad accounting povisions of the Hepburn act, passage of the government employes' liability act, two new battleships, Appalachian forest reserves, federal control of water powers, internal waterways improvement and campaign fund publicity.

Gotham Police Shaken Up

New York, Nov. 7.—A "shake-up," such as the police here have not experienced in years, took place when four inspectors were reduced in rank to captains, three captains were reduced to lieutenants, four inspectors were transferred, five captains were shifted to outlying precincts, two lieutenants were promoted to captains and ten sergeants were made lieutenants. It is generally understood that the gambling situation has caused the changes.

A Circus Rider's Misfortune

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Nov. 7.—Encased in a plaster cast which covers all of her body except the neck and head, Minnie Fisher, a circus rider, who was injured in September by being thrown from her horse, left here last evening for her home in Alabama. She is unable to move any part of her body below her shoulders and will lie on a cot during the railroad journey south. It will be three months before the plaster can be removed.

Ellis Takes Oath of Office

Washington, Nov. 7.—Wade H. Ellis, who recently resigned as attorney general of Ohio to accept the position of assistant to the attorney general in the department of justice, arrived here yesterday, took the oath of office and immediately will enter upon his duties. He will have charge of the direction of prosecutions for violations of the interstate commerce and anti-trust laws.

Swindled Northwestern Farmers

Minneapolis, Nov. 7.—James T. Mulhall was sentenced to fifteen months in the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan., and Felix Nathanson to six months in the county jail for fraudulent operation through the mails of the Nicollet Creamery company. Farmers throughout the northwest are said to have lost heavily by shipping produce which was never paid for.

Gas Kills Three of a Family

Washington, Nov. 7.—Three persons were asphyxiated by gas fumes from a kitchen stove at their home in this city. The dead are Mrs. Hebe C. Brennerman, her mother-in-law, and Cutts Brennerman, aged 18 months. The house is occupied by the family of Clarence I. Brennerman, a stenographer employed at the congressional library.

Compromise In Cotton Strike

Manchester, Eng., Nov. 7.—The long-standing dispute between the cotton operatives of Manchester and their employers was settled yesterday, the employers having compromised on a reduction of wages in March instead of January. The mills will reopen Nov. 9. They have been closed for seven weeks and much distress has resulted.

Austrian Cabinet May Resign

Vienna, Nov. 7.—It is reported that the resignation of the Austrian cabinet is imminent as an outcome of the dissensions between the German and Czech ministers arising from the racial conflicts in Prague and other Bohemian towns.

A NOTRE DAME LADY'S APPEAL.

To all knowing sufferers of rheumatism, whether muscular or of the joints, sciatica, lumbagos, backache, pains in the kidneys or neuralgia pains, to write to her for a home treatment which has repeatedly cured all of these tortures. She feels it her duty to send it to all sufferers FREE. You cure yourself at home as thousands will testify—no change of climate being necessary. This simple discovery banishes uric acid from the blood, loosens the stiffened joints, purifies the blood, and brightens the eyes, giving elasticity and tone to the whole system. If the above interests you, for proof address Mrs. M. Summers, Box B, Notre Dame, Ind.

TRAINING HARRINGTON

By LULU JOHNSON.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

Crisp and bracing was the morning as Harrington came on deck, and he drew great drafts of the cool air down into his lungs, assuring himself that people who took vacations in the hot months were fools indeed. He even felt sorry for poor Fannie, who was left behind in the city. A few weeks of this bracing air would do her more good than the five-dollar-a-visit specialist who looked grave and shook his head when he stood by the bedside and declared that she must have complete rest.

It was true that Harrington himself had wanted to take his vacation in August, and when Fannie's collapse had prevented his leaving then he had stormed and chafed and succeeded in making everybody uncomfortable and bloodthirsty to varying degrees, according to their temperaments and fondness for Fannie. Harrington's calm assumption that Fannie had no right to be ill when he wished to go on his vacation was irritating to the others.

Now as the steamer moved slowly between banks on which the green was giving way to the first blush of autumn tints the world seemed good to Harrington, and he could even think kindly of the little woman who lay at home in a darkened room and whose breakdown had been responsible for his delayed vacation. In August he would have gone to the shore, as was his custom, but in the latter part of September the country offered greater appeal, so he was to spend a month with his sister. The latter had lent no ear to the call of the city, but had remained content to live a farmer's wife as she had been born a farmer's daughter.

It was afternoon when the train pulled into the tiny station. The ride had been hot and dusty and, after the early morning on the boat, the worse by contrast. Harrington met his brother-in-law with the tolerant patronage that the city man feels for his country cousin and considered that he had discharged his obligation when he offered the other a smoke with the explanation that it was a city cigar.

"I guess most of them come from the city," suggested Sam Dryer, with a chuckle, as he bit off the end and applied the match. "I guess you're about the twentieth chap this summer that's given me a city cigar with the air of expecting me to drop dead with delight because it comes from the city."

"You don't have to smoke it if you don't want to," snapped Harrington as the last vestige of the morning's benediction fled.

"I don't mind," explained Sam good humoredly. "I'm used to smoking city cigars. That's Lafe Spence's new barn over there. Before he got it done a pill man came along and painted one end up with his sign, and Lafe got hoppin'. He danced around and told the man that was just what he built barns for, and the man said if that was the case he guessed he'd paint the other end too."

"Well, what's the rest of the story?" demanded Harrington sharply when a pause was not broken by speech.

"I was waiting for you to laugh at that," explained Sam. "The answer is that he painted the hull barn, just like you see it. Lafe's constable, and he threatened to put him in the lockup if he didn't do the right thing."

Harrington cursed the evil fortune that brought him into contact with his brother-in-law and inane country jokes, and his irritation against Fannie returned. If she had remained well they would have gone to the shore, where amateur humorists could be snubbed into silence. He was glad when the old homestead came into sight and Ella, on the front porch, waved him a welcome.

The remainder of the afternoon and the evening passed off pleasantly enough, but the morning brought its troubles. Harrington was always at his worst in the early hours. He had been compelled to rise a full hour before his accustomed time, and there was no hot water for shaving. The studs were not in his clean shirt, nor was the shirt laid out. At home, even from her sick bed, Fannie had made certain that the little things were looked after. It was the little things that Harrington cared about, and he was in a black humor when he came to the breakfast table.

He had been slow in dressing, and the breakfast was cold, though it had been placed in the oven to keep warm. Sam had already left the table and Ella was alone.

Harrington pushed the bacon from him.

"I never eat bacon unless it's crisp," he said irritably, "and I don't like the eggs fried so hard. Can't you cook some more that are just set? And for heaven's sake, Ella, please remember I can't eat hot bread for breakfast."

"I'll get some cold bread," volunteered Ella. "It will only take a few minutes, Ben."

"Then hurry," he commanded. "I hate to sit idle at the table."

There was a little exclamation from Ella, and Harrington looked up into Sam's gray eyes. There was an expression there that he did not like.

"You're not going to sit idle at the table," exclaimed Sam. "You're going to hurry up and eat your bacon and eggs. You don't have to eat biscuit if you'd rather have bread, but that stuff was all good when breakfast was ready. If you want to spend an hour in your room cursing your cuffs and your collar button, get up earlier or else eat cold breakfast.

"You're welcome here, Ben, because you're Ella's brother and because she's got her heart set on a visit from you, but you've just got to understand that you can't cuss and domineer my wife into a sick bed the way you've done your own."

Harrington swallowed a retort; then he swallowed the bacon and eggs. Sam stood over the chair, and Ben knew that he meant what he said.

When the meal was done Sam left the room, and Ben followed him out to the yard to stammer an apology. Then he sat on the horse block while he smoked a cigar, and Sam's words came back to him.

His brother-in-law was right. He had cursed and domineered his wife. There had been lots of mornings when he had acted worse than this and with far less cause.

When the nervous breakdown had come he had cursed it because it had interfered with his vacation plans, and not until he had left home did he realize how much Fannie's quiet ministrations had meant.

Once or twice he half rose to go into the house and ask Ella's pardon, but he thought of something else at home and sank back into his seat again. He did not even realize that the horse block was an uncomfortable seat, and Sam came in from the fields at noon to find him still sitting there with a half smoked cigar, making an odorous offense to heaven.

"Thought worth a penny?" he asked pleasantly as he made pretense of feeling in his pocket for the coin.

"You can buy my whole miserable carcass for a penny," retorted Ben dolefully. "I've been sitting here thinking over what you said."

"I didn't mean to get so hopping mad," said Sam shamefacedly.

"It was right," went on Harrington. "I have rowed Fannie into her bed, just as you said. She made things so comfortable that when anything did go wrong I scolded her about that instead of giving her credit for all that she had done."

"If you know it, that helps some," reminded Sam. "I tell you what the trouble is, Ben. Just because you earn the money that pays the bills you don't realize that your wife is working too. You wouldn't dare talk to a servant the way you talk to her. You know your wife won't get mad and quit."

"They sent you on a vacation to give Fannie a rest," explained Sam, "but if you really mean to be a good boy it would be a good idea to send for her. The trouble with her has been that she cared so much for you that she worried when you were not pleased, and you never were pleased, so she worried all the time. It will do her good to come up here and have you wait on her."

"I'll go after her," offered Ben hastily. He was thinking of the cool of the morning on the boat when they two should have the deck alone. It was there that he wanted to tell her how sorry he was. He could not know that Sam had wired. It was well that he could not read the message, for it ran:

Better come up. Ben's found out what the matter was, and I'll see that he remembers. SAM.

But Sam's share of the task was light, for Harrington remembered of his own accord as he coaxed the roses back to where the lilies had been in his wife's pale cheeks. When his irritation rose there rose before him a vision of cold bacon and a threatening face. It was not romantic, but it was effective.

Won on a Bluff.

"It does me good to meet up with one of that class of people who think they know it all," said the old man with the ancient hat. "I was coming over from Baltimore on a train the other day, and a man who was writing in a book asked me how to spell 'proper.' I told him, but a know-it-all who sat near disputed me. I bet him $10 even up that I was right and proved I was by four disinterested men. I gave the $10 to charity."

"How did the man contend the word should be spelled?" was asked.

"Why, he said there was only one 'p' in it."

"And you stuck for two, eh?"

"I did. I insisted that it was spelled 'propper,' and he finally owned up like a little man and handed me over the money."

"And would you like to make the same wager again and leave it to the dictionaries?"

"Not much! I consulted 'em all next day and discovered that I had bluffed that poor chap out of his wealth."—Washington Post.

Acquitted.

Voltaire, when on his estate of Ferney, was fond of assuming the air of nobility and displayed a most philosophical hatred of poachers. One luckless fellow was caught and brought before him. Voltaire determined to try him according to law and took his seat as judge, directing his secretary to act as counsel for the prisoner. The advocate made a long speech in favor of the culprit and stopped suddenly.

"Why do you hesitate?" asked Voltaire.

He procured the book and silently turned its leaves. Voltaire became impatient and demanded the cause of his silence.

"Well," answered the secretary, "I have been looking for the word 'humanity,' and I see you have omitted it."

Voltaire thought the argument so forcible that he set the poacher free.

Shall Quincy Adopt the Act?

At the last session of the General Court a law was passed requiring certain cities and towns under certain conditions to provide public playgrounds for the minors of said cities and towns. As Quincy does not comply fully with the requirements of that law the following questions may appear upon the ballot for the municipal election this year.

"Shall Chapter 513 of the Acts of the Year 1908, requiring certain cities and towns to provide public playgrounds, be accepted by this city?"

"The State by its establishment of extensive systems of public schools and by its adoption of laws prescribing compulsory education, has created and for its own purposes it maintains a practical monopoly of elementary education.

"Within the purview of the law, the State has thus assumed parental relations to the child with an implied obligation to give him the best elementary education the world affords.

"While the impressions of the class room—the successive stages of culture developed in the student by the older curricula—formed the character of the citizen, as the prime object of education, the educator believes that the elements of character—the aims, attitudes, habits, and principles of life, may be established more surely by developing also, the student's powers of expression—physical, mental, and spiritual—constituting for each citizen his personality ,in the freer activities of the playground and the play-school.

"The personality, or each individual's aggregate power of expression, is even more vital as a field of work in character building than the successive stages of world impression, or the so-called culture of the schools. The best opportunity for developing the personality of the pupil is found in the playground and in the play-school.

"The activities of the playground and the play-schools are essentially free and voluntary. They are never contemplated as part of a compulsory education. Play that is not free is not play.

"The compulsory part of education may perhaps be best secured by the fullest possible recognition of play-schools and by emphasizing in them, with their play expressions of world industries, domestic and commercial, the subjects that have emanated from them, and then the forms of work sublimated from the kindergartens and precipitated from the high schools may be especially developed in play-schools.

"Boards of Education by establishing such an elective system for the elementary public schools, thoroughly well organized might relieve overcrowded school accommodations, and largely increase the percentage of graduation from compulsory courses, while effecting enormous economies in not providing for every school day and forevery pupil formsof play and work naturally elective and voluntary and they would thus avoid vast duplication of expenditures of energy and funds."

Good Showing By the Chester

The scout cruiser Chester was given the first of her three standardization tests Thursday on the Rockland course, and made an excellent showing. Four runs were made at 10, 13, 16 and 19 knot speed, after which they tried the experiment of turning the steam from the auxiliary exhaust into the turbines, and this is understood to have worked successfully. Three runs at 15 knot speed were made under this method.

These tests will be continued today, five and four turbine tests being made. The Chester will then be ready for her 2.000 mile ocean race with her sister ships, the Salem and Birmingham, built at Quincy. The Salem will have her standardization tests the latter part of this month ,and the Birmingham in December.

☞There will be a mortgagee's Auction Sale of four valuable lots of land with bowling alley thereon, on Sea street, Houghs Neck, on Monday, Nov. 16. For details, see legal advertisement in today's Ledger.

BRAINTREE'S BIG VOTE.

Republicans made a clean sweep of the entire ticket, the Representative votes being the closest.

Over eight-five percent of the 1,539 voters in Braintree cast their ballots on Tuesday as follows: South Braintree 550, Braintree 427, East Braintree 334, a total of 1,311. There never were as many ballots cast in this town at a national, state or town election.

John D. Cobb, Jr., lead the ticket with 862 votes. Taft and Sherman received 64 percent of the votes, while Bryan and Kern had less than 20 per cent. Draper had about the same lead over Vahey.

South Braintree went nearly two to one for C. C. Mellen and Braintree nearly as well. East Braintree was almost a tie vote, three spare votes being for Mr. Mellen. Holbrook did not back up Mr. Whitcomb and found six extra votes for Mr. Mellen. Avon was for Mr. Whitcomb it being classed as a democratic town.

Association Day In Five Churches

The first meeting of the season on Sunday at the Y. M. C. A. will be held tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. Edward W. Hearne, State Secretary of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, will speak. Miss Bertha Carlson will be the soloist. Mr. Hearne has but recently come to the State, having been general secretary of the Washington, D. C., Association. He is a good speaker and a man of a winning personality. The meeting should be one attractive to men.

The work of the Young Men's Christian Association will be presented by able speakers in five of Quincy's churches Sunday morning. An effort will be made to arrange to present this work in the other churches of the city a little later in the year.

The new State Secretary, Edward W. Hearne will speak in the Bethany church ;Mr. George E. Day General secretary of the Somerville Association, at the First Presbyterian; Mr. C. C. Miles, General secretary at Malden speaks at the Point Congregational (evening); Mr. Andrew Case, a business man of Lynn, at the Baptist church, Wollaston; and Rev. W. E. Dowty, rector at St. Paul's church, Malden, at Christ Episcopal. They all are men of wide association experience and will tell of the new and interesting phases of this great movement for young men and the church.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.

The average daily attendance at the public schools of the city is now in excess of 5,600, an army larger than that of the Quincy men who voted Nov. 3. The school enrollment is 6,096 and 5,698 was the average daily attendance for the month of October, over 93 per cent. Quincy has 5,693 registered voters and 5,048 visited the polls this week, less than 89 per cent. Here is the report of Supt. Parlin for October:

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

Bishop Lawrence will visit St. Chrysostom's church in January.

Probate court for Norfolk County will be held in Quincy next Wednesday.

Home made Christmas gifts are illustrated today on one of the inside pages.

Mr. and Mrs. Theophilus King of Adams street are in the south for a few weeks.

The Joseph W. Bartletts, of Willow street, have bought a home at Waban and are leaving Wollaston next week.

Arthur C. Sprague of Belmont street is building an artistic bungalow on the shores of Little Sandy pond, Bryantville.

Mrs. Ama K. Lee of Prospect avenue is due on Tuesday, coming home on the Saxonia after seven months' travel in Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. James M. Devitt of Safford street, Wollaston, are receiving congratulations a ten pound son being born to them on Sunday.

Mrs. Everett C. Bumpus was in town this week for a short visit. She is leaving soon for Washington and the south for a few weeks' stay.

There was a snowy feeling in the air this morning and it is not impossible that mother earth will be covered with a white mantle on Sunday.

Rev. William E. Bowty of Malden will tell of Y. M. C. A. work Sunday morning at Christ church. Rev. E. E. Atkins of Cambridge will preach in the evening.

Everyone at Houghs Neck seems to be enthusiastic over the nomination of Alfred N. LaBrecque for the City Council, and he has many friends in the Quincy end of the ward.

The Registrars of Voters meet tonight to add names to the voting lists. It will be the last opportunity to add names to the voting lists before the municipal caucuses.

Several candidates will be initiated at the meeting of Quincy lodge of Elks next Tuesday evening. A number of applications for membership will also be considered.

Another interesting meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian Club is promised for next Tuesday evening when Auditor Neal of the Boston Elevated will illustrate street railways.

The Quincy Co-operative Bank is growing in favor as it opens its sale of shares in fortieth series. Over six hundred shares are already sold and more than ninety new accounts opened.

Gospel service will be held at the Swedish Baptist church at 7.30 every evening during the coming week. Ministers from other churches are expected to be present and preach. All are condially invited to attend.

The special business for consideration at the meeting of the Citizen's Association next Wednesday evening will be the report of the committee on revision of the City Charter. Two reports in print have been forwarded to members.

Charles Bulkley Ames, assistant pastor at the First Congregational church is to be ordained next Thursday evening, when special services will be held in the church at eight o'clock.

Thompson B. Crane who is a Republican candidate for nomination for Councilman from Ward Two is a property owner and taxpayer. He was born in Quincy and has always lived in Quincy and naturally desires the best for Quincy.

Wollaston Rural and Massachusetts Masonic lodges and St. Stephen's Royal Arch chapter, will attend services Sunday afternoon at the Wollaston Congregational church, at the invitation of Rev. Edward A. Chase, chaplain of Wollaston and Massachusetts lodges.

A gang of men from the Electric Light Co., were busy at City Hall yesterday, changing the lights to the new improved style of lamp. A new fuse box will also be put up in the Council Chamber so that there will be no danger of the lights doing out hereafter.

The Caldwell family, one of the oldest and best known families of Quincy Point, are to move from that district. For 38 years they have lived at the Point and they have seen it grow to be the busiest part to the centre of the city, and their future home will be on Woodward avenue.

The Washington school will close on Tuesday the day of the launching at 10.30, to allow the teachers and children an opportunity of seeing the dreadnaught battleship North Dakota take her maiden dip. The afternoon session will begin at 2 o'clock, which will give ample time for all to see the launching and get back to school.

There promises to be a large attendance at the free lecture on Monday evening at High School hall by Mr. Joseph Lee. It is given under the auspices of the School department, and the subject is "Play and Playgrounds." Mr. Lee is vice president of the Massachusetts Civic League and has made a study of his subject. He recently wrote a paper on "Play as a school of the citizen."

THEODORE H. HERMANSON

For City Council

One of the promising candidates for the City Council in Ward One, on the Republican ticket, is Theodore H. Hermanson, of 19 Foster street. For 20 years he has been a resident of the city, and has been affiliated with the Republican party since he became a voter. For four years he was a member of the Republican City Committee, and always active in support of the regular nominees.

He is also chairman of the Scandinavian Republican Club of Quincy, and secretary of the Swedish American Republican State League of Massachusetts, of which he was one of the founders.

Mr. Hermanson is a member of the Citizen No-License League, and has served on the executive committee, being one of the active members and speakers in past campaigns which have kept Quincy in the No-License column.

When the call came in 1898 for volunteers in the Spanish American war, Mr. Hermanson was a member of Co. K, 5th regiment, M. V. M., and promptly volunteered and went south with the company. He is also a member of the Quincy Board of Trade the Quincy Y. M. C. A., the Houghs Neck Associates, Rural lodge of Masons, St. Stephens chapter, South Shore commandery, and Boston council.

Mr. Hermanson holds a responsible position at the Fore River shipyard, being one of the leading men in the machine shop. His large acquantance with Quincy and its people equip him admirably for the duties of a Councilman.

Mission Furniture

A few years ago Mission Furniture was considered a fad and a fancy. Public opinion however, has changed, and real true worth of mission furniture makes it a part of the furnishing of every up-to-date home of today. It has come to stay and if you really wish to be IT you will promptly accept the dictates of furniture fashion and make part of your home furnishings, MISSION.

For den — for library — for hall — for dining room — or living room — Mission furniture is especially appropriate and attractive. No upholstering to fade or finish to scratch. Its deep rich brown finish with plain red or green rugs and draperies makes a restful contrast to other furnishings.

ILLUSTRATED LECTURE.

Seldom has there been a larger attendance at a lecture at Quincy Point than greeted Rev. Charles A. S. Dwight at the Washington Street church last evening. His subject was "Constantinople, the gate of felicity," and he spoke understandingly as he was a resident of Turkey for six years. He also made it interesting with stereopticon views which illustrated the people and their customs, the buildings and their archtecture, etc. He spoke particularly of the situation of the city and the three approaches, geographical, historical and ethological.

—Winter is drawing nig for trains came into the Union station in Boston this week from the north covered with snow.

IT'S YOUR KIDNEYS

Don't Mistake the Cause of Your Troubles. A Quincy Citizen Shows How to Cure Them.

Many people never suspect their kidneys. If suffering from a lame, weak or aching back they think that it is only a muscular weakness; when urinary trouble sets in they think it will soon correct itself. And so it is with all the other symptoms of kidney disorders. That is just where the danger lies. You must cure these troubles or they may lead to diabetes or Bright's disease. The best remedy to use is Doan's Kindney Pills. It cures all ills which are caused by weak or diseased kidneys. Quincy people testify to permanent cures.

Mrs. E. Burke, living at 143 Quincy St., Quincy, Mass. says: "I consider Doan's Kidney Pills an excellent remedy for Kidney trouble, both my husband and myself having used them and the results were of the most satisfactory nature. Mr. Burke had such a severe pain in his back that he could hardly do his work, but Doan's Kidney Pills fixed him up in good shape. They were procured at the Cox Drug Store and have our highest recommendation."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United Statts.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

BRAINTREE.

Mr. C. H. Bangs of Town street is having a telephone installed.

Miss Louise Burleigh of Radcliffe college spent the week-end at her home on Washington street.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Levangie of Pond street are receiving many congratulations upon the birth of a son.

The November meeting of the Men's club affiliated with the South M. E. church will be held Wednesday evening. Joseph Belcher of Randolph will be the speaker.

Harry Burrell and Harry Stocker have erected a gunning stand on the border of Sunset lake and report the season an unusually good one for shooting ducks.

The Rice & Hutchins company have finished the semi-annual stock taking and have started on the winter run. Active business will be resumed in all the departments in a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Lane of Vine street have gone to Fairhaven, for a two weeks' visit with their daughter.

William Hayden overseer at the Fore River Works met with an accident something falling on his foot. He is at his home on Union street.

Mr. J. F. Perry, whose business is in California, returned last Saturday to Braintree to enjoy a two weeks' vacation with his family on Park street.

Mr. F. N. Manning and family of Cochato road are soon to leave Braintree and reside in New York. It is with regret that their many friends receive this news.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Bates have returned from Framingham where they have been the past two years, Mr. Bates having filled the contract made with R. H. Long.

Charles B. Cushing died Tuesday night from acute indigestion, aged 40 years, at his home 23 Commercial street. He was well known in this vicinity and had been coachman for Dr. G. W. Tinkham of Weymouth for many years. He leaves a widow and son to mourn their loss.

Mr. and Mrs. Burton L. Baker are enjoying the autumn months in their Knox touring car, recently purchased by Mrs. Baker's mother, Mrs. C. E. Darron of Vermont, who is spending the winter with them.

Carey Keith, treasurer of the George E. Keith company died suddenly Saturday night of acute indigestion. Out of respect to his memory the factories were closed Wednesday of this week. The many employes here in town were consequently given another holiday.

The Rev. Dr. Gordon of the Old South gave a fine paper before the members of the Pilgrim club and the Bangor Alumni last Monday at the Crawford house banquet. Rev. Robert Cochrane and Rev. C. F. Hill Crathern were present.

While fishing for smelts Mr. E. F. Star of Allen street caught six small mackerel from Sheppard's wharf. They were good-sized tinkers and proved fine eating. Other fishermen at Webb's meadow caught mackerel also. It is fifteen years since they have been so far up the river.

Parties of a Hallowe'en nature and otherwise were given in many homes the latter part of the week. Miss Louie Monk charmingly entertained a party of friends at her home on Washington street. Harold Bean of Plain street celebrated in an enjoyable manner with his guests. Miss Mildred Dyer daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Moses Dyer of Pond street was surprised by about twenty-five of her friends and the home of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Dyer was aglow, while Miss Blanche Dyer and her guests made merry. There were other parties about town so that gaiety was the order of the week.

WEYMOUTH.

The electric street lighting wire burned an elm tree standing on Commercial street near the residence of Miss Mary F. Loud on Wednesday evening. The tree was burned on several branches and sparks filew over the roof of Miss Loud's house. It was not ignited however.

Miss Hattie Nash of Front street, will visit friends at Middleton, Conn., for a few days. She will spend some time next week at Hartford, Conn., so as to attend the meeting of the Woman's Board.

Little Martha Whittle, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. C. P. Whittle, had a party on Thursday afternoon. The occasion was the third anniversary of the little girl's birth. The wee youngsters had a merry time and enjoyed the feast of goodies prepared for them.

SALVATION ARMY EVENTS.

A sacred concert will be held at the Salvation Army hall tonight. Ensign Peter Leidzen of Lynn will preside. The band from Lynn will play. Singing will be by the male choir from the Swedish Congregational church. Rev. R. Palmgren, pastor of the Congregational church will speak, beside others who will take part in the program. Refreshments will be served.

A week of special meetings has been arranged to be held the coming week with different leaders each night. Envoy H. Lindgren of Boston, will be in charge Sunday at the 4 o'clock song and praise service, and the 7.45 evening service. Everybody is invited to attend.

STUDENT'S RECITALS.

Among the active members of the Quincy Chroal society are many who are studying voice, piano or instrumental music with special teachers in view of a public career. Many are already accepted as professionals. These special students are arranging a series of ten students' recitals to be given from 8.15 to 9.30 P. M. Consecutive Thursday evenings except December 24 and 31. The following compositions will be interpreted.

1. Ethlebert Nevin and Boston Composers.
2. Chaminade and French Composers.
3. Folk Songs.
4. Women Composers.
5. Miscellaneous.
6. Famous German Songs.
7. Original Compositions.
8. Overtures and arias from Grand Opera.
9. Grieg and MacDowell.
10. Miscellaneous.

There will be solos, duetts, quartets, and ensemble work. Much interest is being taken as these recitals will provide opportunity for individual advancement in music among local talent. They will also strengthen the Choral Society as they will be free to all active members wishing to participate.

SURPRRISE AND PRESENTATION.

Miss Josephine Kiernan of 136 South Walnut street was surprised by a number of her friends on Thursday evening at her home. She was presented with a gold bracelet by Mabel King, and then told her friends to go ahead and have a good time. They did not need to be told a second time and the fun lasted all through the evening. A three-piece orchestra furnished music during the evening. There were also piano selections by Paul Avery and Helen Connors and solos by Miss Flanagan, Miss Ford, Edward Kiernan, Vincent Curley and Paul Avery, which were very well rendered. About ten o'clock a light repast was served by Emanuel, after which games were continued to a late hour. Friends were present from Randolph, Braintree, Weymouth and Atlantic. The committee in charge was Miss Anna Gilcoine, Miss Mabel King and John Pinel.

SURPRISE PARTY.

The home of Miss Nellie Dolan of Walnut street, Atlantic, was taken by storm on Thursday evening, when a crowd of her friends called to spend the evening and have a good time. Miss Dolan realized that it was a surprise party when Miss Anna Martin presented her with gold bracelet as a token of the esteem of her friends. Games were played during the evening, while an impromptu concert was arranged. Charles Bemis, the well-known Atlantic musician played several selections on the harmonica and accordion. There were also vocal solos by Kitty Duggan and others. Refreshments were served during the evening. The committee consisted of Miss Anna Martin, Miss Agnes Martin and Miss Mamie Dolan.

Rev. E. J. Prescott of Boston lectured to a large audience in Winthrop church, HOLBROOK, on Wednesday evening on Norway. The lecture was illustrated by stereopticon views.

MORSE GETS FIFTEEN YEARS

Sentence of the Expert Manipulator In High Finance

CURTIS IS GIVEN HIS LIBERTY

Court Considered Him Merely a Tool In the Hands of a "Dominating Master"--Stay of Ten Days In Execution Is Granted Former Ice King --No Sign of Weakening on His Part When He Heard Sentence

New York, Nov. 7.—From a cell in the Tombs prison Charles W. Morse now directs the efforts of his counsel to secure his freedom, he having been sentenced to serve fifteen years in the federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., for misapplication of the funds of the National Bank of North America and making false entries in the books of the bank. Alfred H. Curtis, former president of the defunct bank, who was jointly tried and convicted with Morse, was given his liberty on a suspended sentence of five years in prison.

While Morse's lawyers immediately applied and secured a stay of execution for ten days after sentence had been imposed, still it is probable that Morse will remain a prisoner in the Tombs until Monday, as Judge Hough has refused to admit the financier to bail. The Morse lawyers applied to the United States circuit court of appeals for a writ to show cause why their client should not be admitted to bail, and the writ was granted, but it is not returnable until Monday; hence it appears that Morse must remain a prisoner until the question of bail is settled on that day.

Whether a new trial will be granted to Morse is problematical. Judge Lacombe granted a writ of error to the Morse lawyers. This writ is returnable Dec. 3, and is based on the usual grounds—exceptions taken by the defense during the trial and exceptions to the indictment itself. This step had to be taken before application for bail could be made, and it also leads to the argument for a new trial. The Morse lawyers say their client has instructed them to fight "to the last ditch."

The fate of Curtis was known first, and when Judge Hough announced that the ex-president of the bank would escape actual imprisonment because he had been merely a tool in the hands of a "dominating master" there was an attempt at applause in the crowded courtroom. But that was quickly squelched by the judge.

When the words "fifteen years in the federal prison" came from the bench there was another demonstration in that jammed room. But nobody could describe it as being a note of exultation or grief or any other human emotion.

It was just a weird murmur, a combination of many voices. It was over in a second and then there was a silence, just as weird, which no hammering of the gavel was needed to bring about. There was no sign of weakening on the part of the "ice king," who, unless the sentence is upset, is to spend much more time in prison than he had to devote to the erection of his queer financial fabric, which went down with a crash a year ago, thereby precipitating a country-wide panic and driving one "big banker" to suicide and others to disaster.

As the two defendants stood together at the bar, Morse looked at Curtis with a sneer of contempt, while the counsel for the "weaker man" begged, in a broken voice, for mercy. When a few minutes later, Curtis was led from the room, a disgraced but a free man, Morse stepped aside with mock deference to let him pass. It was after the prosecution had recommended suspension of sentence in the case of Curtis that Judge Hough said:

"So far as Curtis is concerned, I am in accord with the recommendation of the jury for leniency. He was virtually in the position of a subordinate. A remarkably careful and attentive jury has believed that Curtis did not intend to do wrong when he embarked upon an illegal course. He started in on what he soon perceived to be wrong. But, after making the first false step, he had not the strength to retrace it and to abolish false methods. His feeble efforts at righting the wrong met with but little encouragement from a supine board of directors."

Students Had Narrow Escape

Washington, Nov. 7.—Fire burned to the ground the Bliss electrical school in North Takoma, a suburb of the city, at a loss of $130,000. More than 150 students in the dormitories were awakened to find the building in flames and escaped in their nightclothes, many jumping from second story windows, while others slid down ropes to safety. That there were no fatalities was miraculous.

End of Chauffeurs' Strike

New York, Nov. 7.—Settlement of the taxicab strike, which has been in progress for several weeks in this city, was announced last night by President Allen of the New York Taxicab company. The old wage scale is continued. Chauffeurs now in the employ of the company will be retained, and old chauffeurs will be reinstated as soon as they can be furnished with cars.

THE KAISER'S BABBLING

German Conservatives Want Him to Display "Greater Reserve"

Berlin, Nov. 7.—The German Conservative party, representing the most loyal section of the German people, has issued an official declaration concerning the interview given to a representative Englishman by Emperor William and published recently in the London Telegraph.

The declaration expresses serious concern "that not infrequently the utterances of his majesty bring our foreign politics into a difficult situation," adding: "In order that the emperor's reputation may be preserved from criticism and discussion, and the German empire and people from complications and harm, we express the reverential wish that greater reserve be displayed in future in making such utterances."

Maximilien Harden, editor of Die Zukunft, speaking last night on the political situation to a large crowd of auditors, called upon Emperor William to abdicate, saying that his grandfather thought of doing so on a less critical occasion for which he was responsible.

DANGER OF WAR IS NOW REMOVED

Powers Take Firm Attitude In the Balkans Squabble

London, Nov. 7.—The correspondent of The Times at Belgrade telegraphs:

"A complete change in the situation here in the last few days seems to justify the anticipation that all immediate danger of war in the Balkans has been removed. This change is due to the firm attitude of the powers toward the impracticable schemes of territorial compensation.

"The Crown Prince of Servia returns from Russia as the harbinger of peace and doubtless in the future will abstain from bellicose utterances, the Russian government having shown a determination not to aid or countenance any efforts on the part of Servia and Montenegro to set aside what has been accomplished or to obtain territorial compensation by force of arms."

Crusade Against White Plague

Chicago, Nov. 7.—Chicago physicians have been warned by Health Commissioner Evans that failure to report cases of consumption coming under their notice will be followed by prosecution and fines. The number of deaths due to consumption as shown by city statistics has been largely in excess of the number of cases reported by physicians. In a campaign of education, the health department is using placards and street car companies are giving advertising space in their cars for the purpose.

Seven Lives Lost In Fire

Swan Lake, Man., Nov. 7.—The home of E. W. Carey, a farmer, was destroyed by fire and Mrs. Carey, five children and a Miss Gillespie, a schoolteacher, who was staying with the family, perished in the flames. Carey was so badly injured that he cannot recover. The fire was caused by Carey lighting the kitchen stove with coal oil. The other occupants of the house, who were asleep, were suffocated in their beds.

An Interesting Balloon Trip

Lunenburg, Mass., Nov. 7.—After passing over ninety miles of country, a balloon which ascended in Pittsfield with William Van Sleet and William C. Hill came to earth just east of this village. The balloon passed at one time through a severe snowfall and later went above the storm clouds to a height of 5000 feet, where the sun and moon were plainly visible west and east, while the squall raged below.

Getting Tips on Game Hunting

Washington, Nov. 7.—President Roosevelt had as an over-night guest at the White House last night Sir Henry H. Johnston, African traveler and big game hunter, who is supplying the president with much information which will be of value to him when he goes on his African hunting trip next year. Johnston will remain in Washington several days as the guest of the British ambassador.

Football Player Dies From Injuries

Charlotte, N. C., Nov. 7.—John Cooper, a student at the University of North Carolina and a member of the 'varsity football eleven, who was injured during preliminary practice of the team while tackling a dummy, died last night. Cooper suffered an injury to his spinal cord, which brought about paralysis.

NEWS IN BRIEF

A group of college presidents, professors, editors and well known citizens, at a meeting at New York, took preliminary steps for the organization of a new international society to be known as the Scandinavian-American league.

Elmer H. Spaulding, aged 49, supervisor of signals of the Boston and Maine railroad, was struck by an engine in the yard at Boston, receiving injuries from which he died.

Seven persons were injured when a passenger train ran through an open switch and crashed into a string of cars on a siding near Saxton, Pa. The engine and the combination baggage and mail car were wrecked.

RUSH OF MODERN JOURNALISM

Often Shuts Out Everything Except Immediate News

VIEWS OF LORD NORTHCLIFFE

Newspapers Which Make the World Appear a Strange Place Would Quicken International Understanding by Telling the Better Side of Other Peoples--A Joke at Expense of Pilgrims and Plymouth Rock

New York, Nov. 6.—Lord Northcliffe, the English newspaper publisher who, until his elevation by King Edward was Alfred Harmsworth, owner and publisher of the London Mail, London Times, Paris Mail and a number of less widely known journals and magazines, was the guest of honor last night at the banquet of the Pilgrims of the United States at Delmonico's.

LORD NORTHCLIFFE.

Lord Northcliffe began his address by expressing his diffidence in speaking before such a brilliant assemblage of speakers and guests and then said:

"The object of the Pilgrims is the promotion of sentiment of brotherhood among the nations and especially the cultivation of an unwritten friendship between the inhabitants of the United States and of the British empire. Those relations, which have undergone a great many family tiffs in the last 300 years, have, to the best of my knowledge, rarely been so pleasant as at this time.

"There have been times when, from the point of view of John Bull, we should have felt a little happier if, instead of the Pilgrims landing on Plymouth Rock, Plymouth Rock had landed on the Pilgrims."

In discussing newspapers and the news that filters back and forth across the Atlantic Lord Northcliffe said:

"The world, as seen through the newspaper, is a rather strange place. When I come here I read pages of cablegrams, and especially Sunday cablegrams from London, and I see that England is chiefly peopled by suffragettes, impecunious aristocrats and four or five amazing society ladies, "fashionable beauties" whose names and antics are recorded and whose photographs, taken often twenty-five years ago, do steady service regularly.

Cablegrams Are Misleading

"I wonder if it ever occurred to the gentlemen who send these Sunday cables that there must be some other people over there to conduct the gigantic export trade of Great Britain; to manage her cotton mills; to maintain her mercantile fleet, carrying seven-tenths of the world's goods; her shipping yards, and a navy that has been heard of at times.

"On the other hand, when at home, I see what an amazing fellow Uncle Sam is. Apparently nature here is engaged in nothing but tornadoes. Financiers are always in panics; the politicians are all engaged in grafting each other; there is only one law and that the unwritten one. But when I come here all the Americans I meet are of an extremely normal type, and I find a steady growth and prosperity unexampled in my personal observation.

"The cable, unfortunately, tells too little of the superb public spirit of the United States, or of its straining after such ideals as are expressed by the Metropolitan Museum of Arts, the new library, the Museum of Natural History, Mr. Mills' 'hotels,' the Bronx Zoological Gardens—the finest, I believe, in the world—and your splendidly equipped hospitals.

"In the rush of modern journalism there is often not sufficient time to give pause for the consideration of anything excepting immediate news, but there are on both sides of the Atlantic newspapers of less speed and greater spaciousness, which acquaint the people with other things than politics, stock markets, and what the French call faits divers.

"In my humble judgment, the more the newspapers tell the better side of the other peoples, the quicker becomes the international understanding.

"Beyond question, therefore, a newspaper can serve an immense purpose, and especially in times of crises, by remembering that 'a drop of ink makes millions think' and that a 'smartly' written article may do vast damage to foreign relations."

THE MAN WHO KNOWS.

The man who knows more
  Than professor or sage,
Who's really a marvel
  For one of his age,
Is the chap who has never Been ten miles away
From where he was born
  In the fresh scented hay.

To him all the secrets
  Of earth are laid bare.
He solves every problem,
  Makes round holes look square,
Delves into the meaning
  Of passing events,
Makes doubters look doubly
  Like thirty-one cents.

Such things like the tariff,
  The trusts and their tricks
And matters financial
  To pieces he picks.
His learned opponents
  Must take to the woods
And leave him the master
  Right there with the goods.

He knows more about it,
  Not trying to boast,
Than one who has traveled
  From mountain to coast.
And why should he not,
  Let me ask, take the prize
With nothing to do
  But think and grow wise?

Size No Consideration.

"Here's a question."

"What is it?"

"How much ice in a fifty pound chunk?"

"Of ice?"

"Sure."

"Twenty cents' worth."

Wrong Time.

"You made a speech in Stringtown?"

"Yes."

"How did you like the audience?"

"Struck me as cold and unresponsive."

"You got in at the wrong time. Ripe tomatoes were not on the market yet."

Cold Comfort.

"I am striving to forget," said he sadly.

"Are you?" murmured she. "I hope one thing for you."

"What is that?" eagerly.

"That you won't forget to strive."

Easy.

"She is a mean, prying thing."

"Oh, I wouldn't call her such a harsh name."

"Well, what is she then?"

"Just call her a little sister of the sly."

Defining Him.

"That man is a lawyer, you say?"

"Yes."

"But why do you say he is a necessity?"

"Because he knows no law."

A Problem.

When flying has become a fad
  And like the birds we flit,
Seek out a sunny southern spot
  When summer time has quit,
Unfurl our wings fantastic and
  To climes more favored go,
We'd like to ask who'll stick around
  Up north and shovel snow?

TAMMANY HALL IS DEFENDED

Was Absolutely Loyal to National Ticket, Says Murphy

MISSOURI IS SAFE FOR TAFT

Republican Candidate For Governor Polls Highest Vote Ever Cast In State For Any Office--Bryan Gets Six Electors In Maryland--Roosevelt May Continue In Public Life by Going to Senate

New York, Nov. 7.—Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, dectated a statement last night in which he denies specifically that Tammany Hall did not support Bryan.

"It is silly to accuse Tammany Hall of knifing the national Democratic ticket, taking all the circumstances into consideration," said Murphy. "Many persons who are making the charge know better, but hope to make political capital at Tammany's expense.

CHARLES F. MURPHY.

"There is plenty of proof that Tammany was absolutely loyal. The fact that the Democratic candidates on the county ticket received far less than the normal Democratic majority is proof enough in itself that Tammany was not in any way responsible for the Bryan slump. The county ticket suffered because of Bryan weakness.

"Before the convention we knew Bryan could not carry New York, and there was nothing until election to change this belief. Bryan ran so far behind here just because the people were against him.

"I notice that Ohio, Indiana and Minnesota elected Democratic governors, but Bryan lost them, and I haven't heard any charges of treachery to Bryan there. And right here in Erie county, where Mr. Mack is a leader, I notice that the county went for Chanler by a good majority, but Bryan could not carry it. I have not heard anybody charge Mr. Mack with treachery.

"There was no treachery. The whole result was due only to Bryan's weakness and the strength of Taft which pulled Hughes through."

Murphy commented on the charges of treachery made against Tammany by Raymond Robins of Chicago, saying that he had written a letter to Robins demanding that the latter prove his charges.

Roosevelt May Be Senator

Washington, Nov. 7.—That President Roosevelt may be the successor of Senator Platt in the senate is considered by many in Washington as not at all improbable. Those who regard this as possible declare that they have assurance from the president himself that he would not be entirely averse to the acceptance of the senatorial office under conditions as they will be after the 4th of March. So far as known he had made no recent expression on the subject, but he has said within the past year that with Mr. Taft as president he would not feel the same hesitancy about entering the senate that he would feel with someone in the White House with whom his relations were not as intimate as they are with Mr. Taft.

It is even suggested that the abscence of the president on his proposed African hunting expedition need not stand in the way of his election, but rather that such absence might relieve the situation of embarrassment to him in case his friends should desire to press his name.

Split Vote In Maryland

Baltimore, Nov. 7.—Compilation of the official returns from the election, not finished until well after midnight, show that the electoral vote of Maryland will be split, Bryan getting six of the electors and Taft two. On the popular vote (the vote cast for the elector receiving the highest number) Taft carries the state by 561 votes. His elector polled the highest vote, 116,471, while the highest Bryan elector received 115,910.

Record Poll In Missouri

St. Louis, Nov. 7.—Returns compiled by The Republic give Taft the electoral vote of Missouri by a plurality of 3172 over Bryan. The Globe-Democrat places the Taft plurality in excess of 3700.

According to The Republic's figures, the presidential vote polled in Missouri was 19,724 higher than that polled in 1900, which was the high mark. Taft's vote is but 6828 behind the Bryan vote of that year, and complete returns from three missing counties will probably send it ahead of the Bryan vote of eight years ago.

The plurality of Hadley (Rep.) for governor is now placed at 17,651, and complete returns from the three missing counties will probably show that he has polled the highest vote ever cast in the state for any office.

The legislature is now thought to be Democratic on joint ballot by four votes.

Loeb May Go to Cabinet

Cincinnati, Nov. 7.—President-elect Taft, Mrs. Taft and Fred W. Carpenter, private secretary, left here last night for Hot Springs, Va., where Taft will remain for rest and recreation until Thanksgiving. It is said on good authority that Carpenter, who has been Taft's secretary for many years, will be secretary to the president, succeeding in that post William Loeb, Jr., who, it is also said, may have the position of secretary of the navy in the Taft cabinet if he so desires.

Late Figures From Ohio

Cincinnati, Nov. 7.—The complete figures from seventy-three of the eighty-eight counties in Ohio at Tuesday's election give Taft 461,688 to Bryan's 399,412. Harris (Rep.) for governor received 410,878, while Harmon (Dem.) had 431,181. Incomplete figures have been received from the other counties, but they are not included in these totals. The final result, however, will vary little from the above as to the relative strength of the candidates named.

Democrats Profit by Police Bill

Reno, Nev., Nov. 7.—The state police bill, drawn as an emergency measure by a special session of the legislature after United States troops had been sent to Goldfield, which was the cause of the controversy between President Roosevelt and Governor Sparks, has been approved by voters of the state. This bill was the chief issue in the state campaign, and to their decided stand in favor of it the Democrats attribute their victory.

A Republican Legislature

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 7.—The next Delaware legislature will be Republican in both branches. The official count of the Sussex county vote showed that the Republicans got six of the ten representatives from that county instead of five. The house will contain 18 Republicans and 17 Democrats and the senate 11 Republicans and six Democrats.

Taft Plurality Grows

Wheeling, Nov. 7.—With complete returns lacking from only a few counties and closely approximated majorities from these, the Taft victory in West Virginia has grown to a plurality of between 26,000 and 27,000 over Bryan, while the plurality of Glasscock (Rep.) for governor over Bennett is over 12,000 and may reach 13,000.

Two Indictments For Murder

Taunton, Mass., Nov. 7.—The grand jury in the Bristol county court returned a murder indictment against William C. Howard. It is alleged that he suffocated his wife and pushed her lifeless body from a bridge into the water at New Bedford. Hattie Douglass was also indicted for murder. She is accused of having shot and killed her lover, William P. Simmons, after she had enticed him into a boat from a dredger in New Bedford harbor.

Will Not Abolish Commissary

Washington, Nov. 7.—The commissary of the isthmian canal commission will be maintained at Panama and Colon without regard to protests that have been made from merchants in favor of restricting the operations of the commissary, according to Colonel Goethals, who said that this policy was necessary because of the extortionate prices charged by merchants.

Money For Missionary Work

St. Louis, Nov. 7.—An appropriation of $1,060,000 to carry on its work next year in Africa and China was made by the general committee of foreign missions of the Methodist Episcopal church in annual session here. This is the amount collected last year by the Methodist churches in the United States.

The Invincible's Fast Time

London, Nov. 7.—The British battleship Invincible, the latest addition to the British navy, in a trial under seven-tenths of her power, attained a speed of twenty-five knots an hour. It is expected that the new vessel, when working under full power, will reach a speed of thirty knots, a world's record.

Honors to the Dead

Santiago, Cuba, Nov. 7.—Business was suspended yesterday and the entire populace participated in the funeral of Tomas Estrada Palma, former president of Cuba. Twenty-six organizations were in the cortege. The funeral was the largest in the history of Santiago.

Japanese Steamer Disaster

Tokio, Nov. 7.—News has reached here of the loss of the steamer Taish, which was sunk during a storm off Etoro island. One hundred and fifty persons were drowned. Of those aboard only twenty-nine were saved. The Taish was a vessel of 674 tons.

Seventy Days to Select Jury

San Francisco, Nov. 7.—After more than seventy days' work in getting a jury, the trial of Abraham Ruef, on the charge of offering to bribe former Supervisor John J. Furey to vote for the overhead trolley franchise for the United Railroads, has begun.

The Weather Forecast

CONVINCING FACTS.

There is no use denying the fact that Johnson Bros., are surely giving genuine bargains in food values. It will be hard indeed to find a store that is giving such excellent quality at such low prices.

Everything the best that money can buy, is their standard; and their customers know from past dealings that that is absolutely true. Now with our discount system, it is still more of an inducement to trade with us, and you will be surprised to find how fast your discount checks will count up.

We are displaying every day a choice assortment of Cut Meats, with the prices marked in plain figures, so that every one can see what they are paying for or we will cut it to your order, whichever you prefer.

We are pleased that so many of our customers have helped us to make this system a success, for it means a whole lot to them as well as to us. We do not think that any one objects to carrying home a purchase especially when they are paid to do so, which we are doing, with our discount check system.

We are receiving new seasonable goods every day, and it will be to your interest to visit our store and do business with us.

Beef, Lamb and Fresh Pork are all lower and we have a choice lot of Fresh Killed Chicken and Fowl constantly on hand, direct from William A. Drake of Braintree.

A tempting line of New Canned Goods, packed expressly for us.

An excellent stock of New Cereals, Buckwheat, Pan Cake Flour, and all the leading brands of Bread and Pastry Flour.

All kinds of Bottled Goods, Jellies, Jams, Olives and Pickles.

Fresh Hot House Lettuce, Choice Celery, Radishes, Cucumbers, and Fruits of all kinds.

Remember, that every day is BARGAIN day at Johnson Bros., so keep in the road, for all roads lead to our store.

And, remember that we give you 5 per cent discount on all cash purchases, if you take the purchase home, or 2 per cent discount when you ask us to deliver it.

Yours for Quality,

Christmas Hints For Santa Claus' Helpers—An Embroidered Pincushion—Doily Sachet and Other Presents Easily Made.

Any of the gifts pictured in this column may easily be made in an evening.

The pincushion shown is worked out in scrim and decorated with empire wreaths in shaded green ribbon.

The sachet shown can easily be made out of a small doily, which may be embroidered in any appropriate flower.

MATERIALS REQUIRED.

A half yard of white linen scrim.
One bolt of empire green baby ribbon.
Two yards of cluny lace.

EMBROIDERED PINCUSHION.

The sachet pads are held in place by baby ribbons harmonizing with the embroidery tints.

Three yards of pompadour ribbon five inches wide were used in making it.

The ribbon was cut into six pieces of equal length, pointed at one end.

Into the casing thus formed was run featherbone, then covered with fancy stitches of pink and green rope silk matching in shade the figures of the ribbon.

The bag was drawn in the usual way, having a frill two inches deep at the top which was faced with white silk.

The featherbone ring keeps the bag in shape, so that when it is opened all its contents are visible, which in itself is a boon to any one who has searched in an ordinary workbag for some elusive article that cannot be found until the bag has been turned upside down and inside out.

This feature makes it an excellent model to be carried out in black ribbon for a convenient shopping bag.

The tea strainer pincushion is a useful article that needs no particular skill in its development. You buy the strainer and paint a simple flower upon

MATERIALS REQUIRED.

Pasteboard photograph frame.
Half yard heavy green linen crash.
Three skeins green silk.
Three skeins brown silk.

DOILY SACHET.

it, then fill with horsehair and secure this by a cardboard disk, covered with a bit of any bright silk, etc. Conceal the edge of the strainer with a frill of ribbon from one to two inches wide and tie a bow to the handle, by which the cushion hangs.

Gifts For Young Girls.

Set of collar pins.
Crescent brooch, set with pearls.
Gold bar tie pin.
Hand embroidered turnovers and cuffs.
All dainty neckwear.
Gold and silver pencils.
Overnight bags (leather).
Silver garter clasps.
Morocco workbox, fitted.
Ivory or pearl manicure set.
Good standard books.
Set of the American poets.
Engraved initial or school stationery.
Silver toilet utensils.
Cologne and toilet water.
Sofa pillows.
Bureau cushion and cover.
Down quilt.
Shirt waist box.
Silk for dress or blouse.
Hand embroidered handkerchiefs.
Bows for the hair.
Silver slipper buckles.
Carbon prints or photographs.
Plain gold bracelets.

An Artistic Pillow.

An artistic looking sofa pillow may be made from coarse crash. In constructing it use two pieces about eighteen inches square—the front and the back. The former can be decorated with three large conventional tulips placed side by side and running to the top of the cushion. These are cut from leather, painted in natural shades and then glued to the cover. The deep reds and soft greens are most effective on the neutral background of crash, and this pillow will be decidedly handsome.

Buy a Piano by Renting it.

We rent pianos, and by agreement apply all paid toward the purchase. This allows ample trial in your home before a decision is made to buy. If you are pleased with the instrument it can be rented till rent accumulates enough for its purchase, 36 or 48 months' time being given to complete the rental purchase. At your request we will mail catalogue with price-list and full information about our rental purchase plan. Send for our bargain list of used pianos.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

The Junior Alliance service next Saturday evening will be in charge of Miss Minnie Packard and the subject will be Nineveh.

The monthly meeting of the officers and teachers of First Church Sunday school will be held in the chapel on Monday evening at half past seven.

Mr. James Nicol of Coddington street has had a hot house full of chrysanthemums, the largest and handsomest of which he cut and sent to the exhibition in Boston. They should have been prize winners.

A men's table is to be a special feature of the Fragment society fair next Wednesday afternoon and evening at First Church chapel, also a salad and cold meat supper served at six o'clock.

Good progress is being made on the house being built on Munroe road at the corner of Fairmount way; for Mrs. Joseph C. Morse. It has a sightly position on the western slope of Presidents hill, also a good water view toward the east.

Mrs. Laurance H. Sturtevant is to sing at the morning service at First church on Sunday and also at the ordination service on Thursday evening of Rev. C. B. Ames. Among the musical selections Sunday will be the duet, "Hark, hark my Soul" sung by Mrs. Sturtevant and Mr. Plancon.

A coupon published in today's Daily Ledger will admit one lady free, including a reserved seat, to any Tuesday or Thursday Matinee, (except holidays) at the Scenic Theatre. Nothing but the best in the vaudeville line is put on the stage and the moving pictures are the latest issued. They have a pleasing program for next week.

Miss Foster, Miss White, Miss Bishop, Dr. Bowles and Mrs. Rowe wil lhave charge of the next meeting of the Young People's Social society to be held in the vestry of the Wollaston Unitarian church on Tuesday evening, November 17, at 7.45. Any young person of eighteen or over is eligible upon the payment of a nominal membership fee.

One of the most attractive of the new houses recently built on Presidents hill, is that of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Morse nee Packard. The house is on Fairmount way, between Mr. Burgin's and Miss Underwood's and architectually is quite different from anything on the hill adding to the pleasing variety of homes built in recent years in this locality.

The musical service at Bethany church last Sunday evening was of unusual merit, the quartet and chorus work being finely, interpreted, especially the "Sanctus" from Gounod's St. Cecilia, as was also the trio from "Eli" sung by Mrs. Moore, Miss White and Mr. Forrest. Mr. Hayden and Mr. Forrest did effective work in solos as did Mme. Morey at the organ.

Music lovers of Wollaston will be given an opportunity of hearing an artist of unusual ability Wednesday afternoon when Mrs. D. Roy Freeman nee Minnie Coons a pianist who has received much praise both at home and abroad and a former pupil of Professor Xaver Scharwenka of Berlin, will play at the home of Mrs. Frank A. Page for the benefit of the Wollaston Free Kindergarten. Mrs. Freeman will be assisted by Mrs. Mary Sagar soprano, Mrs. Dudley Talbot contralto and Mrs. Percival Moorhouse accompanist.

STOUGHTON court, M. C. A. F., had an official visitation on Thursday evening from Depty Chief Ranger John Givern of Malden and his suite.

Makaria Fraternity

SUNDAY: 12 TO 1—SHARP

Bethany Church, City Square

If YOU are a young man, and not associated with any other Quincy church, YOU are most cordially invited to come to our meeting.

Foot Ball And Other Sports

Quincy is without football of any kind today. The High school team has no game scheduled, and the Fore River soccer team is billed to play at Pawtucket, having the J. & P. Coats team for their opponents. They will have to play hard to win, for the Coats boys are going some now. But the local boys are always in the game, and so a hot contest may be anticipated.

Many Quincy people will go to the Stadium at Cambridge this afternoon to see the big game between Harvard and the Carlisle Indians. This is always a spectacular game, replete with brilliant, open work on the part of the Indians. This year Carlisle has two wonderful dropkickers, Balenti and Thorpe, and on these two men Harvard will keep a watchful eye. Balenti kicked four goals from the field against Annapolis last Saturday, scoring all the points made by the Indians. If the Carlisle warriors get inside of Harvard's 40 yard line today either Balenti or Thorpe will almost surely kick a goal. It will certainly be a great game and if Harvard wins she will be lucky.

MILTON.

The Massachusetts Society of Arts and Crafts will hold a two weeks' exhibit in the Milton Public library beginning Nov. 8.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard C. Plummer of Placerville, California, leave Tuesday for their home. They have been staying with Horace N. Plummer of Maple street.

Mr. and Mrs. James McGregor of Braintree, formerly of Milton, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son born Oct. 30.

Rev. G. H. Gredeford of the East Congregational church of Milton is giving a series of lectures to his people. Some of these are especially for the younger set.

The school committee have elected Miss Adola F. Fitzgerald of Boston as asssistant in the kindergarten grade at the Belcher school, and Miss Edith Thomas a special teacher at the High School.

The first of the series of meetings of the Natural History committee of the Milton Historical Society will be held at the Public Library next Thursday at 4 P. M.

Edwin R. Mead will lecture before the Milton Historical Society Nov. 17, Dec. 15 and Jan. 12.

BARN FROLIC.

At 7.45 o'clock last Saturday evening about 50 guests arrived at the home of the Misses Holbrook, 196 Broadway, Bellevue Park for a Hallowe'en party in the shape of a barn frolic. A large number of the young ladies of the Weston school were present with friends, as well as the principal Mrs. Mathews Richardson, and Mrs. Florence Colburn French, teacher of piano. Miss Helen Grant Holbrook teaches Latin and mathematics there.

The barn was prettily decorated with evergreen, wisteria and barberry. At the entrance there was a huge ghost which welcomed everyone. Other features of the evening were apple bobbing, the floating pumpkin, string chewing and a witch who told fortunes. Several vocal solos were rendered by Mr. St. Clair Wodell of Harvard.

Among those present were: Messrs. Howard, Levenson, Cooutz, Crawford, Fausher, Tuma and Getchliff of Boston University, Messrs. Hallowell and Wodell of Harvard, Mr. Babcock of Technology also Messrs. Sutherland, Gifford, Luman, French, Hope, Sheppard, Cassidy and Poguett. The young ladies were the Misses Healy, Gifford, Sheppard, Connett, Brines, Lowell, Bangs, Cable, Swift, H. Holbrook, M. Holbrook, Parlee, Levenson Hallowell and Reed.

BOSTON WINTER GARDEN.

A great amusement enterprise of a type new to Boston will be opened to the public in the Park Square Coliseum Monday, Nov. 16. It will be known as the Winter Garden. Although the features will be high class they will be of popular character. A special effort will be made to cater to ladies and children, and the best of order will be maintained at all times. Sunday excepted, the garden will be open from 10 A. M. to 10 P. M. daily. The garden will retain the magnificent decorations, and with $5,000 worth of modifications and improvements, the same electrical effects ,as a setting for the various theatres, amusement features and fifty concessions of various kinds throughout the vast auditorium, and the ten-lap bicycle track that will encircle them. Though it is yet too early to catalogue the imposing number of attractions that the garden—the largest indoor one in the world—will contain, it may be said that among them will be a one-ring circus, with the best of the big top and sawdust performers, a moving picture show that seats 1,500, and Williard's famous $15,000 Temple of Music.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY.

A very pleasant hallowe'en party was held Monday evening by the Sunday school of the Atlantic Methodist church. The first part of the evening was given to games, etc., by the young members.

The entertainment started with choice selections given by Mr. Ward on his phonograph. Miss Ruth Cahill played some popular airs on the piano which were well received. An illustrated song followed, sung by Mr. Cahill accompanied by Miss Cahill in which most every one present joined. Some humorous pictures were then thrown on the curtain discribing the trials of Uncle Rastus and his balky mule, which was enjoyed very much by the children. Mr. Cahill favored with several banjo selections accompanied by the piano. The entertainment ended by all singing the illustrated song "America." Refreshments were served by the ladies.

Not only are women pleased with the La France Shoe—they are gratified to find the same easiness, foot comfort, style and wear in every succeeding pair they buy. Any woman who reads the Ledger can find at the Granite Shoe store the La France styles that best meet her special requirements. The more particular a woman is about the fit and appearance of her shoes, the greater satisfaction it is to show her the La France.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it falls to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

AMUSEMENTS.

Keiths Theatre.

Of all the legitimate stars that have come into vaudeville, none has attained greater popularity than Zelie de Lussan, the grand opera prima donna, who will be the leading attraction at Keith's theatre the week of November 9th. Miss de Lussan is particularly popular in Boston, where she will long be remembered as the most noted member of the famous Boston "Ideal Opera Company." This was during the first years of her career as a singer, before she became known the country over as the best interpreter of "Carmen," that America has ever had. Another feature will be Joe Hart's "Bathing Girls." This is one of those big musical numbers that proved so popular in vaudeville during the past few years. Another headline feature will be Charles E. Evans and Company in a sketch called "It's Up To You, William." Others features will be a new presentation entitled "La Petite Revue," which is a decided novelty and in which a large company contribute good singing and lots of comedy. Billy Van, the famous minstrel will also be seen with a new line of humor. Others will be the Six Boueseillis, Londe and Tilly, the Five Musical Spillers, the Kinetograph and the special Keith show.

Boston Theatre.

For the week of November 9th, the Boston theatre will have an attraction that will lend itself particularly to the great stage of that theatre, with all the beautiful stage settings that have now become associated with it, and it will be particularly notable, for the play is one in which Frank Losee made one of his greatest hits. This will be Paul Kester's dramatization of "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," the novel by Charles Major which gained such wide popularity. It will also afford Miss Gordon an opportunity to appear in one of those emotional parts in which she has won such distinction. She will appear as the famous Dorothy Vernon, the red haired, high tempered miss. The story of the play deals with the love of Dorothy for Sir John Manners, of a rival house. It promises to be one of the best melodramas of the kind ever put on by a stock company, and already the greatest interest has been manifested. This producton is in line with those that are making the Boston Theatre the great playhouse for Bostonians. The entire cast will lend itself to the best efforts of this splendid organization.

Castle Square Theatre.

There will be amusement and laughter in abundance at the Castle Square, for the play will be that delightful comedy, "The Man on the Box," and it will acted by the John Craig Stock Company, with an effect that will bring out all its sprightly humor. It was in this play that Henry E. Dixey starred with great success a few seasons ago, and its popularity promises to be even greater at the Castle Square with Mr. Craig. Mary Young and the notable company of players that surround them in the leading roles. Ever since the opening night at the Castle Square there has been a succession of veritable and crowded houses have been, and promise to be, the rule. The box-office is now open throughout the entire day and evening, and many are taking advantage of the subscription system whereby they may secure the same seats week after week for the entire season.

THREE DEAD

Woman and Two Children Suffocated at Daylight Fire

One of the worst fires that Quincy has had for several years was that of Saturday afternoon when a woman and two children lost their lives. The victims were Mrs. Sarah Belcher, wife of Frank A. Belcher, and Elsie and Irene Newhall, the 4 and 3 year old daughters of George Newhall.

The fire was in a two-family house at 11 Grant street, owned by Harry Delory, and occupied on the first floor by William A. Kittredge and his bride of a few months. On the upper floor was George Newhall and his four motherless children with whom lived Asa Pope and Mrs. Belcher.

The fire started in the attic and it had made such headway when discovered that it was only by a miracle that the infant baby was saved. It was discovered by neighbors whose attention was attracted by flames leaping from the rear window. At about the same time William Chase, of 197 Springfield street, and Joseph Greenburg, of 8 Woodcliff street, Boston, were passing along Hancock street on a piano wagon. Mr. Chase jumped from his wagon and rushed to the house and arousing Mrs. Kittredge told her the house was on fire. He then ran up stairs and seeing the baby on the floor took it in his arms and carried it to a place of safety. At that time the whole upper part of the house was burning briskly, and the smoke was so thick that but little could be seen.

By this time the neighbors had succeeded in arousing the men at the car barn and Michael Pitts rang in an alarm at 2.35 from Box 123. A crowd of men also rushed to the house arriving as the teamster came out with the baby. Some of them started to go up stairs to see if there was anyone else there but were driven back by the smoke and flames, for it meant sure death for them to enter.

In the meantime the flames were coming out from the rear windows and the roof of the building was blazing fiercely. When the department arrived it looked as though the building was doomed. A high wind that prevailed at the time only made the fire burn more fiercely.

None of the furniture in the upper part of the house was gotten out, and but little on the first floor, the family there considering themselves lucky to get out with what clothing they had on.

Then the cry went up for Mrs. Belcher and the children. The neighbors began to ask for them, and no one could be found who had seen them. The rumor went around that they had been burned. This only made the firemen redouble their efforts. Four lines of hose were laid and a great volume of water poured onto the flames.

The smoke at this time was something fierce, the street leading to the house being so thick with it that it was almost impossible for one to approach from that direction without danger to themselves. By this time Mr. Newhall and Mr. Pope arrived, and when they learned that their loved ones were probably in the house they were almost overcome with grief.

As soon as Chief Williams learned that there were persons in the house he and his men redoubled their efforts. Ladders were raised to the upper windows and the firemen fought their way into the building through the blinding smoke and intense heat. They soon found the bodies of the two children in the front room. One was on the bed and the other on the floor. In an adjoining room was the body of Mrs. Belcher on the floor near a burned bed.

They had been suffocated by smoke and then had been partly burned, Mrs. Belcher being more badly burned than the children. The effect of the four hydrant streams and the two chemical streams soon got the fire under control, but not before the upper part of the building had been badly gutted. No fire reached the lower part of the building, the damage there being wholly by water.

In the meantime Medical Examiner Jones had been notified, and he and the ambulance from Hall's stable were soon on hand. The charred remains were tenderly lifted and taken in the ambulance to the morgue.

There are several theories as the cause of the fire, but Chief Williams is inclined to believe the cause to have been children and matches. Mr. Newhall used the upper part of the house for a carpenter shop, and the theory is that the children were up their playing and set the house on fire. That they then shouted to their aunt, Mrs. Belcher, who dropped the baby on the floor and rushed up stairs and tried to make her way through the smoke and flames to the front of the house where the children were. That she then went to an adjoining room to open a window and was overcome.

When the firemen raised their ladder to this window it was found closed, and they had to smash it to get their line of hose in. Another theory is that the fire caught from a defective chimney. After the fire it was found that one of the bricks of the chimney was out and that sparks from this may have caused the fire.

Chief Williams estimates the loss on building and contests at $1,500. The two children who lost their lives were very pretty, attractive and bright, and their death is particularly sad, for the mother died but a few months ago. Another sad feature was the fact that another child of this same family was drowned in the cesspool at the Brackett estate on Hancock street a few years ago.

Mrs. Belcher was about 50 years of age, and the wife of Frank A. Belcher who is employed at the Fore River. District Chief Packard sent a carriage for him when it was learned that his wife had lost her life.

Sunday many people visited the scene of the fire and gazed with awe stricken look at the building.

RAPID WORK

Launching of Big Battleship Within Year Of Keel Laying

Should Tuesday be pleasant thousands of people will be present to witness the launching of the largest battleship in the United States Navy, as well as the largest fighting vessel of the world. It is the first of this type of boats to be launched and therefore has created an unusual interest all over the country. The number of people that can be accommodated at the yards is limited and many requests for tickets have been refused. These requests have come from all parts of the country.

There is ample opportunity to witness the launching however, as the shores of Weymouth Fore river afford an unexcelled opportunity to see it. In fact the view from the surrounding shores is if anything better than in the yard. Fully 5000 tickets have been issued and these holders will be confined to an inclosure at the south side of the ship. This is done for the safety of the spectators, for if they were allowed to roam about the yard at will someone might be injured.

Persons holding tickets for this inclosure will be admitted at the gate near the hospital on Howard street, while holders of launching stand tickets will be admitted by a gate further up the street.

It is planned to have the vessel slide down the ways as near noon as possible, and if everything goes well she will be in the water by that time. Immediately after the launching Gov. Black of North Dakota and the official party will be entertained at lunch in the mould loft. Admittance to this lunch will be by special ticket.

The official launching party from North Dakota will arrive in Boston tomorrow morning, and will be met at the terminal by the staff of Gov. Guild, who will do the honors. Gov. Guild and Governor-elect Draper will be unable to be present. Gov. Black will be accompanied by his full staff. There will also be present a large party of naval officials from the Boston navy yard, and it is possible that Assistant Secretary Newbury may be present. It is also probable that the yard will be policed by a company of marines from the navy yard.

The official party will come from Boston on a special train that leaves the South Terminal at 10.15. This train will run to East Braintree, from which point it will be run over the Fore River Company's private track to the works, landing the party within a few steps of the launching stand.

The sponsor of the battleship will be Miss Mary Benton, daughter of Col. John K. Benton of Fargo, North Dakota. She will probably be accompanied by a bevy of pretty North Dakota young ladies who will act as maids of honor.

The keel of the North Dakota was laid Dec. 16, 1907 on the day the Atlantic fleet set sail for the cruise around the world. Unusual rapid progress has been made in her construction, for on the day of her launching she will be 60 per cent completed.

The Fore River contract with the government forbids the giving out of detail information concerning the construction of the battleship, other than the general dimensions and the leading features. Her principal features are length on load water line, 515 feet; length over all, 518 feet 9 inches, extreme breadth to outside of armor, 85 feet 2 5-8 inches; trial displacement about 20,000 tons, trial draft to bottom of keel 27 feet.

Her main batery will consist of ten 12-inch breech loading rifles, two 21-inch submerged torpedo tubes, fourteen 5-inch rapid fire guns, four 3-pounder semi-automatic guns for saluting, four 1-pounder semi-automatic guns, two 3-inch field pieces, and two magazine guns.

Her motive power will be two 144-inch Curtis marine reversible turbines of 25,000 horse power. Her speed will be 21 knots.

PLAY A NECESSITY.

Mr. Joseph Lee, who lectures at the Quincy High School hall this evening on "Play and playgrounds" recently said: "The thing that most needs to be understood about play is that it is not a luxury but a necessity. It is not simply something that a child likes to have; it is something he must have if he is ever to grow up. It is more than an essential part of his education; it is the essential part of the law of his growth, of the process by which he becomes a man at all."

More Launchings On Saturday

It is proposed to launch Tugboats, Nos. 161 and 162 and Carfloat No. 167 on Saturday, November 14. The two tugboats should be in the same or better condition than the last two when launched, and the carfloat should be absolutely complete ready to leave the works. Foremen have been directed to report to the manager any obstacle to prevent the carrying out of these plans. These two tugboats will be the second pair to be launched of the eight now in process of construction for the seacoast artillery service of the War department of the United States.

The first two of these boats launched were named General Robert Anderson and General Richard Arnold. Robert Anderson, after whom the Anderson is named, was born in Kentucky. He was appointed second lieutenant, Third artillery, on July 1, 1825, and first lieutenant, June 30, 1833. He was apointed captain, Third Artillery, Oct. 23, 1841. He became major, First artillery, Oct. 5, 1857, and reaching the rank of brigadier general May 15, 1861. He retired Oct. 27, 1863, breveted major-general for gallant and meritorious service. His principal active service was in warfare against the Florida Indians and the battle of Molino del Rey, Mexico. He died Oct. 26, 1871.

Richard Arnold, after whom the Arnold is named, was born in Rhode Island, and was appointed to the military academy from that state. He was appointed second lieutenant, Third artillery, May 26, 1851, first lieutenant March 17, 1854, and became captain of Fifth artillery May 14, 1861. He became brigadier general of volunteers, Nov. 29, 1862. He was appointed major, Fifth artillery, May 1, 1875. He saw service in the battle of Savage Station, Va., Port Hudson, La., and Fort Morgan, Ala. He died Nov. 8, 1882.

The Submarine Signal Co., Boston, has been awarded contract by the lighthouse board, Washington, D. C., for eight submarine signal bells. Their bid of $4,000 was the only one submitted. Mr. Fulton Blake of Boston, formerly connected with the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., is general manager of the Submarine Signal Co.

Aid asked for Fire Sufferers

A subscription was started this morning to raise funds to aid the families burned out by Saturday's fire. Not only did George Newhall lose two children and Asa Pope a daughter, but their household effects were also practically destroyed, leaving the family in very needy circumstances.

This morning philanthropic citizens took up the matter and after consulting with Mayor Shea it was decided to place a subscription paper at the drug store of C. C. Hearn.

The citizens of Quincy have always been prompt to respond to any call for need and as this is a very worthy case, it is hoped that the response will be generous. Any sum no matter how small, will be gratefully received.

Mrs. F. G. Owens, nee Davis, who has been renewing old acquaintances in this city the past two weeks, returned to her home in Fair Haven, Vt., on Saturday.

SEVERAL PROTESTS

Recount Today Of Votes for O'Connell--Galvin For Congress

A recount of the votes cast for Congressman at the recount election was held this morning on petitions of J. Mitchell Galvin and Joseph F. O'Connell.

The recount was made by the Registrars of Voters. They were assisted by Aubrey R. Keith, Arthur W. Stetson, C. Frank Hardwick, Thomas B. Davenport and E. C. Sargent, who acted as clerks, and by J. M. Nash who was protest clerk.

Mr. Galvin was represented by Lawyer Joseph A. Campbell and Daniel McGrath, and Henry P. Kittredge, represented the Republican City Committee.

Congressman O'Connell was present in person and was represented by Lawyer Harvey Pratt.

There was no change in the count of Ward One, precinct one, but two protests were entered. Both of these protests were entered by Mr. O'Connell. The first was on the vote of the whole precinct, because the ballots did not bear the cancel mark which the law says the box shall make upon them. The box did not cancel any of the ballots.

The second protest was on a ballot upon which the voter had placed his cross against the name of Galvin. A corner had been torn from the ballot in going through the box. This piece the election officers had attached to the ballot by a piece of gummed paper. The claim of O'Connell was that the ballot was defective and should have been thrown out.

Mr. O'Connell also protested five ballots which had an extra cross for Congressmen. These ballots were where the voter marked Democratic candidates except for Congressmen where there was an extra cross which made them blanks. He also protested that some of the envelopes containing ballots were not sealed as required by law.

The recount was completed at 1 o'clock. There were some changes in several of the wards but little change in the grand total. As a result of the recount O'Connell gains one vote and Stevens loses one.

Y. M. C. A. Sunday In Five Churches

Y. M. C. A. day was observed on Sunday in five of the Quincy churches,—Bethany Congregational, the Quincy Point Congregational, the First Presbyterian, the Wollaston Baptist and Christ church.

State Secretary Edward W. Hearne spent the day in Quincy, speaking in the morning at Bethany church, at noon at the Makaria Fraternity meeting and in the afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. building. His morning address was particularly interesting as he spoke from experience not only in various parts of this country, but in a trip around the world, when he spent considerable time in Japan and India. He reviewed the great work the Y. M. C. A. is doing. The tendency was toward the cities, not only from the country, but from foreign shores. The frontier is now in the cities of New England.

Secretary Hearne told of the work of the Y. M. C. A. in teaching English to these immigrants, also of the religious work, the student work, the railroad work, and the industrial work, and the foreign field.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

Probate court for Norfolk county will be held in Quincy Wednesday morning.

A special meeting of the City Council will be held tonight. There are four matters in the call.

Many social and other events are scheduled for this week, and there will be something doing every evening.

The seventeenth annual concert and ball of the Quincy Firemen's Relief Association will be held at Music hall Wednesday evening.

A special meeting of the Quincy Yacht club, to see if the club will issue bonds to the amount of $8000 to enlarge the clubhouse, will be held Tuesday evening.

While the firemen were at the fire on Grant street Saturday afternoon, the relief hose wagon was called ont to extinguish a grass fire in the rear of the Adams Academy.

Although there are contests in several wards there seems to be but little interest in the Municipal caucuses which are to be held Tuesday. The indications are that the caucuses will not be largely attended.

If the custom of giving a man two terms is followed out Councilman-at-Large Alfred H. Gilson will be renominated at the caucuses Tuesday evening. His first year in the Council was as Councilman from Ward One. This year he is serving his first year as Councilman-at-large and is seeking a renomination.

THE RELIGIOUS FAITH OF TAFT

It Is Declared to Be Purely His Own Private Concern

A LETTER FROM ROOSEVELT

Discrimination Against a Candidate Because of His Creed Is an Outrage Against Liberty of Conscience—Preaches Toleration at the Ballot Box—Protestant, Catholic, Christian and Jew In the Cabinet

Washington, Nov. 9.—"Secretary Taft's religious faith is purely his own private concern and not a matter for general discussion and political discrimination," says President Roosevelt in a letter to J. C. Martin of Dayton, O., he made public in which the president answers numerous correspondents. The president says he deferred the publication of the letter until now to avoid any agitation likely to influence the election. The letter says in part:

"Now that the campaign is over, when there is opportunity for men calmly to consider whither such propositions as those you make in your letter would lead, I wish to invite them to consider them, and I have selected your letter to answer because you advance both the objections commonly urged against Mr. Taft, namely: that he is an infidel (Unitarian) and also that he is suspected of sympathy with the Catholics.

"You ask that Mr. Taft shal 'let the world know what his religious belief is.' This is purely his own private concern; and it is a matter between him and his Maker, a matter for his own conscience; and to require it to be made public under penalty of political discrimination is to negative the first principles of our government, which guarantee complete religious liberty, and the right to each man to act in religious affairs as his own conscience dictates. The demand for a statement of a candidate's religious belief can have no meaning except that there may be discrimination for or against him because of that belief.

"To discriminate against a thoroughly upright citizen because he belongs to some particular church, or because, like Abraham Lincoln, he has not avowed his allegiance to any church, is an outrage against that liberty of conscience which is one of the foundations of American life. You are entitled to know whether a man seeking your suffrages is a man of clean and upright life, honorable in all his dealings with his fellows, and fit by qualification and purpose to do well in the great office for which he is a candidate; but you are not entitled to know matters which lie purely between himself and his Maker.

"If it is proper or legitimate to oppose a man for being a Unitarian, as was John Quincy Adams, for instance, as is Rev. Edward Everett Hale, at the present moment chaplain of the senate, and an American of whose life all good Americans are proud—then it would be equally proper to support or oppose a man because of his views on justification by faith, or the method of administering the sacrament, or the gospel of salvation by works. If you once enter on such a career there is absolutely no limit at which you can legitimately stop.

"So much for your objections to Mr. Taft because he is a Unitarian. Now, for your objections to him because you think his wife and brother to be Roman Catholics. As it happens, they are not; but if they were, or if he were a Roman Catholic himself, it ought not to affect in the slightest degree any man's supporting him for the position of president.

"You say that 'the mass of the voters that are not Catholics will not support a man for any office, especially for president of the United States, who is a Roman Catholic.' I believe that when you say this you foully slander your fellow countrymen. I do not for one moment believe that the mass of our fellow citizens, or that any considerable number of our fellow citizens, can be influenced by such narrow bigotry as to refuse to vote for any thoroughly upright and fit man because he happens to have a particular religious creed. Such a consideration should never be treated as a reason for either supporting or opposing a candidate for a political office.

"I know Catholics who have for many years represented constituencies mainly Protestant and Protestants who have for many years represented constituencies mainly Catholic; and among the congressmen whom I know particularly well was one man of Jewish faith who represented a district in which there were hardly any Jews at all. All of these men by their very existence in political life refute the slander you have uttered against your fellow Americans.

"I believe that this republic will endure for many centuries. If so there will doubtless be among its presidents Protestants and Catholics and very probably at some time Jews.

"In my cabinet at the present moment there sit, side by side, Catholic and Protestant, Christian and Jew, each man chosen because in my belief he is peculiarly fit to exercise on behalf of all our people the duties of the office to which I have appointed him. In no case does the man's religious belief in any way influence his discharge of his duties, save as it makes him more eager to act justly and uprightly in his relations to all men.

"The same principles that have obtained in appointing the members of my cabinet, the highest officials under me, the officials to whom is intrusted the work of carrying out all the important policies of my administration, are the principles upon which all good Americans should act in choosing, whether by election or appointment, the men to fill any office from the highest to the lowest in the land."

KERN IS SEEKING SENATORIAL TOGA

He Declares It Has Been His Life Long Ambition

Indianapolis, Nov. 9.—John W. Kern, defeated Democratic candidate for vice president, announced last night that he is a candidate for United States senator to succeed James A. Hemenway. The incoming Indiana legislature will be Democratic on joint ballot by a majority of 12. Others mentioned as probable candidates are John E. Lamb, who was in charge of Democratic national headquarters at Chicago during the last campaign; Thomas Taggart, formerly national chairman; State Senator Slack, Benjamin E. Shiveley and Benjamin Hoffman.

After declaring that it has always been his life long ambition to represent Indiana in the United States senate, Kern said:

"I do not want the place unless the Democrats of Indiana so desire. If a majority favor my election I feel that I am entitled to it. It is scarcely necessary to say that I have no money to put into the race. If I am elected it will be because the people favor me and so declare through their representatives."

The official vote of the candidates for Indiana state offices was completed last night. The official vote for Taft has not been compiled, but his plurality is in the neighborhood of 10,000. Thomas R. Marshall (Dem.) for governor received 348,496 votes and his Republican opponent, James Watson, 334,836.

Morse's Sunday In Prison

New York, Nov. 9.—Assured that every possible step had been taken looking to his release under bonds, Charles W. Morse spent a quiet Sunday in the Tombs. He received no visitors and spent most of his time reading newspapers and writing letters. The United States circuit court of appeals will decide today whether bail will be accepted for Morse. In legal circles the prevailing opinion seems to be that the banker will be released under exceptionally heavy bail, amounting perhaps to $125,000.

An American Dreadnought

Washington, Nov. 9.—A large delegation of naval officers left here for Quincy, Mass., to attend the launching of the battleship North Dakota, which is to be the biggest battleship in the United States navy. She will be sent down the ways and christened tomorrow amid elaborate ceremonies. The launching probably will be the most notable of its kind ever held in this country, marking as it does, an epoch in battleship construction of the world.

Tragedy at Amateur Rehersal

Hibbing, Minn., Nov. 9.—Ellen Geary, aged 12, was shot and killed last evening while rehearsing with other children in an amateur play. She was the "villainess" and Russell Barrett, aged 13, was the "hero." While reciting the lines of the play young Barrett aimed a gun, not supposed to be loaded, at the girl, and pulled the trigger. Ellen fell dead with a bullet in her brain. The tragedy occurred at the home of the father of the boy.

Explosion Caused $50,000 Damage

Montreal, Nov. 9.—Half a ton of dynamite stored on a scow belonging to the Montreal harbor commission exploded with a roar that was heard and a shock that was felt all over the city. Buildings a third of a mile away suffered from shattered windows. A peculiar feature was the way some buildings entirely escaped, while others further away suffered severely. The loss from broken glass will amount to approximately $50,000.

King Showered With Flowers

Oporto, Nov. 9.—King Manuel made a state visit yesterday to this city, which is the centre of Republicanism. Vast crowds in the streets awaited the appearance of the king, despite a driving rainstorm, and gave him a tremendous ovation, women in the balconies showering him with flowers and letting loose flocks of doves.

Troubled Over Ill Health

New York, Nov. 9.—Walworth H. Tappan, well known in the iron and steel trade of the south and middle west and who lived in Louisville, blew his brains out in the Hotel Savoy. Despondency over a nervous affliction which was constantly growing worse is given by his wife as the cause of Tappan's act.

State Prison For Bank President

Denver, Nov. 9.—John E. Godding, president of the defunct State Bank of Rocky Ford, was sentenced to serve eight to ten years in the state prison for making unlawful use of the bank's funds and receiving deposits after he knew the bank to be insolvent.

BURGLARS HAD GREAT NERVE

RAID WAS CAREFULLY PLANNED

Evidently Aware That Head of House Was a Crack Shot and Took No Chances--Made Off With $10,000 Worth of Jewelry and Silverware, Leaving Only Two Wedding Rings Because of Sentiment

New York, Nov. 9.—With the rays of a burglar's dark lantern shining in their eyes and two revolvers held by masked men covering them, the five members of the family of Charles E. Tayntor, a wealthy granite dealer, lay in bed in the Tayntor home at Borough Park, Brooklyn, for more than an hour Sunday morning, while a third masked burglar picked up $10,000 worth of jewelry and silverware. Then the burglars bound Tayntor hand and foot and escaped with their booty.

The burglary was the most daring in months. Tayntor is convinced that the robbers had spent many days planning it. Tayntor, who has a number of rich granite quarries in New England, is known as a crack shot. It is believed that the burglars knew this and took no chances with him.

The three men gained an entrance to the house by breaking a window on the ground floor. The burglar who was ransacking the room found a jewel case with two wedding rings in one bureau and was about to take them, when Tayntor asked him not to. The burglar replied that he would take everything of value he could find. Then one of the burglars standing guard over the family spoke up. "Don't take those wedding rings. I am a married man and have some sentiment about wedding rings," he said.

The rings were left, but two toy banks belonging to Charles and Harold, the Tayntor boys, were broken and rifled of $17. The boys cried and were ordered to be quiet.

When the room had been completely searched the third robber went down stairs and piled up the silverware. He later returned to the bedside and commanded Tayntor to give up a $500 diamond ring he wore. The ring would not come off, so one of the burglars grimly drew a jackknife and was going to cut Tayntor's finger off. Tayntor protested and asked permission to go to the bathroom and soak the ring off with soap and water.

"We will do that ourselves," said the man who appeared to be the leader of the trio, and he did forthwith. After this the leader lifted Tayntor's pillow and found a revolver under it. He laughed and dropped the weapon into his pocket. Then the three men produced a rope and bound Tayntor's hands and feet. They ordered him not to make an outcry for fifteen minutes, saying one of their number would remain on guard that length of time. They then hurried away.

The telephone wires had been cut and an hour elapsed before Tayntor could notify the police. He was able to give a perfect description of the three men, but this will hardly be of any assistance, as the burglars were all dressed alike and wore masks. The burglars wore black suits, black derby hats, kid gloves and white masks. They had woolen "sneaks" over their shoes. Tayntor believes one of the men was a negro and the fact that the men wore gloves would seem to indicate this.

Alleged Murderer Tries Suicide

New York, Nov. 9.—An unsuccessful attempt to commit suicide by poison was made in his cell in the Tombs prison by Enrique De Lara, 17 years old, who stands charged with the killing of Father Arturo Asencio, a San Dominican priest, in Central Park. Emergency measures were at once taken and the youth was hurried to the prison ward of Bellevue hospital, where it is said that he will probably recover. How De Lara obtained the poison is not known.

Ray Lamphere on Trial

La Porte, Ind., Nov. 9.—Ray Lamphere was placed on trial in the circuit court here today on a charge of murdering Mrs. Belle Gunness and her three children by setting fire to the Gunness home last April. The question of whether Mrs. Gunness is dead or alive will form one of the main features of the trial. The defendant was employed by Mrs. Gunness on her small farm near this place.

Highwaymen Murder a Peddler

White Plains, N. Y., Nov. 9.—Thomas Wallman, a pedler, was shot down by highwaymen and robbed of the small amount of money he carried. His body was found on the outskirts of Mount Kisco. There were two bullet wounds in his chest and another in his head. In his left hand he clutched 62 cents in a death grip which the robbers had failed to break.

Pirates' Heads to Come Off

Amoy, Nov. 9.—The small steamer which was wrecked near Tungan was licensed to carry 180 passengers, but 600 men were aboard, and of these only 400 were rescued. Many of the victims were killed while in the water by piratical boatmen. Five of the pirates have been arrested and brought to Amoy, where they will be beheaded.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

"You think of me as your friend?" he asked in a voice that showed he was glad or excited or something that wasn't quite calm.

"Indeed, I do think of you so," I assured him. "And you've proved your friendship for me three times—once on the dock, once by giving up dear Vivace for me and now again tonight when you came to my rescue. I was—really bored in there, you know. And people seem to give themselves so much liberty in—in their jokes when they're masked."

"I have to thank the masks for being at Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox's house tonight," said Jim Brett. "You must be wondering how they let me in, considering that, on account of the masks, everybody had to show their invitation cards at the gates. I had mine all right. But—there are such things as newspaper reporters, as you know to your sorrow. I don't say I am here in that capacity, but I leave you to draw your own conclusions."

"What fun!" I exclaimed.

"It is fun now. I had no right to dare, but I did dare to hope that I might have a glimpse of you. I was sure that I should recognize you."

"If I'd dreamed of your being here, I should have recognized you," I said. "You're taller than any other man here, I think."

"Men grow tall in the west, where I come from."

"Yes, and strong, too—thank God."

"And brave."

"Men are brave all the world over."

"I should think there are none braver than you, Mr. Brett," I said.

"It's glorious for a man like me to hear such kind words from a girl like you, though I don't deserve them," he answered. "But I shall try to deserve them. All my life I shall be better for having heard them from your lips. You can hardly guess what it is to me. Perhaps the thing that comes nearest to it would be if a prisoner for life in some dark pit heard a voice of sympathy speaking to him—actually to him—from a high white star."

"Oh, don't speak of yourself as a prisoner in the dark!" I cried.

"What else am I, when I stop to reflect how hopelessly I must be removed by circumstances from glorious heights—where stars shine."

"But there can be nothing in your circumstances, Mr. Brett," I insisted eagerly, "which need remove you from any heights. I wonder you—so brave and strong, and an American, too—can say that of yourself. Why, you can reach anything, do anything you really wish, if you just want it enough."

"Do you, an English girl, a daughter of the aristocracy, tell me that?" he asked.

"I do. As if that makes any difference—any real, true difference, I mean, when it comes to the heart of things. Oh, I've been thinking of such matters a great deal lately—I suppose because I'm among Americans. It must be that which has put the subject so much in my head."

Some one pushed the orange tree back.

"Tell me what you have been thinking."

"Oh, I can hardly tell. But for one thing, I've begun to see that a man—a man like you, for instance, Mr. Brett—oughtn't to call himself unlucky because he's poor, and has perhaps not been able to have as many advantages as richer men. He ought simply to feel that he has it in him to make himself equal in every way with the highest."

"You mean, he can 'hustle,' as the saying is with us, and get rich, so as to stand on an equality with millionaires?"

"No; it wasn't money I was thinking about. I've met a good many millionaires since I've been here, but I've seen none whom you need look upon as your superior. What I mean is that you've only to be ambitious enough, and not feel that you're handicapped by your start, to attain to what you want in life—yes, whatever it may be."

"You mean all this, Lady Betty?" he asked quickly. "You have as much faith as that in me?"

"Yes," I answered, and the stars and sea seemed to sing with my thoughts. I felt uplifted, somehow. It was a wonderful sensation, which it would be impossible to describe. But I had an exciting impression that Jim Brett shared it. The music of the Hungarian band flowed out from the house and beat in my blood. His voice sounded as if it beat in his too.

"You can't dream what my ambitions are or maybe you wouldn't say that."

"I am sure they would only be noble ones."

"It's true, they are noble. Yet you might not approve. But they're part of my life. I couldn't give them up now and live."

"I should like to hear about them," I said, almost more to myself than to him.

"Some day, if we meet again—and I mean we shall, since you have called me friend—perhaps you will let me tell you about them. I shall ask you to listen—but not now; I daren't now. The time hasn't come. Only promise this, Lady Betty, that you won't forget me, that you'll think of me kindly sometimes."

"I do think of you very often," I said, "and talk about you to Vivace. Poor little Vivace. He doesn't forget. How he did whimper when I had to drag him away from you that day in the wistaria arbor at Central park. This isn't unlike that arbor, is it? There's wistaria here too. I believe I shall always think of that day when I see wistaria. It is odd we should meet again next time in a place so much the same—and just as unexpectedly."

"Just as unexpectedly," echoed Mr. Brett in an odd, thoughtful tone. "It's wonderful that we should meet at all—considering everything." Then he laughed, rather bitterly, I thought. "Aren't you afraid of me, Lady Betty, after your experience of journalists—since I've half hinted to you I may be acting in that capacity tonight?"

"Afraid of you?" I repeated, laughing. "As if I could be. I would trust you in everything."

As I said that a lot of people came out of the maze in the marquee by the exit Mr. Brett had found for me. They streamed into the dimly lighted pergola in their fantastic costumes, laughing and talking, and the beautiful peace of the blue night—broken only by the throb of distant music—was gone completely.

I had thought of taking off my mask, but I was glad now that I'd kept it on.

They came toward us, all in great spirits, having a game of "follow my leader," and their leader, a Chinese mandarin, was offering to guide them to the Cave of Aladdin. I was glad that the Flame wasn't in the gay procession. Evidently he had missed me and gone some other way, or else he was too angry to wish to find me again.

The crowd stopped to speak to us, making jokes in disguised voices. Some of the things they said made me feel that it would be uncomfortable to linger behind with the Puritan when they had passed on.

"Let's join them, shall we?" I asked. "They're going to Aladdin's cave. Wouldn't you like to see it?"

"Yes," he said. And we followed the wild party at a discreet distance.

We went into the house again by a roundabout way, and it wasn't until we were in the big hall that we learned just how Aladdin's cave was to be found. On a background of dark red flowers made into a great shield and hung over a door glittered and scintillated three words in electric light, "To Aladdin's Cave." The letters had been lighted up only since I had been gone, for I suppose the idea was to make everyone go into the maze first.

We had to pass through several rooms and corridors, all of which had been emptied of furniture and lined with canvas scenery cleverly painted to illustrate events in the story of Aladdin. Everything was shown up to the time that Aladdin went down into the cave at the bidding of the magician disguised as his uncle, and then came the entrance of the cave itself, which was done in imitation rock work. But I knew that it was the way down to the cellar. Either the stairs had been removed or else covered up with a theatrical kind of embankment that made a winding path twisting back and forth under a roof of the imitation rock and sloping always downward. At the bottom was a screen of spun glass made to look like a falling cataract of bright water, and until you had passed out from behind it you saw nothing except a glow of rosy light filtering through the transparent glass. But when you did come out, unless you were a stick or a stone, you couldn't resist giving an "Oh!" of surprised admiration.

The whole cellar—at least all of it that was left visible—had been turned into a fairy cave of jewels. The walls and ceiling looked like rocks studded with blazing rubies and flashing diamonds. The rough pillars which supported the floor of the house above were great sparkling stalactites and stalagmites. The cemented floor was covered with sand that glittered like diamond dust, and there were fruit trees and rosebushes, rows of tall hollyhocks and beds of tulips, all apparently made of illuminated jewels, something like the transformation scene in a pantomime they once took me to see, only a hundred times prettier.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

Mrs. E. Frank Mitchell has severed her connections as clerk, with the Mt. Wollaston bank.

Miss Minnie Hardwick has been confined to her home on Revere road, the past three weeks by illness.

Twin sons were born last Friday to Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Wilson of Revere road. One lived but a few hours.

The annual roll call of John Hancock lodge of Odd Fellows will take place Wednesday, Nov. 18. Rev. F. M. Gardner will deliver an address.

Members of Manet Encampment I. O. O. F. will hold a barn dance in Faxon hall on Thursday evening. A grand good time is looked forward to.

Mrs. Charles Morrow of Quincy on company with Mrs. J. W. Brown of Brockton, has gone to Foxcraft, Me., to spend three weeks with the latter's sister Mrs. Charles Cass.

E. L. Green of Botolph street Atlantic who moves Tuesday with his family to West Brookfield, will be greatly missed, having made many friends while a resident in this city.

Mrs. MacDonald who has been the guest of Mrs. Jessie L. Drake of Saville avenue and of Dr. Gordon and family of Hancock street for several weeks, returned to her home at P. E. I. Sunday.

Twenty-three names were added to the voting lists at the meeting of the Registrars of Voters on Saturday night, as follows: Ward One, 8; Ward Two, 2; Ward Three, 4; Ward Four, 5; Ward Five, 1; and Ward Six 3.

The regular meeting of W. R. C. will be held tomorrow at 2.30 P. M., when the work will be inspected by Mrs. C. E. Mellen, president of Corps 94, Braintree. In the evening a supper and entertainment for members and their husbands.

James Duncan of Quincy, international secretary of the granite cutters union and first vice-president of the A. F. of L., left last week for Denver, Colo. Mr. Duncan is a delegate to the 28th annual convention of the A. F. of L., in Denver.

The ladies of First church are to have a sale and supper in the chapel of the church on Wednesday afternoon and evening to which admission is free. A specialty has been made of hand-made underwear, fancy and useful articles, home-made candy and a tempting supper.

Alfred N. LaBrecque, the hustling newspaper man of Houghs Neck, is making a strong fight for the nomination for the City Council from Ward One. His managers at Houghs Neck are prepared to hustle from the time the polls open tomorrow at noon till they close at 9 P. M.

The Quincy Point Social club's annual minstrel show is only a little over a week away. Tuesday and Wednesday, Nov. 17 and 18, are the dates set, and "Dom" Keegan is working hard to make the show a bigger hit than it was last year. It promises to be the best thing ever seen in Music hall and no one should miss it. Dancing the second night.

PRIZE CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

BRITISH DREADNAUGHT.

One of the greatest dreadnaughts now afloat was launched at Devonport, Eng., on Saturday, when the Collingwood took her maiden dip. She will not have this distinction very long, however, for the North Dakota is a bigger boat than the Collingwood, and in another 24 hours she will be riding gracefully at the docks of the Fore River shipyard in Quincy.

Masonic Bodies At Church Service

About 200 Masons and members of the Order of Eastern Star attended on Sunday afternoon "a service for the promotion of brotherhood" held at the Wollaston Congregational church on invitation of Rev. Edward Abbot Chase, chaplain of two Masonic lodges. The bodies represented in nearly equal numbers were Massachusetts lodge, A. F. and A. M., Boston; Rural Lodge, A. F. and A. M., Quincy; Wollaston Lodge, A. F. and A. M., Quincy; Saint Stephen's Chapter, R. A. M., Quincy, and Quincy Chapter, No. 88, O. E. S.

A special printed program was prepared, and included music by the regular choir of the church: Mrs. Mary Hastings Slade, Miss Ida Louise Poore, Mr. F. Lyman Hemmenway and Mr. William Howard; Miss Ida F. Hinckley organist. Also responsive lesson, scripture lesson, prayer and response, and address. In some of the musical numbers the audience was invited to join, which they did heartily.

The address of Rev. Bro. Chase was particularly appropriate for the occasion, on the subject—"And ye are brethren."

Foot Ball And Other Sports

Somerville sprung a surprise Saturday by completely outclassing the "silent eleven" from Malden High. It was 17-0 at the end of the game, and Malden had been shown up in fine style. It was the first time this year Malden's goal line had been crossed, and Somerville did it in the first five minutes of play.

"Johnny" Finn of West Quincy, the former Adams Academy and Boston College athlete, is not at St. Ansehn's college, Manchester, N. M. Finn is holding down one of the guard positions on the varsity football team and is playing a good game. Jack's forte is baseball however, and the spring will see him shooting 'em over in his old time way.

Medal play vs. bogey was the schedule of the Wollaston Golf club at Montclair on Saturday. On account of the high wind, low scores were made. A. H. Goodale won by 2 down. In the finals for the Schurmerer cup, A. H. Goodale beat J. F. Emery 4 up, 2 to play.

Saturday foot ball games:
Harvard 17, Indians 0.
Yale 10, Brown 10.
Dartmouth 10, Princeton 6.
Andover 12, Exeter 0.
Waltham 12, Newton 0.
Dorchester 28, Commercial 0.
Groton 11, Milton Academy 6.
Everett 17, Salem 12.

WARD TWO CANDIDATE.

Every Republican voter in Ward Two should make it a point to mark a cross opposite the name of George H. Corliss at the Republican Caucus, Tuesday, to be held at Hose House, Quincy Point, 12 noon to 9 P. M.

Mr. Corliss, who holds a responsible position with the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., is 28 years of age, and has been with the Fore River company ever since he came to Quincy six years ago. Previous to taking up his residence in this city he was associated in the law business with General William A. Pew, classmate at Harvard of President Roosevelt.

At present Mr. Corliss it attending the Harvard modern government course held at the Harvard Administration Building, Boston, two evenings a week, being taught by Prof. A. Lawrence Lowell, who without doubt will be chosen the new president of Harvard University upon the resignation of President Eliot.

A vote for Mr. Corliss, is a vote for good government and a business administration of our municipal affairs.

PATROL WAGON DEMOLISHED.

There was a lively time for a few minutes at the police station Saturday night when the horse that draws the patrol wagon bolted and ran away. It was about 12.30 A. M. The horse had been harnessed to the wagon to answer a box call. Officer Cahill had just mounted the driver's seat when the horse made a jump and ran. Officer Cahill tried to hold the animal and guide him, but was unable to do so. The horse went directly across the street and jumped the fence surrounding the Marsh property. Fully sixty feet of the fence was taken down as the wagon struck it. Then something broke, and the forward part of the wagon dropped to the ground. The springs dug into the ground and acted as an anchor for they held the horse firmly. By that time officers reached his head and secured him. The wagon springs were broken and the front part damaged somewhat. Officer Cahill, the driver, was uninjured.

BETTER THAN 26 KNOTS.

The three days standardization tests of the scout cruiser Chester were finished Saturday, and on the evening of the same day, she left for the coaling station at Bradford, R. I. The officers of the trial board took the boat for Boston. The tests were very successful in every way, and the officers feel very well satisfied. The Chester was handicapped by extra weight, but still kept up her record made on the first trial and did everything required with apparent ease and great success. Her fastest mile was 26.8 plus, made during a four-hours' run. Five other runs were made at an average speed of 25.8.

Friends of Aloysuis Carey will be pleased to know of rapid advances at the local post office. "Al" is now known as assistant superintendent of the Quincy office, moving up to this position when John McDougal was made superintendent of the Wollaston office.

Fore Rivers Lose Again

The Fore River soccer team continued its losing streak on Saturday, when tiley were beaten again by the Coats team at Pawtucket. The score was only 3-2, to be sure, but that was enough to defeat the local team. This is the third straight defeat for the Fore River boys, and almost puts them out of the running for the championship.

Saturday's game was close and exciting throughout both halves, and the winner was in doubt right up to the end. Although closely contested the game was not marred by any unnecessary roughhouse play.

Harvey, Sunderland and Wilmot played well for the winners, and D. McDonald, Melville and Elliot for the losers.

The summary:

DIPLOMAS PRESENTED.

Sunday was promotion day at the Bethany Bible school which is graded the same as the public schools of the city. A mass meeting of the whole school was held.

The graduating classes of the primary department recited the 23d Psalm, the school sang "America," and Melville P. Hayward, the assistant superintendent led in prayer. Supt. E. W. Branch spoke briefly. The school then by vote made several contributions to missions. Rev. E. N. Hardy the pastor addressed the school briefly and then diplomas were presented as the pupils were graduated from the beginners department to the primary, from primary to the junior, from junior to the intermediate, from the intermediate to the senior. Over 100 diplomas were presented.

WATERWAY IMPROVEMENTS.

(Special from Washington, D. C.)

Now that the presidential election is settled for the next four years, the sixty-first congress elected and the people of the United States given an opportunity to take an account of stock, looking to the future of the Nation, the subject of a broad and comprehensive treatment of the waterways of the Republic cannot fail to grow in importance or prominence.

There is probably no one question in which so many of our citizens are so vitally interested, as that of waterway development, which is evidenced by the number of associations, having distinctive projects in view and which have been urged with enthusiasm throughout the year now passing by conventions with out number.

The culmination of the work of these conventions will come however at the fifth annual convention of the National Rivers and Harbors congress which meets in this city on the 9th, 10th and 11th of next month, indications pointing to the largest and most enthusiastic gathering of prominent citizens of the Republic ever held for the purpose of urging a comprehensive policy of waterway improvements upon the Federal Government.

Officials of the congress who have the arrangements for the National Convention in hand do not hesitate to say that there has been much more inquiry as to the subjects to be discussed at the meeting next month and the personnel of the speakers than at any previous convention ,and that already the delegates appointed far out-number those at this time last year.

Friends of river and harbors improvement in all sections of the country should see to it that strong delegations be sent to Washington next month.

While the National Rivers and Harbors Congress does not antagonize a single project looking to water highway betterment, it is a well-settled fact that until the Federal Government establishes and puts into effect a waterway policy, no special project no matter what its merits may be, or how strongly it may be advocated, can hope for more rapid advancement, than in the past. It is also a patent fact that for internal improvements, such as rivers and harbors, no special legislation, for the benefit of any particular section, can, under our form of government, be secured, so that all are dependent upon the establishment of a broad and liberal policy looking to waterway improvements.

Today's Court.

A. Corydon White, Jr., and Richard H. Randall were fined $15 each for exceeding the automobile speed limit at Milton.

Pasquali Baloni and Rosoni Comparino were fined $20 each on two complaints for violation of the game laws at Braintree.

Robert A. Pember was arraigned for keeping a dog without a license at Quincy and was fined $10.

—Since a competent supervisor has been put in charge of the High Street playground of Pawtucket, R. I., it has become an abode of order, and it is probable that the results now being achieved will lead to the establishment of a larger number of grounds next summer.

Telephone Talks

Keep in touch with the world —and see to it that the world may keep in touch with you.

Party-Liners And the Golden Rule

If they were co-tenants of a building they would be careful not to infringe upon the rights of others. That same regard for the equities should keep them from infringing by appropriating to themselves more telephone service than can be exacted as their fair share of the capacity of that line.

Lengthy conversations on unimportant matters, the prattling intercourse of children, phonograph concerts, and the like—these sometimes congest party lines and give cause for protest from other tenants in common.

A party line telephone has been likened to a spur track on a main line of railroad. But there is this important qualification—when the telephone spur track is in use the entire main line is closed to traffic, not merely to the other spur track on the line, but also to incoming trains consigned to any part of the line.

Ordinary regard for the principle of the Golden Rule will do more to avert party line difficulties than all the rules any telephone company may promulgate.

Arthur B. Hultman For City Council

To the Voters of Ward Two:—

I am seeking election as Councilman from Ward Two, and I desire your support. The Caucus will be held on November 10th, at Hose House, Quincy Point, from 12 M. to 9 P. M.

I am in favor of appropriations being withheld until bidding for city work has closed, instead of appropriating money first and calling for bids afterwards, as at present.

I am also in favor of the proposed extension of the Street Railway tracks through Chubbuck street, so that the public generally may have the benefit of it, as well as the employees of the Fore River Company.

I shall advocate the perfecting of Police protection for my district and also the very careful scrutiny of all applications for Licenses.

In the expenditures of Public Money I favor the most rigid economy consistent with Progressive Municipal Administration, thereby preventing the inflation of property valuation, and the further increase of our Tax Rate.

If chosen one of the three men who will represent this Ward in the City Council during the coming year, I shall give to all questions, coming before that body, my most careful attention and best judgment, with a view to having them solved justly for all concerned.

Should you desire to know my views on any other question likely to come before the Council, I shall be pleased to hear from you before the Caucus.

Respectfully,
ARTHUR B. HULTMAN.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

CONVINCING FACTS.

There is no use denying the fact that Johnson Bros., are surely giving genuine bargains in food values. It will be hard indeed to find a store that is giving such excellent quality at such low prices.

Everything the best that money can buy, is their standard; and their customers know from past dealings that that is absolutely true. Now with our discount system, it is still more of an inducement to trade with us, and you will be surprised to find how fast your discount checks will count up.

We are displaying every day a choice assortment of Cut Meats, with the prices marked in plain figures, so that every one can see what they are paying for or we will cut it to your order, whichever you prefer.

We are pleased that so many of our customers have helped us to make this system a success, for it means a whole lot to them as well as to us. We do not think that any one objects to carrying home a purchase especially when they are paid to do so, which we are doing, with our discount check system.

We are receiving new seasonable goods every day, and it will be to your interest to visit our store and do business with us.

Beef, Lamb and Fresh Pork are all lower and we have a choice lot of Fresh Killed Chicken and Fowl constantly on hand, direct from William A. Drake of Braintree.

A tempting line of New Canned Goods, packed expressly for us.

An excellent stock of New Cereals, Buckwheat, Pan Cake Flour, and all the leading brands of Bread and Pastry Flour.

All kinds of Bottled Goods, Jellies, Jams, Olives and Pickles.

Fresh Hot House Lettuce, Choice Celery, Radishes, Cucumbers, and Fruits of all kinds.

Remember, that every day is BARGAIN day at Johnson Bros., so keep in the road, for all roads lead to our store.

And, remember that we give you 5 per cent discount on all cash purchases, if you take the purchase home, or 2 per cent discount when you ask us to deliver it.

Yours for Quality,

LOAN ORDERS

One Passed Another Reported At Meeting of City Council

A special meeting of the City Council was held Monday evening. The meeting was called by the Mayor to act on the following matters:

"To act upon an order appropriating $12,000, for an addition to the Lincoln schoolhouse.

"To act upon an order to provide funds for appropriations made under orders, 38, 159, 194, 216, 217 and 283.

"To act upon order No. 277, a Loan order.

"To certify and attest copies of the records of votes for the several candidates at the last State election."

ELECTION RETURNS.

The Committee on Elections reported the result of the election of Tuesday, Nov. 3, already published in this paper. It was declared as read.

LINCOLN SCHOOL.

Councilman Bryant offered an order for $12,000 for building a four-room addition to the Lincoln school building. Read and referred to Finance Committee.

LOAN ORDERS.

Councilman Bryant offered a loan order for $22,200 to provide funds for the additions to the Lincoln school, the Grove street draining the Sea street relocation, furnishings for Coddington schoolhouse, completing Broadway in Ward Two, and completing Smith street. Read and referred to Finance Committee.

The loan order for $1,150 to provide funds for a fire alarm box, repairs of the Atlantic fire station and concreting the basement of the West Quincy fire station, took its second reading, and was passed under suspension of the rules.

Adjourned at 7.50 until Monday, Nov. 16.

The absent members were: Councilmen Broughton, Curtis, Falconer and Hogan.

THIS WEEK AT SCENIC.

An excellent bill has been arranged by Manager Chenoweth for the patrons of Scenic for this week. Three vaudeville acts an illustrated song singer with several interesting pictures make up the programme. High Long Dynes, the Chinese juggler mimic, is one of the cleverest all around performers seen on the Scenic stage this season. His imitations of a girl singing a song are very good, and cause many encores.

Elsa Ford the dainty dancing soubrette, is a favorite in Quincy, having appeared here before in her pleasing impersonation of "Buster Brown." Musical May, is a musician that "plays them all." His act is very clever, a feature being playing of the regulation army calls on an army bugle. The pictures are up to the usual high standard.

The Constipation Evil

IS RESPONSIBLE FOR MOST CASES OF PILES.

Constipation paralyzes the blood vessels of the lower bowel, and often causes piles. Women, and all other indoor workers, are the most frequent sufferers. But curing constipation alone won't cure piles. A special medicine is needed—internal treatment, to strengthen the flabby veins and start pure blood circulating.

The Battleship North Dakota

Successfully Launched By Fore River Company At Quincy Today In Presence of 10,000

With cheers loud and long from a gathering of fully ten thousand men, women and children, the North Dakota, the largest battleship in the United States navy, as well as the largest battleship in the world, was successfully launched this noon from the works of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., fully 60 per cent completed. Unusual rapid progress has been made in the building of this vessel and the Fore River Company has established a new record, for it was not until Dec. 16, 1907, that the keel of the vessel was laid. Aside from being the largest battleship she is also the first vessel of the new type of 20,000 tons battleships to be launched.

Hundreds of workmen have been busily at work for the last few weeks getting the vessel ready for launching so that today everything was in readiness to knock away the shores and to saw through the soul piece, the last blocks which held her on the ways.

Requests for tickets came from far and wide, but owing to lack of room the number of tickets issued was limited to five hundred. Holders of these tickets were confined to an inclosure at the south side of the vessel, as it was feared if they were allowed to roam about the yards some one would be injured. Although the number of tickets issued was limited, thousands were able to witness the launch from the shores of the Fore river which afforded an excellent opportunity. These shores were black with humanity, both at Quincy Point, North Weymouth and East Braintree.

Final preparations for the launching were commenced early this morning, and when the official launching party arrived but little remained to be done. The North Dakota party arrived in Boston this morning at 7 o'clock and were met at the South Terminal by Brig. Gen. William B. Emery, Maj. Talbot Aldrich and Maj. Philip S. Sears, who represented the state of Massachusetts. Carriages were immediately taken for The Vendome where breakfast was served.

At 10.15 a special train left Boston for the shipyard. This train was run to East Braintree from which point it was taken over the private track of the Fore River Co, to the yard, landing the party within a few feet of the launching stand. As the train came to a stop, Gov. John Burke of North Dakota, and his staff, resplendent in gold lace, stepped from the train and were met by President Bowles of the Fore River Co. Gov. Burke presented Miss Mary Benton, daughter of Col. John K. Benton of Fargo, North Dakota, who was the sponsor of the vessel. Miss Benton was accompaned by Mrs. Alice Nelson Page of Grand Forks, North Dakota, who was her chaperon.

President Bowles presented Miss Benton with a bouquet of American Beauty roses which she carried in her hand and a corsage bouquet of violets Mrs. Page was also given a bouquet of violets.

The party were immediately escorted to the launching stand that had been erected about the bow of the vessel, and which was gaily decorated with the National colors. Hardly had the party reached the launching stand when a rope of tri-colored ribbon, to which was attached a bottle of wine, was lowered from the deck and placed in the hands of Miss Benton.

Along the deck of the battleship was a streamer from which floated the flags of the international code. The American and Fore River flags also floated from her masts.

Glancing quickly about to see that all was in readiness, President Bowles gave the signal to commence operations. The next minute the rapid tap of two hundred hammers was heard as they drove home the wedges that lifted the battleship from her keel blocks. This was soon over and then a second whistle sounded, which was the signal to take down the shores. All was now in readiness. Nothing remained but to saw away the soul pieces. One more hasty glance and President Bowles gave the signal to saw away. There was a short rasping sound as the saws made their way through the four inch soul piece. Then came a crackling sound followed by the cry "There she goes." It was then 12.27.

As the vessel began to move slowly down the ways, President Bowles cried out "strike," and Miss Benton with a swing of the arm struck the steel bow with the bottle, which was inclosed in a wire screen. As the sparkling wine ran down the sides of the bow she cried out—"I christen thee, North Dakota."

As the battleship began to move, the whistles in the yard shrieked out their welcome which was taken up by the thousands of spectators, who threw their hats into the air waved flags and handkerchiefs, and shouted themselves hoarse. As the vessel gained headway there was a succession of reports that sounded like a gattling gun. This was the stop chain breaking. Striking the water a mighty wave was sent bowling toward the Weymouth shore that would have swamped any craft in its wake.

As soon as she was clear of the ways, the anchors were let go and a half dozen tug boats were quickly at her side and towed her to the fitting-out dock.

It was a notable gathering that were present on the launching stand, among them being representatives of many states as well as foreign countries. in addition to a large party from North Dakota. Among those on the launching stand were:—Brig. Gen. William B. Emery, Maj. Talbot Aldrich and Maj. Philip S. Sears, representing the state of Massachusetts, and the following:—

*From North Dakota

Immediately after the launch the guests were escorted to the mould loft by the band where a lunch was served. Then President Bowles proposed three cheers for North Dakota and Miss Benton the sponsor, which was followed by cheers for President Bowles and the Fore River.

President Bowles then spoke briefly on the advantage of a merchant marine and introduced Mayor William T. Shea of Quincy who extended the welcome of the City of Quincy.

Your Excellency, Governor Burke of North Dakota. Adjutant enGeral Brighan representing the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Fellow Americans. On behalf of the City of Quincy, I extend to you the freedom of this city, on this most auspicious occasion. And a most auspicious occasion it surely is. Today the largest and most powerful battleship of the United States navy has been launched from the yards where it was built, within the confines of a historic city by the Atlantic seaboard and named for vigorous state of the prairie-girded northwest, by one of the fairest daughters of that Commonwealth. Today the citizens of North Dakota and Massachusetts stand united by a bond of friendship as permanent and as powerful as the union of states which is typified by the gallant flag this battleship flies. Wherever the call of duty may send this noble ship in years to come; whether her mission be a peaceful one or whether she clears her decks to meet a more serious situation, the prayers and hopes of two great Commonwealths will follow her with a fealty that years cannot diminish.

The North Dakota will be a splendid addition to the strong right arm of the republic, the United States navy. She will be a credit and an honor to the state whose name she bears, to the state where she was built and to the city and company which has launched her here today. Of this I feel confident because I know the men who built her. In her construction is represented not only the present development of the United States navy but the genius and far-sightedness of other naval officers of years gone by, who worked and planned for the development of the navy that represents our country today and will represent it in the years to come. Among these there was none who planned higher or worked harder to place his country's flag in a respectable position upon the high seas than Admiral Bowles, the president of this great shipbuilding company.

Let us not forget, we who are present today at this launching that we are witnessing not only the naming of the biggest ship in the United States navy but that we are also testifying by our presence to the honor of the Fore River company in that it has completed to the launching point, the quickest piece of shipbuilding ever done in this country. It is less than a year ago since the keel was laid and today she rides the sea sixty per cent completed.

So, you see, this occasion is one of double significance. May the future of this ship be as successful as her history up to this point. May she ever bring honor and credit to the government she represents, to the state for whom she is named, for the Commonwealth wherein she was built and launched ,to this historic city by the sea and—may she never strike her flag!

The launching of a vessel of the size of the North Dakota is a difficult job, as great care must be exercised in order to prevent her grounding on the opposite shore. Her momentum as she goes down the ways is something terrific. To prevent any occurance of this kind a hugh barn door was built across her stern. This served as a break water and checked her speed considerably. In addition to this four 2 1-2 inch steel chains were used. These chains were caught up every few feet in a loop, or as they are called "stops." There were fifty single and one double stop on each chain. These stops were made of 8 1-2 inch manila hawser cut into lengths of 18 feet 6 inches each. This required nearly 5000 feet of hawser, and 600 fathoms of chain. As the vessel slid down the ways these stops broke, each serving to check her speed.

The launching weight of the North Dakota was 9,000 tons. Four tons of grease were used on the ways.

Timely Discovery And a Good Stop

The alarm from Box 121 at 10.35 Monday night was for a fire in the new house of Joseph C. Morse on Presidents hill, and but for its timely discovery would have resulted seriously.

The fire was in the front hall, and appearances indicated that it had started from spontaneous combustion among some paint rags.

It was discovered by Clarence Burgin who resides in a neighboring house. Mr. Burgin had disrobed and was about to jump into bed when he saw the fire. Rushing to the telephone he called up the central fire station, then hastily dressing he ran to the box and pulled in the alarm.

The Central station apparatus had started on the still alarm and was just turning into Dimmick street when the bell alarm sounded, having made remarkably quick time.

When the department arrived they found the fire to be in the wall near the stairway leading from the hall to the second floor. A chemical stream was carried through the window, and brought to play on the fire. It was necessary however to cut away some of the plastering to get at the fire. Prompt work prevented the fire spreading much.

Some idea of the heat of the fire can be gained when it is said that the woodwork about the outer door, some feet from the fire, was so hot you could not place a hand on it.

The fire was confined to a space near the foot of the stairs. The damage will not exceed $100. The house was practically completed and Mr. Morse expected to occupy it in a few days.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

An old time barn dance will be held in Wollaston hall on Friday, November 20, by the Dorothy Q. lodge L. O. of I. O. L.

The Ladies Benevolent society of the Wollaston Congregational church will meet in the vestry on Wednesday afternoon November 11.

At a meeting of the furniture dealers at the American house, Boston, last week, Henry L. Kincaide of this city was the presiding officer.

A special meeting of the Wollaston Congregational church will be held this Tuesday evening, to consider whether the church will dispose of any of its unproductive land and whether it will continne the free-pew system.

An immense toy yacht and a beatiful large wax doll are on exhibition in store windows in Wollaston park which will be given to the boy and girl collecting the most money toward the new church fund of the Park and Downs Congregational church.

FUNERAL OF STEPHEN C. BRENT.

The funeral of Stephen C. Brent of Washington street, Quincy Point, was held at 2.15 on Sunday at the Forest Hills chapel. Rev. A. R. Atwood, pastor of the Washington Street Congregational church, officiated at the services.

Mr. Brent had been in ill health for several months, but nothing serious was apprehended till he had a shock on Thursday. He died the next day. He is survived by a widow and one daughter, who have the sympathy of a wide circle of friends. Mrs. Brent was prominent in church work at the Point, being a member of the Congregational church, and secretary of the Ladies' Aid society. The interment was in the Forest Hills cemetery.

MORSE PLEADS BANKRUPTCY

Doubtful If He Will Be Ever Able to Pay Debts

HIS STATEMENT UNDER OATH

Not In Accordance With Previous Claims That He Would Adjust His Affairs to Satisfaction of All Creditors--Revelation Made In Argument of Question on Bail, Which Is Not Yet Settled

New York, Nov. 10.—Charles W. Morse, who, two years ago, was rated as being worth upwards of $20,000,000, yesterday swore under oath that he had not enough money or securities left from his vast fortune to pay his debts.

This revelation was made when Morse's attorneys appeared in the United States circuit court of appeals to argue for the admission of Morse to bail. Morse, who has been sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment at hard labor in the federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., was not permitted to leave the Tombs, but an affidavit made by him was read. The motion was argued before Judges Lacombe, Ward and Coxe, and decision was reserved.

It had not been expected that Morse would make the plea that he was bankrupt, as ever since the financial panic which swept the greater part of his fortune away he has maintained that he would be able to adjust his affairs to the satisfaction of all creditors, and Judge Hough, in refusing to grant an application for bail after he had sentenced Morse, said that one reason for refusing bail was that the prisoner was worth $22,000,000 and that it would not inconvenience him to furnish bail.

Wallace MacFarlane appeared in behalf of Morse and quoted from the opinion of Hough in refusing to grant bail, in which Hough said that no amount of bail would be sufficient to secure the appearannce in court of such a wealthy man as Morse when he was wanted. MacFarlane then continued:

"I have an affidavit here from Morse himself in which he states that he is not a rich man. Morse says that he is in a sense impoverished and that his assets would not pay his debts and that it is doubtful if they ever would. If Morse is allowed bail his old friends would have to provide it. The statement that he is a millionaire is false, and further information will be given to the district attorney if he desires it."

The lawyer said that if bail were granted and the amount were placed so high that Morse could not furnish it the result would be a practical denial of the application. In referring to the sentence imposed upon Morse, MacFarland termed it "ruthless and almost unprecedented."

United States District Attorney Stimson, who prosecuted the case against Morse, in opposing the granting of bail said:

"I believe that the right of granting bail in a case of this character should be exercised, if at all, by the trial judge. Judge Hough denied the application for bail and stated the two controlling causes for his decision, first as to any reasonable ground of error, and second, the effectiveness of bail to produce the defendant when the final decree of the court is to be passed."

The district attorney said it was ridiculous to represent Morse as being a pauper in view of Morse's statements during the trial as to the extent of his financial transactions. He added that it would be wrong to permit a surety company to furnish bail, saying that a rich man could easily reimburse such a company and that no one would be held personally responsible.

"Mr. Morse has been a banker and is a travelled man, and he knows the difference between a sojourn in Paris and the sojourn that the law may hold out to him here," said the district attorney.

The judges took all the papers in the case and reserved decision on the motion for bail. It is not believed that a decision will be rendered for three or four days.

Express Company Violated Contract

Boston, Nov. 10.—A fine of $250 each was imposed on the Day Express company and Charles J. McCarthy, one of its officers, for contempt of court, in the supreme court. The Boston and Maine railroad complained that the express company was shipping freight on passenger trains to intermediate points between Boston and Somersworth, N. H., the contract of the company only allowing express and freight business between the two terminal points.

Doctors and Servants Left Behind

Naples, Nov. 10.—The Count of Turin left for Mombasa, the capital of British East Africa, last night. He is on his way to the Congo on a big game shooting expedition. From the Congo the count will proceed to the Cape of Good Hope and thence will go to Egypt. He intends to be absent about two years and will make the journey without either doctors or servants.

Not Injured by Grounding

Newport, R. I., Nov. 10.—Steamer Dorchester, from Baltimore for Providence, which ran aground in a thick fog on Prudence Island, was floated last night and her passengers landed safely after the vessel had proceeded unassisted to her dock. The steamer is practically uninjured.

WAS OF MORBID NATURE

Facts About Mackay, Who Tried to Kill Postmaster Morgan

New York, Nov. 10.—Edward M. Morgan, postmaster of New York city, who was wounded in the abdomen by a bullet fired by E. H. B. Mackay, an eccentric stenographer, who then committed suicide, is resting well, and unless complications develop he will recover.

Morgan probably owes his life to the quick wit and bravery of his 14-year-old daughter, Dorothy, who saw Mackay draw his revolver and struck it with her hand. This deflected the bullet, otherwise the postmaster would have been fatally wounded, for his assailant was at close range and fired four shots in all. The shooting occurred a short distance from Morgan's home. He was on his way down town at the time.

An investigation of the life and record of Mackay reveals that he was of a morbid nature and a former inmate of an asylum in Worcester, Mass. That his act was premeditated is made certain by a letter he left, but aside from a fancied grievance against Morgan and the postoffice authorities concerning the handling of his mail, nothing has come to light to indicate why he should have sought to murder the postmaster. His clothing, when searched, gave up between thirty and forty smokeless cartridges, a heavy slungshot, a knife with a four-inch blade and a clasp knife. A quantity of literature on socialism and a slungshot similar to the one found on the body were discovered in his room.

"A MOST SERIOUS UNDERTAKING"

Gompers Sees Effort to Suppress Freedom of the Press

Denver, Nov. 10.—Hearty applause greeted President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor when he appeared before the delegates at the twenty-eighth annual convention of the organization. Cheers also followed the close of his report, which he read at the afternoon session.

The part of the report that touched on the Bucks Stove and Range company's injunction case was frequently interrupted by applause. The stand taken by Michael J. Morrison and Gompers on the injunction case was also applauded. Gompers said in part:

"It is impossible to see how we can comply fully with the court's injunction. Shall we be denied the right of free speech and free press simply because we are workingmen? Now it is the American Federation of Labor and the American Federationist which are enjoined from the exercise of the right of free speech and the liberty of the press. In the future it may be another publication and this injunction will then be quoted as a sacred precedent for future and further encroachments upon the rights and liberties of our people. The suppression of freedom of the press is a most serious undertaking. It is because the present injunction and the contempt proceedings thereunder suppress free speech and free press that I feel it my duty to enter an emphatic protest.

"The president made an unwarranted attack upon me and upon the labor organizations of the country. Speaker Cannon has packed committees, not only against labor, but against any other real reform legislation. Congress adjourned with the defiant declaration of James S. Sherman that the Repupblican party is responsible for legislation or for the failure of legisiation and he and his party were willing to assume the responsibility.

"The American labor movement is not partisan to a political party; it is partisan to a principle, the principle of equal rights and human freedom."

No Jury Trial In Canal Zone

Washington, Nov. 10.—The case of Adolphus Coulsen, who is under sentence of death in the Panama canal zone, the penalty being inflicted in a trial without a jury, was dismissed for want of jurisdiction by the supreme court of the United States. Coulsen raised the point that the zone is American territory and that trial in a capital case without a jury was unconstitutional.

Ridgely to Lose Bank Presidency

Kansas City, Nov. 10.—W. B. Ridgely, president of the reorganized National Bank of Commerce, is to be replaced, W. C. Woods, the deposed president of the bank, and his friends having succeeded in buying up a majority of the bank's stock and thus securing control. Ridgely last winter resigned the position of comptroller of the currency to become head of the bank.

Kaiser Stirs Up Hornet's Nest

Berlin, Nov. 10.—It is expected that the debate on the subject of the emperor's interview, which recently was published in a London paper, will be exceedingly lively, probably taking up two days in the reichstag. The Socialists have called twenty-six mass meetings for this evening in Berlin and vicinity to protest against "absolutism."

Killed Son While Hunting

Calais, Me., Nov. 10.—The 14-year-old son of D. C. Rollins of St. Stephens, N. B., was accidentally shot and killed by his father while deer hunting. Rollins was pursuing a deer and attempted a running shot. He stumbled and his aim was diverted, the bullet passing through the neck of his son, who was some distance in advance.

At the far end of the cave a bright red light kept coming and going, but I couldn't see by what it was made, because of the laughing crowd collected around it. We went nearer, and as others moved away we took their places, so that at last we saw what caused the light and made the great attraction for the people.

It was a giant lamp of a strange shape, standing up to the height of four or five feet from the floor on a pedestal, and behind it stood the genie, a fearful and wonderful apparition who said things in a deep bass voice which made everybody shout with laughter. "It's Fred Kane, the great funny man," said somebody.

The genie's witticisms came whenever any one rubbed the lamp, which each person was requested to do as he or she approached. While it was being rubbed the magic lamp flared up and gave out the bright red light we'd seen at a distance, and simultaneously the genie took something from a huge sequin covered bag he had looped over one of his arms. If the person who rubbed the lamp was a man, he dipped into the left hand bag, if a woman he dived into the right hand one. Each time a beautiful trinket came out and was presented with a low bow and an excruciatingly funny speech, suitable to the character which the person had undertaken for the evening. His wit never failed.

Mr. Brett and I went up together. The genie crossed arms and grabbed something for us out of both his bags at the same time. Then, by mistake, he gave me the thing from the left hand bag and Mr. Brett the one from the right. We walked away to let others have their chance, looking at the presents we had got. It was funny—they both happened to be rings.

Mine was twisted bands of platinum and gold, forming a knot to hold a cabochon sapphire. His was a thin setting of seven stones set in a straight row—diamond, emerald, amethyst, ruby, emerald, sapphire, topaz.

"Yours is meant for a woman and mine for a man," I said. "He got them out of the wrong bags. But they're both pretty and so queer."

"Will you—shall we change?" he asked.

"Oh, I didn't mean to suggest that," I hurried to say. "I can give mine to my brother when I go home. And you—there must be some one"—

"I've no sister, and there's no one else," said Mr. Brett. "Do have it. You see, I couldn't get it on my little finger. And won't you keep the big one too? It isn't as if I were like Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox's other guests"—

I couldn't bear to hear him say that, so I broke in and insisted that he should have the ring. "She would want you to have it, of course, if she knew," I said. "And, besides, I want you to, which is something."

"It's everything," he answered.

Then we changed rings, and I told him I hoped his would bring him luck, glorious luck.

"Do you wish it may give me what I want most in the world?" he asked, and I said that I did.

"What do you wish mine may give me?" I went on.

"What do you want most—great wealth?" he questioned me.

I shook my head.

"To have the world at your feet?"

"I shouldn't know what to do with it."

"To have the one you love best on earth love you?"

"I should have to stop and think which one it is."

"Then I wish that you may love the one who loves you best on earth and more than all the world."

Just as I was looking up, surprised at his tone more than his words, there came a burst of music, and part of the wall, with the platform on which the genie and his lamp had been standing, rolled away. The other big room of the cellar was revealed, with quantities of little tables all laid out for supper and the walls covered with smilax and roses. In the middle of this new room was a huge illuminated ship of ice in a green sea.

Everybody exclaimed and laughed at their surprise at such an unexpected transformation. Now was the time for unmasking, of course, and there were shrieks of surprise and amusement as people discovered who their companions really were. For a minute—I'm sure it couldn't have been more—I forgot Mr. Brett to stare at the great glittering ice ship. When I turned to speak to him he was gone. And whether he vanished on purpose because he didn't want to unmask in a company of strange people or whether he was separated from me by the sudden press of the crowd I don't know. I suppose I shall never know. I only know that I lost him and that I was immediately surrounded by other men, saying nice things about my costume, wanting me to have supper with them and asking me for dances afterward.

The rest of the night went by with a wild rush. We didn't stop dancing till 4, we young people, and I believe the older ones played bridge. We had a second supper served upstairs toward dawn, and when the last people went away it was broad and glorious daylight.

"Well, deah," said Sally cozily when every one had gone and she had come into my room to help me undress, "had you a good time?"

"Splendid!" said I, sighing with joy. "I'm dancing still—in my head. My first ball!"

"Katherine doesn't call it a ball. But that's a detail. Had you any proposals?"

"Oh, Sally, how came you to think of such a thing? But isn't it too extraordinary? I had three."

"Why extraordinary?"

"Because I hardly knew the men!"

"Americans make up their minds quickly about what they want."

"So Mr. P— So I've been told."

"Accept any one?"

"Not I."

"Didn't even give them a wee mite of hope?"

"Dear me, no."

"Poor Potter—for one."

"Sally, I do wish he wouldn't—do that sort of thing, since you speak of it. It makes it so embarrassing. And somehow I don't feel he really means it. I've always the impression that—that he does it because he thinks he ought."

"He'd like to marry you, Betty. There's no doubt of that, and one can't blame him for it."

"Well, if he keeps on I shall be driven away," I said, "although they don't want me to go home yet for—for several reasons. I don't want to go either. I'm having a wonderful experience. But"—

"Haven't you met any man you could imagine yourself caring for, deah? Or perhaps you don't fancy Americans."

"Oh, I do!" I exclaimed. "They're all great fun. And one—one man I've met I think superior to any other I ever knew. But, then, I've known so few, and I don't know him well. You needn't look at me like that. It isn't a romance, you dear. I'm most unlikely to know him any better ever. He—isn't like the rest. He isn't like anybody else I ever saw."

"Now," said Sally coaxingly, "you might tell me if he's one of the three who proposed."

"Indeed, he isn't, and he never will. Why, Sally, I don't mind telling you I mean that Mr. Brett who was on the ship and whom we met afterward accidentally in the park. He is rather wonderful considering his station, isn't he?"

"He'd be rather wonderful in any station. That's my theory about him."

"I think it's mine too. He was here tonight—as a newspaper reporter, he hinted, though he didn't exactly say he was in so many words. Did he talk to you?"

"Yes," said Sally. "Indirectly I got him his chance to come."

"I gave him good advice," said I, laughing—"all about his future and ambition and things like that. I hope he'll take it."

"He'll probably try all he knows. Did he thank you prettily?"

"I'm not sure whether he thanked me at all. But he gave me this ring and wished me luck with it. It was the genie's present to him in Aladdin's cave. I changed with him for the one I had. But this is much prettier. Look."

"D-E-A-R-E-S-T, Dearest," Sally spelled out as she held the third finger of my right hand, on which I'd slipped the ring.

"Where do you find that?" I asked quickly.

"Don't you know? Why, the stones spell it—diamond, emerald, amethyst, ruby, emerald, sapphire, topaz."

I felt my cheeks burn when she gave me this explanation.

I wonder if Mr. Brett knew!

La France SHOE for WOMEN

If you will come in and ask to try on La France shoes yours will be an unusual case if you don't make some flattering exclamation as to their comfort as soon as you feel them on your feet.

Then you will realize that never before have you tried on a shoe which made your feet look so shapely, neat and dainty. And if you buy the shoes—as we believe you will when you see them—you will in the course of time discover that these qualities of comfort and fit stay with the shoe as long as it lasts, and that it lasts longer than any shoe you ever bought for the money.

There are reasons for this—good reasons—materials, careful workmanship, patient attention to those little details which alone can make a shoe both beautiful to look at and comfortable to wear. But the shoes themselves speak louder than anything we can say in our advertising—come and see them.

Perhaps the La France Flexible Welt shoe will particularly interest you. It permits a remarkable flexibility in the sole of the shoe which makes it wonderfully comfortable, especially when standing or walking.

SHOT DOWN IN STREET DUEL

Life of Former Senator Carmack Snuffed Out at Nashville

SHARP NEWSPAPER EDITORIALS

They Aroused the Ire of Colonel Cooper, Who Was Supposed to Have Had a Hand In Recent Defeat of Carmack In Primaries--Son of the Colonel Fired the Shots Which Ended the Editor's Life

Nashville, Nov. 10.—Former United States Senator Edward W. Carmack, editor of The Tennesseean, was shot and killed yesterday afternoon in Seventh avenue by Robin Cooper. Carmack was going north in Seventh avenue and Colonel Duncan C. Cooper and his son were approaching Seventh avenue on Union street. Soon after they came in sight of one another the shooting began. Robin Cooper fired three shots and Senator Carmack one. Duncan C. Cooper, it is said, drew a pistol, but did not fire.

Carmack fell to the ground with the trio of shots and died instantly. Robin Cooper was shot in the right shoulder, but was not severely hurt.

It is said the trouble had its origin in the recent Democratic gubernatorial primary, in which Carmack was defeated. Carmack had, as editor of The Tennesseean, been rather caustic in adversely criticising what he called the Democratic machine, and had printed several editorials about Duncan Cooper.

Within the last few days, it is said, Duncan Cooper told Carmack that these editorial criticisms must cease. Yesterday morning another editorial in reference to Duncan Cooper appeared in The Tennesseean and this is supposed to have been the immediate cause of the trouble.

As soon as Carmack fell on the edge of the street curbing, Duncan Cooper put his arm around Robin Cooper and father and son walked to Dr. Fort's office, where the slight wound in Robin's shoulder was treated.

An ambulance carried the body of Carmack to an undertaking establishment. The pistol of Carmack was found lying at his side, with two chambers empty, and it was turned over to an officer. Young Cooper was later carried to a hospital and his father is held at police headquarters. Robin Cooper is an attorney, 27 years old, and unmarried.

Edward W. Carmack was born near Castilian Springs, Tenn., Nov. 5, 1858. He had an academic education, studied law, practiced in Columbia, Tenn., and was a member of the legislature of 1884. He was a member of congress from 1897 to 1901. He served with distinction in the United States senate for six years, being defeated for re-election in the primary a little over a year ago by Robert Taylor. Carmack then resumed the practice of law in Memphis, which was then his home, but within a few months removed to Nashville.

Last spring he opposed Governor Patterson for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, but was defeated. Shortly after his defeat Carmack accepted the editorship of the Nashville Tennesseean, and for the last two months had been at the helm of that newspaper.

Senator Carmack's newspaper career began in 1886 as a member of the editorial staff of the Nashville American. He founded the Nashville Democrat and later was editor of The Commercial Appeal. He was married in April, 1890, to Miss Elizabeth C. Dunnington.

Pierce Under $20,000 Bond

Austin, Nov. 10.—H. C. Pierce, chairman of the board of directors of the Waters-Pierce Oil company, arrived here and gave bond in the sum of $20,000 to secure his appearance in court to answer to a grand jury indictment charging false swearing in connection with the readmission of the Waters-Pierce Oil company to do business in Texas after it had been ousted in 1900 for violation of the anti-trust laws of the state. The case was continued until the January term of court.

Robbed Ambassador White

Paris, Nov. 10.—The police have arrested two men on the charge of having committed the burglary at the residence of Henry White, the American ambassador, last Thursday night. Both the men admitted their guilt. They said that they sold part of the booty, consisting of jewelry, but were obliged to abandon the remainder for fear that an attempt at its disposal would lead to their detection.

What Draper's Election Cost Him

Boston, Nov. 10.—Lieutenant Governor Draper has filed with the secretary of state a return showing that his election as governor cost him $8800. Of this sum, $7500 was paid to the Republican state committee, in three instalments. The Boston Republican city committee was paid $1000, the Republican Club of Massachusetts $250, and the Republican city committee of Lawrence $50.

High Price For Potatoes

Houlton, Me., Nov. 10.—The early indications for a favorable season for Aroostook potatoes has been more than fulfilled, the price at present being $1.60 a barrel, a price reached but once before in thirteen years.

Registration OF VOTERS.

For the purpose of correcting the annual Register of Voters and of receiving evidence of qualifications from persons cdaiming a right to vote at the coming City Election, the Board of Registrars of Voters will be in session in the Council Chamber, in the City Hall building on the Evenings of

Thursday, Nov. 5, and Saturday, Nov. 7,

from 7.30 to 9 o'clock, also on Wednesday, November 11,

from 12 M., to 10 o'clock P. M.

Every applicant for registration must appear in person before the Board. Every male applicant must present either a certificate from the Assessors, or a Tax Bill or Notice from the Collector of Taxes, showing that he has been assessed a poll tax as a resident of the city on the first day of May last; or a certificate from the Assessors that he became a resident of the city prior to June 1, 1908. If a naturalized citizen, he must produce for inspection his papers of naturalization.

Persons who have lived in the State one year and in the city six months previous to December 1, if qualified in other respects, can be registered.

No names can be added to the registers except the names of voters examined as to their qualifications between the thirtieth day of April last and the close of registration, on at 10 o'clock, P. M. The Board of Assessors will be in session at their office during the same hours.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

The Makaria Fraternity holds a candy sale and entertainment on Wednesday evening in Bethany chapel.

Mrs. Harrie M. Griffin of Orange, Mass., is the guest this week of Mrs. Charles H. Wilkins o Old Colony avenue.

Mrs. John Ramsdell of Billings street has returned from Stanford, Conn., where she has had a most successful demonstration tour.

Much sympathy is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Wilson of Revere road in the death of their twin sons. Mrs. Wilson is doing nicely.

Elliot Green and family of Botolph street are making plans to move to West Brookfield, the last of the week. Mr. Green will spend the winter in Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice P. Spillane of Elm street have returned from New York. While away they were the guests o Mr. and Mrs. John Lingley of East Orange, N. J.

The Fore River Company has a bid in on the new battleship Utah. The lowest bidder for a 20 3-4 knot boat was the New York Shipbuilding Company. The local company was the lowest bidder for a 21 knot boat.

Mrs. Morris Caperon of Wollaston gave a party Monday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bartlett who are to move to Waban this week. There were about twelve couples present and the evening will be remembered by all as one of the pleasantest of the year.

It has been suggested by several prominent church goers in Atlantic that there ought to be a union of the Congregational and Methodist churches. This combined effort would bring about a more prosperous state of religious zeal in a small community like Atlantic.

The funeral of Mrs. Sarah Belcher, Elsie and Irene Newhall, the victims of Saturday's fire, was held this afternoon from Hall's undertaking rooms. The services were conducted by Rev. D. Edwin N. Hardy, and were very impressive, the burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

Rev. Frank Wright Pratt and family formerly of Wollaston, left Nov. 6th for Winnipeg. Mr. Pratt has been appointed by the American Unitarian association and the British Unitarian association their missionary for Canada. His Hopedale parish parts with him with much regret. Mrs. Pratt who is a niece of Mrs. E. C. Butler of this city, has been her guest this week.

Webster street is being graded and raised to the level of the boulevard and will soon be in condition for an entrance. This improvement is one long desired by residents of Webster and Walker streets as it will not only be a convenient opening for the popular thoroughfares but also improve the looks of a hitherto most unsightly terminus to Webster street. Dennis O'Niel is superintending the work and it is progressing rapidly.

GYMNASIUM NOTES.

All gym classes are now well attended and all the members are enjoying the hard work and jolly games. A schedule of athletic events for all classes is being run off. The first event. Pull Ups, was won by R. Cranshaw in the students class with 12. In the senior class there was a tie score P. K. Griffin and R. Picard each with 16. The event for tonight will be a fifteen yard dash.

The big race from Providence to Boston takes place Saturday P. M. of this week. The runners should pass through Quincy square between 3 and 4 in the afternoon. There will be a try out for the Relay team to represent Quincy on the Y. M. C. A. track at 9 P. M. tonight when a flash light picture will be taken of the team.

On Saturday evening of this week the first open Ladies' night will be held in the gymnasium. It will consist of an exhibition of the regular work together with special stunts and games. The public are cordially invited to attend. Children will not be admitted.

SEVERAL CONTESTS

Polls Open For Joint Caucuses Of Democrats And Republicans

Joint caucuses of the Democratic and Republican parties are being held in all wards of the city today. The polls opened at 12 o'clock noon and will remain open until 9 o'clock tonight. Under the law the counting of the ballots cannot commence until after the polls are closed, so that it will be late before the result is known.

Although there are contests in several of the wards, especially on the Republican ticket, there seems but little interest in the caucuses and a large vote is not looked for. Eugene R. Stone will receive the Republican nomination for Mayor without opposition.

On the Democratic ticket, however, there is a contest for Mayor, between Mayor Shea who is seeking renomination and George H. Wilson, a former candidate of the Democratic party. The general opinion seems to be that Mayor Shea will win out. It would not be difficult, however, by united effort to give the nomination to Mr. Wilson. The number of voters registered as Democrats is comparitively small and it would not take much of an effort to give the nomination to Wilson.

There is quite a contest for the Republican nomination for Councilman at large, and two on the list must necessarily be defeated. Just who these will be is a question. There is also quite a contest on in Wards One, Two and Three for Ward Five as and it might be said, Ward Five as well, as there are four gentlemen seeking the three positions.

There is also a contest for School Committee at large for three years among the Republicans, and a contest for School Committee from Ward Six.

Wednesday's Daily Ledger will give the full returns of the caucuses from all wards.

New President Of Brotherhood

Promptly at 6.30 the call went out that the oysters were ready, and some seventy-five men hastened to gather about the well filled tables, Dr. Hardy presiding.

The men of Bethany Brotherhood know how to get up a good supper and the experts in the kitchen saw to it that everything came on to the tables hot and in abundance.

After the supper Mr. William Roper Holm of Boston spoke in a pleasing way on the subject, "Tipping and Tapping." He said in part that the United States was fast becoming a "Tipping" country as is all Europe today. "Tipping" is when a servant by word or act wishes you to understand that some special act of service has been rendered you, for which he is deserving of a "tip," and he told many funny stories by way of illustration.

Following came Rev. George Flint of Dorchester who gave some very helpful thoughts. He said that for any man or body of men to succeed there must be that personal sympathy and interest one for the other. That the really great leader could bring himself to the level of other men and any work and that with aggressiveness and perseverance success was sure to follow.

George A. Sidelinger of Presidents hill, the former City auditor of Quincy, was elected president of the Brotherhood, as A. L. Mecher found that he could not assume the office to which he had been elected.

Joseph Lee on Play and Playgrounds

The audience of ladies and gentlemen which assembled at High School hall Monday evening was highly entertained by a talk on "Play and Playgrounds" by the "father" of the movement in Massachusetts, Mr. Joseph Lee of Boston, who is also prominent in the American Civic Association, and has written books on the subject, and secured favorable legislation.

Frank E. Parlin, the superintendent of schools, presided and in the audience were members of the School Committee; teachers of the public schools; Representative-elect Langelier; Eugene R. Stone, the Republican candidate for Mayor, and other prominent citizens.

Supt, Parlin in his introductory said we were just beginning to realize the value of playgrounds morally as well as physically. In the first seven years of a child's life, he said; the playground should be preeminent;; in the next seven years, they should be on equal footing with the school; and in the third seven years should be closely allied.

Mr. Lee in opening called attention to the fact that the Legislature had adopted this year a new law requiring cities of 10,000 to support playgrounds if the voters so elect. Quincy had playgrounds, but he questioned if they were equipped. A field was not enough; they should have shade and beauty. They should be near school buildings with gardens in care of pupils.

Mr. Lee told why cities should have playgrounds and showed a thorough knowledge of play as adapted to all ages of children from two years up. Children were serious in play and like play. It was spontaneous and the best educator. It built the child and built man. It is a part of nature and the law of growth.

Galvin Gains 42 Votes

The recount in Boston closed at 8.30 last night and there were still two wards to be counted, 17 and 24. Those counted yesterday were 13, 14, 15, 16 and 20, and in these Galvin gained 42 and O'Connell 20. With a gain of one in Quincy, O'Connell still had a lead of 20 up to 8.30 last night. The other two wards will be counted today.

Norfork County And Vicinity

By nerve and presence of mind, Frank C. Carpenter, an electrician of FOXBORO, saved himself from being electrocuted yesterday. He was working on a pole when the wire that he had hold of was suddenly charged, sending a shock through his body. He at once threw himself from the pole, thus separating from the deadly wire. He landed in a tree and sustained only slight injuries.

The Fore River Shipbuilding company is one of the bidders for the new Hudson River line boat. The new boat is to run on the day schedule and will be a duplicate of the steamer Hendrick Hudson.

The Quincy Point Social club boys are putting in some great work now in preparation for their coming minstrel show. "Dom" Keegan of Boston has been thraining a chorus of 80 mixed voices for the past month and things are going in excellent style. The show will be held two nights, Nov. 17, and 18, with dancing the second night.

Division 3, A. O. H., of RANDOLPH is making arrangements to enter the big Hibernian parade next Wednesday evening in Boston in connection with the Catholic bazar.

The ice houses in HOLBROOK that were destroyed by fire early this year have been replaced by new and larger houses on the old location on the shore of Porter's pond.

DAYS OF DIZZINESS

Come to Hundreds of Quincy People.

There are days of dizziness;
Spells of headache, sideache, backache;
Sometimes rheumatic pains:
Often urinary disorders.
All tell you plainly the kidneys are sick.
Doan's Kidney Pills cure all kidney ills.
Here is proof in Quincy.

Mrs. George L. Mott, living at 99 North street, Quincy, Mass., says: "I have every reason for entertaining a very high opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills. They cured me of a serious case of kidney complaint, after everything I tried had failed to help me. Prior to using this remedy I was troubled a great deal with headaches and dizzy spells, which were so severe at times that I would have to grasp something for support to keep from falling. My eyesight was affected and spots would seem to float before me. My back also greatly annoyed me. Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a box at the Cox drug store and began their use. I was helped from the first and after I had taken the contents of five boxes, my case being of long standing, I was cured. Other members of my family have used Doan's Kidney Pils with equally good results."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Telephone Talks

LOCAL AND LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE

A "prompt" answer turneth away wrath. You know how you feel when you are kept waiting at the telephone.

Remember: Example is better than precept.

"No One on the Line"

It has been pointed out that there are three parties to a telephone conversation, namely, the person calling, the operator, and, last but not least, the person called.

The operator has no authority to compel an answer to her summons. She simply forwards to your telephone a mechanical signal. Interpreted, this means "Some one desires to speak to you." It remains for you, the person called, to recognize this request.

There are two strong reasons why you should answer promptly, and both vitally concern you:

1. If you are slow in answering the caller may hang up the telephone and assume that you are not accessible. Later, if you answer at your leisure, the operator can vouchsafe no information save that "there is no one on the line." Who called you? The operator probably does not know. Any operator in your exchange may have called you, rather than the operation specially assigned to answer your calls.

2. From the moment the operator calling you "plugs in" on your line until she ceases her effort to attract your attention, your line is "busy" to all other callers.

If you are dilatory, therefore, you are obstructing your own service. You are also causing disappointment to your caller and annoyance to yourself.

Street Railway Busy.

Crowds headed for the Fore River began to gather in City Square as early as 9 o'clock. Every train from Boston dumped its load of passengers at the Quincy station and the trains looked deserted as they pulled out.

As the crowds reached City Square there was grand rush for the street cars. Supt. Gammons was on hand to personally direct the movement of the street cars.

Thirty-five cars were in use aside from the regular cars run on the Quincy Point and Weymouth Landing lines. These cars were sent out from City Square over both lines in bunches of six and seven. Cars left City Square every ten minutes and every car was loaded to its full capacity.

Extra cars were also run from East Weymouth and Weymouth Landing to the nearest point to shipyard.

Many of the ladies carried blue silk flags across the face of which were the words in gold letters "North Dakota." These they made good use of later when the vessel slid down the ways.

Military Night At Men's Club

Monday night was "Military Night" at the Christ church Men's club. The speaker of the evening was Lt. Col. Henry L. Kincaide of Quincy, who addressed the club on "The advantage of military training to young men." There was a large attendance present, and the evening proved to be one of the most instructive and interesting in the history of the club.

Col. Kincaide is thoroughly versed in military tactics and has made a study of it for many years, which enabled him to give a practical talk on the advantages.

He said in part:

"You can point today to men in every walk of life, holding responsible positions, who in youth received a military training. President Roosevelt is a shining example of the military spirit if not of the actual training and many of the members of his Cabinet are men of soldierly experience. Look through the list of leaders of our Country, study them carefully, and you will invariably find them to be men of a military turn of mind. Recall such names as General Washington, General Jackson, General Winfield Scott, General Benjamin Harrison, Lt. General Pierce,—go to our beloved Lincoln, (in his early days he was captain of a company of volunteers), General Grant, a West Point man, General James Garfield and Major William McKinley.

"We cannot stop to dwell upon the stories of their lives, if we could, we would find how the discipline of the military training in each life, left a lasting impression.

"In our own state at the present time we have among our military men, Governor Guild, an ardent military man, General Bancroft, who so ably manages our splendid Boston Elevated system. Himself a military man—and so firmly does he believe in military training for young men, that he has given orders to his employment heads to give first preference for employment to the applicant who holds an honorable discharge from the State Militia or United States Army. Among the heads of our great corporations—manufacturing industries, public institutions, heads of great departments in City and State, you will find a large per cent of men with a military training, not only at the top, but down through the ranks, holding positions, as heads of subordinate departments and in other places of trust, are men of military training, ready at any moment to step up into higher positions of trust and responsibility."

He then went to tell of many practical advantages to be derived from such a training, things which can be drawn from personal observation. He told stories of West Point, about hazing and demerits, and what rigid obedience and general discipline is required there. All this goes to help develop the keenness of the mind as well as the muscles of the body.

Col. Kincaide also mentioned the fact that in the Boston schools there was employed a man to instruct the boys and drill them in military tactics. Mr. Kincaide advocated such a course in Quincy, and said that a High school battalion here would aid materially in developing the minds of the young men, to enable them to take up business life the better when they were old enough.

Refreshments and an entertainment followed the address of Col. Kincaide, patriotic songs being sung by the club, with the choruses thrown on a screen. Mr. Kincaide was congratulated on his instructive talk, and was assured that the members appreciated it very much.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it falls to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

CONVINCING FACTS.

There is no use denying the fact that Johnson Bros., are surely giving genuine bargains in food values. It will be hard indeed to find a store that is giving such excellent quality at such low prices.

Everything the best that money can buy, is their standard; and their customers know from past dealings that that is absolutely true. Now with our discount system, it is still more of an inducement to trade with us, and you will be surprised to find how fast your discount checks will count up.

We are displaying every day a choice assortment of Cut Meats, with the prices marked in plain figures, so that every one can see what they are paying for or we will cut it to your order, whichever you prefer.

We are pleased that so many of our customers have helped us to make this system a success, for it means a whole lot to them as well as to us. We do not think that any one objects to carrying home a purchase especially when they are paid to do so, which we are doing, with our discount check system.

We are receiving new seasonable goods every day, and it will be to your interest to visit our store and do business with us.

Beef, Lamb and Fresh Pork are all lower and we have a choice lot of Fresh Killed Chicken and Fowl constantly on hand, direct from William A. Drake of Braintree.

A tempting line of New Canned Goods, packed expressly for us.

An excellent stock of New Cereals, Buckwheat, Pan Cake Flour, and all the leading brands of Bread and Pastry Flour.

All kinds of Bottled Goods, Jellies, Jams, Olives and Pickles.

Fresh Hot House Lettuce, Choice Celery, Radishes, Cucumbers, and Fruits of all kinds.

Remember, that every day is BARGAIN day at Johnson Bros., so keep in the road, for all roads lead to our store.

And, remember that we give you 5 per cent discount on all cash purchases, if you take the purchase home, or 2 per cent discount when you ask us to deliver it.

Yours for Quality,

JOHNSON BROS., City Square, Quincy.

The vote for Eugene R. Stone, as the Republican candidate for Mayor, was surprisingly large considering that there was no opposing candidate. In Ward One only were there any votes for any one else, the 12 votes received by William T. Shea being his total in the city. Mr. Stone received 1143.

The unanimity with which ex-Councilman Stone was nominated, and the size of the Republican pluralites at the recent Presidential and State election, is thought to augur well for the Republican success at the Municipal election in December.

Two of the present City Council, who were candidates at large on the Republican ticket were defeated. The nominees in order of vote are: Hon. Charles M. Bryant, Thomas Bishop, Arthur C. Beal, Alfred H. Gilson and Charles A. Hadlock. The defeated men were Otto Gelotte and J. Leonard Ferguson, whose record on express permits were probably against them.

The vote in another column shows Gelotte and Bryant to have been the favorites in Ward One, Bryant and Beal in Ward Two, Bishop and Bryant in Ward Three, Ferguson and Bryant in Ward Four, Bryant and Beal in Ward Five, Beal and Hadlock in Ward Six.

Ex-Councilman Arthur W. Newcomb was renominated for School Committee at large. He carried every ward but Ward Five by a handsome majority. In the Wollaston ward ex-Councilman H. J. Polk received 157 to 53 for Mr. Newcomb.

The vote for ward candidates follows:

WARD ONE.

There was quite a spirited contest for councilman, five candidates seeking the three places. It was expected that Houghs Neck would attend the caucus in a body and land its candidate at the top of the list. When the returns were counted, however, it was found that Mr. LaBreque was low man. Theodore H. Hermanson was also defeated. Of the three nominated Councilman Whiton received the largest vote.

Councilman Joseph L. Whiton, Jr., received 213 votes, George W. Abele 198, James M. Nowland 183, Theodore H. Hermanson 140, Alfred N. LaBrecque 122.

Ward Committee elect,—George E. Adams, Charles H. Johnson, Arthur W. Stetson, Thomas B. Davenport, Henry S. Crane, James Moorhead, Jr. Henry P. Kittredge, Andrew J. Carlson and Arthur W. Ryder.

WARD TWO.

There was quite a contest for Councilmen. George H. Corliss, the Fore River candidate, was looked upon as a winner, as it was thought he would have the united support of the Fore River voters. He ran considerably behind the other three candidates however. His name was also filed on a separate list for member of the ward committee, but he was also defeated for that office.

For Councilmen, Daniel Scouler Jr., received 135, Thompson B. Crane 133, Arthur B. Hultman 130, George H. Corliss 85, the first three being nominated.

Ward Committee elect,—Rollin H. Newcomb, Edgar F. Hayden, Eugene C. Hultman, Jacob Peterson, Arthur W. Newcomb, Albert L. Whitman, Percy H. Holman, Daniel Scouler, Jr., and Harry G. Studley.

WARD THREE.

The great contest in this ward was on councilmen from the ward. Seven candidates were seeking the three positions, and there was a hustle to get out the vote. Some of the candidates even went so far as to have carriages at the polls. As a result the ward polled a Republican vote of 380.

For Councilmen, Alexander W. Russell received 205, John R. Richards 191, John R. Nelson 160, Robert B. Craig 139, Joseph H. Elcock 115, George Gauthier 79, Reuben A. Grossman 79, the first three being elected.

Ward Committee elect, Robert B. Craig, Angus Kerr, William A. Smith, John S. Johnson, John H. Collins, Joseph H. Elcock, Alexander D. Booth, George Gauthier and John G. Roberts.

WARD FOUR.

There were no names printed on the ballot for councilmen, but names written on the ballot placed three men in nomination. One of these was Robert J. Teasdale who was defeated for the Democratic nomination. His name therefore will appear on the ballot under the designation of Republican.

For Councilmen, Robert J. Teasdale received 5, John J. Clarke, 3 and Joseph Walker 2d, 1, all three being nominated.

Ward Committee elect, William H. Teasdale, Thomas F. Burke, Edward J. Sandberg, William Gelotte, August Williams, Charles H. Owens, J. Leonard Ferguson, Albert G. Farnham and Louis K. Badger.

School Committee from Ward,—Charles H. Owens.

WARD FIVE.

The contest in this ward was over councilmen, four gentlemen seeking the nomination. This however was not sufficient to bring out a large vote for but 243 Republican votes were cast. Richard R. Freeman received 179, Arthur C. Gardner 171, Charles L. Bean 152, Louis J. Jobin 121, the first three being nominated.

Ward Committee elect,—Herbert Y. Follett, Richard R. Freeman, William M. Chase, Eben Hardy, Walter S. Pinkham, Frederick G. Thayer, Felix Favorite, Horace W. Richmond and Walter M. Hatch.

WARD SIX.

The only local contest this ward had was for member of the School committee from the ward. It was between ex-Councilman Herbert W. Barker and Daniel A. Bruce. Mr. Barker received the nomination his vote being 117 to 107 for Mr. Bruce. It is said the Mr. Barker made no effort to win while friends of Dr. Bruce did.

For Councilmen, Ralph W. Hobbs, received 192, Charles E. Cherrington 191, John Moir 166, and all were nominated.

FAIR AT WOLLASTON.

The annual fair and sale of the Wollaston Methodist church was held in the vestry on Tuesday evening. The tables were prettily decorated with crepe paper of various hues and comprised the cake, candy, fancy goods and doll table and the goose pen or grabs. A supper was served at six o'clock by the women of the parish.

The evening's entertainment was furnished by Miss Chaffee of the Boston School of Expression, who gave several readings and character sketches in a very charming manner. Between the readings and throughout the evening musical selections were rendered by Estes orchestra.

Probably Mayor Shea was not at all anxious over the result of the Democratic caucuses, and certainly there was no occasion for alarm. His vote was much larger than in the caucuses last year, and his rival, George H. Wilson received only 41 in the city.

Ex-Councilman Wilson received his best vote in Ward Three, 14 out of 63. In Ward One he received 7 out of 41, and in Ward Five 1 out of 11, but in the other wards he was not in the contest a little bit.

For the office of School Committee at large, Walter M. Packard, Thomas J. Welsh, W. J. Welsh and James Brady each received one vote in Ward One. In Ward Three, Daniel B. Reardon received 2 and Daniel Donahue 1 vote. In Ward Four Timothy J. Carey received one vote. This gives the nomination to Daniel B. Reardon.

In tabulating the votes for several of the offices on the Democratic ticket a number of persons received one vote each. In the most of these cases the voter had only written in the name, omitting the address, which resulted in the name being thrown out.

In the vote for Councilman at large there were quite a number who received votes. Of these Charles J. McGilvray, Alfred N. LaBrecque and Ralph W. Hobbs were correct, and they are nominated. At the present time, however, it has not been determined who the other nominees at large will be. Mr. LaBrecque, when seen this morning, said that he should decline this nomination. Councilman Hobbs will probably do likewise.

In Ward One, for Councilmen, the only scattering names that were correct are those of Thomas Connelly and Joseph L. Whiton, Jr. The name of Mr. LaBrecque appeared only as A. LaBrecque, which is illegal as no such man is known.

In Ward Three, the name Alexander D. Russell on the Democratic ticket is thrown out as there is no such name.

In Ward Five, Patrick Ferguson gets the nomination but James Penniman does not as there is no voter by the name of James Penniman.

In Ward Six it is probable that Councilman Hobbs will have the Democratic nomination with Thomas H. Hayes, and there will be a tie for third place.

It was rumored about the polls Tuesday night that Mr. Wilson would run independent if defeated at the caucuses. When seen this morning in regard to the matter all Mr. Wilson would say was that he was considering the matter and would make up his mind later.

WARD ONE.

There were no names on the official ballot for Councilmen. Several names were written however so that unless they withdraw the official ballot for the election will contain the names of the three highest. These are Alfred N. LaBrecque, who was defeated for the Republican nomination, Thomas Connelley, and a tie between Edward Dunn and Joseph L. Whiton for the third position. The vote was: Alfred N. LaBrecque 6, Thomas Connelley 3, Edward Dunn 2, Joseph L. Whiton 2, Michael N. Barrett 1, James P. Flannigan 1, George Abele 1.

The Ward Committee elect,—Edward J. Dunn, Walter M. Packard, Philip D. Cook, William Kelley, Alfred J. LaCroix, Luke J. Coyle, Galen V. Bowditch, John W. Ryan and John F. Schatzel.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

Not much rain.

Now it is Stone vs Shea.

Less than three weeks to the City election.

Registration of voters for the City election closes tonight.

Next week Wednesday evening the Pickwick club is to have a Dickens night at the home of Mr. Charles H Hardwick. Mrs. H. W. Beattie and Mrs. George L. Badger will direct the program.

Senator elect Eugene C. Hultman of this city will be one of the speakers at the Men's club of All Souls church at Braintree this evening. The principal address will be by Hon. Joseph MacCabe of Boston, on the subject of 'The English Marathon."

A fine entertainment is promised members of the Unity club at the meeting on Friday evening in the vestry of the Wollaston Unitarian church. Living pictures of famous masterpieces are to be presented under the direction of John Randall Arnold, and there will also be music.

Gov. John Burke of North Dakota and Mayor William T. Shea were having a little friendly talk on Tuesday at the launching and in reply to a question as to what part of North Dakota he came from, the governor said, "My home is in a town called Devil's Lake." Mayor Shea said he could shake hands with Gov. Burke, because he came from a part of West Quincy known as Purgatory.

MORSE REMAINS IN PRISON CELL

Court of Appeals Refuses to Admit Financier to Bail

ONE LOOPHOLE FOR COUNSEL

Application May Be Renewed After Bill of Particulars is Filed--Convicted Man Greatly Disappointed at Court's Decision--Should He Lose Fight For New Trial He Must Remain In Prison Fifteen Years

New York, Nov. 11.—Bail was denied Charles W. Morse, the financier, who has been sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment at hard labor, and it now seems certain that the former multimillionaire must remain in the Tombs prison at least until Dec. 3, when argument on the writ of error that has been granted him may be argued.

Judges Lacombe, Ward and Coxe of the United States circuit court of appeals rendered the decision late yesterday by which bail was denied him. One loophole is left open to Morse's counsel in the decision, and that is that the judges decided that, while bail was denied, it was done so "without prejudice to a renewal of the application after a bill of particulars is filed."

The judges stated briefly that, as the trial judge in the proceedings against Morse had refused to admit him to bail, the reviewing judges were not prepared, on the papers submitted to them, to make a disposition of the motion.

Morse had been hopeful of gaining his release from the Tombs yesterday and the denial of bail came as a hard blow. His wife and son had been with him in the jail during the afternoon and they encouraged him in the belief that he would be free by nightfall if the judges could reach a decision by that time. Mrs. Morse and her son left the prison before the decision had been rendered and the news was conveyed to the prisoner by an assistant in his counsel's office.

While Morse tried to hide his disappointment he felt too cast down to do so. He walked to the rear of his cell and sat on the edge of his hard, narrow berth and refused to make any comment. A few minutes later he regained some of his composure and the expression on his face changed. Later C. E. Littlefield and Clifford Walker, his chief advisors, and Morse entered animatedly into a discussion of further plans for securing a favorable decision on the question of bail, but no announcement was made as to what would be done.

There is one feature of the case that is particularly disagreeable to Morse. That is that no matter how long he is compelled to remain a prisoner in the Tombs, the time will not count as a part of the fifteen years he must serve in the federal prison at Atlanta in case he loses his fight for a new trial.

Judge Hough gave as his reason for refusing to admit Morse to bail the fact that the case was not an extraditable one and that it would be easy for Morse to furnish bail through a bonding company, as the prisoner was worth $22,000,000. Morse, in an affidavit presented to the judges of the United States court of appeals on Monday, denied that he was a millionaire, saying that he had not enough money or securities to meet his obligations.

These were the principal points considered by the judges in arriving at their decision to deny bail. It is said that the Morse attorneys will take advantage of the opportunity to file a bill of particulars, as their client is exceedingly desirous of obtaining his release.

A Tied Government

St. John's, Nov. 11.—Complete returns from the general elections of Nov. 2 show that Premier Bond and Sir Edward Morris, the leader of the opposition forces, will each have eighteen supporters in the legislature. The situation may be settled only by the ordering of another general election, which will undoubtedly be done if neither party is able to form a government which will have the confidence of the legislature.

William Oswald a Suicide

Lawrence, Mass., Nov. 11.—The body of William Oswald, president of the Telegram Publishing company, and one of the wealthiest men in the city, was found 1000 feet from the corner of Brook and East streets, Methuen. A bullet wound in the right temple and an empty bottle that had contained laudanum indicated that the suicide had been carefully premeditated.

Close Vote For Congressman

Boston, Nov. 11.—A recount of the vote in the Tenth congressional district, the first returns of which declared that Joseph F. O'Connell was returned to congress by a margin of forty-two votes, when completed last night showed that O'Connell still led his Republican opponent, J. M. Galvin, but by only four votes. Galvin will contest the seating of O'Connell.

Charged With Dunham's Murder

Augusta, Me., Nov. 11.—Fred Davis was held without bail to await the action of the grand jury on the charge of the murder of George Dunham, a Spanish war veteran, finding probable cause. Lillian Chamberlain and William Henry were also held for the grand jury in $1000 bail each as witnesses.

Taft and Hitchcock Have a Chat Over Recent Campaign

Hot Springs, Va., Nov. 11.—President-elect Taft and National Chairman Frank H. Hitchcock had a long talk yesterday over the many phases of the last campaign. It was the first opportunity for such an extended and cordial exchange of views, and at its conclusion both Taft and Hitchcock expressed their pleasure in the interview.

"We chucked each other under the chin and enjoyed many things in the campaign that were decidedly serious before," said Taft. He added that Hitchcock had told him many interesting things that he had not known respecting the pre-election work, and Hitchcock said that he had the pleasure of informing Taft that the campaign had been conducted, so far as he was concerned, without the giving of a single promise or pledge which would bind Taft as president, either in exchange for personal service in the campaign or for contributions to the Republican cause.

Mr. Taft was told about the campaign fund, which Hitchcock is to make public in detail in a few days. Hitchcock said that this fund was smaller in its aggregate than any similar fund since the record of such funds had been kept and that it was collected from every state in the Union and represented a wider distribution of support than ever before.

SANTORO LURED TO HIS DEATH

Priest Told Girl Concerned In Affair to Keep Silence

Rutland, Vt., Nov. 11.—Lena Black, the 17-year-old Italian girl, was put on the stand by the state in the trial of Rev. Francis Crociata, the Sicilian priest accused of complicity in the murder of Accorito Santoro. The girl seemed very nervous and was often at a loss to understand the questions of the examining lawyer.

Miss Black testified that Crociata told her that she must go out with Giovanni Gioia at night and let Santoro, who was paying attention to her, follow them to the old 76th bridge, where the other Sicilians, two of whom are now serving sentences for the murder, were to strip Santoro of his clothing and shame him so that he would molest the girl no longer.

The priest told her, she said, that it would not only be right, but an honor for her to go, because Santoro was ruining her character. After Santoro had resisted the attempts of his assailants to disrobe him and was killed in the melee the girl said the priest cautioned her to say nothing of what had occurred.

The girl admitted that she would never have told the story of the murder to the authorities if she had not been placed in solitary confinement at the house of correction and told by the matron that she would never be let out until she had disclosed all.

Missionary Schooner Sets Sail

San Francisco, Nov. 11.—The sixty-foot gasolene schooner Hiram Bingham, built and equipped by the American Board of Foreign Missions for service among the Congregational missions in the South seas, sailed for the Gilbert Islands by way of Honolulu. The vessel has on board Captain Alfred Walkup, his son and daughter, a crew of four men, provisions enough to last a year, and a large stock of Bibles and religious literature.

Chosen to Succeed Satterlee

Washington, Nov. 11.—Rev. Dr. Alfred H. Harding, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church, this city, was elected bishop of Washington to succeed the late Henry Y. Satterlee, at the fourth meeting of the thirteenth annual convention of this diocese. Rev. Charles H. Brent, who was elected twice, declined both times, and Rev. Dr. Mann of Boston, elected at the third meeting, also declined.

Jealous of 83 Year-Old Wife

Viroqua, Wis., Nov. 11.—In a fit of insane jealousy Elan Olson, 84 years old, killed his wife, one year his junior, with an axe and then attempted suicide by stabbing himself in the abdomen. Olson on frequent occasions recently, it is reported, upbraided his wife, charging that she was receiving amatory attentions from a farmhand. The husband cannot recover.

Lamphere Jury Not Completed

La Porte, Ind., Nov. 11.—Jury selection in the case of Ray Lamphere, charged with the murder of Mrs. Belle Gunness and her three children, was halted when the second special venire of twenty-five talesmen was exhausted without a jury having been obtained. Ten jurymen have been accepted tentatively by both the defense and the state.

Arms Shipped From America

Calcutta, Nov. 11.—In the course of a trial at Midnapur, Bengal, in connection with a discovery of arms and explosives, a police informer testified that one of the accused had told him that many cases of rifles and revolvers had been shipped from America to Bombay under the guise of sewing machines and cotton goods.

THE

(Legal Title - Incorporated 1892.)

The Directors of the YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION of Quincy, with a firm faith in the great value of the work which is being done for the young men and boys of our city, make their appeal for donations and bequests toward paying the mortgage indebtedness on the new Association Building. When the building is free from debt it will serve as an Endowment, as there is a goodly income from the dormitories.

Should the Donor prefer, such sum as might be given could be used as an Endowment for an educational class or classes, the Boys Department, or as a special fund in other ways, and could be designated with the name of the Donor.

The Treasurer, WILLIAM F. CUMMINGS, 7 Clive Street, Quincy, or the General Secretary, ERNEST G. GAY, will be happy to answer inquiries.

OUR HOSPITAL

INCORPORATED 1889

The Trustees of the City Hospital of Quincy earnestly appeal for donations and bequests for the Endowment fund. This now amounts to over $60,000 but a fund of at least $100,000 is urgently needed.

Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000) will endow a Free Bed to which such name may be given as the Donor may desire, but any sum for this noble institution, which stands ready to serve us all in the hour of need will be most gratefully received.

The Secretary, TIMOTHY REED, Adams St Quincy, or the Treasurer, RICHARD D. CHASE Savings Bank Building, Quincy, will be very glad to confer with any one or to answer any inquiries.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Paul G. Harting and Eva K. Harting to the Employees Trust Incorporated, a Massachusetts corporation having its usual place of business in Boston, dated April 2, 1908, and recorded with Norfolk Registry of Deeds, Book 1077, Page 298, for breach of the conditions thereof and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, will be sold at public auction upon the premises hereinafter described on MONDAY the twenty third day of November, 1908, at four o'clock in the afternoon all and singular the premises described in said mortgage deed, namely:—

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon situated in that part of Quincy called Quincy Point and being Lot one (1) on a plan of land belonging to Walter E. Burke by Perry Lawton, C. E., dated September 1902 and recorded with Norfolk Deeds. Bounded and described as follows:—Beginning on South Street at the corner of the granted premises and land late of Albert C. Nash thence running northerly along said South Street sixty-six 10-100 (66.10) feet; thence turning and running easterly along land of one Read one hundred and four and 45-100 (104.45) feet; thence turning and running southerly along Lot two (2) on said plan sixty-three and 95-100 (63.95) feet to land late of Albert C. Nash; thence turning and running westerly along land of the late Albert C. Nash one hundred eleven and 69-100 (111.69) feet to the point of beginning. Containing seven thousand and seven (7,007) square feet of land more or less.

Said premises will be sold subject to a first mortgage to the Merchants Co-operative Bank, and a second mortgage of six hundred and twenty-five dollars and interest, and to all unpaid taxes, tax titles and assessments, if any.

Two hundred dollars will be required to be paid in cash by the purchaser at the time and place of sale.

COLLIDED ON A CURVE

Two Deaths and Many Men Badly Hurt In Crash of Trains

Deep River, Conn., Nov. 11.—Two men were killed outright, two others fatally injured and a half dozen severely hurt when a work train with Italian section hands aboard crashed into the rear of a freight train standing on the main track in front of the railroad station here. There were twenty-eight Italians on the work train and all suffered injuries. The dead are Frank A. Furlong, a brakeman on the work train, and one of the Italian section hands. The injured were placed on board a special car and sent to New Haven.

The work train was backing down around a curve from Arnold's station, and the engineer says that the train had no warning that the tracks were not clear. He also claims that the flagman of the freight train was not more than ten feet from the rear of his train.

SAY LABORERS WERE MAROONED

Serious Charges Against Agents of a Railway Company

New York, Nov. 11.—What was asserted to be the practical marooning of 3000 men in the wild and inaccessible regions of Florida and their detention there under hard labor for a period of several months was dealt with at length before Judge Hough and a jury in the United States circuit court in the course of the trial of the government's case against employers and agents of the Florida East Coast Railway company for alleged violation of the statute prohibiting "peonage, slavery and enforced servitude." The men under indictment are Francisco Sabbia, E. J. Triay, D. E. Harley and F. A. Hugg.

After a jury had been selected, Deputy Attorney General Usted outlined the prosecution's case. The government would show, he declared, that in 1905 the men had been induced by alluring advertisements in New York papers to apply for employment in the south, being guaranteed good food, high wages and ideal treatment by a corporation solicitous of their welfare and eager to provide them with every comfort. Throughout the long journey they were given, the prosecutor declared, nothing but stale bread and bologna sausage, and when they reached the land end of their journey the men rebelled and refused to leave the train, but a hose was turned on them and they were driven aboard a waiting steamer.

When the ultimate destination was reached, Usted said, the men found it a barren wilderness, overrun with venomous snakes and that no place to sleep had been provided for them. Their "high wages" were slips of paper exchangeable at the company's store for shoes, clothing and food.

Thinking to be discharged and sent away, some refused to work. These, Usted said, were threatened with death and brutally beaten with pick-handles. Finally, some were able to smuggle letters through to relatives, and in this manner the government was apprised of the conditions existing.

Death Valley Shaken Up

San Bernardino, Cal., Nov. 11.—Death Valley and the surrounding country are in the throes of a series of earthquakes. Samuel Lawrence, who has reached here, says that for three weeks there have been one or two rumbles daily. The shocks were light until Wednesday night, when the crags of the Funeral range seemed to totter. Miners were tossed from their bunks, camp equipment was scattered about, horses and mules stampeded, and immense boulders were thrown down. At daybreak the miners left the camp in consternation.

Army an Educational Factor

New York, Nov. 11.—Germany's military system as a factor in the educational and technical training of her men was discussed by President Hadley of Yale university in an address here last night. The empire's military system, declared Hadley, "originally adopted as a disagreeable necessity, has become the central factor in German education and the main cause of Germany's industrial advance."

Mississippi Negro Lynched

Biloxi, Miss., Nov. 11.—The jail here was stormed by a mob of white men who took Henry Leildy, a negro, charged with assault upon Elizabeth Hauser, white, out of town and lynched him.

NEWS IN BRIEF

MISS HELEN C. WILSON HONORED.

Last Monday Miss Helen C. Wilson daughter of the Rev. D. M. Wilson, a former pastor of First Church, Quincy, was honored at a reception given by the Anti-Imperalistic League in the Twentieth Century Club rooms, Boston. Miss Wilson has recently returned from the Philippine Islands where for five years she was a close observer of the Filipinos and their rapidly changing conditions. The League desired to learn her views and those also of two native Filipinos, Raphael A. Pinaynga, and A. Hidalgo Rizal.

In her address, which was very cordially received, Miss Wilson spoke of present conditions with which she was personally familiar, and said that the general impression of returned Americans were inaccurate, "due to ignorance of the language and of social distinctions." She then traced the story of nationalization, which was "growing fast, in spite of government discouragement," and of the development of a national spirit which is "un-American but not anti-American. The Filipinos do not refuse to recognize weak points which the American government emphasizes and attempts to remedy, but they reject the American solution and provide their own."

GALAHAD SOCIAL.

The Galahad Brotherhood of Christ church held a most successful social in the parish house Tuesday evening, it being the first of the season. The matrons were Mrs. W. W. Osborne, Mrs. Elisha Packard and Mrs. E. W. Newcomb. Smith's orchestra supplied the music, and about fifty couples, with B. C. Miller as floor director, tripped the light fantastic.

The entertainment part of the program consisted of songs and readings by the Misses Ella and Ruth Packard, recitations by Miss L. Louise Moyle, and songs by Messrs. Roy Prout and George W. Reynolds. The singers were accompanied by Wendall H. Luce and Miss Nellie M. Drummond. The success of the affair was due in great part to the efforts of the entertainment committee, Messrs. George W. Holden, John King and Byron C. Miller, and to Henry Furnald who served delicious frappe.

The next social under these auspices will take place in about a month. In the meantime, the brotherhood cordially invites any young men who would like to join its ranks to come next Sunday to the choir room below the church, where they will be heartily welcomed. Frank W. Holbrook of Quincy High school conducts the studies.

ARBITRATION AGREED UPON

Either France or Germany Will Apologize For "Casablanca Incident"

Paris, Nov. 11.—The question that has arisen between France and Germany over what has come to be known as "the Casablanca incident," arising out of the arrest by the French authorities of German deserters from the French foreign legion, will be referred to a court of arbitration. Jules Cambon, the French ambassador at Berlin, and Baron Von Waechter, the German acting secretary for foreign affairs, have signed an agreement looking to the settlement of the matters in dispute.

The official text of the agreement sets forth that, after an exchange of expressions of regret that the incident occurred, the entire question of law and facts shall be submitted to arbitration. The selection of the court is left open for adjustment later. The agreement also provides that the country whose agents are adjudged at fault shall make an apology to the other.

THE BLACK EAGLE FOR ZEPPELIN

Kaiser Personally Confers Order on Airship Inventor

Friedrichshafen, Nov. 11.—Emperor William, after witnessing a splendid series of maneuvers by the Zeppelin airship, personally conferred upon Count Zeppelin the Order of the Black Eagle, the highest Prussian decoration. When the count returned from his flight Emperor William shook his hand warmly and conferred upon him the order, saying:

"In my own name and in the name of the German people, I congratulate you from the bottom of my heart for the splendid work you have exhibited to me today. The Fatherland may well be proud to possess such a son, the greatest German of the twentieth century, whose invention has brought us to a new stage in the development of the human race. We have been present today at one of the most momentous incidents in the march of civilization. I thank God that he found our people worthy to call you our own. As a token of my admiring appreciation I confer upon you the exalted Order of the Black Eagle."

Here the emperor hung the chain of the order around the count's neck and said: "And now, my dear count, permit me on the spot to confer unofficially the accolade."

The emperor then embraced Zeppelin thrice and called out "Long live his excellency, Count Zeppelin, the conqueror of the air. Hurrah!"

Honored by Temperance People

Nashville, Nov. 11.—The body of former Senator Carmack, who was killed here in a street duel with Robin J. Cooper, was sent yesterday to Columbia. Members of the W. C. T. U. gathered at the station and, as the casket was borne in, joined in singing "Lead, Kindly Light" and "Stand Up for Jesus." A brief address was delivered by Rev. Ira Landreth. The profusion of flowers was but another of the many testimonials of grief from hosts of friends and sympathizers.

Money For Methodist Missions

St. Louis, Nov. 11.—The general committee of foreign missions of the Methodist Episcopal church adjourned after issuing an appeal to the church for mission funds. An apportionment of the amount desired for 1909 was made among the various conferences and charges. This apportionment amounts to $1,500,000. The committee also endorsed the recommendation adopted by the general conference of the church last May, that $3,000,000 be contributed to the missions next year.

Free Lectures For Farmers

Philadelphia, Nov. 11.—Six professors of the state college of agriculture have begun a three days' lecturing tour through the farming districts of eastern Pennsylvania in a special train, and at each of the twenty-two stops to be made subjects of interest to farmers will be discussed. The three coaches of the special are fitted up as lecture rooms and at each stop a talk of forty-five minutes will be given.

Abruzzi Is Not Promoted

Turin, Nov. 11.—The promotion of the Duke of the Abruzzi to rear admiral did not take place today, on the occasion of King Victor Emmanuel's birthday, as had been expected. The duke recently has appeared in good spirits, which his intimates have not failed to note.

Shot Wife and Killed Self

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 11.—In a drunken frenzy Jacob Sikkema, aged 32 years, twice shot his wife and fired a bullet through his own head, dying instantly. A 6-weeks-old baby in the room was unharmed. The woman has slight chances for recovery.

Soldier Killed by Negro

Lawton, Okla., Nov. 11.—Private Wilcox of the First field artillery from Fort Sill died here of injuries inflicted, it is said, by Paul Williams, a negro, in a fight between negroes and soldiers in the disorderly quarter of Lawton. Williams escaped.

Black Hand Threat Carried Out

Detroit, Nov. 11.—Following the receipt yesterday of a Black Hand letter demanding $500, the home of Grilleo Mercurio was blown up last night. Although the house was badly wrecked, none of the nine persons asleep in it were injured.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

Eugene R. Stone, the Republicans candidate for Mayor, left this morning for a few days trip to New York.

It is probable that Alfred LaBreque, who was defeated for nomination for Councilman in Wark One, will run on nomination papers.

It took the North Dakota just 40 seconds to slide down the ways and into water. Many watchers caught the time much less than 40.

A meeting of the Quincy Charitable society is to be held next Monday afternoon at half past two at the home of Mr. Frederick W. Plummer 17 Greenleaf street.

Makaria entertainment tonight at Bethany chapel.

The annual concert and ball of the Firemen's Relief Association will be held tonight at Music hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Forbes of Bridgewater have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Holmes of Quincy.

Ground is being broken for a new tenement house on Paul Wild terrace which was recently cut up into house-lots.

A church family social will be held in the vestry of the Wollaston Congreagtional church on Thursday evening, November 12. Supper will be served at half-past six.

It is reported that Robert Comins of Elmwood avenue, Wollaston, recently passed examinations at Newport, and has entered the U. S. navy as a mechanic.

Ladies of First church are holding a sale this afternoon and evening in the chapel of the church, with a large array of attractive articles, both useful and fancy. A salad and cold meat supper at six o'clock is one of the special attractions.

"The building of a great street railway system," was the subject of a very interesting and entertaining talk by J. H. Neal, the auditor of the Boston Elevated on Tuesday evening, at the November meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian club. As usual there was an attendance of nearly 100 representative men of the city.

The returns from the caucuses were late in arriving at City Hall. Although a small vote was cast there were so many contests that a long time was required to count the ballots. The first returns received were from Ward Five which arrived two minutes before midnight. The last returns were from Ward Three which arrived at 2.30.

A cordial welcome is extended to everyone to attend the ordination service tomorrow evening in First church of Charles Bulkley Ames, assistant pastor of the church. Rev. William W. Fenn, D. D., of Harvard Divinity school will preach the sermon and there will be special music by the church quartet with solos by Mrs. Laurance H. Sturtevant and Mr. Pol Plancon.

The street railway company was alive to the situation on Tuesday and handled the crowds in good shape. The company had all its spare cars from the Weymouth, Braintree and Quincy barns in use, both open and box cars. In all they had 46 cars on the two lines leading to the Fore River. The greatest rush came about 11 o'clock when two regular and special trains brought thousands of people to City Square which was black with humanity.

RECOUNT IN MILTON.

The recount of votes for Congressman of the Tenth district in Milton gave a gain of one each to O'Connell and Kidney. Galvin's vote remained the same. The two extra votes were two that were claimed to be defective on election day. They were found to be all right and one was for O'Connell and one was forKidney.

RUMMAGE SALE

KING'S DAUGHTERS

UNITY CIRCLE

NOV. 20 and 21

ADAMS BUILDING

Open Nov. 17-18-19 to receive goods. Store formerly occupied by George W. Jones Articles will be called for if Mrs. W. E Blanchard, Presidents Hill is notified.
Quincy, Nov 11 6t

Among The WOMEN'S CLUBS of Quincy and Vicinity.

[A Wednesday Feature.]

Unity Circle of King's Daughters are to hold a rummage sale in the Adams building next week Friday and Saturday, to which housekeepers are invited to contribute all surplus articles found in cleaning house this fall.

There was a good attendance of Alliance members at the meeting of Monday afternoon in the chapel of First church, Rev. George S. Bodge gave a paper on "Theodore Parker."

The Atlantic Shakespeare society met at the home of Mrs. Charles Coe, Billings street, Nov. 5th, the president in the chair. There were fourteen members present. The study of "Antony and Cleopatra" was resumed. "Come thou Monarch of the Vine" was in the reading of the afternoon, and was very sweetly sung by Mrs. William F. Cummings. This added very much to the pleasure of the afternoon. The next meeting will be on Nov. 19th.

The Hospital Aid association is to hold a stocking social and donation party next Wednesday evening in the chapel of First church.

Rev. Peter Goldsmith of Lynn is to speak on "The Higher Reason" at the regular meeting of the Wollaston Alliance on Wednesday afternoon Nov. 18th, in the vestry of the Unitarian church.

The Junior Friday club goes to to meet with Miss Grace M. Isaac. The program "Naples as seen today" West Newton on Monday afternoon has been prepared by Miss Etta M. Prescott.

Friday club members had a very pleasant meeting Nov. 6th with Mrs. John F. Welch of Hancock street. The canals and bridges of Venice were visited and enjoyed under the guidance of Mrs. George W. Morton. Next week Friday the club will meet with Mrs. Emery L. Crane of Whitney road, with Mrs. Zenas S. Arnold in charge of the program. Club members are much pleased with the artistic souvenir programs for this season prepared by Mrs. C. T. Hardwick, president of the club. As the club is studying Venice, photographs of typical Venetian scenes were used by Mrs. Hardwick on the covers of the program with pleasing results.

Owing to Thanksgiving coming on the regular date of meeting the Hospital Aid association will meet next week Thursday, Nov. 19th, at two o'clock, with Mrs. A. M. Keating, corner of Washington and Edwards strets.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

A largely attended meeting of the Quincy Women's club was held Tuesday afternoon at the club house, beginning at half past two with a business session presided over by Mrs. George W. Morton, president, The usual reports were given and Mrs. Herbert W. Pinkham of Wollaston, delegate to the State Federation meeting at Bridgewater gave a full report of the doings of that meeting.

At three o'clock the program of the afternoon opened with a group of songs by Mrs. Reuben R. Baker of Quincy Point. Although a recent comer to Quincy, Mrs. Baker received a very cordial greeting and charmed all with her singing having a contralto voice of pleasing quality and sweetness.

Mrs. John F. Welch, in introducing the speaker of the afternoon, Rev. Allen A. Stockdale of Boston said some might wonder what connection there was with the speaker's subject and Visiting Nursing for which her committee stood, but she thought it was philanthropy and after hearing Mr. Stockdale's lecture she was sure club members would agree with her that the speaker gave food for thought on lines that would tend to uplift and benefit.

Mr. Stockdale's subject was "The Invisible Sculptors" or "Shall the Corners of a Man's Mouth Turn up or Down?" The face shows the character of the person and ones disposition has much to do with the corners of the mouth whether it turns up in happiness or down in unhappiness.

Three things caused the mouth to turn down. First the speaker would put hurry or Americanitis as it is called abroad. We are living at too rapid a gait, at a pace that kills and causes a nervous tension that lined the face and caused the mouth to droop. Second was worry, crossing bridges long before they were reached and lastly fault finding—looking for trouble and always finding it.

To cause the mouth to turn up the speaker placed first the intelligent and sympathetic love of child. Chum with the children, drop outside cares for a while each day.

Second was humor, a keen sense of humor and a hearty laugh were conducive to good health and happiness with an upward tendency of the mouth. Poise of character was essential. Third the speaker laid great stress on a genuine love of struggle—struggle to attain all that was best in one's work. That now-a-day too many young men were looking for situations instead of a job which meant an easy life not much work and hence a loss of character. A happy life is only reached through constant struggle which makes for strength of character.

Mr. Stockdale is an earnest forceful speaker and also dramatic at times making every point count. He interwove poetry to illustrate his subject and there was a blending of the humorous as well as pertinent facts, all making up one of the most helpful as well as one of the best lectures ever given at the club house.

A social half hour followed during which tea was served, the pourers being Mrs. John B. Worster, Mrs. Otho A. Hayward and Mrs. Francis Abele, Jr.

NEIGHBORING.

Rev. Frederick W. Hamliton, president of Tufts college is to address the New England Women's club on Monday afternoon his subject being "Liberty and Democracy." The meeting will be held in Perkins' hall, Boylston street, Boston. Club supper will be served at half past five.

The Philergians of Braintree are to have an Arts and Crafts afternoon next Tuesday, when Miss Jessie Lane Burbank will speak on "Methods and Results in Handicraft." A club tea and social will close the afternoon.

At the musicale given by the Outlook club of Lynn, in Oxford club hall, Monday evening, the Westland quartet presented a most enjoyable program, which was greatly appreciated by the large number present.

The N. E. Woman's Press association observes its 23d anniversary on the 18th at Hotel Vendome, Boston. Mr. Lincoln Steffens, will address the club and Miss Rosamond Dean Hunt of Braintree will sing.

A concert was given under the auspices of Norwood Woman's club, in the Norwood Town hall last Wednesday evening. The Westland quartette of Boston, assisted by Dorothy Berry Carpenter, furnished the program and a goodly sum was realized to be devoted to special work. Mrs. Moors of Quincy and Miss Alice Gertrude Coe of Atlantic are members of the quartet.

Q. Y. C. IMPROVEMENTS.

A special meeting of the Quincy Yacht club was held Tuesday evening to see if the club would authorize the executive committee to issue bonds to the amount of $8,000 to retire the present mortgage and to build the proposed enlargement. The club voted to so authorize the committee, who were also instructed not to commence work until the whole amount was subscribed.

The club voted to amend the by-laws so as to permit life memberships upon the payment of the sum $100.

It was announced that practically $4,000 of the $8,000 had already been pledged.

Telephone Talks

Keep in touch with the world —and see to it that the world may keep in touch with you.

LOCAL AND LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE

Party-Liners And the Golden Rule

If they were co-tenants of a building they would be careful not to infringe upon the rights of others. That same regard for the equities should keep them from infringing by appropriating to themselves more telephone service than can be exacted as their fair share of the capacity of that line.

Lengthy conversations on unimportant matters, the prattling intercourse of children, phonograph concerts, and the like—these sometimes congest party lines and give cause for protest from other tenants in common.

A party line telephone has been likened to a spur track on a main line of railroad. But there is this important qualification—when the telephone spur track is in use the entire main line is closed to traffic, not merely to the other spur track on the line, but also to incoming trains consigned to any part of the line.

Ordinary regard for the principle of the Golden Rule will do more to avert party line difficulties than all the rules any telephone company may promulgate.

Sunday School Convention

The annual convention of the East Norfolk district of the Massachusetts Sunday school association this afternoon was opened at the South Congregational church, South Braintree. The noon session was at 12.15 P. M., for pastors and superintendents. Rev. Edwin Noah Hardy, PhD., presided.

The afternoon session opened at 2 o'clock, with Rev. N. S. Sproul, president of the association, presiding. Four interesting addresses were made during the afternoon to the large attendance present. "The opening and closing service." by Rev. Charles A. Dawson, was the first address. This was followed by an address on "The class and the teachers between Sundays" by Miss Alice S. Hatch. Miss Bessie Roper Conant spoke "The opportunity and organization," and the afternoon session closed with an address by Rev. James Alexander, D. D., of Boston, his subject being, Training for Chriseian service.

At 4.30 the departmental sessions will begin, Mrs. L. E. Ware, Secretary Hamilton S. Conant and Miss Louise C. Tower presiding in the different departments.

Supper will be served at 6 followed by a social hour, directed by Rev. C. F. Hill Crthern of Braintree.

ALMOST A FATALITY.

There came near being a repetition of the Grant street fire fatality Tuesday night, at the fire in the house of Michael Dolan on Nelson street. The house is a double one. The first floor is occupied by Parker White and the upper floor by a family names Riley.

The fire started in Mr. Riley's tenement. It seems that he built a fire in a stove which set fire to the woodwork about the chimney. This caused a terrific smoke. Mr. Riley attempted to extinguish the fire, but was unsuccessful. He was nearly overcome with smoke and when he tried to get out he was overcome and fell headlong down the stairs. Mr. White hastily carried the prostrate man into the street where he soon revived.

An alarm from Box 42 at 10.40 summoned the fire department who quickly extinguished the blaze. Loss $25.

RECOUNT COMPLETE.

The recount in the Tenth Congressional district has been completed and Joseph F. O'Connell has been returned the winner by the small margin of four votes. This shows a net gain of 37 votes for J. Mitchell Galvin in the whole district, which makes this fight the closest in the history of the district.

Last day of registration today, for the city election. The board of registrars will be on duty till 10 o'clock tonight in City Hall, which will give everyone a good chance to get his name on the lists.

Was Easy For William T. Shea

WARD TWO.

The contest in this ward was for Councilmen, four candidates seeking the three positions. William H. Flynn and Councilman William A. Carey and Michael T. Walsh secured the nomination. The vote was William H. Flynn 95, William A. Carey 95, Michael T. Walsh 79, Joseph J. Kelley 60.

The Ward Committee elect,—Dennis J. Ford, William A. Carey, William F. Cain, William H. Flynn, Joseph J. Kelley, Andrew J. Fahey, James B. Oakes, William T. Donovan and Edward P. Histen.

WARD THREE.

But two names appeared on the ballot for Councilman but names written in, place three gentlemen in nomination, Councilman James M. Cantfill, Robert W. Smith and Alexander D. Russell. The latter is also the Republican nominee although the middle initial is different. The vote was: James M. Cantfill 45, Robert W. Smith 43, Alexander D. Russell 4, George Cahill, Robert W. Craig 1.

The ward committee elect,—Cornelious D. Austin, William A. Kelly, Robert W. Smith, Patrick Crimmins, James H. Sullivan, Michael Donahue, Samuel A. Dougherty, Dennis P. Donohue and George D. Cahill.

WARD FOUR.

There was quite a spirited contest in this ward for Councilmen. There was also a contest for Ward Committee, for which two lists of names appeared.

The vote for Councilmen was quite a surprise, as Councilman Teasdale was defeated for nomination. The three nominated were ex-Councilman James M. Flaherty, John J. McDevitt, John D. Smith. The vote was: John J. McDevitt 156, James M. Flaherty 128, John D. Smith 116, Robert J. Teasdale.

James F. Burke was nominted for School Committee from ward.

On the vote for Ward Committee there was quite a split, the two names on the second list filed defeating two that were on the first or complete list. The votes ranged from 97 to 168 the latter vote being given to Mayor Shea. The Ward Committee elect are: Charles C. McCue, Charles J. McGilvray, John D. Smith, William T. Shea, James M. Flaherty, John J. King, Thomas J. Sullivan, Richard H. Joyce and John J. McDevitt.

WARD FIVE.

There was no contest in this ward for any candidate outside of Mayor, and that did not amount to much as but 11 Democratic votes were cast.

For councilmen the names of James Penniman and Patrick Ferguson were written in and they became candidates

The Ward Committee elect,—David J. Roche, Michael E. Cook, Jeremiah Dinneen, Bernard F. Manning, Frank J. Lavery, Edward D. Larkin, Francis R. McCormick, Thomas H. Forrest and Robert J. Egan.

WARD SIX.

There were no contests in this ward on the official ballot but one name appeared for Councilmen and none for school committee. The votes, however, placed men in nomination. Among the names written in was that of Councilman Ralph W. Hobbs, who received the Republican nomination, so that he is a candidate of both parties. The other two nominated were Thomas H. Hayes and John Curley. The vote was Thomas H. Hayes 6, Ralph W. Hobbs 4, John Curley 4, John Dolan 3, John J. Given 1, Martin W. Cunniff 1.

No names were printed for School Committee from ward, but Herbert S. Barker the Republican nominee received 3 votes and he has the nomination of both parties.

The Ward Committee elect,—Martin W. Cunniff, Bernard Cullen, John Dolan, Lawrence Curtin, Patrick Canty, Timothy F. Sullivan, Peter J. Colligan, John Collins and Walter C. MacEwen.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

City Charter And Playground

The regular monthly meeting of the Citizens' Association was held on Wednesday evening in the Granite Manufacturers' rooms in the Adams Building. President Paul R. Blackmur was in the chair.

The president announced that the special business before the meeting was the discussion of the city charter.

He said he thought it was advisable to bring this matter up early in the evening as it was very important. He asked for the opinions of those present.

Brooks Adams arose, and as chairman of the special committee to report in regard to the City charter, gave his ideas as to what might be done. Mr. Adams said that most of the difficulties that a city finds itself struggling with, cannot be placed at the door of the Mayor. Because the Mayor has not in the past had the opportunity to do many things he might wish to do. So Mr. Adams said he thought the Mayor's term of office should be lengthened, so that the official would have time not only to formulate a plan, but also to carry it out. He thought that more power should be vested in the Mayor, this power to be checked by a large city council. He thought that the more the administration was concentrated in one mind, the better the results, and the more it is spread out, the greater the friction.

City Solicitor John W. McAnarney said that he thought that the members of the Citizens' Association were not the only people in Quincy interested in this City charter proposition. He advised a meeting with some of the other clubs of the city, such as the Board of Trade, Men's clubs, etc.

Mr. Adams agreed with Mr. McAnarney on the question, but thought the association wanted to come to some settled point.

John L. Miller agreed with Mr. McAnarney, and moved that an invitation be sent to the trade associations and any clubs interested, to send a committee of eight to confer with a like committee of the Citizens' Association. It was unanimously voted.

The committee on legislative and Municipal affairs, in the Citizens' Association, consists of W. S. Pinkham, Brooks Adams, Eugene C. Hultman, George H. Brown, John W. McAnarney, Henry G. Fay, H. Gerrish Smith and E. C. Bumpus.

The matter of playgrounds was then brought up by President Blackmur, and N. G. Nickerson, James Nowland and H. T. Whitman spoke strongly in favor of more playgrounds.

On a motion of Mr. McAnarney it was voted that a committee of three with the president as chairman be appointed to look into the question.

F. F. Crane then read an article on the proposed Brockton canal, after which the meeting adjourned.

THE NEW DEPUTY.

"The Observant Citizen" of the Post writes: "I hear that the new deputy probation commissioner, Edwin Mulready, is hard at work formulating his plans for the carrying out of the ideas which led the last Legislature to create the position. He has established his head-quarters in the Court House, and those who know him best predict that his long and active experience in probation work and in matters of criminology and sociology will be soon made manifest in the affairs of his office."

Meanwhile 40 to 50 gentlemen are on the anxious seat expecting to fill the vacancy in Norfolk and Plymouth counties caused by his resignation.

ANNUAL BALL

False Alarm During Festivities Of the Quincy Fire Department

While the seventeenth annual concert and ball of the Quincy Firemen's Relief Association was at its height Wednesday evening, Chief Williams and his corps of firefighters were rudely summoned from their evening's pleasure by an alarm from Box 174. The alarm proved to be false and was probably pulled in by some malicious person.

After arriving at the box Chief Williams chased a man who it was thought had pulled the alarm and captured him but unfortunately the evidence is not sufficiently strong to hold him.

After the recall the apparatus returned to quarters and the firemen returned to the hall where the ball was still in progress.

The festivities were held at Music Hall, and although the weather was rather stormy it did not seem to interfere much with the attendance, for there was a large party present.

The hall looked very pretty with its decorations of bunting of the national colors, its flags of all nations, and potted plants with which the platform was decorated.

On the wall at the right of the platform was a large fire alarm gong which had been cut into the fire alarm circuit. This served a double purpose. First, to sound the blows which set the ball in motion and second to notify the firemen should an alarm be rung in.

Many out of town firemen were present in their neat uniforms of blue, all departments of neighboring cities and towns being represented. Several fire chiefs were among those present, as well as Mayor Shea and some of his officials, also several ex-Chiefs of the Quincy Fire department.

As the guests arrived they were welcomed by the reception committee composed of Chief Peter J. Williams, President Daniel J. Nyhan, Vice-President William F. Powers, Assistant Chief Frank C. Packard, Assistant Chief James Dillon, Clerk Walter P. Hill and Treasurer Edmund G. Hayden. The committee saw to it that their every want was carefully looked after.

Between the hours of 8 and 9 o'clock, while the guests were arriving, Wilson's orchestra gave a promenade concert, during which the following selections were rendered.

March—Guard of Honor	Rollinson
Overture—Jolly Robbers	Suppe
Concert Waltz—Weiner Burger	Ziehrer
Duet for Flute and Clarinet	Two Little Bulfinches
	Kling
Mr. Poole and Sigilman.
Intermezzo—Rainbow	Wenrich

At exactly 9.07 three blows, the Chief's call, sounded on the gong, having been snapped in from the Central fire station. This was the signal for the ball to get in motion. The orchestra played a few strains of "Hail to the Chief." Then it played a march and the promenade commenced.

Chief Williams and his daughter, Miss Florence M. Williams, led the march, being followed by District Chief Daniel J. Nyhan and Mrs. Nyhan, Mayor Shea and Mrs. Peter J. Williams, District Chief Frank C. Packard and Miss Mary Nyhan, ex-Chief Walter H. Ripley and Mrs. Ripley.

The others composing the first eight couples were Herbert Griffin of Steamer 1 and Mrs. Griffin, Edmund G. Hayden of Hook and Ladder 3 and Mrs. Hayden, Richard J. Colbert of the Central station and Mrs. Colbert.

Following them were 96 couples, who more than circled the hall. Elmer W. Baker officiated as director of the march which was a very pretty affair.

First the marchers came down the centre by couples then by fours and then eights. These eight couples made an imposing spectacle as the first line was composed of the four chiefs and their ladies, viz. Mayor Shea, Chief Williams, Nyhan and Packard. From eights the marches came down in sixteen front this line bringing out hearty applause from the many spectators who watched the gay scene from the balcony and seats along the sides of the hall.

The march over, the dance program of twenty numbers was started with a quadrille.

At 11.16, while everybody was enjoying themselves, there came a blow on the fire gong. Everybody stopped and listened. Then seven more blows sounded and then 4. Box 174 said everybody. At the first blow Chief Williams had made a rush for the door, and as the last blow of the first round sounded he jumped into his wagon which was waiting at the door and the next minute his "clear-the-street" gong was sounding as he sped toward North street at Quincy Point.

As noted above the alarm proved to be false. Some little time elapsed before the recall sounded for the Chief was chasing the man supposed to have pulled the box.

All hands returned to the hall later, where the ball had gone on uninterrupted, if minus some of its uniformed dancers.

At midnight a banquet was served in the annex.

At 2 A. M. the all out again sounded, and the seventeenth annual was a matter of history.

From beginning to end the ball was a great success and reflects great credit on the committee of arrangements who were: Daniel J. Nyhan, chairman; Frederick L. Bent, secretary; Walter P. Hill treasurer; William H. Corcoran, Charles P. Costa, William F. Powers, Thomas F. Hogan, Richard J. Colbert, James Dillon, John R. Ross, Herbert Griffin, J. C. Gallagher, Edmund G. Hayden, John J. Avery, and Daniel McNeice.

The floor officers were:

Marshal—Chief Peter J. Williams.

Assistant Marshal—President Daniel J. Nyhan.

Floor Director—Vice-President William F. Powers.

Assistant Floor Director—Assistant Chief James Dillon.

Chief of Aids—Assistant Chief Frank C. Packard.

PLAYGROUNDS.

Gov. Hughes of New York says:—"If boys or girls are to take easily to moral instruction, to listen readily to the voice of conscience, they must have a wholesome life. A few hours in the fresh air, a few hours of self abandon in innocent fun, a chance to be a normal boy or girl, will do more to reenforce moral lessons than many, many days of mere teaching. Thus the playground will be without any direct effort one of the regenerating and uplifting forces of the community. The ordinary man if he has a chance to live a decent life will live it; and if you want good men and women in the world devote your efforts to a large degree in removing those obstacles which are in the way of decent, virtuous, wholesome life."

State Pride in Our Shipyard

What "Bud Brier" of the Globs says of the Quincy launching this week will be endorsed by the people of the city in general:

"The launching of the battleship North Dakota Tuesday was witnessed by at least 25,000 persons, most of whom were residents of Quincy or connected in some way with the Fore River shipbuilding company. The employment of 3000 to 4000 persons by the company, according to the work in hand, means a great deal for Quincy and Massachusetts, and every encouragement should be given to this great enterprise on our Massachusetts coast. A regular town has sprung up around the Fore River works, and it is really wonderful how much has been accomplished in a few years.

"When it is considered that the largest of our battleships is being built in Massachusetts by Massachusetts capital, with the son of editor Samuel Bowles of Springfield in charge of the undertaking, it should be a matter of state pride on the part of Massachusetts people. Their representatives in congress should see that everything which they can honorably do to enable this company to continue in active operation should be done. With American merchant shipbuilding at its lowest ebb, there must be warship building contracts given out, or this company will join the long list of closed American shipyards—a loss to this state of millions of dollars yearly.

"Admiral Bowles, as he is still called, though no longer connected with the navy, having resigned to accept a salary probably several times as large as he received when chief constructor and rear admiral, is the right man in the right place at Quincy. Many stories are told of how closely he keeps his finger on the pulse of work at the Fore River yard. He has his eyes wide open to the future of Boston and its suburbs, particularly that part of them close to Boston harbor. He believes Quincy will have a great future. I have heard a report that his company is building, or intends to construct, an immense drydock there, of the sort which many merchants of Boston regard as necessary for Boston's mercantile future.

"Mayor Shea of Quincy made a great hit with the guests present at the launching of the North Dakota. His speech after the luncheon was splendidly delivered and well received by the entire assemblage. Mayor Shea has a well modulated voice and the North Dakota delegation gave him a cordial greeting when he arose to speak for the city of Quincy."

INSTALLATION.

The officers of Wollaston lodge No. 179, A. B. S., were installed on Tuesday evening by V. D. S. P. Morey Pearson, M. D., and suite of Boston, as follows:

President—George W. Church.
Vice President—Eliza Miner.
Secretary—Nina J. Miller.
Treasurer—Samuel Hanson.
Collector—Rosa M. Taylor.
Chaplain—Fred E. Burgess.
Orator—Elva A. Muir.
Marshal—A. S. Gardiner.
Warden—Cora M. Gardiner.
Sentry—Leonard W. Taylor.
Trustees—Dr. E. R. Johnson. L. C. Merrill and N. J. Miller.

After the business of the lodge had been transacted all sat down to a delicious clam chowder prepared by Sister Taylor.

SIX HUNDRED GUESTS.

The Fore River Shipbuilding Company entertained about 600 at the luncheon after the launching on Tuesday. A Boston caterer served salads and ices.

The post prandial exercises were brief. President Bowles presided, and there were addresses by Hon. William T. Shea, the Mayor of Quincy; and Hon. John Burke, the Governor of North Dakota.

First Admiral Bowles proposed three cheers for North Dakota which were given with a will, and equally hearty were cheers for President Bowles, of the Fore River Company and the City of Quincy.

At the close of Gov. Burke's address he read an original poem written for the occasion.

PROBATE COURT.

Wills allowed—Of James M. Seamans of Brookline, John J. Greenough, of Brookline, Atherton W. Tilden of Weymouth, Mary F. Spear of Braintree, Charles A. Howland of Quincy, Olive A. Sumner of Stoughton, and William Laing of Quincy.

Guardian appointed—Edward Fitzgerald of Ormand Davenport of Weymouth, a minor, bond $500.

Accounts were allowed on the estates of Caroline R. Giving of Quincy, Emma M, H. Watson of Weymouth and several others.

Close of Registration

Registrations for the municipal election closed Wednesday night, the Registrars being in session from 12 o'clock noon until 10 P. M. During this time the names of 86 men and 11 women were added. Of this number 31 men and 1 woman were from Ward One; 19 men and 1 woman from Ward Two; 10 from Ward Three; 15 from Ward Four; 6 men and 4 women from Ward Five, and 5 men and 5 women from Ward Six.

This swells the total number on the voting lists for the Municipal election to 5,804, an increase of 345 over the number on the lists for the municipal election of 1907.

In addition to these there are 47 female voters registered who however vote for school committee only.

The female voters by precincts: Ward One, precinct one, 3; precinct two, 4; Ward Two, precinct two, 2; Ward Five, 31; Ward Six, precinct two, 7.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

The City Council Committee on Streets will meet next Friday evening.

It is reported that George H. Corliss, who was defeated for councilman from Ward Two, will run on nomination papers.

Charles Bulkley Ames, assistant pastor of First church is to be ordained tonight, a public service being held in the church at eight o'clock.

A young son of Councilman Thomas F. Hogan had the misfortune Wednesday to have his collar bone broken while at play at his home in Watertown.

The Kitnalta club which has enjoyed many seasons of whist has not as yet started the winter season owing to the absence of several of its members.

The fog that has prevailed for the past few days cleared during the night and this morning the weather was bright and clear with indications of being colder.

The Charitable Tens Circle of King's Daughters will meet with Mrs. Thomas Fenno, Hancock street on Monday Nov. 16th at 2 P. M. Regular monthly meeting and sewing.

A grammar school boy in Atlantic was heard to boast this week of breaking eight electric light bulbs. But a policeman got wind of the remark and visited the "smart boy" in school where his boast was rather a matter of disgrace than of pride.

As the dancing party to be given this month by Gordon Jenkins of Billings street and Kenneth Gay of Webster street will be the first social event to open Atlantic Music hall this season, it is hoped it will be well patronized by old and young. A good time is promised.

PERISHED IN FROZEN NORTH

Reported Discovery of the Body of Explorer Andree

NEAR THE LABRADOR COAST

Half-Caste Eskimo Who Commanded a Schooner Credited With Having Located Grave Marked by Simple Wooden Cross--Various Rumors of Finding Relics of North Pole Expedition o 1897 Never Confirmed

Copenhagen, Nov. 12.—Beneath a simple wooden cross, not far from the Labrador coast, the body of Professor S. A. Andree, who in 1897 made an attempt to reach the North Pole in a balloon, is believed to have been discovered.

The single name "Andree" crudely carved upon the cross furnishes the sole clue to the final resting place of the intrepid Arctic explorer. Buried with the body was also found a box of documents, the nature of which, however, has not yet been ascertained.

Captain Chalker, skipper of the schooner Pilot of Brigue, of Conception Bay, N. F., is credited with making the important discovery, the news of which was contained in a letter received here from the captain of the Danish steamer Inga, dated Labrador, Sept. 30. The letter from the captain of the Inga was sent from Indian Side, Labrador, and that states that the schooner Pilot of Brigue arrived there from Cape Mugford, northern Labrador.

Captain Chalker reported that he went inland at that place and, about a quarter of a mile from shore, came upon a simple wooden cross, on which was inscribed the name "Andree" or "Andre."

The place where the cross was discovered is an absolute desert and is rarely visited, even by the Eskimos. What became of Andree's two companions, if the discovered remains proved to be his, is problematical, but light probably will be thrown upon their fate by an examination of the papers.

The expedition to discover the North Pole, organized by Professor S. A. Andree, a Swedish explorer, left Danes island, Spitzbergen, in a balloon on the afternoon of July 11, 1897. Andree was accompanied by two companions, Stindberg and Fraenkel. He was prepared to drop messages relating his progress, and various such communications were discovered during the three months following his departure. No authentic news, however, ever was received concerning the fate of the balloon or its occupants.

Various rumors have been current of the finding of relics of the expedition, but none of them ever was confirmed. In September, 1899, a buoy marked "Andree Polar expedition," with an anchor attached, was picked up on King Charles island and later identified as the buoy which Andree was to drop when passing the pole, but the general opinion was that it had been lost overboard or thrown out to lighten the balloon. In September, 1900, a bottle containing a note numbered 143 was found near Vardoe, the most northeasterly port of Norway.

It has twice been reported that Andree's body had been found, but neither of these statements were substantiated. In July, 1902, a circumstantial story was received from York Factory, Northwest British Territory, setting forth that Andree and his two companions had been murdered two years previously, that is in 1900, by a party of Eskimos at a point several hundred miles north of York and near Fort Churchill. The Eskimos saw the balloon alight on a plain of snow and three men emerge from it. The natives approached, and as they did so one of Andree's companions fired off a gun. This was regarded as a challenge, and almost instantly the natives, according to this story, fell upon the three explorers and massacred them. Everything pertaining to Andree's outfit was carried to the homes of the natives on the borders of the Arctic region.

Many expeditions, some equipped at great expense, have searched the Arctic regions for the missing balloonists, but none of them was successful.

Andree's balloon was so constructed as to be capable of remaining in the air for over fifty days. The start from Danes Island was made under exciting circumstances.

Murder Charge Against Cooper

Nashville, Nov. 12.—A state warrant charging him with the murder of former United States Senator E. W. Carmack was served on Robin Cooper at a hospital. Cooper will be removed to the county jail as soon as his condition permits. It has developed that two shots were fired at Cooper, one penetrating the shoulder, the other going through his coatsleeve.

State Secret Turned Loose

The Hague, Nov. 12.—The Vaderland publishes extracts from the memoirs of an unnamed diplomat who asserts that during the Russo-Japanese war the German emperor wrote to Queen Wilhelmina of Holland, threatening the occupation of Dutch ports unless Holland immediately put herself in a state of defense against Great Britain.

Fair of the Fragment Society

The chapel of the First church never looked more attractive than it did Wednesday afternoon when it was decorated with hundreds of yards of crepe paper for the fair of the Fragment society of the church. The entire floor was occupied with tables and booths for the sale of useful and fancy articles, tea, confectionery, preserves etc. Each of these tables was decorated in an attractive manner with bright colored crepe paper which served to set off the large array of articles with which the tables were loaded. In the centre of the chapel were several pretty booths. One of these was devoted to the sale of candy, another to art treasures and the third as a Japanese tea room. This booth was especially attractive as the young ladies in charge were gowned in fetching Japanese costumes.

On the platform was a large tree hung with a variety of articles. This was called the Children's grab tree. Over in one corner was the mystery table upon which were many packages, all of about the same size, and all wrapped in yellow crepe paper. Some were more valuable than others. It was a guess with the purchaser what he or she was getting until they had an opportunity to peek beneath the wrapper.

The tables at which the fancy and underwear articles were for sale contained many things which the good housewife will find very handy the coming winter months. The men's table had small articles of various kinds and the junior alliance table useful articles. The candy booth contained many toothsome sweets which met with a ready sale.

The ladies in charge of the various tables and booths were as follows:—

Fancy Table—Mrs. George F. Plaffman, Mrs. Henry M. Faxon, Mrs. Henry R. Holden, Mrs. Walter B. Nichols, Mrs. Ellery C. Butler, Mrs. Russell A. Sears, Mrs. Paul R. Blackmur, Mrs. Harry L. Rice, Mrs. E. H. Angier, Mrs. J. H. Slade, Miss Ellen Fottler and Miss Tisdale.

☞The North Dakota has been the target of such frank debate everywhere during her construction that even the landlubber can tell solemnly how she could be improved. Yet we have a idea that she will prove a very creditable addition to the navy. It is true that she is to have only a 20-knot speed, while England's new warship made the astonishing speed of 28 knots on Saturday for a period of eight hours, and has run 25 knots an hour with only seven-tenths of her power. The American navy is being constructed with gun power most in mind and racing as a subordinate quality.—Boston Record.

Danderine

GROWS HAIR and we can PROVE IT!

A lady from Minnesota writes:
"As a result of using Danderine, my hair is close to five feet in length."

Beautiful Hair at Small Cost

HAIR troubles, like many other diseases, have been wrongly diagnosed and altogether misunderstood. The hair itself is not the thing to be treated, for the reason that it is simply a product of the scalp and wholly dependent upon its action. The scalp is the very soil in which the hair is produced, nurtured and grown, and it alone should receive the attention if results are to be expected. It would do no earthly good to treat the stem of a plant with a view of making it grow and become more beautiful—the soil in which the plant grows must be attended to. Therefore, the scalp in which the hair grows must receive the attention if you are to expect it to grow and become more beautiful.

Loss of hair is caused by the scalp drying up, or losing its supply of moisture or nutriment; when baldness occurs the scalp has simply lost all its nourishment, leaving nothing for the hair to feed upon (a plant or even a tree would die under similar conditions.)

The natural thing to do in either case, is to feed and replenish the soil or scalp as the case may be, and your crop will grow and multiply as nature intended it should.

Knowlton's Danderine has a most wonderful effect upon the hair glands and tissues of the scalp. It is the only remedy for the hair ever discovered that is similar to the natural hair foods or liquids of the scalp.

It penetrates the pores quickly and the hair soon shows the effects of its wonderfully exhilarating and life-producing qualities.

One 25-cent bottle is enough to convince you of its great worth as a hair growing and hair beautifying remedy—try it and see for yourself.

NOW at all druggists in three sizes, 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

Cut This Out

FREE To show how quickly Danderine acts, we will send a large sample free by return mail to anyone who sends this free coupon to the KNOWLTON DANDERINE CO., CHICAGO, ILL., with their name and address and 10c in silver or stamps to pay postage.

FROM NINETEENTH STORY

Fall of Young Lawyer Breaks Almost Every Bone In His Body

New York, Nov. 12.—Harvey W. Watterson, a lawyer and younger son of Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, plunged to his death from the nineteenth floor of an office building at 37 Wall street. His body shot downward for 110 feet, landing on the roof of a ten-story building adjoining. Almost every bone was broken and the head crushed and death was practically instantaneous.

While there were no eye-witnesses to the tragedy, it was evidently accidental. Watterson's hat and overcoat were on his closed desk and he presumably remained a moment to lower the window when, either stumbling over the radiator which was in front of the low sill or losing his footing in some manner unknown, he pitched forward and down to death on the roof below.

Mr. Watterson was 30 years old and married, and lived in Second avenue. He was junior member of the law firm of Wing, Russell & Watterson.

NOT IN SYMPATHY WITH NIGHT RIDERS

Planters Will Raise Price of Cotton In Other Ways

New Orleans, Nov. 12.—That it is within the powers of the planters of the south to bring the price of cotton back to last year's level was the declaration of President Barrett when he formally opened the convention of the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative union here.

"And when we succeed in restoring the price of cotton to the figures that ruled last year we will be richer by $150,000,000," said Barrett, amid applause.

He said that meddlesome newspapers and busybodies had sought to connect the Farmers' union with the night riders. It was illogical and unjust to accuse members of the union with the depredations of the night riders, he said. The union did not need and will not invoke lawless methods to gain its ends. The union had no sympathy, he continued, with the night riders, and would take the initiative to rid the country of them.

Smuggling of Chinese Alleged

Pensacola, Fla., Nov. 12.—Following the arrest in Boston on Monday of Captain Daley of the schooner Freddie W. Alton, now in this port, upon a charge of conspiracy to smuggle Chinese from the Mexican border into the United States, six members of the crew of the Freddie W. Alton were taken into custody here last night as witnesses. They then left here for Boston in charge of the United States marshal. The government officials here believe they have unearthed a plot for the wholesale smuggling of Chinese into this country.

Beneficiaries of Baker Will

Boston, Nov. 12.—The terms of the settlement of the contest to break the will of Walter F. Baker, the Boston clubman who died under mysterious circumstances in New Jersey several months ago, have just been made public. Harvard university will receive $150,000, Mrs. Helen B. Hurd $150,000 and Edward E. Baker, brother of Walter, $150,000. The greater part of the estate was originally left to Mrs. Hurd's daughter, Natalie, who has since died, and had there been no contest it would have reverted to the child's mother.

Sixteen Voters Arrested

Brookline, Mass., Nov. 12.—Sixteen citizens of this town were arrested last night on the charge of having violated the caucus laws at the Republican primary elections on Sept. 22. The arrests are the outcome of a contest between John A. Curtin and Norman E. White for the representative nomination from Brookline, each candidate claiming that his opponent secured Democratic votes in his behalf at the Republican caucus.

Noted Priest Dies Suddenly

Baltimore, Nov. 12.—Rev. George E. Viger, aged 70, for over forty-seven years a member of the faculty of St. Charles college, Endicott City, Md., was found dead in bed in his room at the college. Death was due to heart failure. Many of the most prominent members of the Catholic priesthood and hierarchy in the United States were pupils at St. Charles college. He was the author of Viger's Latin grammar.

Tupper to Lead Conservatives

Ottawa, Nov. 12.—It is understood that a movement has been started along certain sections of the Conservative party here to depose R. L. Borden from the party leadership and replace him by Sir Charles H. Tupper. Those who are behind the movement say that Borden is weary of political life and will make no objection to the change.

Bound to Exclude Chinese

Nelson, B. C., Nov. 12.—Frank Oliver, minister of the interior, declared here last night that if a $500 head tax would not exclude Chinamen, the government would raise it. Five hundred dollars was meant to be prohibitive, and if the amount was not sufficient to be prohibitive, it would be made so.

Progressive Public Service Corporation

The present owners took over the Citizens' Gas Light Company in March, 1906, at which time the physical condition of the entire property was not only extremely bad, but the equipment of the plant and the development of the territory was meagre and entirely inadequate for the requirements of the community. There were in commission at that time only 566 meters, and the company had but 14 1-2 miles of main pipe, much of which was in bad condition and of small capacity; the price of gas was $2.00 per 1000 cubic feet, and the output of gas for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1906, was but 12,228,500 cubic feet.

Even under these discouraging conditions, the new management felt that by a considerable outlay of money, sufficient to give the citizens of Quincy an up-to-date plant with adequate and modern service, the situation could be so handled that the venture would not only become a source of pride to the city of Quincy, but eventually profitable for the owners.

With these objects in view, the company, on July 1, 1906, about three months after taking control, reduced the price of gas from $2.00 per 1000 cubic feet to $1.50, and thereupon began an active campaign of judicious and extensive improvement and expansion. This has meant an expenditure, to July 1, 1908, of $328,000 in money, and up to June 30, 1908, there has been laid 40 1-2 miles of main pipe, covering nearly the entire city; there has been an increase in meters of 1,231; a new 500,000 foot gas holder on the Bracket street property and a new meter house on Adams street, near East Milton, have been completed. The gas output of the company for the year ending June 30 last, was 28,958,000 cubic feet.

While these figures show that the company has carried out, to the limit, its promises made to the citizens of Quincy, and given them a public service corporation of which they may well be proud, this has been done, so far, at a loss to the company, as its annual report to the Gas Commissioners for the year ending June 30, 1908, shows a deficit for the year of over $8,000.

It is reasonable to expect, however, that from now on, by means of its perfected equipment and able management, the returns from an increasing business will show a profit to which the company is certainly entitled. The people of our city, mindful of what the old company was, fully appreciate what the present progressive management has done for the community.

THE ELMENDORF LECTURES.

It is always a pleasant duty to make record of the annual announcement of the course of illustrated lectures which Dwight L. Elmendorf, the famous artist and traveler, delivers each season in Boston at Tremont Temple. This year a most attractive program has been arranged, the general title of the five lectures being "From the Polar Sea to the Garden of Allah," and the days selected are successive Friday evenings and Saturday afternoons beginning November 20th. The first lecture, "Norway," takes the tourists through the marvelous Norwegian fjords far north. The second lecture is a great contrast to the first and makes us acquainted with the delightful pastoral scenery of "Quaint Holand," the land of dykes and windmills. For his third lecture, Mr. Elmendorf chooses "Switzerland and the High Alps"; and again we have the ever delightful element of contrast. "Italy, from Venice to Sicily," is the title of the fourth lecture; Venice, Milan, Florence, Rome and Naples to Sicily and the Blue Grotto of Capri. The last stage of the journey finds us in Tunis on the north coast of Africa. All the views projected in these lectures are entirely the work of this artist-traveler. His coloring of the lantern slides is extraordinarily faithful to nature, while his motion pictures give one the sensation of being right there. To miss the Elmendorf lectures is to deprive one's self of a veritable treat.

Chapter 12

IT'S more than a fortnight since I've been able to write about any of the things that have happened to me. The last I did was on the morning after the great affair, when we were looking forward to the pink ball in the evening. Mrs. Ess Kay didn't quite have her wish, for the ball was a moderate success, but it did seem a pale pink after the gorgeousness of the night before, and it might have been still paler (as every one felt rather washed out) if it hadn't been for one special excitement. Mohunsleigh's engagement to Carolyn Pitchley was announced, and we were told that the wedding would have to be soon, as Mohunsleigh had had news which called him back to England, and he wanted to take his bride with him.

Before I stopped to think I'd promised Carolyn to be one of her bridesmaids, but five minutes later I would almost have liked to change my mind because of Potter. He was asked to be an usher. (I didn't know at the time what that meant, but I had a vague impression it was something of importance at American weddings.) So that I was sure to see a lot of him if I were bridesmaid, and in any case I was beginning to feel he might make it too awkward for me to visit much longer with Mrs. Ess Kay.

However, when on second thought I tried to get out of my promise by hinting that I might have to go home, Carolyn seemed ready to cry and said that if I threw her over it would spoil everything. The wedding would be in ten days, and surely I hadn't been thinking of going back to England as soon as that?

It was quite true, I hadn't. And more than that, I knew I shouldn't be welcome at home. I made up my mind to get through somehow and told Carolyn I had only been joking.

She had always wanted to be married at Grace church in New York, but New York is no place for August weddings, if an August wedding you must have; so Carolyn's invitations, which appeared almost immediately after the engagement was announced, told every one that Mr. and Mrs. Pitchley begged them to be present at their daughter's marriage in the drawing room of the Chateau de Plaisance.

I didn't know that you could be married in a drawing room, but it seems you can, quite properly. However, when I go home I don't think I'd better say much about that part of Mohunsleigh's wedding, or some of the old fashioned people mightn't understand. I should hate them to get the idea just because of the drawing room that poor Carolyn was morganatic or something.

She seemed ecstatically happy, more than I could imagine any girl being if she had to marry Mohunsleigh, who, although a dear good fellow when you know him, isn't a bit romantic. But he suddenly blossomed out into all sorts of pleasant American ways, sent Caro flowers and things every day, though I fancy he couldn't afford it; gave her a lovely solitaire diamond ring, which I'm sure he couldn't, and a "guard," an heirloom in his family.

It would have been shocking, Carolyn said, for her to be seen anywhere after the invitations were out, though I can't think why, as she didn't seem at all ashamed of marrying Mohunsleigh, but rather the contrary, and asked me hundreds of questions about what she would have to do when she was a countess. Fortunately, though, she had lots of things to keep her busy indoors, trying on such frocks as she could get made in a hurry and writing letters to every girl she knew announcing her engagement.

The funniest things about the whole affair were—for me—the ushers, the rehearsals for the wedding and having a married woman as a sort of head bridesmaid. Carolyn's best girl chum was married herself in the spring, so she had to be what they call a matron of honor.

It seemed horribly irreverent to rehearse for the ceremony, but nobody else thought so except Mohunsleigh and me, and Mohunsleigh said in confidence that he'd found out the bridegroom was a mere lay figure at a wedding—anyhow in America—and he intended to let Caro do exactly as she liked until after they were married. Then she might have to find out that once in awhile it would be just as well if she did what he liked. But he asked me not to mention this to Carolyn and her stepmother, so I didn't. And in spite of my objection the rehearsals were interesting. I felt as if I oughtn't to laugh and joke, but the others all did tremendously, so I did, too, in the end.

Mohunsleigh was disappointed because that Californian friend of his (whom he would have visited if it hadn't been for falling in love unexpectedly and getting married) couldn't come and be his best man. He urged him, but something interfered. Mohunsleigh didn't tell us what, and Mr. Jameson B. Harborough wasn't even able to come to the wedding. I was disappointed, too, as Mohunsleigh had told us such romantic things about his friend that we all wanted to see him. Mr. Harborough had been a sailor and a cowboy and had left everything to fight in the Spanish war, where he'd done brave and splendid things, and might have stayed in the army afterward as a captain if he had liked. But he preferred to go back to his old, free life and was still a poor young man until two or three years ago, when some land in which he'd invested a few savings turned out to have gold in it—quantities of gold, gold enough to make a famous mine and give Mr. Harborough a great fortune. Sally knew a good deal about the new millionaire too. It seemed that cousins of his in the west somewhere were acquaintances of hers and had told her how immensely he had been sought out and flattered in San Francisco and other places since he'd become rich. He hated it so much that he'd gone abroad and stopped a long time, wandering about in strange eastern countries making friends with Bedouins and people like that who love horses better than money, and on account of certain experiences with women he'd got almost a morbid horror of falling in love with some girl who would only pretend to like him, while in reality all she cared about was his money. Nobody in Mrs. Ess Kay's set knew Jameson B. Harborough, though everybody would like to, so it was a blow to others beside Mohunsleigh and me that he couldn't or wouldn't show himself at Newport for the wedding.

With the exception of this one hitch nothing went wrong so far as the wedding party was concerned, but with me things began to go very wrong several days before Caro and Mohunsleigh were married. There was a fuss of some sort between Sally and Mrs. Ess Kay, and Sally came to me, very much upset, to say that she would have to leave the Moorings immediately, she couldn't stand it twenty-four hours longer, even for my sake. She had promised to visit a friend in Chicago sooner or later, so she would go straight to her, and if anything too tiresome should happen before I was ready to sail for home, I had better run out there—the friend would be delighted to have me. Sally gave me the address, and I told her I would write often, but of course I didn't dream of having to accept her invitation. I missed her badly, but not as much as if the wedding had not been so near.

Poor old Mohunsleigh—who knows more about the manners of polar bears than etiquette in American society—was coached by Potter, and the night before the wedding rehearsal reluctantly gave an elaborate dinner to his best man (an officer in Stan's regiment who happened to turn up) and the six ushers. The same day Carolyn had her matron of honor and the bridesmaids to lunch, and we did have fun talking over things. I should have thought a luncheon with all girls and no men might have been a little tame, and perhaps it would in England, but in America girls are not at all shy. They say just as funny things as men, and take the most beautiful pains to amuse each other, so that it's impossible to be bored, and for hours on end you forget there is such a creature as man.

At home Mohunsleigh would have had to give us things, of course, but in America it appears that the bridegroom makes presents to the best man and the ushers, so it was from Carolyn that I got a duck of a brooch, like an American flag, with stripes of diamonds and rubies and the blue part sapphires. Mohunsleigh said that, as he was awfully hard up, it was bad luck for him to have to provide each of the bridesmaids with bouquets and chiffon muffs, and he could not see at all that it was a pretty idea for everything they carried in their hands to come from the bridegroom. But as Sally had told me that Carolyn's father had settled ten million dollars on her, I don't think Mohunsleigh need have complained.

Although it was in a house, the wedding was very picturesque, and the bride and groom stood under a bell of white roses about as large as Big Ben.

I enjoyed it all immensely, for it was my first time as bridesmaid, and I had a lovely frock and hat (copied from an old picture) for which—when I wanted the bill—I found Sally had paid. There was a crush at the reception, but it only lasted two hours. After the bride and groom had gone, with showers of rice and satin slippers, we stayed and had a dance—just the ushers and bridesmaids and a few young people who were intimate friends of Carolyn's.

DAYS OF DIZZINESS

Come to Hundreds of Quincy People.

There are days of dizziness;
Spells of headache, sideache, backache;
Sometimes rheumatic pains:
Often urinary disorders.
All tell you plainly the kidneys are sick.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure all kidney ills.

Here is proof in Quincy.

Mrs. George L. Mott, living at 99 North street, Quincy, Mass., says: "I have every reason for entertaining a very high opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills. They cured me of a serious case of kidney complaint, after everything I tried had failed to help me. Prior to using this remedy I was troubled a great deal with headaches and dizzy spells, which were so severe at times that I would have to grasp something for support to keep from falling. My eyesight was affected and spots would seem to float before me. My back also greatly annoyed me. Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a box at the Cox drug store and began their use. I was helped from the first and after I had taken the contents of five boxes, my case being of long standing, I was cured. Other members of my family have used Doan's Kidney Pills with equally good results."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Elks Notice

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

Now for the City election.

Very high tides this week.

Smoke talk of the Elks tonight.

The dredger recently at work in Fore River has finished and gone.

John Sewell has started a two-tenement house on the corner of Washington street and Paul Wild terrace.

Hundreds of callers were at the doors of Quincy friends on Tuesday. These launching days bring scores of old friends back to the city.

The first of a series of entertainments planned for the coming winter by Quincy lodge of Elks will be held at the clubhouse on Foster street tonight. It will be for members only.

Eight tables were in play at the weekly whist tournament of the Granite City club Wednesday evening. The scores as a rule were above the average. Frank W. White carried off the honors with 73 per cent. and John W. Walsh second honors with a fraction over 70 per cent.

There was another notable launching Tuesday of interest to American people. At Stettin, Germany, Ambassador Hill christened the George Washington, the colossus of the North German Lloyd line. The George Washington has accommodation for about 3000 passengers.

The Elks are planning to attend the Quincy Point Social club minstrels in a body next Wednesday evening. One of their members, Edmund J. Courtney is the interlocutor and they are going to root strong for "Ed." They will also see the best minstrel show ever presented to the people of Quincy. Tuesday and Wednesday are the nights, Music hall the place. Time 8 P. M.

All members of the Quincy Choral Society who are making or have made a special study of voice, piano, or instrumental music and are interested to contribute one or more numbers to the programs of the recitals announced in Saturday's Ledger of Nov. 7, are cordially invited to meet in Miss Spear's music rooms, 118 Granite street, this evening from 7 to 9, for consultation as to the best means of making these recitals helpful to the public as well as the society.

The Quincy Choral Society has taken up the study of "Elijah" in a hearty spirit of co-operation with conductor Arthur S. Wonson that goes far towards promising a splendid season's work and a concert at the end well worth the hearing. Though the unfavorable weather of Wednesday evening kept some of the singers at home, the rehearsal was a success in every way and it is hoped that every member will be present at the next meeting on Wednesday evening, November 18, at Colonial hall.

Wollaston W. C. T. U. will meet with Mrs. S. B. Harrington, 54 Grand View avenue, next Tuesday afternoon; subject, "Settlement work by Mrs. Mary E. Mills.

At the recognition of Rev. C. R. Hamlin, the new pastor of the Randolph Congregational church, Nov. 18, Rev. Edward Norton of Quincy will preach the sermon to the pastor.

George W. Stebbins of Bromfield street, who has been confined to his home several weeks by illness, is reported as improving, though still unable to attend to his duties at the Tubular Rivet works, where he is employed as a machinist.

Secretary of the Navy Metcalf has appointed Captain Charles I. Badger, U. S. N., superintendent of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, to be the first commander of the North Dakota built at Quincy. Capt. Badger has seen most of his service on the Atlantic coast, and served in the Spanish war on the cruiser Cincinnati.

A contract for the construction of two huge steel smoke stacks has just been awarded by the Fore River Company to the Lebanon Boiler works of Philadelphia. These stacks are to be 125 and 130 feet high, and 6 feet in diameter, and are to be erected at the power house of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company.

Many fears had been entertained in Boston as to the safety of the steam trawler spray, built at Quincy, which has been on a trip to Georges Banks, and was late returning. But she came in safely with a big cargo and stories of many adventures. She was out 11 days and travelled 450 miles, bringing back 95,000 pounds of fish, for which she received $2,000.

BURNS—McCARTHY.

A very pretty though quiet wedding took place on Wednesday evening at the rectory of St. John's church, when Miss Marie McCarthy of Franklin street, Quincy, became the bride of Edward Burns, of North Payne street, Quincy.

Rev. John J. Coan, pastor performed the ceremony which a large number of friends attended. Both are well known in Quincy, Miss McCarthy being popular as a singer. Mr. Burns is a nephew of Michael Burns, the well-known granite manufacturer of South Quincy.

John Coughlin, manager of M. O'Keefe's Quincy store was the best man. The bridesmaid was a sister of the bride, who came all the way from Ireland to attend her sister.

The bride was dressed in wisteria broadcloth and white lace, with hat to match. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and sweet peas.

A reception followed the ceremony at the future home of the couple, 24 Pearl street. Friends were present from Boston, Somerville, Cambridge and Quincy. A delightful supper was served by a caterer.

A TAG DAY SCHEME.

Cards were placed in a number of the store windows in City Square this morning announcing that tomorrow, Friday, would be tag day in Quincy for the Consumptive Co-operative Association of the Pembroke sanitorium.

The Pembroke sanitorium is located in Concord, N. H., and as there is some question as to the advisibility of contributing to a foreign association persons who intend purchasing tags should make sure who is to be benefited before parting with their coin.

MAKARIA ENTERTAINMENT.

A candy sale and entertainment were held by the Makaria Fraternity on Wednesday evening in the Bethany chapel. Those in charge of the sale were Miss Dulah Miller, Miss Lois Williams and Miss Alice Webb. A large attendance caused the candy to disappear very quickly.

The entertainment consisted of piano solos by Rupert Ganzel and Ulrich Myrich, cornet solo by L. H. Cleve, vocal solo by Miss Abbie Penley, and a reading by Miss Hazel Jennings. This was followed by a one-act farce entitled, "Hypnotism," in which the following took part: Fred William, Florence Pratt, Bessie Pratt, Matthew Nicols and Robert Mitchell.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

It seemed to be the unanimous opinion that the annual convention of the Sunday school Association of the East Norfolk district at South Braintree on Wednesday, was the largest attended and in every respect the best ever held in Norfolk county for years. The new officers elected have already secured very prominent individuals to address the association at its annual convention next year.

Nearly all of the 54 schools in the district were represented by the 297 delegates present. At the supper which followed the afternoon session 130 were present.

At the evening session reports were received from the committee on resolutions and nominations, and at the election Rev. Alfred Ray Atwood of the Washington Congregational church was elected president to succeed Rev. N. J. Sproul. The address of the evening was by Minot F. Davis, M. D., whose subject was "The teacher's preparation and application of the lesson." This address was very interesting. There was also an address by Rev. Albert M. Hyde, D. D., on "Old and new methods of Bible study."

Today's Court.

Cumming Stephens was fined $5 for violation of the City Ordinances of Quincy.

Franklin T. Murray was find $20, Herbert C. Brown $15 for exceeding the automobobile speed limit at Milton.

Anna Larson was arraigned for threatening assault at Quincy. Case continued two weeks.

MAGIC AT H. L. KINCAIDE CO.'S.

Henry L. Kincaide & Co. have engaged Madam Rheda, the great magician, to entertain all in the great feats of Japanese Magic for 6 days commencing Monday, Nov. 16. First performance 2.30 P. M. Nov. 16. Free to all. Nov. 12-3t.

☞ Wadsworth & Co. are advertising suits, coats, and specials in skirts, and they say you get more for your money when buying of them than elsewhere.

WOODRUFF IN THE WAY

Root's Path to Senate Not So Clear as Anticipated

Washington, Nov. 12.—That no man at this time has a clear path to a seat in the United States senate to be vacated by Senator Platt of New York in March next was evidenced yesterday at several conferences on the subject at the White House and in Washington hotels.

For several days it has appeared that if Secretary of State Root decided to become an active candidate, other aspirants for the place would withdraw. Timothy L. Woodruff, chairman of the New York Republican state committee, who has had ambitions to become senator for several years, has not assented to the program of eliminating all candidates except Root.

Persons well informed concerning New York politics assert that Woodruff has within his power the making of a very embarrassing senatorial situation. Thus far, there has been no charge made of White House dictation against the movement to make Root the successor of Platt, but it is pointed out that this might easily be made an issue if a contest over the senatorship should be precipitated.

New York politicians who favor the election of Root are endeavoring to induce Woodruff to retain the state chairmanship and become a candidate later for the seat in the senate now occupied by Senator Depew.

TO HEAD INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY

Honor Falls to Professor MacLaurin of Columbia

Boston, Nov. 12.—Richard C. MacLaurin, now in charge of the department of physics and the professor of mathematical physics in Columbia university, was appointed president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology at a meeting of the executive committee of the institute corporation. MacLaurin has signified his willingness to accept the appointment and will assume the duties of the position as soon as his engagements at Columbia permit.

Professor MacLaurin will succeed President Pritchett, who resigned the presidency of the institute in January, 1906, but remained in office until June, 1907, when he retired to assume the chairmanship of the Carnegie Foundation. Since that time Arthur A. Noyes has been acting president.

Professor MacLaurin was born in Edinburg in 1870. A few years of his boyhood were spent in New Zealand, but his preliminary education was, for the most part, in English schools.

Legislation Desired by Grangers

Washington, Nov. 12.—Immediate revision of the tariff schedules affecting articles that are alleged to be sold by American manufacturers in foreign markets at lower prices than in this country was urged in behalf of the interests of American farmers by Master Bachelder of New Hampshire in his annual address before the National Grange, Patrons of Husbandry. Bachelder also made a strong plea for postal savings banks, parcels post and high way appropriations at the next session of congress.

Morse Keeping Himself Busy

New York, Nov. 12.—Wallace MacFarlane, counsel for Charles W. Morse, says that he contemplates no further move in his effort to obtain bail for the convicted banker, pending the filing of the bill of exceptions, which will scarcely be done under thirty days. Morse is chafing under his confinement in the Tombs, but has not lost his nerve, and keeps himself busy with his business affairs and callers.

Took Own Life to Spare Others

Preston, N. Y., Nov. 12.—Ira H. Evans, a well-to-do farmer, hanged himself in his barn. He had lately feared that he was becoming insane and he had been fighting against the inclination to murder members of his family. Only a day or two ago he had an almost irresistible desire to strike his little son with an axe which he carried.

Campaign Expenses Not Heavy

Albany, Nov. 12.—Governor Hughes filed his certificate of election expenses with the secretary of state, giving his total expenditures as $369.65. Of this sum he spent $260.16 for traveling and incidental expenses, $96.21 for hotel bills, including telephone and messenger charges, and $12.78 for telegrams.

End of Long Period of Idleness

Somersworth, N. H., Nov. 12.—Employes of the Great Falls Woolen company have been notified that the mills, which have been shut down for six months, will resume operations next Tuesday. The company manufactures a fine grade of Australian woolens and employs usually 300 hands.

Downfall Due to Gambling

Toronto, Nov. 12.—Duncan C. McCallum, late teller of the Farmers' Bank of Canada, pleaded guilty to the theft of $16,495 from the bank and was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary. McCallum attributed his downfall to gambling in the stock market and horse racing.

Tugboats Went on Rocks

St. John, Nov. 12.—Two tugboats, the Lord Wolseley and the Calluna, were wrecked on Pictou Island, N. S. The Calluna is a total loss and the Wolseley may be pulled off the rocks, but it is doubtful. Both tugs were owned by John E. Moore.

Run Down

If your doctor says take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, then take it. If he has anything better, then take that.

If you are all run down, easily tired, thin, pale, nervous, go to your doctor. Stop guessing, stop experimenting, go direct to your doctor. Ask his opinion of Ayer's non-alcoholic Sarsaparilla. No alcohol, no stimulation. A blood purifier, a nerve tonic, a strong alterative, an aid to digestion. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

LOCAL AND LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE

Telephone Talks

A "prompt" answer turneth away wrath. You know how you feel when you are kept waiting at the telephone.

Remember: Example is better than precept.

"No One on the Line"

It has been pointed out that there are three parties to a telephone conversation, namely, the person calling, the operator, and, last but not least, the person called.

The operator has no authority to compel an answer to her summons. She simply forwards to your telephone a mechanical signal. Interpreted, this means "Some one desires to speak to you." It remains for you, the person called, to recognize this request.

There are two strong reasons why you should answer promptly, and both vitally concern you:

1. If you are slow in answering the caller may hang up the telephone and assume that you are not accessible. Later, if you answer at your leisure, the operator can vouchsafe no information save that "there is no one on the line." Who called you? The operator probably does not know. Any operator in your exchange may have called you, rather than the operator specially assigned to answer your calls.

2. From the moment the operator calling you "plugs in" on your line until she ceases her effort to attract your attention, your line is "busy" to all other callers.

If you are dilatory, therefore, you are obstructing your own service. You are also causing disappointment to your caller and annoyance to yourself.

A NEEDY CASE.

Up to the present time, the response in contributions for the families burned out by the fire on Grant street last Saturday, when three lives were lost, has not been very large. This is certainly a worthy case, as the families were made almost destitute by the remorseless fire. Parties desiring to contribute their mite can find a subscription paper at the drug store of C. C. Hearn.

Norfolk County And Vicinity

Chief of Police Crooker of HOLBROOK has warned the loafers to keep away from the square when they want to loaf. Many complaints have been made about these loafers.

Gandolfs Rosolinis of RANDOLPH was arrested Wednesday for hunting without a license. Deputy Fish and Game Commissioner Charles Tribou was the complainant.

Dr. William O. Faxon of STOUGHTON, has been appointed by Gov. Guild as medical examiner for Norfolk county, District 5.

The gunners along the shores at Hingham had good luck Tuesday. Several black duck and widgeon were secured.

Miss Sarah M. Channel of BROOKLINE was married Tuesday evening to George L. Jordan of Haverhill. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. George W. Colson performing the ceremony.

The funeral of Mrs. Elsie Davis of HULL, who died suddenly on Monday, took place Wednesday afternoon, and and was largely attended. It is believed that Mrs Davis accidentally drank some poisonous liquid, the nature of which is not yet known.

The police of FOXBORO are looking for a man named Charles H. Magrath, who it is alleged stole $600. A description of the man has been sent to the surrounding towns.

Elisha Hawes, nearly 95, living in STOUGHTON, is one of the oldest and staunchest Republicans of the town. At the recent election he stated that for years he was a Democrat, but in 1856 was converted. For the last 52 years he has voted the Republican ticket.

A VANTAGE POINT.

One of the best places to watch the launching of the huge battleship North Dakota on Tuesday, was the Point bridge, as well as the shores of North Weymouth and New Downer Landing. Standing on the bridge one has the advantage of seeing the crowds that line the shores all round; of seeing all the boats go through the bridge, everything from a rowboat built for one, to a pleasure yacht capable of crossing the broad Atlantic.

Again the broadside view of the boat, as she slides into the water is something which cannot be seen from the yard. She is seen to start, and then as "she seems to feel the thrill of life along her keel," with one, great joyous bound, she leapes in the ocean's arms.

To see a boat the size of the North Dakota strikes the water, to witness the huge roller that is sent along towards the opposite shore by the impetus of the mighty sea-fighter, to watch this mighty roller as it strikes the opposite bank, and with a mighty splash scatters the crowds gathered there. To see all these things is indeed pleasing to anyone, whether he has even seen a launching before or not. All this can be seen to great advantage from the bridge, and crowds of people gathered there as at all other vantage points.

There was a miniature automobile show across the bridge near where the famous old Pine Point House stood. Every kind of an auto, from one of those little runabouts for two, to the big limousines holding eight or ten, could be seen lined up side by side, their occupants all there for the same purpose.

Crowds passed over the bridge during the day, and the draw was opened many times for the numerous crafts that came up to whistle a welcome to the new queen of all navies.

There were no serious accidents, although a few on the shore in New Downer Landing received the benefit of the big wave sent along ahead of the battleship. Several got a good wetting, but all took it good-naturedly realizing that it was their own fault. One or two boats also were washed up on the shore and left high and dry, but nothing serious resulted.

Officer Larkin and Hinchon were on duty at the bridge and received many a welcome handshake from their old Quincy Point friends. Both deserve great praise for the efficient manner in which the crowd was handled.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

SERMON BY DR. FENN

At Ordination of Charles B. Ames Assistant Minister of First Church

The ordination services of Rev. Charles Bulkley Ames, was held on Thursday evening in the Unitarian church. The services which made Mr. Ames first assistant minister in the First Congregational society of Quincy were very impressive, and were largely attended.

The service opened with an organ prelude, and after a hymn had been sung, there came responsive reading. Rev. Paul Stephens Phalen read from the scriptures and then followed the main sermon. This was by Rev. William W. Fenn, D. D. Dr. Fenn spoke for about twenty minutes, and his sermon was very practical and clear, the words flowing forth in clear, rich tones.

Dr. Fenn took his text from Chapter 18 of Matthew, quoting the 12th verse. He spoke on the "Aim and Mission of the Christian church," telling what Christ's mission had been on this earth. What do we mean by lost? A man steals from his fellow-man, becomes a thief and is lost. The lustful man and the intemperate man give way to their lower passions. They are lost to all sense and manhood. Christ came to save these men who were lost. He always held out, as he does today, the hand of love and mercy to the sinner as well as the faithful. He was reproved by the sinner, but sought these very ones, to bring them back to God and happiness.

No one was so corrupt or so debased that Christ did not extend the hand of love and mercy and sympathy to him. He came not to save the righteous but to bring back sinners into the light of God.

Now the ministers of God, as Christ did when on earth, so they must do. They must follow in his footsteps and bring back the lost and the wandering into the fold.

Dr. Fenn's sermon was very touching, and brought vividly before the eyes, the struggles and difficulties that Christ had in His battles on earth.

The music was very impressive, the quartet of the church rendering some beautiful selections.

Rev. Ellery C. Butler gave the ordaining prayer, which was followed by the act of ordination, given by Henry M. Faxon. The service closed with a benediction by the newly ordained minister, now Rev. Charles B. Ames.

BENEDICT—BRETT.

A very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday evening, November 11th at the residence of Mrs. Charles H. Sprague, 52 Pearl street, South Braintree, when Miss Edith Louise Brett, daughter of Mrs. Mary Brett, was united in marriage to Mr. William Carleton Benedict, of Winthrop, by the Rev. W. L. Chaffin of North Easton. "The Bridal Chorus" and "Mendelssohn's Wedding March" were played by Miss Clara E. Willis of Worcester.

A few intimate friends of the bride and groom were present, among whom were the T. and T. club, of which the bride is a member, who acted as ushers and assisted in the dining room. The house was decorated with chrysanthemums and ferns.

On their return from a trip through the west, Mr. and Mrs. Benedict will reside at 79 Summit avenue, Winthrop Highlands, where they will be at home to their friends after January first.

EPWORTH ENTERTAINMENT.

The Epworth League of the West Quincy M. E. church held a social, entertainment and sale in the church vestry Wednesday evening and in spite of the rain it was a success. Candy, pop corn and fancy articles were on sale.

The entertainment which commenced at 8.30 was as follows:

Piano selections,	Mrs. Hubert Fuller
Readings,	Miss Phyllis Smith
Violin solo,	Master Harold Norris
Piano selections,	Mrs. Hubert Fuller

Short sketch entitled "The Train to Mauro," with the following cast:

Mr. Bright (Station Agent),	Merton Turner
Mrs. Buttermilk (Country woman)	Miss Hilda Francis
Her son Johnnie (A terrible child),	William Shirley
Readings,	Miss Phyllis Smith
Violin solo,	Harold Norris

This league is doing a good work. It has recently raised by popular subscriptions, enough money to install new gas lights throughout the church, which are a great improvement over the old lights.

Friends are sorry to learn that Mr. Mansfield of Davis street is confined to the house on account of illness.

Y. M. C. A. Relay Race

The big Providence to Boston, relay race under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. will be run off tomorrow, and a great amount of interest has been aroused all along the line. Local interest will of course centre on the representatives of the Quincy association. The boys are expected to reach Quincy square somewhere in the neighborhood of 3 or 4 o'clock.

The local runners will take up the race just on this side of the Montello bridge, near the W. L. Douglas Shoe factory. At this point, which is relay point 72, the first Quincy runner will start the message on its way to Quincy, each of the 23 local boys running a half a mile.

The Quincy boys will be carried in automobiles to their respective starting points, and then picked up after they do their stunt. Blankets will be in readiness so that no one will get cold. This method will do away with waiting at the different relay points and keep the runners from getting stiffened up. The following men have offered their automibiles, Dr. E. R. Johnson, Frank Burgess, Reuben Baker, W. G. Shaw, Gould garage.

R. W. Hatfield, for making the best time in the trials for places on the team, will have the honor of passing the message from Quincy to the first Boston runner. He made the good time of 2.23 2-5 in his half mile trial. The last two relays of the Quincy boys will be from A. O. H. hall to the Auditorium on Hancock street and thence to Quincy square.

The plan of the race is to send a message from the president of the Providence Y. M. C. A., to the president of the Boston Y. M. C. A., the race starting from the Y. M. C. A. building in the Rhode Island capital and finishing at the Boston Y. M. C. A.

The Providence boys will carry the message 12 miles toward Taunton, where the latter runners pick it up and carry it 12 miles more and so on through Brockton and Quincy till it reaches Boston.

KAISER GOES FOX HUNTING

In Company of a Friend Who Has a Restraining Influence

MODERN IN POLITICAL VIEWS

Monarch's Attitude Toward Von Buelow, the Reichstag and Public Sentiment at Large the Subject of Much Speculation--Doubt as to Whether Chancellor Will Remain In Office--Foreign Advisors Meet

Berlin, Nov. 13.—The five members of the foreign affairs committee of the federal council held a meeting yesterday and discussed recent events. The assembling of this committee is of very rare occurrence, and much interested speculation was aroused by the intimation that the meeting was called with the idea of taking some step to prevent Emperor William from pursuing an independent course in the foreign affairs of the empire.

In well-informed circles it is affirmed, however, that the committeemen did nothing more than read certain papers relating to the Casablanca incident. They were entertained last evening at dinner by Chancellor Von Buelow.

The air is full of rumor and surmise concerning what attitude Emperor William will adopt toward Chancellor Von Buelow, the reichstag and public sentiment at large. The emperor spent yesterday fox hunting in the country, and had breakfast in the forest. Prince Von Fuerstenberg, his most intimate friend, is with him. The present is a time when the smallest circumstances are studied in order to arrive at an understanding of what the emperor's future course may be, and there is satisfaction that he is with the prince, whose influence is regarded as restraining and wise.

The prince is the only man who seems to speak plainly to the emperor, and the emperor treats him as an equal. Their ancestors were counts together in Swabia eight centuries ago. The prince is vice president of the Austrian imperial council and a knight of the Golden Fleece; he is as much as Austrian subject as German. Although the prince is of aristocratic descent, he is not a reactionary and he is looked upon as distinctly modern in his political views.

There is still considerable doubt as to whether or not Von Buelow will remain in office, and free mention is made of possible successors. The names of Theobald Bethmann-Hollweg, minister of the interior, and Baron Von Rheinbaben, Prussian minister of state, are most frequently heard in this connection.

The Frankforter Zeitung says the situation will not be settled until after the emperor and Von Buelow have had a personal meeting, and this is the prevailing view in the reichstag. There is nothing more to be done at present.

Ice Tongs Used With Deadly Effect

New York, Nov. 13.—Two East Side icemen, Louis Schneider and Harry Feurerstein, supplied the same district until recently, but last month decided to divide the territory. Feurerstein heard yesterday that Schneider had accused him of acting unfairly and he went to the latter's establishment and started for Schneider with a knife. Schneider struck at the head of his rival with a pair of tongs, one of the prongs burying itself in the brain of Feurerstein, killing him almost instantly. Schneider was arrested.

Hospital Accommodations Inadequate

Albany, Nov. 13.—Although steps have been taken during the past two years to house the increasing number of insane in the state by the erection of additions to existing state hospitals, Dr. Albert W. Ferris reports that at the close of the fiscal year ending Oct. 1, 1907, the excess of patients over certified capacity was 1876. Ferris estimates that on Oct. 1, 1909, there will be a deficiency of 1753 beds.

Given a Cold Reception

The canvassers selling red tags for the Pembroke Consumptive hospital at Concord, N. H., met with a cold reception when they struck Quincy this morning.

Four women appeared in City Square this morning supplied with red tags. They were quickly held up by the police and questioned.

All admitted that they knew nothing about the merits of the institution. They said that they had been hired through an advertisement in a Boston paper and that this was the first time they had done any canvassing.

When asked who had employed them they replied De Fontine.

DeFontine has received considerable free newspaper advertising for his collections on red tags at Roxbury.

As soon as the two older women were informed about the matter they threw up their job.

The two younger women disappeared toward South Quincy. They picked up a few victims but will be warned out of town by the police as soon as they can be found.

The general impression is that there is something crooked about the scheme.

POLITICAL NOTES.

Alfred N. LaBrecque and Ralph W. Hobbs, who were nominated on the Democratic ticket as Councilman at Large, have withdrawn their names.

George H. Corliss, who was defeated at the caucuses for the Republican nomination for Councilman from Ward Two has taken out nomination papers.

The Municipal election will be held two weeks from next Tuesday, Dec. 1.

It is probable that the City Council will pass an order before the end of the year dividing Ward Five into two precincts.

Councilman Robert J. Teasdale, who was defeated at the Democratic caucuses for councilman from Ward Four, has taken out papers as an independent candidate.

A largely attended meeting of the Republican City committee was held at headquarters Thursday evening. President Chase presided and E. R. Stone, candidate for Mayor, was present.

Great enthusiasm was shown and an active campaign will be waged from now on. All wards of the city were well represented.

THOUSANDS OF COMMENDATIONS.

During the almost 15 years that the Boston Sunday Globe has printed its color supplement, thousands of commendations have been received from citizens in Boston and all over New England. In fact, the color supplement of the Sunday Globe has been endorsed by people in all walks of life.

Remember that the Boston Sunday Globe's color pictures have long been welcome favorites to thousands of women and children in New England, and that they are especially designed to meet the demand for clean and wholesome amusement.

The old-time favorites, Kitty, Danny and Percy, Wisewinkers, the work of Billy the Boy Artist and his friends, Prof. O. Howe Wise and I. B. Schmart are known from one end of New England to the other. In fact, the characters have become general favorites in all New England households.

To please all the family, have the Boston Sunday Globe, with its unrivaled color pictures, in the home regularly.

WATER WAGON NOT OVERLOADED

Consumption of Drinks of Spirituous Nature Undiminished

LIQUOR INTERESTS SATISFIED

Not Inclined to Ask For Changes In Tariff Schedules--Snappy Colloquy at Hearing Before Ways and Means Committee--Wine Growers Handicapped by the Existing Reciprocity Treaties--Remedies Suggested

Washington, Nov. 13.—The wave of prohibition which, it is claimed, has spread over the country, apparently has had little effect on the consumption of alcoholic liquors and spirituous drinks, according to evidence brought out at the hearing on the proposed tariff revision before the house committee on ways and means. It was apparent, too, that the liquor interests are, on the whole, well satisfied with the present tariff on spirits, wines and other beverages, as the winegrowers and importers were practically the only interests represented at yesterday's hearing.

The session was enlivened by a sharp, but good-natured, colloquy between Percy T. Morgan, representing the wine growing interests of California, and Representative Boutell of Illinois. Morgan was telling the committee why the regulations of the Dingley tariff covering the importation of still wines should also apply to those wines imported from countries with which the United States has reciprocity treaties. Addressing Boutell, Morgan said:

"My contention is that wines can be imported under the present reciprocity arrangements up to 24 percent, which is 48 proof, while the whisky you yourself drink is only 85 proof."

"The whisky I drink isn't any proof," was Boutell's quick rejoiner.

"You may take some occasionally for medicinal purposes," said Morgan.

"I never take any," replied Boutell.

Mr. Morgan claimed that under the present reciprocity treaties with the principal wine producing countries alcohol diluted with wine could be imported instead of wine diluted with alcohol. "In any revision of the tariff on wines there should be re-established a differential between wines containing only alcohol produced by natural fermentation and those which have been fortified by the addition of distilled spirits," he said.

Champ Clark, prominently spoken of as the successor of John S. Williams as minority leader on the floor of the house, was present for the first time at the hearings as a member of the committee.

W. E. Hildreth of New York, a champagne expert, declared that the cost of making American wines was much greater than was that of producing French wines and champagnes. He was telling the committee that Americans only pay for the French labels, when Clark remarked: "There are not a thousand men in the United States who, after they have had three drinks, can tell what they are drinking."

L. J. Vance of New York, secretary of the American Wine Growers' association, furnished the committee with much information with regard to the selling prices and cost of production of wines in European countries. He declared that the reciprocity treaties gave the importers of foreign champagnes a reduction of $2 per case in the duty and that these importers use the $2 thus saved for the purpose of advertising and keeping a trade which the American winemakers possibly could get if they had a similar amount to spend for that purpose.

He also asked for an increase of the duties on mineral waters to meet the high tariffs of foreign countries. He declared that France practically prohibits the importation of American waters.

C. H. King and J. H. Wheeler of New York argued for a decrease in the duties on ale, porter and beer, and declared that as a result imported ale and stout would be cheaper to the consumer. Saying that Irish ginger ale could not possibly be sold cheaper than the domestic article, even if put on the free list, King asked for a reduction in the tariff on that beverage.

Rev. A. R. Atwood delivered a lecture at the First United Presbyterian church of Central Falls, R. I., on Tuesday evening. The evening's entertainment was in charge of the men of the church and beside the lecture there was an elocutionist and a quartet.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

A meeting of the City Council Committee on Streets will be held tonight.

Joseph Bartlett and family moved Tuesday from Willow street to Waban.

Miss May Osgood of Peabody is a guest of Mrs. A. E. Linnell of Davis street.

The weather this morning was clear and cold, a reminder that winter is coming fast.

F. B. Smith and family of Beach street have moved into Mrs. Loring's house on Willow street.

Lauris G. Treadway of Taylor street leaves Saturday for Florida where he is to manage a hotel for the winter.

Another false alarm was rung in from the Quincy Point district, Thursday night. This time it was from Box 72 which sounded at 10.02.

The Rev. Dr. Mann of Trinity church, Boston, has been secured to preach at the union Thanksgiving service to be held in the Baptist church Wollaston, at 5 P. M. Nov. 26.

Friends are glad to hear that Arthur Rogers of Billings road is recovering so well from an operation for appendicitis that he will be home in a few days from the Boothby hospital.

There will be a special preacher at St. Chrysostoms church, Sunday afternoon at 4.30 from the "Laymen's Forward Missionary conference' now being held in Boston. Mrs. Follett will sing at this service, all are welcome.

James T. Penniman and G. B. Bates deserve the thanks of the public who use that part of Saville street west of the railroad crossing for the handsome sidewalk curbing that they have put in on each side of the street at their own expense.

The first smoker of the season of the Elks club was held Thursday evening at their club house on Foster street. Owing to the short notice that the committee were obliged to give the attendance was not as large as it otherwise would have been. Those present however were well repaid. The entertainers were William Chase and Robert Morris, from a well known vaudeville house in Boston. They kept the boys in good humor for an hour with their songs, monologues, etc. After this refreshments were served.

A Boston paper says: Mrs. William U. Swan (Alice Adams,) who spent her childhood days on the Adams farm at Quincy Point the property of her father, viewed the launching of the North Dakota from the stand placed on the ground that was formerly the family strawberry patch. Mrs. Swan was a personal friend of the late John Oliver Hobbes (Mrs. Craigie) and was one of her playmates. Mrs. Craigie's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Seth Arnold, lived and died in the house which is now the hospital of the Fore River Company.

EDITORIAL.

Now it is said that President Roosevelt will be a candidate for the Senate to succeed Senator Platt of New York. It is also reported that Mr. Bryan will be sent to the Senate from Nebraska. The Roosevelt policies with Taft in the White House and Bryan and Roosevelt on the Senate floor should have some show.

Not two days had elapsed after the result of the election was ascertained and after Judge Taft had announced that no establishment in this country had anything to fear from his administration if it did not violate the law, before the manufactures of the United States became active. They did the same in 1879 when specie payments had been resumed, and in 1897 when the gold standard was declared for. There is but one source of uneasiness. Will there be a bona fide revision of the tariff or will there be a mere shuffling of the schedules without relief to the overwhelming majority, that now has to buy everything at enormously highly protected prices?

That there is a wave of prohibition sweeping the country is shown in the falling off of the internal revenue receipts of the Treasury Department and the Government, to say the least, is surprised. Liquor dealers expected hard times in their trade but the Internal Revenue Bureau, as far as its personnel is concerned, is quite independent of internal revenues. The clerks of that gigantic office will be paid whether they collect anything or not. They were not, therefore, on the lookout and had no suspician of the great monetary loss that the government would sustain. A big deficit is being created in the government resources and Congress will have to take up the matter at the coming session and cover the loss by imposing other revenue taxes. There was a deficit of two millions for October and large deficits will follow in succeeding months as the prohibition movements spreads. It is said that distillers and wholesale liquor dealers have lost so much already that they cannot stand any further taxation and remain in business. The total loss in revenues since July has been seven millions of dollars. The loss on beers and other fermented liquors in September amounted to $1,800,000. There are some other curious and significant losses given in the internal revenue figures. These losses would indicate that hundreds of men have quit playing cards because the government revenue loss on cards was over nine thousand dollars. That there is a loss from this source is all the more remarkable when it is considered how many hundreds of thousands of women have taken to "bridge."

There has been more or less talk as to when the street railway company intended to build the location granted it, to connect its tracks on Quincy avenue, with those of the Fore River company, so that it might run its cars to the yard. There has been an opinion, in some sources, that the railway company did not intend to build the location. The Daily Ledger is informed on good authority however that such is not the case and that the loop will be built just as soon as the necessary permission is obtained from the Railroad Commissioners.

After a street railway company is granted a location by a city there are certain formalities that must be gone through with before the location can be built. In the first place permission must be obtained from the Railroad Commission, which takes some weeks, for the Commission must give a hearing of which fourteen days' notice, must be given by them.

In the case of the loop on Quincy avenue it was necessary before going to the Railroad Commissions to obtain permission from the State Highway Commission, Quincy avenue being a state road, and under their control.

The order granting the location was passed by the City Council Oct. 12, and was approved by the Mayor some days later. Application for approval was immediately made to the Highway Commission. The approval of this board was not obtained until Thursday of this week. That same afternoon the matter was taken to the Railroad Commissioners and as soon as its approval is obtained the loop will be built.

The order passed by the City Council provides that the loop must be built before Dec. 1, or the location will be void. The street railway company say that they have all the material ready and that the loop will be built inside of two days after the approval of the Railroad Commissioners is obtained. The street railway company further say that there is no qeustion but what the loop will be built before the time expires. In criticising the railway company it is well to remember the amount of red tape that must be gone through with after the matter has been passed upon by the City Council.

At Dedication of Vicksburg Monument

Vicksburg, Miss., Nov. 10, 1908.
Editors Daily Ledger:

After the lapse of forty-five years I find myself once more on the scene of that terrific conflict that resulted in opening the Mississipi river to navigation from its source to the gulf, and dividing the confederacy of the south from east to west.

We had a most delightful trip all the way from Providence, Rhode Island. The dedicatory services of the monument will be held in the National Park tomorrow. The exercises will consist of Short speeches from the Governors of Rhode Island and Mississipi, also by the comrades of the 7th Rhode Island under whose auspices the monument was erected. We shall have some music by the school children of Vicksburg, who will sing "The Star Spangled Banner," "Tenting tonight on the old camp ground," "Dixie" and "America."

The people of Vicksburg greeted us very cordially, and none have welcomed our presence more heartily than those who surrendered to us July 4, 1863. We have most certainly experienced a blending of the Blue and the Gray, and together recounted the experiences through which we passed during those eventful days.

I will not weary you by recounting in detail our impressions as we journeyed from Cario down. I will mention only one thing that attracted much notice, and that was the vastness of the cotton fields, already for the harvest, and the many men, women and children all of a dusky hue, who were diligently picking and filling their bags.

We also noted the little school houses and churches, which to us seemed harbingers of a better time coming for the "Sunny South."

MILTON.

Mrs. J. A. Landry of Granite place has moved to Atlantic.

Edward B. Wheeler has sold his estate on Adams street to Mr. Hollidge of Boston, who will make his residence in East Milton.

Stanton H. King, superintendent of the Sailors Haven at Charlestown, gave an address on "Work among Sailors" at the smoke talk of the Thursday Evening club this week.

Capt. Orin F. Bates of the Milton fire department and other firemen attended the firemen's ball at Quincy Wednesday evening.

Mrs. G. S. Hamlin and Mrs. C. F. Thompson opened a dancing school at Ellsworth hall this week. A large class of young people attend.

Mrs. Josiah Babcock, who has been quite ill, is reported as very much improved and is now on the road to recovery.

The work of the police automible has been so successful this year that a new machine will be purchased next season.

Not only are women pleased with the La France Shoe—they are gratified to find the same easiness, foot comfort, style and wear in every succeeding pair they buy. Any woman who reads the Ledger can find at the Granite Shoe store the La France styles that best meet her special requirements. The more particular a woman is about the fit and appearance of her shoes, the greater satisfaction it is to show her the La France.

CONVINCING FACTS.

There is no use denying the fact that Johnson Bros., are surely giving genuine bargains in food values. It will be hard indeed to find a store that is giving such excellent quality at such low prices.

Everything the best that money can buy, is their standard; and their customers know from past dealings that that is absolutely true. Now with our discount system, it is still more of an inducement to trade with us, and you will be surprised to find how fast your discount checks will count up.

We are displaying every day a choice assortment of Cut Meats, with the prices marked in plain figures, so that every one can see what they are paying for or we will cut it to your order, whichever you prefer.

We are pleased that so many of our customers have helped us to make this system a success, for it means a whole lot to them as well as to us. We do not think that any one objects to carrying home a purchase especially when they are paid to do so, which we are doing, with our discount check system.

We are receiving new seasonable goods every day, and it will be to your interest to visit our store and do business with us.

Beef, Lamb and Fresh Pork are all lower and we have a choice lot of Fresh Killed Chicken and Fowl constantly on hand, direct from William A. Drake of Braintree.

A tempting line of New Canned Goods, packed expressly for us.

An excellent stock of New Cereals, Buckwheat, Pan Cake Flour, and all the leading brands of Bread and Pastry Flour.

All kinds of Bottled Goods, Jellies, Jams, Olives and Pickles.

Fresh Hot House Lettuce, Choice Celery, Radishes, Cucumbers, and Fruits of all kinds.

Remember, that every day is BARGAIN day at Johnson Bros., so keep in the road, for all roads lead to our store.

And, remember that we give you 5 per cent discount on all cash purchases, if you take the purchase home, or 2 per cent discount when you ask us to deliver it.

Civic Conference

The Civic Conference, which holds sessions in Boston three days this week, is unique in that no similar gathering has been held in this state nor, so far as known, in any state. In some respects it resembles the conference originally convened by Governor Guild, when the governors of New England met to consider the business prosperity and general welfare of the states. This conference has in mind the social and moral welfare of the state which of course has parallel fundamental importance.

The program of the Civic Conference has already ben announced. It covers many phases of the general problem of how to prevent social troubles and promote civic betterment so that expensive cures may be made less numerous and perhaps altogether unnecessary. Playgrounds, recreation centers wisely conducted, municipal gymnasiums and baths all come within the scope of this work. That rational physical training, proper recreation and intelligently supervised play are fundamental elements for the general welfare of people is a fact now almost universally recognized. Hence the interest the Massachusetts Civic League is taking in the matter as a whole, and in the particularly timely work of diffusing information so that voters may have an intelligent conception of what is being sought.

Aside from the interest the league is taking, the national Playground Association of America is co-operating in the present campaign because its officers see that favorable action by Massachusetts voters will have a definite bearing on the general campaign throughout the country. This is on account of the forefront place this state always occupies in such matters. In other words, here in this state, now, is the most important item of playground agitation in the country.

LIBRARY NOTES.

The Art Exhibit at the Public Library ,from Nov. 3, to 21, although smaller in numbers, is well worth a visit to the gallery, being reproductions of forty-nine pictures by Corst. "His method was to work in the country in summer, early and late, in the open air, to catch those effects only to be seen at dawn, at sunset, and by moonlight, in which he delighted. He saw portrayed nature with his own eyes in a manner replete with poetry and fancy."

The new list of books added last year has been issued late owing to the necessity for vacations of the staff after the steady and confining labors of moving, and re-adjustbents, new charping system, etc., during and following the work upon the building. Each borrower will please help himself to one at the Delivery Desk. The hours of the library appear upon the sixteenth page, so the list should prove a convenience for that if for no other reason.

A second copy of each of two of the most popular non-fiction books added this year, has been placed upon the case where all new books in that class are to be found. These are Life of Alice Freeman Palmer by her husband and Dr. Worcester's Religion and Medicine.

Users of fountain pens are kindly asked to exercise a little care that the ink does not drop from them on to the new carpet and tables as ink spots that remain are not exactly beauty spots and they are not easy to get off unless fresh.

The highest circulation in the children's room has now reached 165 Monday being the busiest day there.

BOAT STRUCK A SEA WALL

Smugglers and Chinese Passengers End Trip Unexpectedly

SIX CELESTIALS MEET DEATH

Four of Their Countrymen and Three White Men Escape Similar Fate—Had Crossed From the Canadian Border and Reached Objective Point at Buffalo When Disaster Overtook Them

Buffalo, Nov. 13.—A motorboat containing ten Chinese and three white men was wrecked on the break-wall off the foot of Michigan street. Six of the Chinese were drowned or dashed to death against the rock-ribbed sea wall. The four survivors were rescued by the crew of a police boat.

The three white men escaped and the federal authorities and local detective force are scouring the city to round up men suspected of being engaged in the smuggling of Chinese into this country from Canada. It was at first supposed that the white men perished, but it was learned from one of the surviving Chinese that they succeeded in clambering over the slippery rocks, leaving the Chinese to their fate.

Mock Quong, one of the rescued Chinese, speaks fairly good English which he learned in a South Bend, Ind., Sunday school class. He told the immigration inspectors that the ten Chinamen left Toronto a week ago and had been lodged in a barn on the Canadian side of the lake opposite Buffalo, awaiting a favorable opportunity to make a landing in the United States. They were taken to the lake at night by three white men and placed in a motorboat, which also had a rowboat in tow. They had been on the water about half an hour when the wind blew up strong and the water became very rough. The white men seemed to have great difficulty in controlling their boat.

"It was very dark," Quong continued, "when we came to a stone wall. Just as we turned to go through a break in the wall a big wave washed over the boat and it spun around. One of the white men yelled 'head her for the wall.' We were steering straight for the wall when there came another big wave. The boat rose high and then turned over. We all went into the water."

Last night Superintendent of Police Regan issued orders to bring in the crews and watchmen on all the boats lined up on the harbor side of the break-wall where the motorboat went to pieces. A police boat and a squad of police and federal officers started out at 10 o'clock to bring them in.

The first man brought to police headquarters told how the three alleged smugglers got away from the break-wall after the wreck of their motorboat. He is Ralph White, a watchman on board the propellor Atlas. When questioned, White admitted that the three white men were brought on board his boat about 3 p. m. by the watchman from another boat. They were landed near the foot of Michigan street in a rowboat. The police got a good description of the three men from White and expect to round them up.

Clergyman Appeals From Fine

Boston, Nov. 13.—Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, pastor of the Warren Avenue Baptist church, was fined $10 in the municipal court for failing to carry his certificate of registration while he was operating his automobile. Johnson appealed and gave $50 bail for his appearance in the higher court. Johnson supposed that a receipt which he had received from the highway commission was all he needed to carry until he received a new certificate in place of one which he had lost.

Richford Fire Still Smouldering

Richford, Vt., Nov. 13.—Two more bodies of the victims of the fire which consumed the grain elevator here five weeks ago were discovered yesterday by the men engaged in overhauling the ruins. The bodies are believed to be those of James Cottle and Harris Joubel. There are believed to be four more bodies in the ruins, but as the fire is still smouldering in the grain, it has been impossible to make a complete search.

No Respect For Church Building

London, Nov. 13.—The suffragettes last night carried their campaign into a place of worship. Augustine Birrell, chief secretary for Ireland, while addressing a meeting in favor of disestablishment at the City temple, was subjected to disgraceful interruptions. Nearly a score of the adherents of the suffragette movement were ejected from the building, amid uproarious scenes of struggling and violence.

Not a Candidate For Senate

Boston, Nov. 13.—In an interview published in a local paper, Secretary of State Root states he is not a candidate for the United States senate. "I am not a candidate for the senate. There has been a lot of talk about that, but it is all rumor." Root came to Boston to attend a funeral.

Accident to Army Balloon

Berlin, Nov. 13.—One of the dirigible balloons of the German army made a flight from here and came down in the water near Wollin, on the Baltic, after having been greatly damaged as the result of a collision with a tree. The pilots were not injured, however. The flight lasted ten hours.

The women of America are year by year becoming more and more attached to La France shoes—a shoe made in strict accordance with the latest Parisian styles adapted to the uses and high standards of the American women.

Women are attracted by this shoe first because of its refined and beautiful appearance. Then they find—often much to their surprise—that no other shoe they ever wore was so remarkably comfortable or held its shape so well.

This is indeed a rare combination to be found in one shoe—due to new and improved methods of leather selection and workmanship.

We hope you will come in and try on a pair of La France shoes, as we think they will give you some entirely new ideas.

Telephone Talks

Keep in touch with the world—and see to it that the world may keep in touch with you.

LOCAL AND LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE

Party-Liners And the Golden Rule

If they were co-tenants of a building they would be careful not to infringe upon the rights of others. That same regard for the equities should keep them from infringing by appropriating to themselves more telephone service than can be exacted as their fair share of the capacity of that line.

Lengthy conversations on unimportant matters, the prattling intercourse of children, phonograph concerts, and the like—these sometimes congest party lines and give cause for protest from other tenants in common.

A party line telephone has been likened to a spur track on a main line of railroad. But there is this important qualification—when the telephone spur track is in use the entire main line is closed to traffic, not merely to the other spur track on the line, but also to incoming trains consigned to any part of the line.

Ordinary regard for the principle of the Golden Rule will do more to avert party line difficulties than all the rules any telephone company may promulgate.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

It was then that my greatest troubles began. On a pretense of showing some wedding presents which he said I hadn't seen because they were in a different room from the others Potter got me alone and proposed again. This time he didn't laugh and joke, as he had before, so that I could take it half in fun even while it made me uncomfortable, but was very serious indeed. When I wanted to go out he stood in front of the door and wouldn't let me pass, and his chin and eyes looked so horribly determined that he was more like Mrs. Ess Kay than ever.

"My dear little ladyship," he said, "you're not going to get away until you've given me my answer."

"But I have given it," said I.

"I don't call what you've given me an answer, because, you see, I want you so much, and I've made up my mind so hard and fast to have you that I shan't take 'no' for an answer."

"I don't see how you can help it, as it's the only one I have to give, and I've told you that two dozen times at least," I said, beginning to feel irritable, as I always have from the first whenever Potter talked about love.

"I know you have, but that doesn't count. There's no such word as fail in the bright lexicon of my youth. Look here, dear girl, you don't quite realize perhaps what a good time I'd give you if you married me. I've got as much money as my sister has, and I'd do just as you liked about staying in the army. You could have a house in New York and a whole, real live castle in your own country if you liked. I wouldn't care a rap how much you spent on clothes, and there isn't a woman in America who's got better jewels than you should have. I'd see to that. Besides, you could do what you choose for your own people. I couldn't stint you. I want to be friends with them. I never talked like this to you before, but you see what I mean. And now, isn't what I've said any inducement?"

"I wouldn't need any such inducements if I loved you," I answered, "but I don't and can't, and somehow I never have been able to believe that you really loved me."

"If that's the trouble you can make your mind easy. I want you badly."

"Then I'm sorry, for I simply can't marry you. I should be miserable and so would you."

"I'll risk that. You're too much of an English rosebud to understand anything about love. What you must do is to trust others who know what you ought to want better than you do yourself—your mother, for instance. You'd like to please her and your sister and brother, wouldn't you? Well, they all want you to say yes to me."

"How do you know?" I broke out.

"I do know. You can ask Kath if it isn't true."

"I don't want to talk to her about it."

"You needn't if you'll only be a good girl and do what everybody expects you to do. Come now, do say yes, and let's be happy."

That did make me furious.

"Any one would think I was a naughty child and you were some kind of medicine the whole family was waiting for me to take!" I exclaimed. "It's a wonder you don't get out your watch and give me five minutes to do it in."

His eyes began to sparkle with anger. I believe he would have liked to box my ears, and I know I could have boxed his.

"I thought English girls were brought up to be sensible," said he, "and amiable."

"I can't help what you thought," I answered rudely, for I was getting desperate. "You've no right to keep me here like this, and it won't do you a bit of good, for if you stand there till we're both in our second childhood I won't change my mind. You ought to know that now, Mr. Parker. Please let me go."

He didn't move.

"If you don't I'll scream at the top of my lungs," I said. And he must have seen that I meant it, for he flung open the door with a slam, and I swept past him with my nose in the air, trying to look like mother.

I didn't see him again till it was time to go home. Then he drove back with Mrs. Ess Kay and me to the Moorings in the shut up motor car and didn't open his mouth once on the way, which was wonderful for him and seemed somehow ominous.

I had been too angry and excited after that scene of ours to feel unhappy or to worry much about what might come next, but that drive, short as it was, with Potter freezingly silent and Mrs. Ess Kay alarmingly polite, made me feel that the end had come. I was sure she had been told by her brother what an obstinate, ungrateful girl I was, and I had a guilty sinking of the heart as if I really had been both. There was no Sally to protect me now, no one to advise me what to do, and there was a big lump in my throat as I said good night and went to my own room.

I hadn't been there long when there came a knock at the door, the same determined kind of inexorable knock which mother gives when I've been found out in something which she thinks it her duty to make me sorry for.

I'd locked the door and would have liked to make some excuse not to open it, but it was Mrs. Ess Kay's door and Mrs. Ess Kay's room just as much as it was Mrs. Ess Kay's brother I had refused.

She sailed in all in black, like an executioner, though, of course, executioners don't go down into history wearing chiffon trimmed with jet.

"My dear Betty," said she, subsiding into a large armchair, "I want to have a serious talk with you."

It would have been stupid pretending not to understand, so I just looked at her and waited.

"My dear Betty, I want to have a serious talk with you."

"I dare say you can guess what it's about?" she went on.

"I suppose so," I said. "I am very sorry about everything. But I can't help not being in love with Mr. Parker, can I?"

"I should have thought," said Mrs. Ess Kay, "that your mother's daughter would have attached very little importance to being in love. Apparently she hasn't been as successful with you as with Lady Victoria. Believe me, Betty, there's nothing in it—nothing at all."

"In what?"

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

Mrs. Herbert Polk of Beach street is convalescing from a severe attack of bronchitis.

There were a few snowflakes this morning and it was chilly and blustering forecasting what may be expected before long.

C. Patch & Son buy the best coal, sell you what you buy and deliver it promptly. These are three important things that purchasers should remember when they replenish their supply of winter's warming fuel.

Unity club of Wollaston devotes one evening during the season to art and tonight will be art night when Living Pictures from old masterpieces will be presented under the direction of Mr. John Arnold, assisted by Miss Edith Randall.

While fishing in Haywards creek near Newcomb square Thursday David A. Newcomb of West Howard street caught a prize smelt. It measured 12 inches and tipped the scales at 16 ounces. These measurements are vouched for by several reliable witnesses who have seen and examined the smelt. This is the largest smelt ever caught in these waters and measures one inch longer than any smelt that we have ever seen any account of being caught in Massachusetts waters.

Foot Ball And Other Sports

Last Saturday there was not an athletic event of any kind in Quincy. The High school team was without a game and the Fore River team playing away from home. Tomorrow however there will be enough to make up for a week ago.

The big Y. M. C. A. relay is coming off tomorrow, the details of which will be found in another column. This will give the followers of the running game a chance to see their favorite game in action. The runners are expected to reach Quincy square between 3 and 4 o'clock.

While people are waiting to see this race, the local High school football team has a struggle on at Merrymount Park. They will try conclusions with the Cambridge Latin school gridiron warriors. C. L. S. had a good team at the beginning of the season, but have fallen off the past few weeks.

Quincy ought to beat them tomorrow, but the boys from across the Charles are liable to spring a surprise, so it will not do to be too confident. Again the Quincy boys may be stale, as they have not played for over a week. But if they have practiced faithfully all the time, there should be no trouble from this source.

Down at the Fore River the local soccer team lines up against the league leaders and prospective champions, the Fall River Rovers. This will surely be a hot game and worth going a long distance to witness. The Rovers play a fast game and they are not particular to say "excuse me" if they happen to kick one of their opponents or toss him on the ground.

Fore River will work hard to be at the Rovers, for they are the only bunch that the locals have been unable to trim this season. Besides the Fore Rivers have lost three games in succession and they are due to win tomorrow. The local soccer fans will certainly get their money's worth tomorrow and they will have plenty of chances to "root, root, root, for the home team."

Funeral of Mrs. Young

The funeral of Mrs. Ellen C. Young nee Coffey, who died in New York on Tuesday was held this morning, from the home of her mother 34 Brook avenue. A high mass of requiem was celebrated at St. John's church at 9 o'clock with Rev. Julian E. Johnstone as celebrant.

Mrs. Young was very well known in Quincy being born and brought up in this town but for the last few years she has made her home in New York City. The end came very suddenly and unexpectedly and her Quincy friends were shocked when they heard the news.

There were many floral tributes, showing the esteem of her friends. Many friends attended the mass, the church being crowded. The interment was in St. Mary's cemetery, West Quincy.

Norfolk County And Vicinity

The Ladies' Benevolent society connected with the Church of the Unity, RANDOLPH, held the monthly meeting yesterday afternoon. Supper was served at 6 and an entertainment followed.

One of the oldest landmarks in HOLBROOK, the old Dillon homestead now used as a sawmill, is to be torn down. Two cottages will be guilt on the site in the spring.

The HINGHAM Agricultural and Horticultural society observed its 50th anniversary Wednesday night in the Town Hall. There were 500 at the banquet and ex-Gov. John D. Long presided. Ex-Gov. John L. Bates was one of the special guests.

BARN DANCE.

A very largely attended and likewise enjoyable barn dance was held at Faxon hall Thursday evening under the auspices of the Manet club.

Cabbages, squashes, onions, and similar vegetables were arranged about the hall transforming it into a typical barn floor.

William A. Richards was in charge and Wilson's orchestra furnished the music. Nearly 100 couples participated in the dancing which was in order from 8 to 12 o'clock.

During a brief intermission apples, ice cream, and cake were served.

Today's Court.

Thomas F. McCasthy was fined $10 for drunkenness at Weymouth.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

WAR A POSSIBILITY

Austria and Servia May Not Reach a Peaceable Settlement

St. Petersburg, Nov. 13.—Although an air of outward calm is maintained at the Russian foreign office, the Balkan situation has now reached an acute stage, where everything depends upon the nature of the note which is expected from Vienna today and the outcome of the mediation which Russia, France and Great Britain have undertaken at Belgrade, at Austria-Hungary's request, with a view to limiting the belligerent activity of Servia. If mediation is not successful, war is recognized as a possibility in authoritative circles.

The Austro-Servian relations are too strained, it is believed, to permit present conditions to continue indefinitely. The Austrian note will definitely outline the attitude of that government regarding the discussion of the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the possible compensations to Servia and Montenegro, and the nature of the note will determine whether or not an international congress can be held.

THE $29,000,000 STANDARD OIL FINE

Government Will Fight For Rehearing of the Case

Washington, Nov. 13.—Following the recent action of the circuit court of appeals in Chicago, in refusing to grant the United States government a rehearing of the Standard Oil case, made famous by its $29,000,000 fine, officers of the department of justice have decided to carry the case to the supreme court of the United States. The decision was reached after an all-day conference between Attorney General Bonaparte and government attorneys who have been engaged in the case. It was found that a number of changes had been made in the opinion of the court of appeals originally rendered and that Judge Baker of that court had filed a separate concurring opinion, which differed materially in its reasoning from that of Judge Grosscup.

Application will be made to the supreme court for a writ of certiorari to bring up and reverse the action of the circuit court of appeals when that tribunal reconvenes on Nov. 30.

Gompers Prepared to Fight

Denver, Nov. 13.—At the close of yesterday's session of the convention of the American Federation of Labor President Gompers said that he had heard since coming to Denver that it was intended by the present session of congress to pass a bill amending the Sherman anti-trust law in a way detrimental to the labor movement. He said if such an attempt were made he would fight it in the halls of congress. A letter from W. J. Bryan was read, in which Bryan thanked Gompers and other members of the Federation for the support given him during the recent presidential campaign.

Priest's Case In Jury's Hands

Rutland, Vt., Nov. 13.—The case of Rev. Fr. Francis Crociata, the Sicilian priest who is charged with breach of the peace by way of assault in connection with the death of Accorito Santoro, is in the hands of the jury. Should Crociata be acquitted of the charge there would still remain over him a charge of being an accessory after the fact of the murder, for which two men have already been convicted and are now serving sentences.

Brooklyn Playhouse Burned

New York, Nov. 13.—Less than an hour after a large audience had left the Park theatre, Brooklyn, fire was discovered last night and an hour later the building was in ruins. Several members of the Spooner Stock company, which was filling an engagement at the theatre, were in their dressing rooms and the office, but escaped without injury. The loss is about $125,000. The building was erected in 1860.

Cattle Disease In Pennsylvania

Washington, Nov. 13.—Owing to a reported outbreak of contagious foot and mouth disease among cattle, the secretary of agriculture has issued a quarantine order forbidding the interstate movement of cattle, sheep, swine and goats from four counties in Pennsylvania, and also forbidding the interstate movement of such animals into those counties except shipments by rail for immediate slaughter.

Loyal to Harry Thaw

Fishkill Landing, N. Y., Nov. 13.—Mrs. William Thaw, mother of H. K. Thaw, and her daughter, Alice, who was the Countess of Yarmouth, have arrived at Matteawan. They have decided to make their home, for a while at least, near the state asylum for the criminal insane, where Harry Thaw is confined. The women will make daily visits to the hospital.

Bank Embezzler Sentenced

Milwaukee, Nov. 13.—Harvey T. Wells, embezzling cashier of a Kenosha bank, who was captured in Boston, after having fled to London, where he had married, and who later returned to this country, pleaded guilty yesterday and was sentenced to five years at the Fort Leavenworth federal prison.

CONSPIRACY CHARGE FIRST

Ruling Against Government In Alleged Peonage Case

New York, Nov. 13.—After several witnesses had testified in the trial of agents of the Florida East Coast railroad, charged with keeping employes of the company in peonage, Judge Hough brought the proceedings to an abrupt close by refusing to hear further testimony until the government had established the conspiracy charge against the defendants.

After witnesses had testified to the conditions under which a large number of men were engaged for construction work and to the treatment given the men in the construction camps, Hough sustained objection of counsel for the defendant to further testimony along these lines, saying:

"It seems that the government is prepared to show just two facts; one is that the Florida East Coast Railroad company contracted with certain New York labor contractors for men to work on the construction of their road there, and the other is that the conditions in those construction camps were excessively unpleasant. However all that may be deplored, still it has nothing to do with the conspiracy charge made against these defendants."

Counsel for the government declared that he had witnesses to prove the conspiracy charge, but that he wished first to establish the facts as to the labor contracting and as to the conditions in the camps. The court, however, ruled that witnesses who could testify as to the points of the indictment should first be produced. As those witnesses were not in court, the case was adjourned until today.

MAGNESS HAD A "BRAINSTORM"

Did Not Intend to Desert From the Navy

Philadelphia, Nov. 13.—Basing his defense on the pleading that he was guilty of being "absent without leave," but not guilty of "desertion from the United States navy," as charged by the government, Charles J. Magness, who married Miss Ada Gorman, daughter of the late Senator Gorman of Maryland, was tried before a court martial tribunal at the Philadelphia navy yard.

The government, after proving that Magness did not report after the expiration of a leave of absence which had been granted to him, rested its case. Magness admitted that he had overstayed his leave of absence, but he asserted that he had no idea of deserting. He said that he had thought of engaging in business in Louisville and that the money he had in his possession when arrested in that city had been given him by his wife.

Albert H. O'Brien, who had been retained to defend Magness by Mrs. Magness, in his closing address to the court, said that the "whole trouble was due to a brainstorm" which affected Magness and was responsible for his actions. He insisted that Magness had simply overstayed his leave and did not intend to desert. In his reply, Judge Advocate Muir, who represented the prosecution, ridiculed this contention, and said: "I have seen many brainstorms, but the counsel for the defense has offered me something new in that line."

The findings of the court will be sent to the secretary of the navy at Washington.

Three Firemen Badly Injured

Boston, Nov. 13.—Three firemen were seriously injured by being thrown from a fire engine which was in collision with an electric car on Bunker Hill street late last night. Captain Lawlor and Engineer Griffin were badly cut and bruised, while Assistant Engineer Gallagher suffered a fractured pelvis. All are expected to recover.

Methodist Clergymen's Salaries

New York, Nov. 13.—That the minimum salary for an unmarried clergyman in the diocese of New York should be $1200 and for a married clergyman $1200 and a suitable place to live or $1500 in money was the resolution passed amid applause in the annual convention of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of New York.

Jury Hopelessly Divided

Norfolk, Nov. 13.—The jury in the case of James T. Reed, former assistant postmaster at Newport News, charged with the embezzlement of $6462 in money order funds, announced its hopeless disagreement and was discharged. The jury stood nine for conviction and three for acquittal. Reed was admitted to bail.

Brakeman Caught In Wreckage

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 13.—A westerly gale was the cause of the death of James Rohan, a brakeman, who was on top of a car of a freight train on its way to Merrick. When the train was on the bridge over the Connecticut river the gale unroofed the car on which Rohan was riding. He was caught in the wreckage of the roof and fatally injured.

Forty-One Years With Cornell

Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 13.—Dean Thomas F. Crane of the Cornell university faculty, who has been connected with the university for forty-one years, has resigned his position, to take effect at the end of the academic year. Crane will have reached the age of 65 next July and will retire on a Carnegie pension. He has been asked to remain as emeritus professor.

GERMAN MINE DISASTER

Thirty-Seven Dead and Fate of Three Hundred Yet Unknown

Hamm, Westphalia, Nov. 13.—The greatest mine disaster in many years in Germany occurred at the Radbod mine, about three miles from this place. There was a heavy explosion in the mine and almost immediately the mine took fire. Of 380 miners working underground at the time only six escaped without injury. Thirty-five were taken out badly injured and thirty-seven were dead when brought to the mouth of the pit. The remaining 302 have been given up for lost.

The explosion, which was unusually violent, destroyed one of the shafts, which had to be partly repaired before the rescue work was begun. In addition the flames and smoke proved almost insurmountable obstacles in the early efforts of the rescuing parties.

A special corps, composed of the men who rendered such valuable aid in the terrible mine disaster at Courrieres, France, in March of 1906, arrived upon the scene shortly before noon, but were unable to enter the mine, being forced to await the result of the determined efforts of the firemen to keep the flames in check.

In the meantime heartrending scenes were being enacted at the mine when the dead and wounded were brought to the surface, and there were similar scenes in the town when the injured were transported through the streets to the hospitals. The fire made great headway and after a consultation of the engineers it was decided that any further attempts to rescue the entombed men were vain, owing to the impossibility of entering the galleries. At the same time an order was issued to flood the mine.

First reports indicated that the accident was the result of an explosion of coal dust, but the statements of the injured men render this improbable.

THIEVES RAIDED FAMILY WASH

Both Landed In Cell After Threatening to Kill a Man

Lynn, Mass., Nov. 13.—Discovering two men rifling the clothesline of the family wash in his back yard, Charles J. Rich of Boston street succeeded in capturing one of the men last night, in spite of the fact that a revolver was held at Rich's head and he was threatened with instant death.

Rich seized one of the men, whereupon the other drew a revolver and told Rich to let go of his companion. The robber counted three, which, he said, would be a signal for shooting, but Rich managed to fell him to the ground with a pickaxe handle, knocking him unconscious.

The man whom Rich had been holding got away, but after Rich had dragged his unconscious captive to Hospital square, where he put him in custody of an officer, the second man was captured in a Central avenue lodging house.

The unconscious man was revived at the police station and gave his name as Joseph Howard and his residence Chicago. The other man arrested on the strength of a confession by Howard is Helvin Stevens of Lynn, 20 years old, formerly a United States marine.

Baseball Men Still Disagree

Chicago, Nov. 13.—The warring factions of organized baseball have retreated without having reached a settlement of their differences. President Powers of the Eastern league and President O'Brien of the American association, who bolted the meeting of the National Association of Professional Baseball Clubs, departed yesterday on early trains. The so-called regulars of other and more numerous leagues belonging to the national organization had a brief session and adjourned without date to hold their next meeting at Memphis, probably early in the new year.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The superintendents of every school district in the United States will be asked by the Lincoln centennary committee of New York to have Lincoln's Gettysburg address read to the children in their schools at precisely noon on Feb. 12 next, the 100th anniversary of Abraham Lincoln's birth.

Nearly 200 men are working day and night on the steamship Mauretania at Liverpool, refitting propellers and strengthening the hull. The work will occupy the remainder of the year.

John Watson, the famous polo player, died at Navan, Ireland. He won the champion cup of England three times.

Benjamin Fish, 75 years old, brother-in-law of the late P. T. Barnum, the showman, and one of the most prominent residents of Bridgeport, Conn., died of heart disease.

George Gordon, aged 25, was killed by falling from a 100-foot smokestack which he was painting at a Brockton, Mass., shoe factory. The parting of one of the ropes of his boatswain's chair caused the accident.

Captain A. C. Scott of the fishing vessel Susie B of Eastport, Me., was knocked overboard and drowned during a heavy squall.

A man who registered under the name of Frederick W. Lunt of Waterboro, Me., at a Boston hotel committed suicide by shooting. Two letters which were found indicated family troubles as the cause.

Arthur Jones, a Lynn, Mass., shoemaker, committed suicide by turning on the gas. He had been out of work and became despondent.

Struggle to Throw Off an Influence.

[Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.]

Elisha Hereford at twenty married a girl of eighteen. Elisha was rather a bright fellow, but without good judgment. His wife was exactly the opposite. She was not bright, but possessed an enormous amount of "horse sense." For twenty years she kept her husband on the track and when he showed signs of "breaking" would speak to him in no uncertain tone, pull strong on the curb and now and then give him a sharp cut with the whip. The consequence was that Hereford, being smart, by the time he was forty had secured a competency.

Now, the thing without which success is not to be attained is often unrecognizable, especially by the achiever. Hereford attributed it in his case to his talents, arguing that if he were not pulled back by his wife he would be a millionaire. His most intimate friends knew that his wife had put those talents to their proper use and prevented his wasting them. Perhaps if any of them had told him this it might have neutralized this story. Perhaps he would have received the information as false. The latter supposition is the more probable.

One day Hereford disappeared. It was found that he had taken $50,000 and left $100,000 for his wife, with no explanation whatever. This is the most practical thing he had ever done without her assistance. Almost any one would pronounce the money preferable to the explanation. But the act was just like Hereford. He was a mixture of the sublime and the ridiculous.

He hadn't been gone long before his wife received a letter from an American gentleman in Constantinople named Tarbox stating that Hereford had died there. He had left instructions with Tarbox to send what money he had left—some $10,000—and his incinerated remains to his wife. Her friends said that so long as he had sent the money he needn't have troubled himself about the ashes. Mrs. Hereford deposited the former in bank and wept over the latter. When it came to sentiment she had her weaknesses, the most pronounced of which was a sincere affection for Elisha Hereford. She was too sensible to keep her husband's dust in her own house, so she spent $100 on a marble tomb, placed it in a cemetery and locked the dust in it. Not that the $100 represented her love for her dead husband. The tomb was plenty large to contain the ashes, and Mrs. Hereford's sentiment never ran away with her instinct of economy.

Before proceeding any further with this story I wish to say that there is a feature in it that won't be believed. You can invent a lot of imaginary nonsense, and it will be gulped down, but give people a real coincidence such as happens every day and they will laugh at you. I am sure, however, that any one who knows Elisha Hereford on hearing what I refer to would say, "That's just like him for all the world."

As I have said, Mrs. Hereford was prone to indulge a sentimental sorrow so long as it was not expensive. She went once a week to the cemetery, took out the urn, dusted it, probably because she had been used to periodically dust the marble clock on her mantel at home, wept over it and put it back. One day just after having done the dusting she turned the key and with bowed head was mutely offering a prayer for the repose of her husband's soul when she was aroused by a crash. It seemed she had heard some wooden structure knocked into kindling wood. Starting up, there in a lot not a hundred yards from her she saw a promiscuous mass of slender timbers jumbled with some light woven texture. From beneath it a man struggled to free himself and after doing so stood upon his feet. The widow went toward the fragments, and when the man's head appeared above the wreckage she caught at an iron rail inclosing a burial lot.

She saw him whose ashes she had been weeping over.

"Well," he exclaimed petulantly, surveying the wreck, "it's all up, and I'm glad of it."

Mrs. Hereford, who saw a medium for wasted money, breathed hard.

"Elisha," she said sternly, "what foolishness have you been guilty of this time?"

"I own up, my dear. It was this way: I heard of all these fellows trying aeroplanes, and I had a plan that I wanted to try myself. I knew you would never consent to spending the money to build it, so I concluded to take the job into my own hands, first eliminating you from the experiment. Jim Twinkler was going abroad, and I charged him to take care of you from there under an assumed name, telling him what to say and what to send. This left me $40,000 with which to"—

"Elisha!"

"My dear."

"Have you sunk $40,000 in that—that heap?"

"I've sunk $20,000."

"Where is the rest?"

"In bank."

"You come right home with me and draw me a check for it. I was a fool not to foresee something like this. Never again will you have a dollar under your own control. I've got the money you left, and when I get that you haven't thrown away we'll be safe."

Mrs. Hereford sold the tomb and the urn at a good profit. She secured a check for what money her husband had not sunk on the aeroplane, and from that time to the present she has held the purse strings to the family capital. THERESA C. HOLT.

Miss Helen C. Wilson, daughter of Rev. D. M. Wilson, formerly of Quincy, was the guest of honor at a recent luncheon given for her by the Twentieth Century club of Boston. Speaking of the social status of women in the Philippines she said the dowry was given to the bride by the groom and not by the bride to the groom as in other countries. The lady furnished the wedding ring and often the groom gave part of the trousseau.

Bay View L. O. L. Drama

The homestead drama, "Uncle Rube" was presented at Quincy Music hall last evening before a large audience and proved a great success, reflecting much credit on the South Quincy Dramatic club. The part of Uncle Rube was well rendered by W. L. Troupe, who proved an ideal old farmer, as well as a country justice of the peace. He was well supported by the rest of the cast. It would not be fair to particularize any of the eleven characters in the play, but especial mention might be made of the three ladies who did their parts so well; Miss Helen C. Troupe as Milicent Lee, the "Pretty School Marm"; Miss Georgianna Michael as Mrs. Martha Bunn, the "Charming Widow," and last but not least, Miss Margaret A. Craig as Taggs, "a Waif from New York," who was always getting into mischief.

During the drama and between the acts the Granite City Male quartet rendered some specialties which added very materially to the evening's enjoyment. After the play, the hall was cleared for dancing which was enjoyed till 2 A. M. The grand march was led by the floor director, Daniel F. Tinney and Mrs. Lemuel Tinney, followed by 80 couples.

The whole entertainment was given under the auspices of Bay View L. O. L., No. 187 The committee in charge were Malcolm McLeod, chairman; W. F. M. Calder, secretary and Daniel F. Tinney, Isaac M. Lennan, John A. Clark, John W. McKenzie, William Ross, Alexander McPhee, M. A. Campbell, W. J. McLeod.

Floor director, Daniel F. Tinney; assistant floor director, Alexander Ross; aids, W. I. McLeod, M. McKennon, D. Finlayson and A. D. Marten.

A special meeting of the National Sportsman club of West Quincy was held Thursday evening at its club rooms. The meeting was called by the Improvement committee to act upon important business matters.

The Norfolk Downs bowling team composed of Messrs. Harris, Osgood, Leach, George Stevens and Harry Stevens journeyed to Wollaston last night and on the Merrymount alleys defeated the Merrymounts three straight, the totals being 1308 to 1240.

WILSON TO RUN

Takes out Papers as Citizens' Candidate

There has been much speculation since the caucuses last Tuesday as to whether George H. Wilson who was defeated for the Democratic nomination for Mayor would carry the fight to the election.

Mr. Wilson has been non-committal on the matter saying that he had the matter under consideration. All doubts were set aside this morning however, when William J. Sullivan took out nomination papers for Mr. Wilson as a Citizens' candidate for Mayor.

This means a three-cornered fight and at the present time it is somewhat difficult to figure out the outcome.

There is some question as to which of the two regular nominees he will draw his votes from.

There are some disgruntled Democrats who do not want to vote for Mr. Shea and on the other hand do not favor the Republican nominee. On the other hand there are probably some Republicans who are not strongly in favor of Mr. Stone.

These men will probably cast their lot with Mr. Wilson. There is much doubt, however, if there are enough of these to elect him. Mr. Wilson's vote at the caucuses did not show him to be a strong candidate.

However, Mr. Wilson entering the contest will liven things up a little.

WAS EMPEROR IN NAME ONLY

Nominal Ruler of China Was Under Control of Dowager

BOTH ARE REPORTED DEAD

Rumors of Foul Play Also Circulating Among the People--Feeble-Minded Head of Government Absolutely Under Iron Will of Woman of Sanguinary Record--Short Period of Reform Since 1875

Pekin, Nov. 14.—Kuang-Hsu, Emperor of China, is said to have died at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The dowager empress, who has so long ruled the empire with a rod of iron, was also reported to be dying. No official confirmation of either event can be had.

Mystery envelops the condition of affairs in the palace, and rumors of foul play are circulating among the people.

It is stated that no declaration of the emperor's death will be made until the successor to the throne has been declared. The immediate successor is Prince Chunn, brother of the emperor.

The dramatic occurrences of yesterday, if the reports that the emperor is dead and the dowager empress dying are correct, draw attention to two striking figures in current history, the weakling Emperor of China, dominated all his life long by a stern woman who usurped his power and his position, and the dowager empress herself, a woman of sanguinary record, relentless, cruel and ambitious, whose demise renders impossible the fulfilment of the intrigues of her old age still to reign over China after the death of Kuang-Hsu.

Both the emperor and the dowager empress represent two Manchu rulers, one nominal and the other actual, whose dynasty has endured for twelve generations. But unless the edicts of yesterday should be reversed, the dynasty will be continued in the person of Prince Chunn, a brother of the emperor, and the prince's 3-year-old son, Pu Wei.

The dowager empress has ruled the empire with a will of iron. The emperor, the court and the government have bowed down to her and she has kept the matter of the succession to the throne entirely in her own hands for the purpose of being able to dictate who should succeed to nominal power. She desired two things, that the present Manchu dynasty be continued, and to control the successor of Kuang-Hsu for her own ends.

Kuang-Hsu has never achieved any remarkable distinction as a ruler. Were not this due to the fact that the dowager empress permitted him no voice in the affairs of the empire, the same probably would have resulted from his limited mental ability. It can be said of him, however, that he rose to the height of demanding and receiving imperial power from the dowager empress for a period of four months in 1898, and that he was the first holder of the title of Emperor of China to seriously adopt and proclaim western reforms.

Kuang-Hsu succeeded to the throne in 1875. In 1889 the dowager empress married him to her niece.

In 1898, after the seizure of Kioa Chou by Germany, he threatened to abdicate if not given full power. The dowager empress made a pretence of turning over control of the government to him and for four months he was as near as he ever has been to being the actual ruler of his empire.

During this period a number of reform edicts were issued, and it was evident that plans were under way for the westernizing of both the government and the court. The emperor was then fully under the influence of the reformer Kang Yu Wei. A national loan, a house and opium tax, army reform and foreign education, the abolition of the "literary essay," a test of fellowship and office; a bureau of agriculture, copyright and patent laws, and schools and colleges of western learning were among the reforms.

Kuang-Hsu, however, went too far in these matters, and the dowager empress, in September of 1898, decided to put an end to his activity. She suddenly confronted the emperor, denounced him, took from him his seal of state and put him under guard.

Not Ready to Fly

Washington, Nov. 14.—A. M. Herring, the aeroplanist, who was to have delivered a heavier-than-air flying machine at Fort Myer, Va., yesterday, requested an extension of seven months' time within which he may make delivery of the machine which he has contracted to build for the signal corps. Herring has already been granted two extensions of a month each. The extensions will be granted.

Long Shutdown About to End

Hooksett, N. H., Nov. 14.—After being shut down for eight months the Dundee mills will resume in full on Nov. 30, notices to that effect having been posted throughout the town. The mills manufacture linen crash, such as is used for towels, and normally give employment to about 300.

South Dakota's New Divorce Law

Sioux Falls, S. D., Nov. 14.—The new divorce law, increasing the period of residence pre-requisite for obtaining a divorce from six months to one year, was carried on Nov. 3 by a vote of approximately two to one, according to returns just compiled.

NO POLITICS IN VISIT

Croker Coming to United States to Renew Old Acquaintances

Queenstown, Nov. 14.—Richard Croker, former leader of Tammany Hall, sailed from here on the Lusitania today for the United States.

Before sailing he declared that his visit to New York had no connection with politics. He said that he intended to renew old acquaintanceships

The former Tammany chieftain has aged somewhat (he will be 65 years old on Nov. 24), but carries his age easily and looks well. The length of his stay in the United States is uncertain.

Devoid of Politics

New York, Nov. 14.—While in New York Richard Croker will stay with his son, Richard, who has a home at Port Chester. It is asserted with great emphasis in Democratic circles that there is no politics whatever in the former Tammany chieftain's coming visit. The old Croker guard will give him a big reception down the bay.

HENEY SHOT DOWN IN COURT ROOM

Victim of a Juror He Proved to Be an Ex-Convict

San Francisco, Nov. 14.—The San Francisco bribery graft cases had a dramatic climax late yesterday when Assistant District Attorney Francis J. Heney, who has been in charge of the prosecution during its tortuous course of two years, was shot and seriously wounded in Judge Lawlor's crowded courtroom by Morris Haas, an ex-convict, who is a saloon keeper. The shooting occurred during a brief recess in the third trial of Abraham Ruef on a charge of bribery, now in its eleventh week.

Mr. Heney is now resting easily and the physicians say his wound is not fatal. Haas is in the city prison. He was drawn on the jury panel in the second trial of Ruef and, after having been temporarily passed by both sides, was exposed in a dramatic manner by Heney as an ex-convict and discharged from the jury. Haas declared after the shooting that Heney had ruined his life by exposure and that he had determined to kill him for that reason.

The bullet was found under Heney's left ear. It did not penetrate the brain. Heney, as he lay on the operating table, declared: "I will live to prosecute both Haas and Ruef."

Boston Government Arraigned

Boston, Nov. 14.—That Boston's mayor "is simply an amateur" and that "heads of departments run the city to suit themselves" was the allegation of Professor Beal of Harvard college, principal speaker at the banquet of the Massachusetts Real Estate association here last night. Beal made a severe arraignment of the city government as conducted and made a plea for government by commission, with a large representative body of councillors.

Alleged Plot to Kill Mother

Chicago, Nov. 14.—Mae L. Otis, arrested on a charge of plotting to do away with her mother through the agency of hired thugs, was pronounced sane by City Physician Baldwin, who tested the prisoner on various subjects at the request of the police department. When the test was over he declared the girl's mind seemed normal, although, he said, she was on the verge of nervous collapse.

Cheated Justice by Suicide

Potomac, Md., Nov. 14.—James Evans, a farmhand, accused of having assaulted his employer's daughter, Maggie Collins, aged 11, near here, died as the result of his leap from a bridge 125 feet high. Evans feared the possible disgrace which his capture would bring and jumped from the bridge with suicidal intent.

Wireless Device For Locomotives

Omaha, Nov. 14.—D. H. Milliner, an electrician in the Union Pacific shops, has equipped a locomotive with a wireless device which railroad officials declare will enable train dispatchers and station agents to signal engineers between stations, thus putting them practically in constant touch with running trains.

CONVINCING FACTS.

There is no use denying the fact that Johnson Bros., are surely giving genuine bargains in food values. It will be hard indeed to find a store that is giving such excellent quality at such low prices.

Everything the best that money can buy, is their standard; and their customers know from past dealings that that is absolutely true. Now with our discount system, it is still more of an inducement to trade with us, and you will be surprised to find how fast your discount checks will count up.

We are displaying every day a choice assortment of Cut Meats, with the prices marked in plain figures, so that every one can see what they are paying for or we will cut it to your order, whichever you prefer.

We are pleased that so many of our customers have helped us to make this system a success, for it means a whole lot to them as well as to us. We do not think that any one objects to carrying home a purchase especially when they are paid to do so, which we are doing, with our discount check system.

We are receiving new seasonable goods every day, and it will be to your interest to visit our store and do business with us.

Beef, Lamb and Fresh Pork are all lower and we have a choice lot of Fresh Killed Chicken and Fowl constantly on hand, direct from William A. Drake of Braintree.

A tempting line of New Canned Goods, packed expressly for us.

Kleptomaniacs.

[Copyright, 1908, by T. C. McClure.]

One day in the height of his career Inspector Bourke of Scotland Yard was sent for by a Bond street jewelry house that had been robbed of a diamond necklace worth many thousand dollars. It was almost certain that Lady Renfield was the thief. On the quiet she had been known for several years as a kleptomaniac. But for her title they would have called it by a more ugly name. She was the only customer that had looked at the necklace that afternoon before it was found to be missing. Lady Renfield had just returned from Paris when Bourke made an excuse to call. There was to be a fair for the benefit of the poor, and she was to have a booth.

It so happened that just at this moment Lord Renfield was in the hands of the Jews. He had gone into a mining speculation and dropped $250,000. Let it once be known that a scion of nobility who is supposed to have barrels of money to burn is hard up and don't know which way to turn, and his creditors come down on him like a flock of hungry wolves.

Inspector Bourke under another name and as one of the officials of the great fair was received in the lady's morning room. He had posted himself on the subject to be talked about, and he talked intelligently and interestingly for half an hour before bringing in his casual and usual remark. Lady Renfield promptly and vigorously asserted her innocence. He had been through the same programme fifty times before, and he mildly replied that she had three days in which to give up the necklace. After that time had expired he should feel at liberty to take some other course. Lady Renfield thereupon defied him and showed him the door. In leaving he spoke of calling again. He did call the very next morning, though without the faintest hope of being admitted. To his surprise, he seemed to be expected, and as Lady Renfield came forward with extended hand she said:

"You have come again about the necklace, but I must tell you what I told you yesterday. I know nothing whatever about it."

Inspector Bourke's line was the sentimental and pathetic. It was for him to draw a picture of one of the greatest ladies in England arrested and scandalized and placed in the felon's dock. He asked her to imagine the feelings of her friends and family, the social ruin, the degradation of a proud family. Tears came to the eyes of Lady Renfield as he talked, but she nevertheless insisted that she did not take the necklace.

Then the inspector took the line of bluster. It wasn't vulgar bluster, but genteel bluster. He must go to some of her friends, even to her husband. He must get them to make her see her position. The jewelry firm wanted no publicity, but was determined to have the necklace back or its equivalent in cash. Lady Renfield answered his covert threats by words of defiance. Her husband was in the house, and she threatened to call him in and have her visitor thrown out as a blackmailer. She would welcome any sort of suit and prove her innocence. The inspector left her with the observation that he would make a third call in hopes to find her in a more contrite mood. He was again admitted. He went over the case with her to show her how convincing the evidence was against her, but she only smiled contemptuously. Then he played his last card before proceeding to extreme measures. He astonished her by giving her facts about her husband's pecuniary difficulties. She had received no hint of them, and she would not believe until the inspector had laid incontestible proofs before her. Arrest and trial had no terrors for her, but public gossip about the family finances terrified her. The caller saw that he had made an impression, and he bore down as heavily as possible, and at length Lady Renfield gave way and said:

"I will lie to you no longer. If you will promise me that not a breath of this gets out I will give up the necklace."

The promise was instantly made, and the woman made for her boudoir and soon returned with the ornament. She was tearful and humiliated, and the inspector sought to make it as easy for her as possible. She pleaded kleptomania, as they all do, and was assured that hundreds of great ladies had the ailment and were thought none the worse of. She would be welcomed at the store as before, and on behalf of the firm he hoped for a call at an early date. She furnished a plush case for the necklace and bowed the inspector out.

"There is no other man like you in England," said the head of the firm as the plush case was put into his hands.

"I do my duty to the best of my ability, sir," was the reply.

"Hold on here, Bourke, but what is this?" exclaimed the jeweler a moment later.

"The necklace from Lady Renfield, sir."

"But not the one stolen from us. These stones certainly came from Paris. It is also a more costly necklace than ours. What in the devil have you been doing?"

That evening as he sat in his room and smoked his pipe Inspector Bourke figured it out to his satisfaction. Lady Renfield had stolen the necklace of a Paris jeweler and escaped suspicion. Some one else had gobbled the one at Keep & Quiet's. She had given up the stolen gems to the wrong firm in order to prevent gossip as to her husband's financial straits. M. QUAD.

TWO ASPIRANTS FOR PRESIDENTCY

Gomez and Menocal Contending For Honor In Cuba

ELECTION IN PROGRESS TODAY

Precautions Taken by the Provisional Government Ensures Absolute Quiet and Fairness--Practically No Difference In Party Platforms --Result of Election May Not Be Known For Several Days

Havana, Nov. 14.—Cuba is today following the recent example of her big sister republic to the north in electing a president. Unlike the United States, however, Cuba has only two candidates for the office of chief executive of the island republic. The two aspirants for the presidency of Cuba are General Mario Menocal, candidate of the Conservative party, and General Jose Miguel Gomez, head of the Liberals. Their running mates are respectively Dr. Rafael Montoro and Alfredo Zayas. The nomination of Senor Zayas for the vice presidency is the result of a coalition of the Miguelista and Zayasta factions of the Liberal party, the two men having formerly been bitter political foes. They have buried the hatchet, at least temporarily, in a united attempt to down the common enemy, the Conservatives.

GENERAL JOSE MIGUEL GOMEZ.

There is absolute quiet today throughout Cuba, and the election is being conducted in the most orderly manner. This is due partly to the precautions taken by the provisional American government. Governor Charles E. Magoon has appointed in command of the rural guards today the American officers who have served as provincial governors.

There is no doubt that absolute fairness characterizes the election, about which every safeguard has been cast by the provisional government, in accordance with an elaborate election law framed by the advisory commission, of which Colonel Crowder is chairman. The balloting is conducted with all the regard for law and order which marked the provincial elections last August. Both of the political leaders have given assurances that they will accept loyally the result of the popular verdict.

GOVERNOR CHARLES E. MAGOON.

There is practically no difference in the platform of the two parties, both having as their chief planks the preservation of the republic, equal rights for all citizens, the encouragement of agriculture and commerce and the maintenance of friendly relations with the United States. The struggle is frankly for the possession of the government and the control of public patronage.

Both General Gomez and General Menocal are veterans of the revolution and have a large following in virtue of their distinguished services in the field. Dr. Montoro is the foremost orator in Cuba and was nominated in the expectation of his being able to control the large Spanish vote, but he is unpopular with many Cubans on account of his attitude during the revolution when he held office in the autonomous government in the last days of Spanish rule.

The result of the election will perhaps not be known for several days, despite the elaborate arrangements for the prompt forwarding of the returns from 1498 polling places.

VON BUELOW MAY RESIGN

Represented the People In Desire to Curb the Kaiser's Tongue

Berlin, Nov. 14.—Chancellor Von Buelow and his friends are so preparing the political situation that if the chancellor should retire after his audience at Kiel next Monday with Emperor William, it will be because the emperor was not willing to concur in the declaration made in the reichstag by the chancellor on Tuesday that it was essential that the emperor be more reserved in his utterances in the future.

Von Buelow has taken the position that he represents the entire people on this question, and that because of this he is bound to interpret the national will to the sovereign, standing or falling by his decision.

While it cannot be said that Von Buelow has taken counsel with all the Imperial ministers, he has been in consultation with some of them, and they support him actively. The chancellor submitted the question whether he should reply further to the criticism of the emperor and himself to the Prussian cabinet. His colleagues advised him not to do this, but to rest upon his speech of Tuesday.

ALLEGED SMUGGLERS ESCAPE TO CANADA

Slipped Through Dragnet Set by Buffalo Police

Buffalo, Nov. 14.—The three alleged smugglers whose motorboat, filled with contraband Chinamen, was wrecked on the break-wall in Lake Erie, off the foot of Michigan street, are known to the police. The description of the men furnished by Ralph White, night watchman on the barge Atlas, and other facts gathered by the police, clearly established the identity of the men, who, after the wreck of their boat, left their human cargo to perish. It is also known that the alleged smugglers have escaped the dragnet thrown out for them in this city and are now on the Canadian side of the Niagara river.

There is some question as to the power of the government to bring the men back from Canada if they are captured. The offense of aiding and abetting the illegal entrance of Chinese to this country is not extraditable. It is possible a charge of manslaughter will be brought against them.

Must Provide Direct Evidence

New York, Nov. 14.—Judge Hough in the federal court here declared that the trial of the so-called peonage cases in connection with the construction of the Florida East Coast railroad will have to come to a stop unless the government can produce evidence bearing directly upon the indictment. After listening to several witnesses yesterday the judge abruptly adjourned court with the statement that the prosecution had failed utterly to establish a prima facie case of conspiracy.

Business Is Expanding

New York, Nov. 14.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says that expectations are being fully realized in the increased demand for manufactured products that each day reduces the percentage of idle machinery and the number of unemployed. The depleted condition of stocks is disclosed as business expands, and throughout all industrial channels there is a sudden pressure to meet requirements that assures activity for some time at least.

Root and the Senatorship

Washington, Nov. 14.—Although Secretary Root has repeatedly declared that he is not a candidate for the New York senatorship, there is no doubt that he will accept the position if it comes to him without unseemly scrambling. His friends in a position to know assert that if the people of New York conclude that his services are desired in that capacity he would regard it as a duty to accede to their wishes and accept the position.

Wesleyan's Next President

New York, Nov. 14.—William A. Shanklin, president of Upper Iowa university, Fayette, Ia., was elected president of Wesleyan university, Middletown, Conn., at a special meeting of the trustees of Wesleyan held in this city. Shanklin succeeds acting President North, who has been at the head of the university since the resignation of President Raymond two years ago.

Conference of Importance

Boston, Nov. 14.—The first conference for uniform legislation for New England, which is the result of the recent conference of the governors of New England states, will be held in this city on Nov. 23 and 24. The chief topics to be discussed will include forestry, the protection and promotion of supplies of seafood, and highways and their use.

Unionists Win In Porto Rico

San Juan, P. R., Nov. 14.—The official election returns of Porto Rico, completed and made public, show that the Unionist party carried all the seven districts of the island, and that the house of delegates will not have a Republican minority. The Unionists obtained their clean sweep by advocating independence and self-government.

LOCAL AND LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE

Telephone Talks

A "prompt" answer turneth away wrath. You know how you feel when you are kept waiting at the telephone.

Remember: Example is better than precept.

"No One on the Line"

It has been pointed out that there are three parties to a telephone conversation, namely, the person calling, the operator, and, last but not least, the person called.

The operator has no authority to compel an answer to her summons. She simply forwards to your telephone a mechanica' signal. Interpreted, this means "Some one desires to speak to you." It remains for you, the person called, to recognize this request.

There are two strong reasons why you should answer promptly, and both vitally concern you:

1. If you are slow in answering the caller may hang up the telephone and assume that you are not accessible. Later, if you answer at your leisure, the operator can vouchsafe no information save that "there is no one on the line." Who called you? The operator probably does not know. Any operator in your exchange may have called you, rather than the operator specially assigned to answer your calls.

2. From the moment the operator calling you "plugs in" on your line until she ceases her effort to attract your attention, your line is "busy" to all other callers.

If you are dilatory, therefore, you are obstructing your own service. You are also causing disappointment to your caller and annoyance to yourself.

ADRIFT IN A BALLOON

Experience at Sea of International Balloon Racers.

FACING DEATH IN THE DARK.

How Dr. Niemeyer and Hans Heidemann Were Blown From Rescue Ship. Clasped Fingers In Farewell While Clinging to Ropes—Hail From Boat Sweetest Sound They Ever Heard.

On board the steamship Prinz Wilhelm, which recently arrived at Leith, Scotland, were Dr. Niemeyer and his assistant, Hans Heidemann, the crew of the German balloon Busley, one of the competitors in the great international balloon race which was held at a suburb of Berlin.

Dr. Niemeyer and Herr Heidemann arrived in London wearing cheap ready made clothing which they bought in Edinburgh, virtually having been naked when rescued. The sailors of the collier which picked them up lent them garments until they could purchase others.

Their story of the hours when they believed they were facing death upon the night waves of the North sea is thrilling, says a special London cable dispatch to the New York Sun. After being blown over Cuxhaven they were not alarmed at the prospect of being carried across the sea. On the contrary, they were elated, for the wind was driving them northwest, and as it was estimated their gas would last fifteen hours they saw a prospect of landing in England and winning the race. But a little later the wind veered and, blowing with terrific force, drove them northward through pitch darkness and bitter cold. When they realized the situation Dr. Niemeyer exclaimed, "Now we have done it!"

"Yes, we are in for it," responded Heidemann, and each was silently busy with his own thoughts.

Presently they saw the lights of two or three ships far below. They shouted and signaled with their electric lamps in vain. They were driven helplessly for two hours. About dawn they saw the lights of the Prinz Wilhelm and signaled frantically, and at last the steamer's foghorn answered them.

Dr. Niemeyer, telling the story, said: "Heidemann shouted, 'We are saved!' but we little knew. The worst was yet to come. Suddenly we realized that we were traveling much faster than the steamer and unless we opened the valve and dropped the chance of rescue would be gone. I opened the valve of the balloon, and the car struck the waves with tremendous force. The car, being weighted with ballast, instantly sank, and we were submerged to the armpits.

"We climbed the ropes and grasped the extension ring. There was enough gas left in the balloon to keep it above the water, but the whole thing was driven flopping through the waves which buffeted us in the darkness. We were suddenly thrown into consternation to see the Prinz Wilhelm's lights growing dimmer, and we watched them lessening until they almost disappeared.

"We could not believe that we were abandoned. It must be that we were still speeding faster than the steamer. The gas bag acted as a sail, and our only hope seemed to be to rip it. Pulling the ripping cord with all the strength left in my numbed arms, the envelope collapsed on the water, and the car sank deeper.

"Half frozen and choked by the waves, which we could not avoid, with eyes smarting from the salt water and naked except for our trousers, having hastily stripped in readiness for a swim, we still held on for our lives with our hands, having lost all foothold when the basket sank.

"The steamer's lights were now mere specks in the darkness. So they had abandoned us. 'Men, men, how can you forsake us? It isn't human!' I shouted futilely.

"Then the lights vanished altogether. We saw our end near. I said to Heidemann, 'I cannot hold out much longer.'

"'Nor can I,' he answered quietly.

"As we gripped the netting for a new hold our hands touched. We involuntarily clasped fingers.

"'Goodby!' I said. 'It won't last much longer.'

"'Goodby!' responded Heidemann.

"I shut my eyes to await the end. Suddenly out of the darkness we heard a shout. It was a human voice, the sweetest sound I ever heard. Rapidly nearing us was a boat which the Prinz Wilhelm had sent to find us.

"'Catch hold of the oar!' shouted a voice in the German tongue, and the boat drew alongside, and the brave sailors with difficulty helped us on board.

"I hardly know how we fought death and won. Twenty minutes later the steamer came up and took us on board. It picked up the balloon too. The captain and crew treated us in the best possible manner, and, thank God, we are here to say so. But we are disappointed that we did not win the trophy."

Toward Cheaper Aeroplanes.

It costs much to build a large dirigible balloon. The French and German craft have cost from $250,000 to nearly $500,000 each. An aeroplane can be built for less than $2,000, and the market price will probably soon be about $1,000.

New Cure-all.

A book has recently been published that advocates starvation as a cure for all human ailments.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Some men are so very slow that it is impossible for them to even run a chance.

There may be some useful purpose connected with a lazy man, but he shamelessly refuses to serve it.

Some people would be more concerned about the uplift if it could be trusted and dividends guaranteed.

What will the American heiress do for excitement and amusement when she has bought up all the titles in Europe?

One of the notable things about silence is its extreme distaste for female society.

Some men need a change of heart almost as badly as they need a change of clothes and some loose change in the pockets thereof.

Most women hold that the tongue was made to talk with. A few men hold it was made to keep still with.

It is queer that the milk of human kindness does not get churned into butter by the turbulence of some of its supposed possessors.

Easy on the Pocketbook.

How pleasant to recline at ease,
Forgetting all our troubles
And building castles bright and fair
As rainbow tinted bubbles,
To get away for half an hour
From business and from scheming
And waste a portion of our time
In nonproductive dreaming.

It doesn't set one back a cent,
It doesn't strain the muscles,
It doesn't give the pocketbook
Abrupt, heart rending tussles;
It is so easy and so cheap
To persons who employ it
We often wonder how they can
So thoroughly enjoy it.

Some people go about the world
For new amusement seeking,
Some on the theaters attend
And some on public speaking,
But missing all the quiet sport,
The splendid recreation
Of those who sit and take their out
In planless speculation.

As steady diet it cannot
Be counted as a winner,
But for a quiet half an hour
Of loafing after dinner
It gives a calm and restful touch,
A relaxation splendid,
But for a constant mode of life
It isn't recommended.

Looking Ahead.

"Will you love me when I'm old?"
"You want me to?"
"Why, the very idea! Of course I do."
"Very well, then, since your hopes are so high, I warn you not to put in the years acquiring a face and figure like your mother."

As Usual.

"I've plenty of theories"—
"Yes, and when you want to work one out"—
"Work one out?"
"Yes."
"Oh, when I want to go to work I forget them."

Danger Zone.

A man may smile and smile and be
A villain up to par,
Particularly if he smiles
Too much around the bar.

Dye Wouldn't Stick.

"No use trying to convince him?"
"None at all. He is a dyed in the wool party man."
"Oh, well, if it is no worse than that, we will go after him. I noticed as we passed that he was almost bald."

Persistent.

"She tries so hard to be young."
"Yes, and seems to me that she is bound to succeed."
"Does it? Why?"
"She has been at it so long."

Her Steady.

"I hear you have a show with the new young man."
"Show! I should think so. It's a continuous vaudeville."

EDITORIAL.

The President seems determined to let it be known that he is still up and able to be about. During the last week he has led the officers of the war college in a pedestrian race that sent half of them to temporary retirement, preached a sermon in a letter on the religion of Taft, and issued an invitation to all the heads of respectable labor organizations to dinner at the White House.

By the death of the late George W. Prescott the Quincy Patriot again becomes the property of a woman, being bequeathed to his widow. Years ago early in its career the Patriot by the death of its editor John A. Green became the property of his widow M. Elizabeth Green, who ably assisted by Mr. Prescott built up a successful paper and business.

Mrs. Prescott will not enter actively the field of journalism but with competent editors and managers hopes to continue the business in such a way that the Patriot and Daily Ledger will stand for good clean journalism and for the upbuilding and helpfulness of the citizens at large.

Active work of the committee on Ways and Means has begun in Washington, or rather it has been shifted to Washington, for the work has been progressing during the recess of Congress in Albany, New York, at the home of Representative Sereno Payne, who is the head of the Committee. It is said that the hearings will be completed before the Sixtieth Congress convenes in its final session. The program of revision, however, is arranged not for the action of the Sixtieth Congress, but for the Sixty-first Congress which must be called in special session after March 4th, 1909. It is understood that the leaders of the party in power, including the president elect, the speaker of the House, the chairman of the Finance Committee and also Senator Aldrich, are in perfect agreement as to the general policy to be followed in the revision of the tariff viz., the policy of protection.

Fore River Co. Gets Contract

The officials at the Fore River Ship Building Co. were very much surprised Friday to receive a letter from the Navy department at Washington containing the contract for building the new battelship Utah.

The contarct for building this vessel had as the Fore River Co. well knew been awarded to the New York Ship Building Co. of Camden, N. J. That a mistake in directing the envelope containing the contract was at once realized.

This fact was not made known for a time however and for a few minutes there was considerable excitement as the rumor flew around the office that the contract had been received and as proof of it the contract was shown.

After the excitement had cooled off somewhat Chief Clerk MacQuarrie placed it in another envelope and affixing a stamp with a bang sent the contract in motion again towards its rightful possessor.

LAUNCHING POSTPONED.

The launching of the two ocean tugs for the government and the car float for the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad to have been held this afternoon at the Fore River Shipyard has been postponed until next Wednesday.

Greenough's Masterpiece

Rev. Edward Anderson of Presidents hill, has come into possession of an original statue by R. S. Greenough, the Boston sculptor, which is the artist's conception of "Christ Awakening in the Tomb."

Interesting details regarding the statue, and the manner in which its present proprietor came into its possession were given by Mr. Anderson in last Sunday's Globe as follows:

"In June, 1897,I was a guest at the pension of Signora Rinaldi, 145 Via Rasella, in Rome, he says. One day a caller was announced. It was the venerable Richard S. Greenough, our American sculptor, who had climbed four flights of wearying stairs to see me, notwithstanding his 80 years. He invited my daughter and myself to lunch the next day at his rooms in the Via Nazional.

"At lunch we talked about various schools of art, and I told Mr. Greenough I was very much disappointed in all I had seen in the galleries of different countries of Europe, in conceptions of the mature Christ. He said that he felt as I did, but that after lunch he would ask us to his studio to see a reclining statue which he called "Christ Awakening in the Tomb."

"On entering teh studio I stood before a reclining figure in whitish marble. Christ was before me.

"One hand was raised above the eyes, as if to shade them from a bright light. The features seemed to be more Grecian than Hebrew, but the face had rare expression, at once of strength and of gentleness and sympathy. My ideal was realized. I could not then tell the artist my feelings, but I wrote him when I got home. I had never been so impressed by a work of art; and words were but a poor medium for telling him so.

"After a number of letters had passed between us I ventured to ask Mr. Greenough for a photograph of this Christ, since I could never hope to have the original. He replied that he had no photograph.

"Mr. Greenough had made this statue to be placed over the grave of a friend in Rome. In moving it a piece was broken from the nose; and though Mr. Greenough restored the fragment so the seam can hardly be seen, he made a new statue like the first.

"After his death the original statue was presented to me."

The statue is in a packing case in a storeroom of the Boston public library, and Col. Anderson has offered to loan it to some museum, library church or cemetery for all the people to see without cost but where it would be very acceptable as a gift it cannot be accepted as a loan so that Col. Anderson may eventually place it in his family lot in the cemetery.

Living Pictures Famous Master Pieces

"Living Pictures of Famous Masterpieces" were given under the direction of John R. Arnold at the meeting of the Wollaston Unity club in the Unitarian vestry on Friday evening.

Great credit is due to the direction of Mr. Arnold, and to the services of Miss Randall and Miss Lane in the arrangement of the tableaux, in making this one of the most successful meetings in the history of the club.

Before the eyes of an expectant audience the masterpieces of a long line of famous artists passed in rapid review and, in the short glimpses afforded, one could see with what artistic taste and correctness of detail each was characterized.

The subject drew a large audience which nearly filled the vestry and many young people from Quincy as well as Wollaston participated in the tableaux.

Preceding each picture a brief description of the life of the artist was read by Mr. Arnold or Mrs. Saville, thus giving an idea of the conditions under which each picture was painted.

Mr. Frauenfelder, accompanied by Miss Gertrude King, favored the club with several vocal solos during the evening and before the tableau of "Breakfast in the Wine Cellar," appropriately sang the stein song.

Instrumental selections were also rendered by a mandolin club composed of Messrs. Hallowell, Newcomb and Christianson.

Previous to the picture of Raphael's "Madonna of the Chair," a cradle song was very sweetly sung by Mrs. F. A. Page, and preceding the "Portrait of an Admiral" by Franz Hals, Longfellow's poem "A Dutch Picture" was strikingly read by Mrs. Isabelle Davis. Mrs. Davis also read an extract from Tennyson pertinent to the picture of Sir Galahad.

Extracts were read from standard authors by Mrs. Gurney, describing the characters in the "Little Princes in the Tower" by Millet and the "Portrait of Mrs. Sarah Siddons" by Gainsboro.

Just before the last picture, that of Washington, by Stuart, America was sung, standing, by the audience.

The evening was declared by all to be a most instructive and entertaining one.

Following is a list of the tableaux and those participating:

LaFornorina by del Rombo—Gerna Saville.

Little Dauphin by Madame Le-Brun—Robert Davis.

Madonna of the Chair by Raphael—Miss Hubbard and Hope Robinson.

Marie de Medici by Franz Pourbois—Mrs. F. A. Page.

Portrait of an Admiral by Franz Hals—Allan Arnold.

Little Girl with the Cherries by John Russell—Beatrice Johnson.

The Mandolin Player by Franz Hals—Mr. H. J. Gurney.

Effie Deans by Millet—Ruth Penniman and James Claflin.

Portrait of Mrs. Sarah Siddons by Thomas Gainsboro—Grace Spear.

Huguenot Lovers by Millet—Allan and Alice Arnold.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

Miss Mabel Drew of Walker street has been soloist at a great many churches in and around Boston since the fall season opened and has received many flattering press notices.

In the early summer the ladies of the Hospital Aid association started in to make a lot of little stockings, using scraps of muslin, cambric, etc., in the construction. During the summer over a thousand were made which have been mailed, accompanied by a poem which asks the receiver to fill the stocking with pennies just twice the size of the stockings they wear and bring to a social to be held for the benefit of the Hospital Aid association.

The Auxiliary to the Y. M. C. A. held their November meeting yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Charles Miller in her devotional exercises took "Christian Courage with Guidance" as her subject. Mrs. Peace of Fall River read a most helpful paper upon "Our Deeds and Our Needs in the Auxiliary Work," and reports were given by the delegates to the recent Auxiliary convention in Pawtucket. The meeting adjourned followed by a social tea in the parlor.

There is to be a pleasing entertainment and tea at the stocking social next Wednesday evening at First church chapel for the benefit of the Hospital Aid association.

Dr. David Downes of South India, one of the most distinguished of the many speakers to speak next week in Boston at the Laymen's Missionary meetings will give an address at Bethany church tomorrow evening. He will speak on "The Lone Star Mission." "The Launching" is Dr. Hardy's theme for the morning.

Mrs. Charles H. Young of New York, whose funeral was held Friday morning from St. John's church, was before her marriage, Miss Ellen C. Coffey of this city and well known by her stage name as Ellenore Carroll. As a young girl Mrs. Young was a great success in local amateur entertainments and later toured the country with James O'Neil and Hanlon brothers, showing unusual ability.

☞Ingomar a free adaptation of Friedrich Halm's "Son of the Wilderness" is to be given in motion picture next week at the Scenic. With characters freely drawn and an unbroken succession of stirring situations portrayed with beautiful coloring by the moving pictures one does not miss the living actors but follows the story with intense interest. The long waits usual to a play are eliminated. It is sure to be a great drawing feature of next week's attractions at the Scenic.

DAYS OF DIZZINESS

Come to Hundreds of Quincy People.

There are days of dizziness;
Spells of headache, sideache, backache;
Sometimes rheumatic pains:
Often urinary disorders.
All tell you plainly the kidneys are sick.
Doan's Kidney Pills cure all kidney ills.

Here is proof in Quincy.

Mrs. George L. Mott, living at 99 North street, Quincy, Mass., says: "I have every reason for entertaining a very high opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills. They cured me of a serious case of kidney complaint, after everything I tried had failed to help me. Prior to using this remedy I was troubled a great deal with headaches and dizzy spells, which were so severe at times that I would have to grasp something for support to keep from falling. My eyesight was affected and spots would seem to float before me. My back also greatly annoyed me. Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a box at the Cox drug store and began their use. I was helped from the first and after I had taken the contents of five boxes, my case being of long standing, I was cured. Other members of my family have used Doan's Kidney Pills with equally good results."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

QUINCY'S WIN 40 TO 0

Take Cambridge Latin Into Camp

In the most one sided game of the season at Merrymount park this morning, the local High school team took the team from Cambridge Latin into camp by the score of 40-0. There was nothing to it, but Quincy all through the game. The home team scored 29 points in the first half on two forward passes and a fake kick, coupled with some clever line bucking.

In the second half the visitors took a brace and held Quincy to two touchdowns, from which one goal was kicked. This brought the total up to 40 points. Rindge defeated the Cambridge team 38-0, and Quincy piling up 40 shows that Quincy didn't play her best game against Rindge when the latter played here and won 17-0.

Quincy kicked to Cambridge for a starter and immediately got the ball when the latter was held and forced to kick. Hendry then tossed a forward pass to Hill, who went 20 yards for the first touch down, five minutes after play started. "Venus" Carlson tried to kick a goal from a difficult and failed. Score 5-0.

Quincy took the kick this time and "Sausage" Carlson got five yards. Prout got ten more round right end and then on beautiful forward pass by Hendry, Nash ran 40 yards for the second touch down. "Venus" had a cinch kicking the goal this time and the score was 11-0 in favor of Quincy.

Cambridge again kicked to the locals and Prout ran the ball back ten yards before he was downed. Howe shot through right tackle for ten more. Then came the most spectacular and clever piece of work in the whole game, in fact the best play that has been seen at the Park this season.

Hendry dropped back as if for an onside kick. He held the ball just long enough and went through the motion of kicking. Just as everyone was watching to see the ball going sailing through the air, Hill came round back and took the ball from Hendry. There was no one watching for such a play and Hill had a clear field. He shot down the field for 60 yards and a touchdown.

Carlson kicked the goal. It was a great piece of head work on the part of Hendry and shows that the little quarter-back is cool and in the game all the time. Cambridge was fooled and everyone else, except the members of the Quincy team. Score Quincy 17, Cambridge 0.

Quincy chose to take the kick again and R. Bates got 15 yards on the kick-off. Quincy then kicked, and Cambridge tried a forward pass. It went wrong and they were penalized 15 yards. They were forced to kick, and Blake broke through and blocked the ball, falling on it, on Latin's ten yard line. From this point in two rushes the home team scored again, Bates carrying the ball over. "Venus" kicked an easy goal. Score 23-0.

On the next kick-off the Cambridge fullback got ten yards. They were held and kicked to Bates. The ball see-sawed up and down the field, now Quincy having and now Cambridge, although the latter was never dangerous. Finally Quincy got started again and by some good steady rushing Howe was sent over. Carlson kicked the goal and the score was 29-0. This ended the first half.

The second half began with Latin kicking to Quincy. The home team advanced the ball steadily, and Nash landed on the ten yard line after fumbling a forward pass, which should have been a touchdown. Here the ball went to the opponents on downs and they kicked, but got the ball on a fumble. A forward pass went bad and they kicked, but Fitzgerald got the ball.

Cambridge was held again and kicked to Hendry. On a couple of forward passes, with a 25 yard gain by Howe through left tackle, the ball was landed on the five yard line. From here "Russ' Bates went over but "Venus" failed to kick the goal and the score stood 34-0.

The visiting fullback caught the hall when "Venus" booted it down the field on the next kick-off. But Hendry was on the job and downed him in his tracks. Cambridge was penalized for offside play and had to kick. Bates caught the punt and by clever dodging ran it back 30 yards, when he was tackled by Fitzgerald. Steady plugging by the Quincy backs sent the ball across the line again. Howe getting the credit of the touchdown. "Venus" kicked an easy goal and the Cambridge boys were now in the hole 40-0. There was just time to kick-off again, when the whistle blew and the game was over. Final score, Quincy, 40, Cambridge Latin 0.

Hendry played a swell game for Quincy, and Howe, Nash and Hill were not far behind. Graustein was about the whole thing for the Cambridge team, although Fitzgerald, Mason and Hodges played a good game. The summary:

Score, Quincy 40, Cambridge 0. Touchdowns, Bates (2) Howe (2) Nash, Hill (2). Goals from touchdown, H. Carlson (5). Referee, Gourlie. Umpire, Graustein. Linesman, Holbrook. Time, 20 minute halves.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Doremus, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

III—Lady Betty gets her first impression of America. On the dock she is rescued from reporters by the steerage hero, who tells her he is Jim Brett, employed at the Manhattan club, New York. In Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid New York home Betty meets Lieutenant Parker brother of the hostess, who is to take them to visit West Point.

IV—Vivace, a beautiful and expensive dog, is sent to Betty. Mrs. Ess Kay does not know who the donor is, and Betty does not tell her that it is Brett. Lieutenant Parker, whom Betty does not like, makes love to her.

V—Lady Betty has a good time at West Point despite Parker's proposal, which she rejects.

VI—In a walk in Central park Sally tells Betty her love story (she had been seperated years before from the poor man she loved by her family, the man becoming a monk) and advises Betty to marry only when she is sure of her love. They meet Brett.

VII—Betty is introduced to Mrs. Harvey Richmount Taylour, a typical young society woman.

VIII—At Newport Betty falls in love with Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid "cottage," the Moorings. Parker continues his attentions. Mrs. Ess Kay is chagrined on learning that Mrs. Van der Windt, Newport's leader, has planned to "cut" her and her acquaintance, Mrs. Pitchley. Mrs. Ess Kay relies on Lady Betty's presence to maintain her social prestige. She plans an entertainment to introduce Betty.

X—Mrs. Ess Kay plans a fancy dress ball, the features of which are to be Aladdin's cave and the Maze. An invitation is sent to Mohunsleigh's friend, Jameson B. Harborough, a new San Francisco millioniare. Betty is to appear as a frost sprite.

XI—At the ball Parker proposes again. Betty is rescued from him by Brett, who hints that he is there as a reporter. She declares her faith in his future.

XII—Harborough fails to appear at the wedding of Cora Pitchley and Mohunsleigh, to which he has been invited. Everybody at Newport is anxious to meet him. Sally, having quarreled with Mrs. Ess Kay, is visiting a friend in Chicago and has asked Betty to go to Chicago if anything at Newport displeases her. Parker again proposes to Betty and is refused again, whereupon Mrs. Ess Kay tells Betty that her mother, the duchess, plans to have her either engaged to Parker or stay in America until her sister is engaged.

being married off to him before I knew."

"Well, and if you did? It would be because you'd had the chance to change your mind."

I shook my head. "I must go home to England," I said, "but Mr. Parker mustn't follow me."

Mrs. Ess Kay's face hardened.

"I'm afraid if you go home after refusing Potter you'll have a very poor welcome, my child. The duchess has been kind enough to take me a little into her confidence. I don't think she would have sent you over with me if she hadn't known something about Potter, and your sister's affairs aren't arranged yet. Oh, you needn't blush and look so indignant. The duchess didn't mind putting her difficulties in a letter when I wrote her you weren't behaving quite satisfactorily, and you may take it from me that at present things stand like this—you must go back an engaged girl or else stay away until Lady Victoria is married."

If mother were different I should have hoped Mrs. Ess Kay was exaggerating, but as it was I believed her, though I did my best to be high eyebrowed and incredulous till she remarked that I could see the duchess'

"In what you call 'being in love.' A girl fancies a man for his eyes, or his dancing, or because he is strong, and she thinks she's in love with him, but it's only a fancy which passes before she's been his wife for twelve months, and she wonders what she ever saw in him then. A year after you have been married to my brother, you will be very fond of him, and you will be one of the most important young women in America as well as in Europe. Oh, my dear, you will have to take him. Your mother will never forgive you if you don't. It was quite an understood thing between us when she lent you to me that if possible there was to be a match. Your beauty and name, and Potter's money. He's really a very good fellow—a temper, perhaps, but I wouldn't give much for a man without one, and, like most Americans, he'll make a splendid husband."

"For some one," I murmured.

"For you, Betty. I assure you, I daren't tell the duchess you've definitely refused Potter. You must be persuaded. Be engaged to him. Let him follow you to England."

"If I did that I should find myself letter if I liked, though it might be rather embarrassing.

I was sure it would be and preferred to take its contents on faith, but I was so miserable that I had to keep my eyes staring wide open to prevent the tears dropping down. I was tired and forlorn and homesick—for Vic and Stan and the dear dogs and everything except mother—and I felt such a horrible weakness creeping over me that I could even imagine myself by and by doing what they meant me to do. I thought the best thing was to gain a respite lest Mrs. Ess Kay should drag some kind of a concession from me which I would have to live up to afterward.

"I can't talk any more about it now," I said. "I believe what you say, but it only makes it worse for me to think that mother should have made what amounts to a kind of bargain with you. Maybe by tomorrow everything won't seem so dreadful."

"Of course it won't," said she. "It won't seem dreadful at all. You've no idea how happy we're all going to be. Now, just you sleep well and dream sweet dreams and you'll wake up feeling a different girl. Maybe poor Potter hasn't been as tactful as he might be. That's because he's too much in love to be clever. But he has a lovely surprise for you tomorrow. Something connected with a certain finger of your left hand. I promise you that you'll like it. And now I'm going to leave you in peace for the night."

I can't tell what savage deed I might not have been capable of doing if she had had the idea of kissing me, but she hadn't. She merely patted me on the shoulder and went out, leaving me to stare aimlessly at the door after she had softly closed it.

Chapter 13

DON'T know how long it was before the thought came to me that I would take Vivace and a handbag and run away to Sally, but anyway it was before it had occurred to me to sit down.

Sally said before she went away that I was to go to her if I felt like it, and Sally always means what she says. Now I felt like it so much that it seemed suddenly the only possible thing to do, so all I had to decide was the best way and the best time to do it.

As for the time, if I didn't escape before Mrs. Ess Kay and Potter formed a hollow square round me to pour their volleys into my heart in the morn all that was prophetic in my soul said I would never escape, but would suffer great confusion and rout.

As for the way, it was more difficult to make up my mind, but the first thing was to see how much money I had in my exchequer, which happened to be a gold purse Sally had given me.

I hadn't spent much, and since coming over dear old Stan had sent me another fifteen pounds, which he wrote was part of one night's winnings at bridge—unusual for him, if it's true, as Vic thinks that he continually loses. Altogether I had nearly thirty pounds in hand, which seemed a lot, only I didn't know at all how much it would cost for Vivace and me to reach Sally in Chicago, and I couldn't tell until I had got irrevocably away from Mrs. Ess Kay and the Moorings.

By this time it was nearly 2 o'clock, and in a couple of hours it would be light. I must sneak out of the house with a dressing bag before any of the servants were stirring, and meanwhile I must pack up all my belongings except such things as Mrs. Ess Kay had given me—so that I could write and have my boxes sent on by and by.

As soon as I had realized that there wasn't a minute to throw away, the worse was over, for I didn't stop to grizzle. I finished getting out of my bridesmaid's dress in which I had danced so gayly a little while ago, dashed a thin frock, a dressing gown and a few other things into my fitted dressing bag (which was almost too heavy to carry, but not quite), and then stuffed everything else, except a traveling frock, into the boxes that were stored in a huge wardrobe built into the wall.

I made all the haste I could, but I'm not clever at packing, so I heard some clock striking 4, when I had slipped on my thin gray canvas coat and skirt, and was putting on my hat, with cold hands that trembled so much I could hardly stick in the hatpins.

I had been excited enough the day I heard I was to come to Mrs. Ess Kay, but I was twice as excited now when I was going to leave her. I felt rather frightened, still I couldn't help smiling when I said to myself how little I had thought when I learned the great news about America and Mrs. Ess Kay, in what circumstances I should part from her.

Each step Vivace and I took in the corridors and on the stairs seemed to make such an incredible noise in the quiet house that I felt like a runaway elephant eloping with a hippopotamus, but either it wasn't as bad as I thought or every one was lying charmed in a magic sleep, for we got out through a window in the dining room, down the veranda steps and across the lawn without being stopped, as I half expected.

I knew the way to the railway station very well, for I had often been there since I arrived (the last time was when I saw Sally off), but the question was, When would there be a train? And a good deal depended on that question, for, though Mrs. Ess Kay and Potter might not exactly have the power to drag me back, I wanted to get as far away from them as I could before they discovered that I had gone.

I was horrified to find when we arrived that, as the Americans say, there was "nothing doing." Not a soul in sight, and there I was, very hot and hysterical, with Vivace and my dressing bag looking like an escaped burglaress. I had been so nervous while I was packing that I'd been afraid of everything, even the soap in the soap dish, which had two great blinking bubbles at one end, like a pair of goblin eyes that watched me move, but I was much worse now, and I could have fallen on the neck of the first official person I saw moving about the station after I had waited for perhaps a quarter of an hour. I don't know what he was, but when I appealed to him for news of a train for New York, instead of calling the police to give Vivace and me in charge as a dangerous pair, he scratched his head and said there was a milk train due presently if I was mighty anxious.

A milk train sounded innocent and suitable to a girl traveling alone, but even if it hadn't I should have been thankful to go in it. I couldn't buy a ticket, it appeared, in the ordinary way, but when the milk train came my man introduced me to another. Perhaps he was a milkman; anyway he seemed to have authority and he said as a favor Vivace and I could be taken. He was a nice person, and he talked a great deal after the train had given several false starts and at last had got off. I sat on my bag, as I had on the docks, in a bare, curious car, which really belonged to the milk, and sometimes when we bumped I should have fallen on the floor if it hadn't been for him. He told me all about himself, and wanted to be told all about me, but I thought, nice as he was, it would be safer not. He asked leading questions which it was hard to keep from answering unless I hurt his feelings, but I think he somehow got the impression that I was going to see a sick relative, though I never exactly said so.

I don't know what time I should have got to New York if I had had to travel all the way with the milk, for milk, it seems, objects to speed, but after we had jogged along for a couple of hours, we crawled into a station where a real train was ready to start. There were just five minutes to say farewell to my friend and buy a ticket, when, all flushed and panting, I found myself and Vivace and the bag in a car different from any I had seen yet. It had no nice easy chairs and plate glass mirrors and wire nettings in the windows, like the one in which I'd traveled to Newport, but there were two rows of seats, and when the train moved a cloud of coal smoke poured in through the door at the front end. Babies squalled, children whined and their faces grew black and damp with mingled dirt and heat while grownup people scolded, but a dear old lady got into my seat before long, and just because I helped her with a bandbox, she made me a present of a huge peach. I was thankful to have it, for by this time I was collapsing with hunger, having been up all night without anything to eat.

The peach made me think of Mr. Brett and the little basket he had sent me on the docks. Then this thought suggested another. He had said he would do anything for me that was in his power, and if he were still in New York it was in his power to help me a good deal. He could tell me how much it would cost to go to Chicago, and he could show me how to get there.

I really believe that at first I hadn't had a thought of seeing him, but once it had got into my head I welcomed it, begged it to sit down and make itself at home.

I could have clapped my hands with joy when I saw the Grand Central station and the delightful cafe au lait porters with their red caps. It looked as familiar and comforting as if I'd passed through a hundred times instead of once, and I had the nice feeling that now something pleasant was sure to happen, which one has when one first arrives in Paris.

WOMEN ARE VICTIMS

INDOOR LIFE AND LACK OF EXERCISE CAUSES PILES.

More women than men have piles. It is because they take so little outdoor exercise and are so often constipated. There is a stagnation of blood in the lower bowel, and no amount of cutting or treatment with ointments and suppositories will remove this cause.

Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid, an internal, tablet medicine, will permanently cure any case of piles, removing the cause. Price $1 at Clyde T. Cox's, Quincy, Mass. Fully guaranteed. Dr. Leonhardt Co., Station B, Buffalo, N. Y. Write for booklet.

IN PRISON SHIP MARTYRS' HONOR

Great Monument at Brooklyn Is Formally Dedicated

MANY NOTABLES ARE PRESENT

Long Military Parade a Feature of Ceremonies In Connection With Unveiling of Shaft to Perpetuate Memory of Heroes Who Died of Disease and Starvation After Being Captured by British

New York, Nov. 14.—Brooklyn today is the scene of a notable gathering of local, state and national celebrities, the occasion being the dedication of the prison ship Martyrs' monument. Prominent among the men who are attending the ceremonies are President-Elect Taft, Charles E. Hughes, re-elected governor of New York, and Secretary of War Wright.

Music by Twenty-third regiment band, closing with "The Star Spangled Banner," all standing.

Prayer, Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman.

Poem, Thomas Walsh.

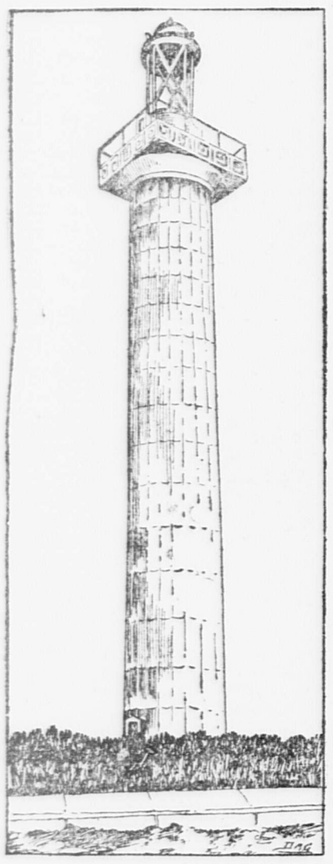

Oration, William H. Taft.

Presentation of monument on behalf of the national government by Secretary of War Wright.

Acceptance on behalf of the state by Governor Hughes.

Acceptance on behalf of the city by the chairman of the board of aldermen, Patrick F. McGowan.

Address on behalf of the Tammany society or Columbian order by Daniel P. Cohalan, grand sachem.

PRISON SHIP MARTYRS' MONUMENT.

A long military parade marched through the streets of Brooklyn, and many of the houses in the borough were decorated with the national colors.

The prison ship Martyrs' monument is intended to perpetuate the memory of the patriots whose unhappy fate it was during the American Revolution to be captured by the British and confined in the Jersey and other hulks of infamous memory lying in the East river. Hundrers died of disease contracted during such confinment, and starvation claimed many of the others. There is a monument to the memory of the martyrs in Trinity churchyard, Manhattan, but it has long been felt that it is inadequate.

The Prison Ship Martyrs' Monument association of the United States was incorporated in 1903 to procure money for the monument. Toward the work the national government donated $100,000, the state of New York contributed $50,000 and the city gave $25,000, the remainder being supplied by popular subscriptions by Brooklynites. The Tammany society has been active in procuring funds for the monument.

The monument was designed by the late Stanford White and cost a little over $200,000. The cornerstone laying took place on Saturday, Oct. 26, 1907, Governor Hughes, Major General Grant, Stephen V. White, Stephen M. Griswold and many others taking part in the ceremonies.

Former Mayor Kills a Man

Cienfuegos, Nov. 14.—Gonzalo Vieta, a Conservative, former mayor of Cienfuegos, last night shot and killed Edwardo Prieto, a Liberal. Vieta alleges that Prieto insulted and attacked him. It is not known whether the quarrel had its origin in politics.

Would-Be Poisoner Punished

Catskill, N. Y., Nov. 14.—James Cartan, a farmer, who was detected in the act of placing arsenic on sliced tomatoes prepared for his wife, received a sentence of eighteen years' imprisonment.

A NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

Naval Secretary Metcalf Feels Compelled to Leave His Office

Washington, Nov. 14.—Secretary of the Navy Victor H. Metcalf has tendered his resignation to the president, to take effect Dec. 1, on account of ill-health. Assistant Secretary of the Navy Newberry will be named as Metcalf's successor.

For more than a year it has been known at the navy department that Metcalf was suffering from a nervous breakdown. It rendered it impossible for him to remain at his desk for any length of time and the chronic nature of his trouble has caused him to abandon hope of recovery while burdened with the cares of office.

On April 15 last he went to California to review the Atlantic battleship fleet. He took a long vacation, but upon his resumption of official duties his illness promptly recurred and he frankly told the president that he could not remain in the cabinet.

Mr. Metcalf was thoroughly versed in naval matters, having served on the house committee on naval affairs while in congress. His first appointment under this administration was as secretary of commerce and labor, which he relinquished in order to accept the duties of secretary of the navy on Dec. 17, 1906.

Mr. Newberry had never filled any important public office prior to his appointment as assistant secretary of the navy Nov. 1, 1905. Prior to that time he was in business in Detroit.

SMALLPOX APPEARS IN VERMONT

Many Persons at the State Capitol Fear Infection

Montpelier, Vt., Nov. 14.—The discovery that a recent visitor to the state capitol was afflicted with smallpox has led many state officials and members of the legislature to seek physicians for the purpose of undergoing vaccination.

Last Tuesday Luke T. Landman of Londonderry came here to attend a reunion of the legislature of 1906, of which he was a member. Landman remained here Wednesday and Thursday meeting many friends, including the governor, lieutenant governor, other state officials and members of the legislature, and besides attending a reunion was present at a meeting of 200 farmers.

On Thursday he complained of slight illness and a doctor diagnosed his trouble as serious and advised him to go home at once. Landman took the doctor's advice and when he reached Brattleboro was met by Secretary Holden of the state board of health, who decided that the man was affected with smallpox and locked him up in a car by himself for the rest of the journey to Londonderry.

Brattleboro, Vt., Nov. 14.—Thirty-two cases of smallpox are reported in this city and the board of health has prohibited the holding of public meetings. Up to a few days ago the situation was not considered as serious, the early cases being of a mild nature and quarantined as chickenpox.

The disease has spread through the entire southern section of the state. Six cases have been discovered in East Dover, about eight miles from Brattleboro.

Charged With Killing Carmack

Nashville, Nov. 14.—A grand jury returned a true bill in which Duncan B. Cooper, his son, Robin J. Cooper, and former Sheriff John D. Sharp are jointly charged with the murder of former Senator F. W. Carmack. In the second count Sharp is also indicted on the charge of being an accessory before the fact. The name of S. C. Carmack, a brother of the slain man, appears on the indictment as prosecutor.

Court Martial Acquits Dodd

Washington, Nov. 14.—Lieutenant Dodd, recently in command of the torpedo boat Grampus at Mare Island, Cal., who was charged with carelessness in connection with a gasoline explosion resulting in fire damage to two tugs and in the drowning of two men, has been acquitted by a court martial and the findings are approved by the secretary of the navy.

Primary Election Frauds

Chicago, Nov. 14.—A special grand jury empanelled to investigate charges of fraud in the primary election of Aug. 8 returned thirty-eight indictments against fifteen judges and clerks of election and politicians. The charges include allegations of aiding and abetting illegal voting, perjury, illegal marking of ballots and falsifying of poll books.

Tobacco Duties Satisfactory

Washington, Nov. 14.—From the attitude assumed by both Republican and Democratic members of the house ways and means committee at yesterday's hearing on the proposed revision of the tariff it became evident that there is general satisfaction with the present duties on tobacco and tobacco manufactures.

A BRIDGE PURSE.

A Useful Trifle to Carry When Playing the Game.

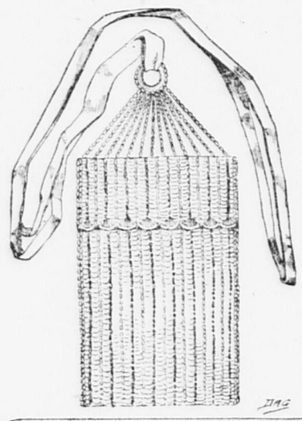

As there is no sign of the fascinating game of bridge losing its attractions for smart society, the bridge purse seen in the illustration will be an acceptable gift for the girl who likes to make her game more exciting by playing a penny or so a point. To make the purse commence with 85 chain, miss 1 chain, 1 double into every stitch, 1 chain turn.

Second row—1 double into 70 stitches (taking up in this and every row the two top threads), 2 chain, miss 2 double, then 12 double into the next 12 double, 1 chain turn.

Third row—12 double, 2 into the 2 chain of last row, 70 more double, 1 chain turn; repeat these last two rows until you have worked 26 rows altogether—that is, 13 stripes—then 1 double into end of stripe, 4 treble into next stripe *, 1 double into next stripe *, 1 double into next, 5 treble into next *, repeat three times, 1 double into next, 4 treble into next, 1 double into next (the last stripe), and fasten off—this is the right side—then fold together and sew up on the wrong side.

Then for the chain loops:

Cut off a length of silk about five yards and with it crochet 1 double on to the inside of the purse on the right hand side 25 chain, draw through the first loop of 2 chain, 2 double on to the ring, 25 chain, draw thread through the next loop, 2 chain on purse, and repeat until all the loops are filled (this requires a little care so as not to get the thread entangled, but it saves breaking off and threading in the ends every time); then do double crochet

MATERIALS REQUIRED.

One ball of crochet silk, any color preferred.
One yard and quarter of narrow ribbon to match silk.
One small ivory ring.
A few steel crochet needles.

A PRETTY SILK PURSE.

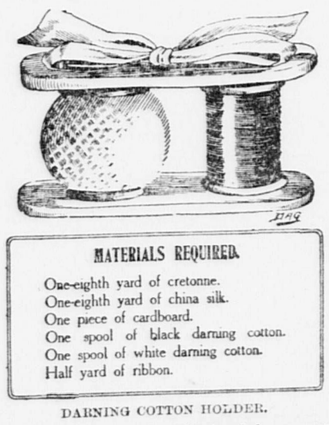

to nicely cover and fill up the ring, fasten off and neatly run in the ends of silk. Fold the ribbon and sew on to the top of the ring.

GIFTS EASY TO MAKE.

Ideas For Christmas Any Needlewoman Can Carry Out.

Among the new fancy articles that are being made for Christmas is a folding hatrack which very much resembles a candlestick shade. A semicircle is first cut out of buckram or tailor's canvas, the outer edge being twenty-two inches and the height five inches. It can be covered with denim, colored linen or flowered cretonne and is bound with gold braid, which is glued on, or with silk braid to match the cover. Three clamps or hooks are sewed on the ends, and when these are fastened together the whole forms a cone on which the hat can rest on the table or the hatbox.

Another acceptable gift is a handmade medicine case, which would be found most useful when traveling. It is made of plain linen bound with red braid. Cut a piece of the linen 14 by 12 inches and fashion it so that it forms four well shaped flaps. Bind these with the braid. Then take about ten inches of red silk garter elastic and stitch it to the center of the linen in six different places. In the elastic put five two ounce bottles.

MATERIALS REQUIRED.

One-eighth yard of cretonne.
One-eighth yard of china silk.
One piece of cardboard.
One spool of black darning cotton.
One spool of white darning cotton.
Half yard of ribbon.

DARNING COTTON HOLDER.

These can easily be obtained from any druggist. The two cross flaps are finished with a button and buttonhole.

A darning cotton holder is a most welcome gift to a mother. Two oval pieces of cardboard, about four and a half inches long by two and a half inches wide, are covered with flowered cretonne or any odd pieces of silk and a lining of white. Two spools of darning cotton, one black and the other white, are placed between the two pieces and held there by a piece of ribbon, which passes through the center of the spools and the upper and lower pieces of cardboard, being tied finally in a large bow at the top.

TURKEY'S ARMY.

Composition and Quality of the Sultan's Troops.

In view of the condition of affairs in the near east the Turkish army is a subject of present interest. At the age of twenty-one the Turkish conscript, if taken for the colors, serves for three years in the nizam, or active army, then for six years in the ihtiat, or reserve of the active army, after which he passes for nine years into the redif, or reserve army, and, finally, for five years into the mustafiz, or landsturm. In case of emergency he may be taken to serve in the mustafiz for two years before reaching the age for nizam service. In Asia, however, mustafiz service is only for two years at the end of the soldier's redif service. Deducting exemptions and those medically unfit, about 100,000 young Moslems come up for conscription every year, and of this number about 70,000 are taken for the colors, while the balance of 30,000 pass straight away into the second class redif after a few months' drill.

German officers have compiled some numerical tables of strength which may be taken as a basis for estimates. The number of available fighting men under the present system of service may be given as follows: Nizam troops, 260,000; ihtiat, 120,000; first class redif, 270,000; second class redif, 360,000; mustafiz, 90,000; total, 1,100,000. Of these the second class redif men may be ignored for practical fighting purposes, as only a small proportion are even partially trained. The other men are, or ought to be, fully trained soldiers. The force available for instant service in Europe is probably about 150,000 men, which in the course of a few weeks could be increased to 375,000 men.

AGED VOTER'S LONG TRIP.

Simon Harris, Centenarian, Came From Jerusalem to Cast His Ballot.

One hundred and five years old, but in good health, "Old Man" Simon Harris, as he is familiarly known on the east side of New York, comes all the way from Jerusalem to vote at every presidential election, and he was one of the first to register the other day in the Twentieth election district of the Second assembly district at 447 Grand street. A chorus of congratulations greeted his appearance there, and he shook hands with many friends of long standing.

Mr. Harris answered the inspectors' questions in a steady tone and remarked that his papers were wearing out and he would have to obtain duplicates because he expects to vote at several more presidential contests.

He wrote his name in a good round hand and then chatted with a group about the great changes that have come over New York since he first went there fifty years ago and lived on a little farm at Mott and Bayard streets.

He is living with Mrs. Levine at 242 Division street and will stay there until after the election, when he will return to his home in Jerusalem, whither he went to live many years ago. He says he is a good friend of the American consul in the ancient city and spends much of his time with him. Mr. Harris was naturalized in California and walked from there to New York after the gold excitement of 1849.

CAUSE OF BULGARIA'S BREAK.

Turkey's Slight to Her Diplomat, Says Consul General Ozmun.

Edward Ozmun, United States consul general at Constantinople, who recently arrived at New York, accompanied by his family, on leave for six months, told the following story of how Bulgaria came to declare her absolute independence:

"The break between Turkey and Bulgaria came as a result of Tewfik Pasha, minister of the interior, failing to invite Mr. Guerschoff, Bulgaria's diplomatic representative at Constantinople, to a diplomatic dinner. The result that followed may very easily have been unexpected by Turkey. When the minister left Guerschoff out in the cold it was expected that that would serve to show the position of Bulgaria as being that of a dependency instead of a separate country. It so happened that matters were then ripe for Bulgaria to take decisive action, and she very quickly took up the matter."

STREET CAR DISEASE.

St. Louis Conductor Reports a Peculiar Malady.

A United Railways conductor in St. Louis has a new disease, and he told a reporter the other night that a majority of the other conductors on the pay-as-you-enter cars are similarly afflicted. The symptoms are much like those of salivation.

"It is caused by that brass handle on the exit door," said 1151. "No passenger can leave the car by way of the rear platform until the conductor has grasped the handle and opened the door.

"Nearly all conductors have the habit of wetting their thumbs with their tongues in handling transfers or paper money. The poison of the brass handle is on their hands, and they thus carry it to their mouths.

"You ought to see some of the boys. Their lips are raw. If we wore gloves we would be unable to give out transfers or make change quickly enough."

Big Coffee Crop.

The Mexican coffee crop is expected to reach over 92,000,000 pounds against 33,000,000 pounds last year.

THE
Young Men's Christian Association
OF QUINCY, MASS.
(Legal Title—Incorporated 1892.)

The Directors of the YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION of Quincy, with a firm faith in the great value of the work which is being done for the young men and boys of our city, make their appeal for donations and bequests toward paying the mortgage indebtedness on the new Association Building. When the building is free from debt it will serve as an Endowment, as there is a goodly income from the dormitories.

Should the Donor prefer, such sum as might be given could be used as an Endowment for an educational class or classes, the Boys Department, or as a special fund in other ways, and could be designated with the name of the Donor.

The Treasurer, WILLIAM F. CUMMINGS, 7 Clive Street, Quincy, or the General Secretary, ERNEST G. GAY, will be happy to answer inquiries.

OUR HOSPITAL
(Legal Title: City Hospital of Quincy)
INCORPORATED 1889

The Trustees of the City Hospital of Quincy earnestly appeal for donations and bequests for the Endowment fund. This now amounts to over $60,000, but a fund of at least $100,000 is urgently needed.

Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000) will endow a Free Bed to which such name may be given as the Donor may desire, but any sum for this noble institution which stands ready to serve us all in the hour of need will be most gratefully received.

The Secretary, TIMOTHY REED, Adams St., Quincy, or the Treasurer, RICHARD D. CHASE, Savings Bank Building, Quincy, will be very glad to confer with any one of to answer any inquiries.

COOPERATION NOT A SUCCESS

The stockholders of the Quincy Co-operative store met last night in Doble's hall and dissolved the Association. There were about 100 present and the bills were offered back at 25 percent of the original amount. In other words, the members of the Association could have bought back the business by paying one-fourth the debt. However, no one seemed desirous of putting any more money into the concern ,and the thing was dropped. The company assigned about two weeks ago, the liabilities being $8,000 and the assets $3,000. The store is located in the Malnati block at the corner of Liberty and Brooks avenue and has been in operation for seven years.

SILVER WEDDING.

On the evening of Nov. 6, 1908, relatives and friends from Malden, Worcester, Wareham, Quincy, Holbrook, Weymouth and the Braintrees assemblde and assisted Mr. and Mrs. John P. Robery in celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage at their home 5 Liberty street, East Braintree.

Dainty refreshments of ices, cakes and fruit punch were served in the dining room in charge of Mrs. M. G. Parker. Mrs. Robert Donnelly, Mrs. Martin Broman and Mrs. J. A. Hoey. At a late hour they left for their homes, leaving their best wishes, also many beautiful gifts with Mr. and Mrs. Robery, who expressed great appreciation.

AMUSEMENTS.

Keith's Theatre.

The season at Keith's theatre is becoming notable for the large number of prominent theatrical and operatic stars that are heading the bills, Virginia Harned and Zelie de Lussan being followed by Thomas E. Shea, the tragedian. Mr. Shea has been for years one of the most popular actors appearing before the public, and few men have had a greater following. A new feature will be "The Gainsboro Girl," a beautiful young woman with an act that is a decided novelty. Others are Barry and Wolford in a singing sketch; Chassino; the Zanettos, that remarkable troupe of jugglers who will long be remembered in Boston from the feat performed by the leading member of the company, by catching on a fork, held in the mouth, a turnip thrown from the top of Bunker Hill monument. The bill will also include Sam Williams in a pianologue, Maybelle Perkins and the special Keith show of moving pictures, solos and current events.

Boston Theatre.

Of the many successes of that brilliant playwright, Henry Arthur Jones, none have met with greater favor on this side of the water than "The Liars," which was first produced in this country by Mr. Frohman, with a company headed by John Drew. It is one of those bright comedies with an endless chain of amusing situations that appeal to all classes, and at the same time teaches a lesson. It is a society comedy in a way, and the principal characters are a young woman married to a man older than herself, domestic difficulties and a rather weak friend, who falls in love with the wife, and thinks the only thing on earth—the only thing that will make life endurable for both of them—is to run away. The diplomatic friend of the family, of course, is always prominent, sizes up the situation and not without some difficulty, finally induces everybody to see matters in a true light. It will be very different from anything done by the company recently, and in line with some of the greatest comedy successes in which the members excelled last season.

Colonial Theatre.

That admirable actor, Otis Skinner, has achieved a very genuine and emphatic success with his new play, "The Honor of the Family," at the beautiful Colonial theatre in Boston, where he is attracting large and fashionable audiences. Mr. Skinner's success is all the more gratifying because it has been honestly earned. No actor before the public is more sincerely devoted to his art and more painstaking in perfecting every detail of his production. Otis Skinner is a great Boston favorite and always faces large and responsive audiences at the Colonial Theatre, and his own personal success in the Baizac play is unequivocal. Not only is "The Honor of the Family" admirable in respect to the work of the star, but all of the companion players in the supporting company contribute to an even and harmonious representation. There will be a special Thanksgiving Day matinee at the Colonial.

Castle Square Theatre.

College life is always attractive to the outsider, and it is for that reason that "Brown of Harvard" has won such a success on the stage. It will be given at the Castle Square next week by the John Craig Stock Company, and it promises to attract both those who know well the life at the college on the Charles and those who have heard much about it. The hero is a wealthy young student who, in spite of the means at his disposal, is involved in difficulties of love and friendship. For a time, things look black for him, but he is vindicated at last, and the play ends happily to the satisfaction of everybody. The stage settings will show pictorially the attractive scenes in and around Harvard, and there will be a cast selected under William Parke's direction to do the play full justice. In the title role Donald Meek will appear, and in the other roles will be included Mr. Friebus as Gerald Thorne, Mr. Evarts as "Bud" Hall, Mr. Hussell as Claxton Madden, Miss Cleveland as Marian Thorne, Miss Colcord as Mrs. Kenyon, Miss Tallman as Edith Sinclair and Miss Mary Young as Evelyn Kenyon.

Orpheum Theatre.

Manager William Morris certainly knows what variety means, for the bill which he has secured for the Orpheum theatre for the week of November 16 is not only strong but varied, it is headed by the Jow Boganny Troupe of English Pentomimsts. They are declared to be the funniest arcobatic act in the world. Frank Bush, the story teller ,has some new ones to spring and McMahon and Chappelle, with their Pullman Porter Maids, are added attraction. The Pullman Porter Maids give one of the most amusing acts on the vaudeville stage. An unusual act is that of Alice Techow and her trained cats. The cat is called the hardest animal to train, but Miss Techow's pets really seem to enjoy their stunts. Vasco, the Mad Musician, returns from his European Trip, and Clarice Vance is retained for a second week with her catchy Southern songs. Maud Hall and Carleton Macy are repeating their unusual sketch called "The Awakening," and Alexandra and Bertie give a remarkable aerial act. The Woods, that sunny English couple, are also on the bill, and the Morriscope has some new comedy pictures.

HOUSE WARMING.

The Quincy Day Nursery association will keep open house Saturday afternoon, Nov. 21st, from 2 until 5 o'clock at the new nursery on Garfield street . The public is cordially invited and an especially urgent invitation is extended to members of the association to take this time to become acquainted with the nursery and its workings.

This house warming will take the form of a donation party and anything in the way of vegetables, groceries, coal or money will be gratefully received. As dinner is the only regular meal given, there is little use for cereals. An East Milton car will take one nearly to the door. Get off at Brewers corner and the nursery is the first house to the right on Garfield street.

Today's Court.

Patrick Devine was fined $10 for drunkenness at Weymouth.

Patrick Cain was arraigned for assault at Quincy. Case continued until Nov 30 The defendant to pay the costs amounting to $2.10.

—Nantucket has the largest cranberry bog in the world. The vines were planted three years ago and this year yielded 1,000 barrels and enters the cranberry market of the country.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it falls to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Our Methods Save You Money

To every wage earner who runs a house, our proposition is a money saver. Some folks have the Boston buying fever, and think no one in Quincy can sell as cheaply as Boston stores.

Here's our proposition—Find any piece of furniture, any rug or carpet offered for sale in any store in Boston—give us the number or style of the article and the Boston price and we agree to sell you the identical article at from 5 to 20 per cent lower. Just try this proposition for your own information. We are saving money for thousands of families, we can do the same for you. Its volume of business we want and we are getting it too. We are satisfied with a pinch of profit—the rest is all for you.

Y M C A RELAY RACE

Good Time Made from Providence To Boston

The long distance relay race under the auspices of the Massachusetts—Rhode Island division of the Y. M. C. A., was run off on Saturday and proved to be a great success. The first of these races was that between New York and Chicago, when a message from the New York mayor was carried by 1000 Y. M. C. A. boys to the Mayor of the Windy City.

In the local race the message, encased in a silver tube was carried from President Fuller of the Providence Y. M. C. A., to President Johnson of the Hub association. There were 108 runners in the race and it was against time. The total distance covered was 54 miles, each runner going a half mile with the message.

The message was started from the steps of the Providence Y. M. C. A. building at 12 o'clock sharp and at exactly four minutes after five, was handed to President Johnson, at the Boston association's building on Boylston street. This shows that it took 5 hours and 4 minutes to cover the distance of 54 miles, a little over 10 miles an hour, which is pretty good going.

As the runners passed through the different towns large crowds were gathered to cheer them, and from the time the Quincy boys left Brockton, the Daily Ledger posted bulletins telling where the runners were. It took the local boys just an hour to relay the message from the Shoe City down. They left Brockton at 3.08, and passed through Holbrook at 3.30. At 3.52 they were at South Braintree and 3.58 they passed into Quincy. As the bulletin announced that the message was in Quincy the crowd became interested and watched for the runners. At 4.06 the message was passed to Hatfield, the last local runner, in front of the Auditorium, and at 4.08, from City Square the first Boston flyer started on his way, on the last lap of the big race.

The runners were taken to their respective starting points in automobiles, and as each man finished his half mile, he was pulled into a machine and bundled up so he wouldn't get cold. In this way no runner was forced to stand in the cold and wait for his turn to run. The following had their autos out for the use of the runners: Gould garage, Frank Burgess, W. H. Doble, J. A. Sparrow, and R. R. Baker.

PILGRIM MONUMENT.

The East Milton granite sheds of Maguire & O'Heron are to be a busy place this winter, for in them will be cut a large part of the stone which will be used to complete the Pilgrim monument at Provincetown. The firm has been at work all summer on the great granite shaft but work will now have to be discontinued for the winter on account of the frost and high winds.

At the present time the granite shaft, which is to rise 250 feet into the sky from the tip end of Cape Cod, stands more than 150 feet high and when work is stopped it is expected that 160 feet will have been completed. The monument is 27 feet square on the outside at the base and 23 feet square at the point where work is now progressing. The interior well is 17 feet square. Some of the work to be done in East Milton this winter will include carving of pieces of stone which are to be used in the bell tower at the top, and it is thought that by spring all the stone will be ready so that the contractors can have the outer wall topped out by August. It will then take two months to finish the interior stairway and some time to build the terrace, which it is intended to place around the monument at its base.

The shaft is of Deer Island granite and at its present height can be seen thirty miles away. In the interior Maguire & O'Heron are setting the stones given by different towns, cities and associations and about 100 have already been put in place at levels where they can easily be seen. Quincy and Milton contributed stones by popular subscription.

The monument itself will cost about $84,000 and that amount is available, but to build the terrace around the base about $5000 more will be needed. This terrace is deemed necessary in order to give a proper approach to the monument and to give the surroundings a finished appearance. The organization which has charge of the funds is the Pilgrim Memorial association, of which Captain J. Henry Sears of Provincetown is president, and Howard F. Hopkins of Brewster, treasurer.—Milton Record.

The new advertisement of George H. Wheeler in today's Ledger makes attractive reading for the ladies.

Runaway Boy Returns Home

"Jimmy" Thompson the nephew of Anthony J. Thompson, the well known restaurateur in City Square, who has been missing since Sept. 10, is back home again, tired and ill-clothed. Jimmy made his home with his uncle in Quincy and during the summer months looked after the soda fountain in the restaurant.

He disliked going to school and on the morning schools opened for the fall term he disappeared. A systematic search was made for him. Circulars with his photograph, offering a reward of $50, for him were sent all over the country by Chief of Police Burrell, but no word was ever received of his whereabouts.

The only clew ever obtained was from a conductor on a New York train who remembered seeing the boy on the 10.03 train for New York on the morning of Sept. 10. Mr. Thompson went personally to New York but was unable to find any trace of the boy.

Saturday night shortly after 10 o'clock Mr. Thompson received a telephone mesage from a friend at Springfield saying that Jimmy was there, having come from New York. Mr. Thompson gave orders to place the boy on a Boston train saying that he would meet it on its arrival in Boston.

Mr. Thompson met the train on its arival at 12.15 with an automobile. When the train pulled into the depot Jimmy was the first one to leave it and he ran to his uncle who hurried him to Quincy.

Jimmy said that he had been in New York, New Jersey and Philadelphia. He managed to get back to New York, Friday and immediately started toward home. He had money enough to reach Springfield where he looked up a friend of his uncle.

TO ADJUST WAGE SCALE.

John R. Graham of Bangor, Me., formerly of Quincy has been selected by the Boston & Northern street railway as its member of the board of arbitration to adjust the wage schedule of the conductors and motormen of that road. Frank E. Dunbar, a Lowell lawyer, has been selected as the company's representative of the Old Colony system board of arbitration. The employees of the Old Colony system have selected George R. Rose of Lynn. Mr. Rose will also represent the men of the Boston & Northern system.

Presentation To Fr. Grady

Rev. Fr. Henry T. Grady, pastor of St. Mary's church West Quincy, was tendered a reception and testimonial on Sunday evening by the clergy and parishioners of St. Rose's church, Chelsea, where for 18 years he served as a curate. Rev. Fr. Thomas F. Cusack pastor of St. Rose's church said it was out of appreciation and love for Fr. Grady that the reception was given.

The committee of arrangements was headed by Joseph M. Curley, Clerk of the Chelsea police court, and a pleasing musical program had been arranged. More than 1500 people and a large number of priests were present, when the exercises began. Fr. Grady was presented with a check for $1,367. Mr. Curley spoke briefly of Fr. Grady's work in Chelsea, paying great tribute to his untiring efforts at the time of the big Chelsea fire.

Fr. Cusack, the pastor, said it gave him great pleasure to welcome Fr. Grady back to Chelsea, even though it was only for an hour. He also spoke of the love, respect and admiration that the people of Chelsea had for their former curate.

Rev. Fr. Thomas A. Quinlan of St. Rose's church, for 10 years, a brother curate of Fr. Grady, was the next speaker and then Ex-Representative Thomas F. Driscoll presented Fr. Grady with the check. Fr. Grady responded with tears in his eyes and closed with the words: "May God's blessing be with you and abide with your homes forever."

The singing of "Auld Lang Syne," closed the programme, and then Fr. Grady held a reception.

Sheriff Henry Gets Appointment

Charles Henry, of Wellesley, a deputy sheriff, has been appointed County Probation officer for Norfolk and Plymouth counties, to fill the vacancy caused by the promotion of E. J. Mulready, as deputy to the new state commission on probation. The appointment was made Saturday by the judges of the superior court.

There were a large number of applicants for the positions from all over the two counties. The City of Quincy also had several candidates for the position. The new office carries a salary of $1500.

Today's Court.

Peter Lyons and Thomas Brennan were fined $15 each and Owen Doherty $5 for drunkenness at Quincy.

John Moore, Pasquale Deangelis, Vinzenzo Demarco and Edgar Hayden were arraigned for violation of the liquor law at Braintree. Cases continued until Saturday.

John A. Fraser was fined $5 for drunkeness at Weymouth.

The box office will be open at Music hall tonight for the sale of tickets for the Quincy Point Social club minstrel show.

Foot Ball And Other Sports

The Quincy High school football team will close a most successful season next Saturday, when they meet the strong Dorchester High team at the Dunbar avenue grounds, Dorchester. Dorchester is strong, but the local boys are going some just at present and should put up a good argument.

The local team has so far won 6 games, lost 5 and tied one. This is an excellent record when it is considered that the team played such elevens as Somerville, Malden, Everett, Rindge and Bridgewater Normal. They have scored 137 points against 111 for their opponents. A complete record of the games played will be printed after the close of the season.

Next Saturday the Howard & Bullough team of Pawtucket, R. I., comes to Quincy to try conclusions with the Fore River team. The local team are now the tailenders in the league, and if they do not start soon and win a game, they will stay where they are. They have a good team, but are out of condition. This was shown on Saturday when the Rovers scored 2 goals in the last 15 minutes.

The football season will practically wind up this week, and although there are a few important games on Thanksgiving Day, this is really the final week. The one great question that is before the followers of the game, is "Who is going to win the championship?" This question refers to the Boston leagues as well as to the big game between Harvard and Yale.

It is a question that can only be guessed at. Before the change in the rules, and the advent of the forward pass and the onside kick, one could almost dope out who the winner was going to be. But now this is almost impossible, because football is almost as uncertain as baseball. Of course where one team is openly superior in speed and teamwork to another it is easy to pick the winner.

The greatest interest of course centers on the annual game betwen the two greatest universities in the country, Harvard and Yale. The game will be played at New Haven, and the biggest crowd in the history of these yearly contests, is expected to witness the struggle. A great struggle it will be, too, for both teams are the best seen at either college for years.

WOLLASTON WHIST CLUB.

BUSINESS CHANGES.

Samuel Gannett, the veteran hay and grain dealer at Milton Lower Mills has retired from business. Fifty-four years ago he entered the employ of his brother, G. K. Gannett, who in 1854, had established a hay and grain business on the site so long occupied by the store, mill and elevator of Samuel Gannett. After serving four years as a clerk, Mr. Gannett became a partner under the firm name of G. K. Gannett & Co. Two years later he became sole proprietor and for the past forty-eight years has conducted an ever growing business.

The business has been bought by W. G. Swan, who has been employed for over thirty years by Mr. Gannett, and Josiah Babcock, Jr., who has had several years' experience as salesman in Boston.

Mr. Babcock is the son of Josiah Babcock of East Milton, and belongs to one of the oldest and best known families in that part of the town. His friends wish him success in his new venture.

NEW BOUNDARY POST.

The committee composed of Councilmen Alfred H. Gilson Richard R. Freeman and Alexander Falconer of Quincy and Selectmen Baxter and Duffy of Milton in their recent perambulating of the Milton and Quincy boundary and some difficulty in locating the stone which marks the place where Milton, Quincy and Randolph join. It was found, however, imbedded in the mud on the bank of the Blue Hill River. It bore the dates 1856 and 1861, and was very loose. The committee decided to build a new bound here, putting a granite post suitably inscribed upon a concrete base. A new stone will also be set on Randolph avenue, and the stones on Willard street and on Hillside street will be reset.

Hermanson and Bradbury are now tied for first place, with 301 points each, in the bowling contest at the Granite street alleys. The contest is a spirited one and is bringing out all the old "war horses."

Y. M. C. A. Ladies Night

The first regular ladies' night and exhibition of the season, was given in the gymnasium Saturday evening. There was a good attendance of spectators in the gallery and they all appeared to enjoy the evening's entertainment very much.

Special mention should be made regarding the excellent appearance and deportment of the class. Every man was dressed in the Quincy regulation uniform viz. red jersey and long grey trousers with red stripe. Apparently the fact of being well dressed had a good effect, for there was a noticeable lack of the "horse play" that has marred many former exhibitions.

The program consisted of calisthenics breathing exercises, wand drill apparatus, and athletics, showing that a young man could join at any time and find exercises that he could do.

The leaders corps performed on the high bar showing advanced work of a high order; the effects of several seasons in the gymnasium.

The games of fox and geese and all run afforded much amusement to the spectators as well as perspiration to the players.

A very pleasing number of the program was the presentation of badges to the young men who ran in the very successful Providence to Boston relay race in the afternoon. The twenty-three Quincy runners received their trophies at the hands of Miss Nettie Pote amid the enthusiastic cheers of their friends.

The relay race past the boys are now looking forward to the annual Thanksgiving road race, which is over a six mile course.

Busy Bee Gets Pennant

The corrected official figures of percentages of the Y. R. S. M. which have just been given out gives the Busy Bee, Capt. W. J. Coombs the highest per cent in the Cape Cat class with the Iris of Capt. F. F. Crane second position. A preliminary set of precentages was given out in September but there were a number of protests that remained unsettled. These have all now been settled and the penant awarded to the Busy Bee. The Busy Bee, Iris and Arawak each started in thirteen races and the Almira in fifteen races. The percentage of the first four boats was Busy Bee, 88.6, Iris, 81, Arawak, 75.6 and Almira, 63.3.

TEACHERS ENTERTAINED.

That Harry Brooks the popular principal of the Adams and Cranch schools, and his charming bride know how to entertain was proven by the reception tendered the teachers of the Adams school, Saturday, November fourteenth at their pretty home on Alexander street, Dorchester.

Two weeks ago the teachers of the Cranch school were received and all pronounced it a most delightful occasion. When Mr. Brooks does anything, he follows the old adage, "Anything that is worth doing at all, is worth doing well."

The reception lasted from 3 to 7 P. M., during which music and educational games were introduced followed by the daintest of suppers. Everyone felt sorry to realize that there is an end to all good times.

COOT STEW AT HINGHAM.

Members of Hose 2 of West Hingham and invited guests to the numstew at Hose House Two Wednesday stew at House Two house Wednesday evening. The occasion was signalized by the appearance of Ex-Capt. Alfred J. Clapp, now of Wollaston, Ex-Capt. Thomas, Hose 2 of Quincy, and Messrs. Hayden and McCloud of the Quincy Fire Depratment. All present voted Jack Scully an adept in the creation of a coot stew, and all did ample justice to it. Captain Loud presided and introduced the several speakers. Representatives of the various pieces of fire apparatus in Hingham were present.

EDITORIAL.

Congressman O'Connell who was slaughtered at the polls in Quincy at the recent election has his knife out for the Democrats of this city, according to a Boston paper, and promises to take an active part in the coming Municipal election.

Should Congressman O'Connell succeed in his attempt to have the whole of Ward Fve vote at the state election thrown out for irregularity, it will be interesting to know what bearing that will have on the election of a Representative in the Sixth district. Without the vote of this ward Representative Coombs would have been elected to succeed himself.

Quincy is fortunate in having two such men as William T. Shea and Eugene R. Stone as the leading party candidates for Mayor in the coming Municipal election. Although politically, they are enemies, socially they are the best of friends. Both are also members of the Granite City club. While outside the club rooms they leave no stone unturned that will further their cause, once inside the portals of the club room politics are forgotten; for here all meet on the same level.

This was illustrated Saturday evening when both were present. They sat down in the lunch room at the same table and enjoyed a pleasant chat over their coffee. One to have seen them there would have never suspected that they were striving for the same office.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

The rain Saturday night put a stop to grass and brush fires for a time at least.

The City Council Committee on Finance will meet tonight before the Council meeting.

Local politics should begin to warm up soon as the Municipal election is but three weeks off.

The Boston morning papers that formerly came over the road every morning to Quincy, now arrive by a special newspaper train that arrives in Quincy about 5 o'clock.

The Citizen's Gas Light Co., report that they are receiving many orders to pipe houses for lighting by gas. They have several gangs of men doing this work.

The body of George N. B. Thomas who died in Boston Nov. 14 will be brought to Quincy Tuesday for burial at Mt. Wollaston cemetery. He was a member of Co. H 59th regt., and was given a Grand Army burial. He was 65 years of age.

—"If you'll jest look on de things you has changed yoh min' about in de pas'," said Uncle Eben, "mebbe it'll help you to have a little toleration an' respeck foh de man dat ain' agreein' with you at de present moment."—Washington Star.

Dowager Empress Ruled China's Millions For Years

DEATH FORMALLY ANNOUNCED

Passed Away Soon After Emperor, Who Died Without Having Received Medical Care--Dominating and Magnetic Woman Violated Constitution of the Dynasty and Broke Sacred Customs

Pekin, Nov. 16.—Tsze Hsi An, Dowager Empress of China, the autocratic head of the government, which she directed without successful interference since 1861 and without protest since 1881, died at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The announcement of the dowager empress' death was official and followed closely upon the announcement that Kuang-Hsu, the emperor, had died Saturday at 5 o'clock in the afternoon but it is believed that the death of both the emperor and the dowager empress occurred a considerable time before that set down in the official statements.

An edict issued yesterday morning placed upon the throne Prince Pu Yi, the 3-year-old son of Prince Chun, the regent of the empire, in accordance with a promise given by the dowager empress soon after the marriage of Prince Chun in 1903. An edict issued on Friday made Pu-Yi heir presumptive.

The foreign legations were notified by the foreign board of the death of the emperor and the succession of Prince Pu-Yi. Troops have been in readiness for several days to quell any disorders that might arise on the death of Kuang-Hsu. Prince Chun, the regent, has ordered the viceroys and governors to take precautions for the continuation of the administration of the provinces as heretofore, and he has ordered a hundred days of mourning. The court will go into mourning for three years.

Deathbed observances of 3000 years ago marked the passing of the emperor and dowager empress. They died alone and unattended, although surrounded by circles of abject spectators, who remained a rod distant as, on account of the sacred persons of their majesties, they could not be approached. The emperor died as he had lived. For months he had refused to permit the services of foreign physicians and he died without having received medical care.

Tszi Hsi An, or "western empress," was born Nov. 17, 1834. She was the child of poor people who lived in Pekin. At an early age, following a common practice in China, she was sold as a slave by her parents on account of their poverty. She became the property of a famous general who, enchanted with her great beauty, adopted her and offered her as a present to the reigning emperor, Hsien-Feng. She so charmed the emperor that he made her his secondary wife, and on her bearing him a son, the future Emperor Tung-Chih, raised her to the first rank. On his death she became the regent of the empire, administering the national affairs with more vigor than any of her predecessors.

Her authority was complete over about 14,000 officials and over the welfare and lives of the vast majority of the inhabitants of China, who number close to 270,000,000.

The dowager empress was, in China, a "foreigner," being a Manchu, and was under the ban of Chinese patriots. She was dominating to the last degree and magnetic, and seemed to be all-seeing to her courtiers, who stood as if on eggs in her presence. She was theatrical in public, exhibiting the stage training she had acquired in private. Her officials did not hesitate on occasion to speak of her fierce temper, her Tartar character and to refer to her as a "terrible woman."

She was law unto herself. She violated the constitution of the dynasty that forbids a woman ruler, and broke the sacred customs given by the sages. She relentlessly ordered all betrothals and marriages in the imperial household, family and imperial court, and supervised scrupulously the conduct of individuals.

She entered the palace as an inferior concubine and authority came to her by virtue of fecundity. She became the mother of an emperor, and her political career began with the wholesale beheading of princes in 1861 by which she established her son on the throne. A slaughter of reformers and others took place thirty-seven years later. Two years after this she deliberately, upon advice, set about slaughtering all Christians and foreigners, giving 100,000 taels toward carrying on the work.

The greatest of her political acts was the coup d'etat of 1898. In this she showed her power, combining craftiness and courage. She stooped to the role of reformer than she might conquer, and when she had perfected the disguise she slaughtered the reformers and incarcerated the emperor, in whose name she acted, keeping him a prisoner for nearly two years. Following this she championed the Boxer war, which proved to be the greatest stain upon the empire that it has had under Manchus.

She was regarded by the progressives, educated abroad, as China's greatest enemy, because she was the greatest obstacle to advancement.

A CATHOLIC CONGRESS

More Than Sixty Clergymen of High Degree Gather at Chicago

Chicago, Nov. 16.—The greatest assemblage of Catholics of the United States since the plenary council in Baltimore, more than twenty years ago, gathered here. The occasion is the Catholic missionary congress of the United States and Canada.

More than sixty archbishops, bishops and abbots of the United States, Mexico and Canada are assembled here. Their head is the Most Rev. Diomede Falconio, apostolic delegate of the holy see at Washington. The leading spirit of the congress and the man in whose hands are all the arrangements is Archbishop Quigley, who is chairman of the board of governors of the Catholic Church Extension society. He is assisted by the Rev. Francis Clement Kelley, president of the society and permanent vice chairman of the congress.

The congress was made possible by virtue of the recent decree of Pope Pius taking the United States and Canada out of the ranks of missionary nations and placing them on the same footing as the nations hitherto recognized as distinctively Roman Catholic.

The aim of the congress is to arouse among the Roman Catholics of the United States a sense of the obligations imposed upon them by the new standing of America in the church. During the congress a message of congratulation will be sent to Pope Pius on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination. The papal jubilee will take place in Rome tomorrow.

CLAIMS THAT IT SILENCED PRESIDENT

Work of National Prosperity Association Completed

St. Louis, Nov. 16.—President Simmons of the National Prosperity association has made public a letter announcing the completion of its work, and claiming that the association had prevented President Roosevelt from sending to congress any more messages that had the appearance of attacking large corporations. Simmons' letter says in part:

"The object for which it was organized, viz., to hasten the return of prosperity, has been accomplished. Results far better than we had expected were obtained.

"Among the most important of these was the visit to President Roosevelt, which resulted in his not sending any more messages to congress or doing anything that had the appearance of being an attack upon railroads or other large corporations.

"Perhaps the most important thing is the change in public sentiment towards railroads and large corporations, especially in the south and southwest.

"'Muck-rakers' have ceased to show their heads, demagogues have quit talking and a very healthy state of mind prevails toward these industries, whereas previous to our work there was a vicious antagonism clearly evident among the masses of the people, most of whom held their views or opinions without giving the subject proper thought."

Father Kills His Son

Fort Plain, N. Y., Nov. 16.—Alfred Billington is a prisoner in the jail at Fonda, charged with the murder of his son, William, 30 years old, who died yesterday of stab wounds. Billington and his son lived on a farm near here. They came to Fort Plain and spent a night in revelry which terminated in a quarrel. The elder Billington says that his son attacked him first.

Suicide of Heney's Assailant

San Francisco, Nov. 16.—Morris Haas, who shot Assistant District Attorney Francis J. Heney in court Friday, committed suicide in the county jail by shooting through the head. The surgeons attending Heney announce that he is resting easily and that his pulse, temperature and respiration are practically normal.

Two Convicted of Murder

Auburn, Me., Nov. 16.—A verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree was returned by a jury against Pascal Nikolis and George Mone, charged with the death of James Scott on Nov. 15, 1907. The penalty for murder in the first degree is life imprisonment. Sentence has been deferred until next Wednesday.

Robbers Cleaned Out Postoffice

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 16.—Burglars plundered the South Bend postoffice of $18,653 in stamps and made such a successful escape that there is no clue on which to conduct a search for the thieves.

Roman Catholics Celebrate Jubilee of Pope Pius X

CEREMONY OF PAPAL MASS

Impressive Scene In St. Peter's as Pontiff Is Borne on Shoulders of Officers of the Noble Guard Above the Heads of Devout Followers, Followed by a Procession of Church Dignitaries--Blesses the People

Rome, Nov. 16.—With all the hereditary pomp and ceremonial of the Roman Catholic church his holiness Pope Pius X celebrated today the fiftieth anniversary of the ordination to the priesthood.

Devout believers thronged St. Peter's to hear the singing of the pontifical high mass by his holiness. All classes of Roman society were represented, from the high officials of the Vatican and those of the Quirinal who remain steadfast in the old faith to the street beggar and small farmer of the outlying country. The singing of mass in St. Peter's by a pope has been a ceremony of rare occurrence in recent years, for the pontiff's daily administrations take place in his private chapel in the Vatican. All the high dignitaries of the church were congregated in St. Peter's, with many visiting churchmen and laymen.

POPE PIUS X.

Great ceremonies attended the pope's entrance into the church. Seated in the sedia gastatoria, he was borne in on the shoulders of officers of the noble guard above the heads of the people, so that the congregation might behold the face of their spiritual leader. As the figure of the pontiff approached, giving the sign of benediction to the congregation, the people knelt to receive his blessing. The scene in the vast interior of the church was most impressive. In the procession that followed the pope were the college of cardinals, the archbishops, bishops, prelates of the pope's household, heads of religious communities, the Knights of Malta, the Knights of St. Gregory and members of other ancient and historic orders.

Pius X, Guiseppi Sarto, his holiness the pope, bishop of Rome and vicar of Jesus Christ, successor of St. Peter, prince of the apostles, supreme pontiff of the universal church, patriarch of the west, primate of Italy, archbishop and metropolitan of the Roman province and sovereign of the temporal dominions of the holy Roman church since Aug. 4, 1903, was born in Riese, Italy, June 2, 1835. He was educated at the diocesan seminary of Padua and ordained in 1858. He served as parish priest until 1875, when he became episcopal chancellor of the diocese of Treviso. From 1884 until 1893 he was bishop of Mantua, being elevated in the latter year to the sacred college with the title of patriarch of Venice. Five days after the death of Pope Leo XIII he was elected pope.

Kaiser Loses an Advisor

Berlin, Nov. 16.—Because of the tragic death of General Count Huelsen-Haeseler, chief of the German military cabinet, the emperor has telegraphed Chancellor Von Buelow that the audience arranged to take place at Kiel today must be deferred. The emperor will return to Berlin tomorrow. Huelsen-Haeseler was laughing and talking after dinner at Donaueschingen Saturday evening when he suddenly fell, stricken with apoplexy, in the emperor's presence, and died almost immediately.

Murderer Electrocuted

Albany, Nov. 16.—Andrea Del Vermo, an Italian, was executed today in Auburn prison for the murder of Anthony Page at Rome in June, 1906. Following the refusal of the court of appeals to grant a new trial, Del Vermo's counsel produced a new witness whose testimony was expected to establish a case of self-defense. The facts were placed before Governor Hughes who announced yesterday that he had found nothing in the evidence to warrant his interference.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

Vivace brightened up, too, and he took me out, rather than I him. I was in such a hurry to get away, for fear Potter might have come after me by a quick train and be looking somewhere, that I flew along with my bag and Vivace without waiting for a porter. I followed other people out of the station, with the intention of finding a cab and driving to the club where Mr. Brett was employed; but, though there were dozens of hansoms drawn up by the pavement, they had the air of being private ones. It did seem queer that so many people should have private hansoms waiting for them at this particular hour (it was half past 12), but the drivers, with their tall shiny hats, smart coats and bright, clever faces, the glitter of the harness, the newness of the cab linings and appointments all forbade any other thought. I wandered wistfully along the line, wondering if there were no public conveyances of any kind at the Grand Central besides the trams, which were as appalling as a procession of African lions. When I came to the end I caught the eye of a well groomed young man in a pale gray topcoat, looking down from his high seat at the back of a dark green hansom with great round portholes knocked in the sides, and it struck me that there was pity kindling in his glance. I snatched at the ray as if it had been that everlasting straw which always seems to be bobbing about when an author is drowning one of his characters.

"Do you think there is anybody who could drive me?" I inquired meekly.

"You bet, miss," said he. "I'm engaged myself or I'd be only too pleased, but you just speak to that other gentleman there," with an encouraging jerk of his sleek head toward the next vehicle. "He'll take you anywhere you want to go."

"Are you sure it isn't a private hansom?" I breathed up to him in a low, confidential voice, for the cab he indicated was even finer than his, and Stan doesn't look as smart on his coach on a coaching parade day in the park as did the gentleman I was recommended to address.

"Sure pop," said my friend, grinning, but not in a way to hurt my feelings,

Said there was a milk train due presently if I was mighty anxious.

so I thanked him, and we both bowed very politely, and the new man, who had heard after all, said that none of the hansoms were private. Anybody might have them who could pay, but I needn't be afraid; he wouldn't charge me too much.

When he asked where I wanted to go, after all I hadn't the courage to mention the club. The only other place I could think of was the Waldorf-Astoria, where Potter had said any stranger who liked could walk in and sit down. I told the man to drive me there, so he did, and only charged me 50 cents, which he hinted was a very special price. "We don't want you English young ladies to think bad of us," he explained, and I assured him there was no danger of that, if I could judge by myself.

They wouldn't let me go into the Turkish room—which I remembered very well—with Vivace, so I had to give him up to be fed and taken care of, and I was obliged to part with my bag too. Then I wrote a note to Mr. Brett, just a few lines, saying that I was alone in New York, in a little difficulty, and, remembering his kind offer, I ventured to ask if he would come to the Turkish room at the Waldorf-Astoria to help me with advice.

A messenger took the letter—such an aggressively brisk child I was sure he wouldn't waste a second on the way—and as soon as he had gone I was beset with fears lest Mr. Brett should have left New York or lest, if still in town, he might be surprised or shocked at my taking him at his word.

I was past being hungry now, but my head ached and I felt dull and stupid. There was hardly any one in the Turkish room, for all the world of the Waldorf-Astoria was lunching. I sat watching the door, watching the door until I seemed to have been in that place doing that one thing and nothing else for years. My eyelids would keep dropping and my thoughts slipping away as if they flowed past me on a slow stream. I caught them back again and again, but at last I forgot and let them go.

The next thing I knew I was raising my head with a jerk and opening my eyes to look straight into those of Mr. Brett. It was he, there was no doubt of that, and yet he was different. In my dreamy state I couldn't think how for an instant, but as I came to myself I saw it was all a question of dress. He had perhaps been making money in journalism, for he was no longer good looking in spite of his clothes. He had the most excellent gray flannels or something of the sort, just the right kind of collar (I know it must be right, for Stan always wears it) and a waistcoat Potter himself might have envied. I didn't exactly think of these things then, but I must have unconsciously taken them all in in a flash, for I knew them afterward.

By the time the flash had passed we were shaking hands, and he was saying in his nice voice how awfully sorry he was to have kept me waiting. He had been at the club, but owing to a stupid mistake there had been some delay in his getting my letter.

I was even more pleased to see him than I had thought I was going to be. I felt as if I had known him all my life, and he looked so strong and handsome and dependable that I couldn't bear to take my eyes off his face lest I should wake up and find him gone—because I'd been dreaming him.

Reservoir Completed

Now that the big reservoir at Quincy Point is practically completed, it may be interesting to those who are not acquainted with the facts, to know a few of the interesting details concerning this reservoir.

When the authorities at the Fore River found that it was necessary to build a reservoir to supply the yard with water, bids were called for at once. W. E. Loud & Son of West Quincy were one of the first firms to send in a bid. Their bid was the lowest and at the same time the best, and the contract was awarded them. This was about the first of September and since then the work has been rushed steadily.

It was indeed a great job to shape out the huge basin as planned, but in a marvellously short period of time, this was done, and inside of a month after ground was broken, the reservoir began to assume a tangible shape. The work reflects great credit upon the contractors, and was under the personal direction of Mr. Loud all the time.

The reservoir is bounded by Howard and South streets, the back being parallel to Des Moines road. There is an eight foot fence enclosing the whole basin. On the top of the fence are two strands of barbed wire which go completely around the reservoir. This will keep intruders from gaining access to the basin and keep the water free from sticks and other debris.

The top of the embankment is at grade 19 feet 5 inches and the bottom at grade 12 feet. Down through the centre of the basin there is a channel 30 feet wide. This is at grade 10 feet, which means 10 feet above mean low water. In other words the channel will be at a grade 2 feet lower than the general surface of the basin, which means that it will be two feet deep.

The whole thing is about 450 feet in length, and 200 feet in breadth. It is calculated to have a normal capacity of 3,000,000 gallons of water. This sounds pretty large at first, but when one considers the number of men in the yard, the number of engines, etc., that need water, it becomes pretty small. It will be necessary to keep the reservoir full all the time in order to supply the demand.

The method of sending the water from the reservoir to the different parts of the yard is very unique and interesting. At the Howard street end, there is located what is known as a screen house. In this house there will be a series of screens or nets for the purpose of removing all solid matter that may get into the water, such as weeds, chips, etc.

From the screen house, an 8-inch cast iron pipe line will convey the water by gravity to the northeast corner of the forge shop. At this point in its journey to the yard, the water is lifted by means of steam pumps to the pipes that are to carry it to the different parts of the yard. The pipes at the corner of the forge are at a lower grade than the surface of the reservoir and hence the water simply runs down hill. It is raised to a higher grade by the pumps and gravity carries it about the yard.

It is estimated that it will supply the demands of the whole yard from the first of November till the first of May in each year, and probably two fifths of the yard the remainder of the year.

It is expected that the plant will be working about the first of December, supplying water for drinking as well as for other purposes. Work has stopped waiting for the water to fill in, and it is rapidly getting to look like a large lake.

W. E. Loud & Son deserve great credit for the work, for it was a feat to be proud of, and it was done in record time. There was not a let up from the first day and work was rushed continually, showing the enterprise and business ability of the contractors.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

An important meeting of the City Council will be held tonight.

Miss Rena Croteau of Brookville is the guest of Miss Alma B. Reed of South Quincy.

The annual visitation to Wollaston Masonic lodge announced for tomorrow evening has been changed to Tuesday evening Nov. 24.

Nomination papers were taken out this morning by Charles W. Hanscom for Socialist candidates for Mayor and five Councilman at Large.

Good progress is being made on the new Coddington school building. The plastering is on and men are now at work putting on the finishings.

The Ladies' Aid society connected with the Point church, meets Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. H. I. Smith, on Baxter avenue.

The Knights and Ladies of Honor are going to have on Wednesday night one of those nice sociable times where supper will be served and games played.

Miss Bertha E. Reed left this morning for Trull hospital, Biddeford, Maine, to assume her studies, after spending three days with her family at 7 Liberty square.

The proposition of Henry L. Kincaide & Co. is a money saver. Every wage earner is therefore interested as their prices are considerably lower than those quoted by Boston houses.

Mrs. James Melville's Sunday school class of boys has presented the church at the Point with a set of five bible maps of Palestine, the Holy Land, Jerusalem, Paul's journey and the world.

The members of the National Sportsman club of West Quincy are mourning the loss of their mascot, a 6-foot black snake, which died recently. The "Mascot" was captured last June by one of the members of the club in the Blue Hill reservation, and was always a pet of the members up to the time of his death.

The Quincy Point Social club holds its dress rehearsal tonight for the big minstrel show which is to be held tomorrow night and Wednesday night. A big chorus of 80 voices has been trained under "Dom" Keegan, and under the personal direction of this wonderful instructor the show will be produced. There will be dancing after the performance on Wednesday evening. Don't fail to see the greatest show ever produced in Quincy.

Three representatives of the Laymen's mission in Boston spoke to Quincy audiences on Sunday. In the morning. B. Sleman, Jr., of Washington spoke in the Wollaston Congregational church. At St. Chrysostom's church in the afternoon, Rev. C. H. Patton, one of the secretaries of the American board of missions, spoke to a large congregation. Rev. D. W. Downs, for 35 years a missionary in India, preached in the Bethany Congregational church in the evening.

Fore Rivers Play tie Game

The undefeated Fall River Rovers came to Quincy on Saturday to play the soccer team of the Fore River. These two teams always play a close game and Saturday's contest was no exception. In the first game of the season, their game ended in a draw, and on Saturday the result was the same, each side having two goals to its credit.

The game started off with a rush and after the first few minutes of play everyone knew that a hot contest was in store. The ball was booted and passed up and down the field, some excellent team work being shown. The play was fast and exciting, but there was no unnecessary roughness.

The local team was the first to score and they broke the ice after about ten minutes play. The ball was taken down the field on a series of passes and finally landed in front of the goal. From here Holiday made a skillful shot, the pigskin was lodged safely in the net, and Fore River was in the lead 1-0.

This score encouraged the home team to get more and made the Rovers determined to stop them. However the ball was again, by superior team work, taken to within striking distance of the goal by the Fore River forwards and Carruthers on a well-placed kick sent the ball through just out of the reach of the goal tender.

By the way, this Moorehead, the Rovers' goal is a well known professional baseball player, having played short stop for the New Bedford team of the New England League. Besides he is one of the best goals in the league only a dozen goals having been made against him this season. Fore River has made about seven of this dozen.

The first half ended with Fore River leading by the score of 2-0, and the Rovers had a hard uphill game before them. They were there with the goods, though, in the second half and monopolized the scoring in this period. The play continued fast and close, and for 20 minutes no scoring was done.

The Rovers' chance came on a corner kick with only 15 minutes to play. The ball was kicked from the corner, and Greenwood in the mixup, in front of the goal, managed to send the ball into the cage by bouncing it off his head. This made the score 2-1, and, a tie and perhaps victory was in sight for the visitors.

At this point the players were aroused to a high pitch of excitement and the play was furious. Two players Melville and Wilder became engaged in a little side bout and furnished some excitement for a few minutes. They had a lively mixup for a while and the referee was forced to stop them, and put both out of the game. The game went on with 10 men on a side.

Just after this a Fore River man fouled a Rover right in front of the Fore River goal and the visitors had a free kick. Here was a chance to tie the score, and the Rovers didn't let the chance get away. The goal tender has about one chance in ten of blocking such a kick and the ball was sent right through the goal that made the score 2-2.

The scoring ended here, the Rovers playing to hold the local team and the Fore Rivers strving to get the winning goal. It was of no avail, like a stonewall, and the referee blew like a stonewall, and the refree blew his whistle, the game ending in a draw.

Malcolm, Temple and Holiday played a fast game for Fore River, while the work of Greenwood, Bagley and Geo. Gauthier was the feature of the Rovers' play.

The Rovers lead the league and have yet to lose a game. As they have a fast, well-balanced team, it looks as if they would go through the season without a defeat.

DISHONESTY AND GREED

Disclosed by Commission Investigating Hub's Muncipal Affairs

Boston, Nov. 16.—"A lamentable picture of dishonesty and greed is disclosed," reports the finance commission in a report submitted to the mayor of its investigation of the purchasing of coal by the city, the contracts for flagging, the stone crusher contracts and the purchase of Fourth of July prizes. The report further alleges that "absolute disregard of the city's interests was shown by a mayor, members of the board of aldermen, the common council, a former state senator and a member of the house of representatives."

The complaint is especially against the absence of competitive bids for contracts covering purchases over $2000, as prescribed by law. During the year 1907 the commission finds that but 52 percent of such bids were advertised.

The commission recommends more general observance of the statute; an amendment making the limit above which contracts must be advertised at $1000; more general solicitaton of competitive bids in cases under $1000, and an amendment providing a penalty for violation of the statute "sufficient to cause a strict observance of the law on the part of members of the city council."

A CLEAN SWEEP BY THE LIBERALS

Conservatives Make Poor Showing In Cuban Elections

Havana, Nov. 16.—Practically complete returns of the election show that the Liberal victory was even more decisive than supposed Saturday night. Official returns from 1360 of a total of 1498 polling places show that General Gomez received 183,823 votes for president, against 118,329 for General Menocal, the Conservative candidate The Liberals carried every province in the island. Havana province went Liberal by 25,000 and the city by 13,000.

The Liberal majorities in the other provinces were approximately as follows: Oriente, 13,500; Santa Clara, 11,000; Camaguey, 1200; Pinar del Rio 7500, Matanzas, 8000.

The silent vote of about 182,000 in the August elections, of which the Conservatives confidently expected to receive the great majority, went overwhelmingly Liberal. The Liberal gains from this source were fully three times that of the Conservatives. The predictions that the combined Liberal factions, the Miguelistas and Zayistas would divide at the polls, were not fulfilled, the vote going solidly for Gomez and Zayas, the latter the vice presidential candidate.

The victory of Gomez is generally interpreted as a verdict of the unqualified popular approval of the party of the revolution of 1906. The Liberals constitute the entire new senate, with the exception of two or three Conservatives whose terms expire in 1910. The Liberals will control the house in the proportion of two to one. There is no indication that any Conservatives will protest against the result of the elections.

Dentist Under Lock and Key

Richmond, Me., Nov. 16.—A. M. Bates is confined in the police station, charged with performing an operation upon Miss Winnie Kincaid, whose death occurred late Saturday night. Miss Kincaid was attended by Dr. C. W. Price, who, when he learned the grl's condition, notified Trial Justice Spaulding. The girl is said to have made a statement shortly before her death to Sapulding in which she implicated Bates. Bates is 38 years old and unmarried. In addition to practicing dentistry, he is also a veterinarian, a house painter and holds a government license as a towboat captain.

Special Session to Discuss Tariff

Washington, Nov. 16.—That a special session of the Sixty-first congress will be called soon after March 4 to take up tariff revision became known positively when President-elect Taft, after spending the day at the White House as the guest of President Roosevelt, said that he intended to call the special session as soon after his inauguration as would be reasonable. Taft left last night for Cincinnati, where he was summoned on matters of family importance. He assured the newspaper men that they were in no manner connected with politics.

Prominent Clergyman Killed

New Haven, Nov. 16.—Rev. Dr. G. B. Morgan, rector of Christ's Episcopal church, and one of the most prominent clergymen in the diocese of Connecticut, was struck and fatally injured by an automobile in front of his church. The car was driven by Samuel Campbell. Morgan's skull was fractured and he sustained internal injuries. Morgan was 60 years old. Campbell and Carl M. Holm, who was with him and who was taken into custody with him after the accident, were both released by Coroner Mix pending a formal verdict.

Safe Blowers at Fitchburg

Fitchburg, Mass., Nov. 16.—Safe blowers made two attempts at robbery here yesterday and succeeded in one Nitro-glycerine failed to open the safe in the crockery store of Samuel Williams, Jr., while the safe in the adjoining store of the Goodnow Clothing company was blown open and $100 in money secured. There is no clue to the identity of the cracksmen.

AN OPEN LETTER FROM FORAKER

Won't Engage In "Unseemly Scramble" For Senate Seat

UP TO LEGISLATURE OF OHIO

Standard Oil Lawyer Who Personally Employed the Senator When Confronted by "Very Serious and Difficult" Litigation Tells What Led Him to Take That Action--Services Critic zed After Four Years

Cincinnati, Nov. 16.—Putting up to the legislature the question of his successor, and saying that he does not intend to engage in "any unseemly scramble" to be seated again in the national senate, United States Senator Foraker revives the matter of his previous connection with the Standard Oil company by introducing certain correspondence to offset the charges of his connivance with that trust presented against him during the recent election campaign.

He declares in an open letter that he has striven under all circumstances to serve his state and country faithfully and efficiently and "whether right or wrong," never more so than in regard to those questions in connection with which he has been criticised.

The principal document submitted on this occasion by Foraker is a letter written to him by Virgil P. Kline, Standard Oil lawyer, of Cleveland, who personally employed Foraker in Standard Oil cases before the state courts and who had been asked by the senator to state in writing to him the scope of that employment and the services rendered, with the understanding that he should be free to make Kline's communication public if occasion should seem to require it.

Writing under the date of Oct. 6 last, Kline explained that at the time he hired Foraker, in December, 1898, the Standard Oil company was confronted by "very serious and difficult" litigation in the supreme court of the state of Ohio. The attorney general had charged it with violating the court order to withdraw from the trust agreement and had instituted a proceeding in contempt, while the court had been asked to revoke the charters of several constituent companies of the Standard Oil trust, appoint receivers over their property and dissolve them.

Kline Was Worried,

Many millions of dollars were involved. "It was in the midst of these difficult cases," wrote Kline, "with the very serious consequences incident to any adverse decision," that, with the approval of his client, he turned to Senator Foraker for assistance and advice. "Well knowing your ability as an attorney," he penned to Foraker, "and the respect the lawyers and courts had for you throughout the state, I sought your services."

Mr. Kline states that the senator's employment by the Standard Oil extended for more than two years; that he kept abreast of every phase of the litigation all the time. "There never was a particle of effort on our part," he continues, "to conceal your relation to the interests we represented."

Mr. Kline assures Foraker that his efforts "greatly contributed to the success of the litigation and the preservation of the property by its owners," for the proceedings against Standard Old were eventually dismissed by the supreme court.

According to Kline, when Foraker ceased his connection with the Standard Oil company as associate counsel, about the first of January, 1901, "there was no intimation from any source whatever of criticism or attack on the part of the federal government. That did not come for more than four years afterward," adds Kline.

So far as he knows, and he has been intimately in touch with the litigation and troubles of the Standard Oil company for twenty years, and is still, nothing has ever been asked of or accepted by Foraker inconsistent with his public duties. So far as he knows, too, the senator has had no connection whatever with the company as an attorney or otherwise for more than seven years.

The other letter offered by Foraker is from M. F. Elliott of New York, who states that he was associated with Kline in the cases referred to and that he knows Kline's statements are true. Senator Foraker declares that these two letters, added to his former statement, should, in his opinion, satisfy any fair-minded man.

Katherine Ekins Not Engaged

Washington, Nov. 16.—Senator Stephen B. Elkins last night made the emphatic announcement that no engagement exists between his daughter, Miss Katherine Elkins, and Duke de Abruzzi of the Italian navy. The statement was made with the knowledge and consent of Miss Elkins, who desired that the statement should be given to the public, which has manifested so great an interest in the matter.

Providence-Boston Relay Race

Boston, Nov. 16.—A message, encased in a silver tube, was brought over the road from Providence to this city, a distance of fifty-four miles by 115 relay runners, all members of the Young Men's Christian associations of the two cities, as well as Taunton, Brockton and Quincy, the distance being covered in five hours and four minutes.

IN JOINT CONVENTION

Opening Meeting at Pittsburg Today of Civic Associations

Pittsburg Nov. 16.—Today begins the big joint convention here of the American Civic association and the National Municipal league, preparations for which have been made for several months. The convention, which will last four days, will be a notable gathering of many of the most distinguished men of the nation. The sessions of the convention will be held in Carnegie Music hall.

J. J. HILL.

Prominent among the speakers who will address the convention will be James J. Hill, the railroad man and financier. He will address the delegates Tuesday on the "Natural Resources of the Country," elaborating his belief, expressed some months ago, that the country is exhausing its natural resources at too rapid a rate. Other speakers who will touch on this topic are Secretary of State Root and John Mitchell.

On Thursday President McCrea of the Pennsylvania railroad will deliver an address on "The Pennsylvania Railroad and the Smoke Nuisance," and on the same day G. R. Taylor will speak on "The Illinois Central and the Smoke Nuisance." The purpose of these two addresses is to give publicity to the responses made by the railroads to the popular demand for the abatement of the smoke nuisance.

WORKERS FROM FAR OFF LANDS

Tell People of Greater Boston What Missions Have Done

Boston, Nov. 16.—With the object of exciting more active interest of Christian people in missionary problems now confronting the religious world in foreign fields, the Laymen's Missionary conference was opened in Boston Sunday. During the next nine days noted missionaries from all parts of the world, with other prominent denominational workers, will fill the pulpits of the churches of Greater Boston, lecture and hold conferences in many halls of the city, and in other ways strive to arouse a greater interest and support for foreign missionary work.

Over 420 churches, including the Baptist, Congregational, Episcopal, Methodist and Presbyterian denominations, are interested in the conference. Unlike previous conferences, the meetings are all for men and only men will take part or have to do with the management of the undertaking, the program for which has already cost over $10,000.

One hundred pulpits were supplied yesterday. Morning and evening services were held at all the churches included in the conference, among the speakers being well known missionaries from China, Japan, India, Turkey, Korea and other places.

The assembling of such prominent national Christian workers is expected to give the conference a far-reaching influence and to remedy in part the lack of American and native Christian workers in missionary fields and the inadequate funds for carrying on the work.

Tunnel Opened to Traffic

Providence, Nov. 16.—The new East Side tunnel, just completed by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company, at a cost of $2,000,000, as a connecting link between the Union station and the company's lines in East Providence, was opened yesterday to passenger travel. There were no formal opening exercises.

Sudden Death In Church

Woburn, Mass., Nov. 16.—Edward D. Hayden, vice president and secretary of the Boston and Albany railroad and a former member of congress during the forty-ninth and fiftieth sessions, died of apoplexy in his church pew Sunday at the Woburn Unitarian church. He was born in Cambridge, Mass., in 1823.

Fire Loss of 250,000

Jeffersonville, Ind., Nov. 16.—Five buildings of the Indiana state reformatory and nearly the entire plant of the Indiana Manufacturing company were destroyed by fire. The damage will total about $250,000. There were no fatalities, the 1300 inmates of the reformatory remaining locked in their cells.

The Weather Forecast

Almanac, Tuesday, Nov. 17.
Sun rises—6:38; sets—4:21.
Moon rises—12:27 a. m.

CONVINCING FACTS.

There is no use denying the fact that Johnson Bros., are surely giving genuine bargains in food values. It will be hard indeed to find a store that is giving such excellent quality at such low prices.

Everything the best that money can buy, is their standard; and their customers know from past dealings that that is absolutely true. Now with our discount system, it is still more of an inducement to trade with us, and you will be surprised to find how fast your discount checks will count up.

We are displaying every day a choice assortment of Cut Meats, with the prices marked in plain figures, so that every one can see what they are paying for or we will cut it to your order, whichever you prefer.

We are pleased that so many of our customers have helped us to make this system a success, for it means a whole lot to them as well as to us. We do not think that any one objects to carrying home a purchase especially when they are paid to do so, which we are doing, with our discount check system.

We are receiving new seasonable goods every day, and it will be to your interest to visit our store and do business with us.

Beef, Lamb and Fresh Pork are all lower and we have a choice lot of Fresh Killed Chicken and Fowl constantly on hand, direct from William A. Drake of Braintree.

A tempting line of New Canned Goods, packed expressly for us.

An excellent stock of New Cereals, Buckwheat, Pan Cake Flour, and all the leading brands of Bread and Pastry Flour.

All kinds of Bottled Goods, Jellies, Jams, Olives and Pickles.

Fresh Hot House Lettuce, Choice Celery, Radishes, Cucumbers, and Fruits of all kinds.

Remember, that every day is BARGAIN day at Johnson Bros., so keep in the road, for all roads lead to our store.

And, remember that we give you 5 per cent discount on all cash purchases, if you take the purchase home, or 2 per cent discount when you ask us to deliver it.

Yours for Quality,

JOHNSON BROS., City Square, Quincy.

You will find that RALSTON SHOES are in a class by themselves. Some Shoes are almost as stylish, to be sure, but there are none quite so comfortable. Ralston Shoes do not even require "breaking in;" for they are foot-moulded while in process of manufacture. If you will drop in and see us, we will explain how the famous Ralston foot print lasts provide for absolute comfort as well as for irreproachable style. Just say "show me."

Street Railway Hearing

The Railroad Commissioners gave a hearing this morning on the petition of the Old Colony street railway for approval of the location granted by the City Council to connect its tracks on Quincy avenue with those of the Fore River Ship Building Co.

Robert S. Goff appeared for the railway company and stated that the order had been passed by the Quincy City Council. That the location was on a state highway and that the approval of the Highway Commission had been obtained.

About 400 feet of track was to be laid to connect the two lines. The object was to run cars to the Fore River yard to accommodate the workmen.

Mr. Hall, one of the commissioners believed some agreement should be made so that the location should not be used to transport freight.

H. Marr, representing the workmen at the yard, went into the history of the location.

He said that it would accommodate about 1000 workmen. The location over Chubbuck street, Des Moines road and Howard street was what the workmen wanted as it would accommodate more of the workmen.

As they were unable to get that line he favored the approval of this location.

There was no opposition to granting the approval and the hearing was closed.

The finding of the Railroad Commissioners is expected very soon.

STOCK ISSUE APPROVED.

The Railroad Commissioners have approved an issue of 3727 additional shares of six per cent. cumulative preferred capital stock of the Old Colony Street Railway Company. The issue is to be offered to the stockholders of the company at $110 per share, the price fixed by the stockholders. This is the first instance in which the board has approved an issue at the price fixed by the stockholders under the law passed this year.

PILES CURED IN 6 TO 14 DAYS.
PAZO OINTMENT is guaranteed to cure any case of Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles in 6 to 14 days or money refunded. 50c.

CITY COUNCIL MEETING

Lincoln School Order Again Held Up

A regular meeting of the City Council was held Monday evening. Although the meeting was over at 9 o'clock a large amount of business was transacted. The only thing that marked the meeting was a debate on an order laying out and accepting Nightingale avenue as a public way. Councilman Abele objected to the order and offered a minority report that the petitioners be given leave to withdraw. His ground for objection to the order was that the street was not in condition to accept as provided by the ordinance.

The order appropriating $1,200 for a four room addition to the Lincoln school building also struck a snag when the question was raised as to the clause in the order that provided the architect should not receive any fees if the building was not built inside or for the amount mentioned.

Councilman Hogan was the only absent member.

UNITED STATES JURORS.

Venires were received for the drawing of United States jurors. The Mayor, City Clerk and Councilman Curtis drew the following for United States grand jurors, Newman A. Savage, John Canty and John P. Granahan. Also the following for United States petty jurors. Daniel McGrath, Elwin R. Thorpe, Arthur A. Tripp, Charles Hall and William H. Fuge.

A communication was received from the Mayor appointing James Robbie, Herbert A. Newton, E. Frank Mitchell, Eben W. Sheppard and Carl R. Sheppard as weighers of coal and measurers of wood. Confirmed.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from John A. Boyd, camp Spanish War Veterans asking that a lot of land be set apart at Mt. Wollaston cemetery as a burial lot for sailors and soldiers who served in the war with Spain. Referred to Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

MORE MONEY WANTED.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the Chief of Police stating that the appropriation for Special Police was used up and asking for an additional appropriation. Referred to Finance Committee.

A petition was received for the acceptance of Hill street. Referred to Committee on Streets.

The Committee on Streets reported an order for a public hearing Dec. 7 on petitions of the Electric Light Co., and Telephone Co. for a location for poles and for attachments. Adopted.

The Committee on Streets reported an order for a public hearing Dec. 21, on the acceptance of East Elm avenue. Adopted.

NIGHTINGALE AVENUE.

Councilman Abele offered a minority report that the petitioners be given leave to withdraw.

In support of his report Councilman Abele said this street involves an appropriation of $1,230 while under the ordinance we have no right to accept it. He did not think the council had any right to thus appropriate money.

Councilman Whiton asked the City Solicitor if he thought the order to be legal.

City Solicitor McAnarney said that the order appeared to be drawn legally. If the gentleman means as to the condition of the street he would say if the street was in practically the condition called for by the ordinance he would say yes.

Councilman Broughton asked the Commissioner if there was a street in Quincy he had repaired this year that came up to the ordinance.

Commissioner Bainbridge said there were several.

Councilman Ferguson,—If any street should be accepted this should be. It was the main thoroughfare to the granite district.

Councilman Falconer said that this street should be accepted. It was laid out long before the ordinance was made. There were many stone plants there and it was a street much used.

Councilman Bishop hoped the minority report would not be accepted. The abutters paid $2000 a year in taxes and they only ask for a street to enable them to carry on their business.

Councilman Whiton was inclined to favor this street if it did not come up to the ordinance as it was to benefit an industry.

Councilman Teasdale hoped the order would be passed. Their request was a mild one. All they ask is to have the street made passable.

The minority report was rejected. The report of the committee was accepted and the order referred to the Committee on Finance.

TRANSFERS.

The Finance Committee reported an order transferring $250 from the appropriation for "Fuel" to the appropriation for "Transportation" of the school department. Order adopted.

The Finance Committee reported an order transferring $120 from "Purchase of hose" and $49 from appropriation for "Horses" of the fire department to the appropriation for "Miscellaneous." Order adopted.

LINCOLN SCHOOL.

The Finance Committee reported ought to pass on the order appropriating $12,000 for an addition to the Lincoln school.

Councilman Whiton asked if the architect has given his agreement to the clause that he should not receive any fee if not built for the amount stated.

Councilman Bryant replied that was up to the Executive.

In reply to a question the City Solicitor said that it would be better to have the architect give his consent to the clause.

Upon motion of Councilman Bryant the order was then laid on the table.

LOAN ORDER.

The Finance Committee reported ought to pass on the loan order for $22,200.

Councilman Bryant moved the order be recommitted and the Council take a recess of five minutes. Voted.

On reassembling the Finance committee reported an amendment to the order striking out the amount $12,000 which the order provided for the Lincoln school. Amendment accepted.

Councilman Broughton moved to further amend by striking out the amounts provided for Gove, Sea and Smith street and Broadway.

Motion lost. The order was then passed to be ordained.

Councilman Gilson presented the report of the special committee appointed to perambulate the Milton and Quincy boundary line. The report was accepted and referred to the Executive.

Councilman Cherrington offered an order authorizing the Mayor to lease the old Quincy school building at Atlantic upon such terms as he may deem best for the interest of the city, for a term of three years. Adopted.

Councilman Whiton offered an order calling the Municipal election for Dec. 1. Adopted.

TAX REFUND.

Councilman Bryant offered an order refunding James J. Noughton $28 for tax title on estate of Elvia M. Smith illegally sold in 1903. Referred to Finance Committee.

NEW STEAMER WANTED.

Councilman Whiton offered an order appropriating $5,000 for a new steamer for the Central Fire Station. Referred to Committee on Fire department.

Councilman Ferguson offered an order granting a license to run two hackney carriages to George Morrissey. Adopted.

AGREEMENT DESIRED.

Councilman Bryant offered an order requesting the Mayor to secure from Charles A. Brigham the architect for the addition to the Lincoln school his agreement in writing not to ask for any fees if the addition was not built for $12,000. Adopted.

Councilman Whiton offered an order for a light on Willard street. Referred to Executive.

Councilman Bean offered an order for a light on Newcomb place. Referred to Executive.

Adjourned at 9 o'clock until Dec. 7.

GRANITE SHIPMENTS.

Returns from the two granite shipping terminals for the month of October show that the total shipment of rough and finished granite that month amounted to 12,147,186 pounds. This amount shows quite an increase over the previous month. Of the total amount shipped Quincy Adams forwarded 6,788,933 pounds and West Quincy 5,358,253 pounds. The shipments for the month of November up to the present time have been quite large and the indications are that the total for the month of November will greatly exceed that of October.

TWO MEN FOUND DEAD

Little Known About Either

The police department has two sudden deaths on its hands for investigation. One is a man named Mahoney employed as a machinist at the Fore River. The second is James Ryan employed by Henry E. Hardwick as a coachman.

Both deaths are due to natural causes. But little however is known of either man.

Mahoney who is apparently about 65 years of age boarded at 475 South street. Shortly after 9 o'clock Monday night he and his room mate retired for the night.

Suddenly Mahoney sat up in bed and striking his breast with his hand pointed to his mouth, indicating that he was speechless and wanted something to drink.

The room mate aroused others in the house who gave Mahoney whiskey in their efforts to revive him.

They were unsuccessful however and he died in a few minutes. Medical Examiner Jones was called and said death was due to heart trouble.

None of the boarders, and not even his room mate knew his first name as he was always addressed as Mahoney.

But little is known of him at the Fore River where he was employed as a machinist.

He had been employed by Henry E. Hardwick for about 3 years. He was about Monday evening apparently as well as usual. He slept in the stable and a light was seen in his room as late as 9 o'clock Monday night.

This morning it was noticed by the family that the furnace had not been taken care of.

The bell connecting Ryan's room with the house was rung but no response was received.

Charles H. Hardwick and Robert Hardwick started to investigate. They found the door of the room locked with the key inside.

A ladder was then secured and Robert entered the room by a window.

Ryan was found in bed undressed and apparently dead. A physician was called and Medical Examiner Jones notified who said that Ryan had probably died about 5 o'clock from heart trouble.

Ryan was a man that said but little about himself and but little is known of him. It is known that he received letters post marked Providence and it is believed that he had a wife there although he passed in Quincy as an unmarried man.

Among his effects was a policy issued by the Boston Mutual Life Insurance Co. issued in 1907 and made payable to Thomas F. Ryan. But one payment had been made on his policy.

Thomas F. Ryan is believed to be a brother and the police are trying to locate him through the office of the insurance company.

Ryan was apparently about 40 years of age.

EDITORIAL.

Just about this time look out for rumors of a rise in the price of gobblers.

Now that the demand for eggs is increasing the hens will probably stop laying.

It is about this season of the year that orders increasing salaries begin to make their appearance in the City Council calendar.

Now that the end of the year is approaching the City Council will have to get down to work if it expects to accomplish much more.

Rumor says that some alterations, such as enlarging doors etc., will be necessary at the White House before President-elect Taft takes possession.

It will be a very welcome Christmas gift to the teachers and pupils of the Coddington school if they can move into their new school building before the new year.

An old farmer once said when asked to vote for a popular man, "I never yet see a man that made a business of bein' popular who had much of a liking for real hard work."

One day Rumor says that Katherine Elkins is to be the bride of the Duke de Abruzzi and the next day she is not. The general public hope that Katie will make up her mind soon.

Now that the matter of the failure of the Ward Five ballot box to work, may be questioned by the Election Commissioners it would not be a bad idea for someone to start a school of instruction in the use of ballot boxes.

The publishers of the new Christian Science daily to be issued Thanksgiving eve, say that they are not in the business to make money and that more attention will be given to news than to advertising. Sensational news matter will not be published in any form.

New England pride will insist on several kinds of pie for the Thanksgiving dinner. Among the most popular brands are mince, apple, pumpkin and cranberry. Of course no dinner would be complete without the old fashioned plum pudding.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

Grand Commander John D. Munroe of the Grand Commandry Knights Templar of Massachusetts and Rhode Island has appointed Frank L. Nagle to inspect South Shore Commandry of Weymouth of which many from Quincy are members.

Many members of the Quincy Yacht club are taking advantage of the new by-law and becoming life members.

The Ward Four Republicans hold a smoke talk Thursday evening at Sandberg's hall. Eugene R. Stone the Republican candidate for Mayor will be present.

The first rehearsal of the Adams and Cranch school "Glee Club" was held at the Cranch school on Monday. Harry Brooks, principal of both schools, acted as musical director. The pupils are anticipating very good results.

Work is now going on covering the sides of the big Fore River reservoir with rocks. Although the huge basin is all ready to receive the water, this stone covering will prevent the banks from wearing away.

Congressman O'Connell denies the statement credited to him in an interview published in a Boston paper that he intended to seek vengeance against the Democrats in Quincy at the Municipal election for the treatment given him at the state election. He says that on the contrary his friendship for Mayor Shea is as strong now as it ever was and that he will do all in his power to further his re-election as Mayor in the coming municipal election.

READY TO CHECK ANY REVOLUTION

Regent of Chinese Empire Takes Firm Grip on Affairs

FOREIGN LEGATIONS ARE SAFE

Chinese Troops Are Watching Approaches and Legation Guards Augmented--Closing of Fourteen Native Banks Marks the Beginning of Financial Panic--Many Rival Candidates For the Throne

Pekin, Nov. 17.—China is beginning to realize that the emperor and the dowager empress are dead. The Chinese had been so accustomed to look upon the dowager as the one person dominating all that the announcement of her death caused but little change in their unemotional natures and easy-going ways during the ceremonies attending her passing, but now there has come a marked change.

Prince Chun, the regent of the empire, in fear of the increasing excitement and revolutionary movements, has taken a firm grip on affairs, and has adopted stringent measures that will result in the maintenance of peace for a time at least.

At noon yesterday 3000 gendarmes guarded the streets and other military forces were held in readiness for any eventuality. Every precaution was taken to prevent a recurrence of the revolutionary tactics of last April and May, which were marked by widespread incendiarism. The foreign legations are under guard, special detachments of Chinese troops keeping watch at the approaches, and in some cases the regular legation guard is augmented by reinforcements from other places.

The statement is made at the legations that there is no fear that the Chinese government will be unable to afford ample protection, but those within the legations are more alert than usual and seemingly anxious to have set at rest the doubts arising from the swift movement of events in the last few days.

There have been many occurrences to add to the sinister aspect of affairs. Rumors were current for a time that the new dowager empress, Yehonala, and Yuan Shi-Kai, the grand councillor and one of the most powerful men in the empire, had committed suicide. Though there was no truth in these reports, they went far towards creating alarm.

Serious runs on banks occurred and fourteen native banks have closed. The crowds were wild with excitement and toward the close of yesterday the police intervened and drove them back. It is probable that a number of other native banks will be closed, and it is believed that the government will step in in an endeavor to stop the financial panic among the poorer classes.

As yet the cause of death in the case of the emperor and dowager empress has not been made public. A number of lengthy reports have been given out, but they are unintelligible to the foreigners here.

There is no reasonable evidence, however, to show that death in either case was the result of anything other than natural causes. The emperor had been ailing for a long time and had been in feeble health during the latter part of his life. The dowager empress had carried burdens of state for many years, and in the last few months had shown signs of declining health. It is believed, however, that modern medicine and treatment would have been efficacious.

The government entertains fears of the Keh-Ming-Tang reformers, who are reported to be assembling with a view to taking advantage of the present disturbed condition of the country. While matters have an appearance of tranquility, there are reports of disaffection among the adherents of half a dozen rival candidates for the throne, and to the minds of foreigners the government itself is disaffected. It is contended by some that the eldest Pu, that is Pu Lun, is the legitimate emperor and that, therefore, the selection of Pu Yi was another of the dowager's illegal acts.

An imperial order was issued yesterday in the name of Dowager Empress Yehonala, expelling all palace visitors, which means the clearing away of the masses who assembled during the period their majesties were believed to be dying, and who have remained within and near the palace precincts ever since.

Confessed to Murder

Lewiston, Me., Nov. 17.—Pascal Nikoli, who, with George Mone, was convicted in the supreme court Saturday of the murder of James Scott, made a full confession yesterday, according to the jail officials and the court interpreter. The alleged confession is alleged to have described the case substantially as the state claimed it took place. According to the interpreter, Nikoli admitted he had as much to do with the crime as did Mone.

Hungarian Countess Elopes

Buda Pest, Nov. 17.—Countess Marie Louise, the beautiful 20-year-old daughter of Count Harnoncourt, has departed from this city with Count Anton Sigray. Sigray enlisted the services of a friend, who obtained the post of tutor to the young countess and arranged the elopement.

RECKLESS ARTILLERYMEN

Careless Handling of Rifles Jars Nerves of Newport Citizens

Newport, R. I., Nov. 17.—While details of coast artillerymen from Fort Adams were searching the city for an escaped prisoner complaints came to police headquarters that some of the soldiers were frightening innocent citizens by pointing their loaded rifles at them.

The police arrested four men, one of whom is said to have been found in the act of levelling his rifle through a window of a drug store in which several nervous citizens had taken refuge. The arrested men are Privates Cooney, Gince, Vespessian and Deliskie. They were taken to the police station and afterwards were transferred to Fort Adams under guard of non-commissioned officers, Deliskie being confined in his own quarters, charged with drunkenness while on duty, the others being placed in the guardhouse.

The escaped prisoner, Mailand H. Gustin, has not been located. He was in solitary confinement in the old guardhouse at Fort Adams and got away by sawing away a bolt of the outside door.

POLICE THRONG ABOUT COURTROOM

Trial of Ruef, the Alleged Grafter, Is Resumed

San Francisco, Nov. 17.—The trial of Abraham Ruef on the charge of bribery, the progress of which was interrupted last Friday by the attempted assassination of Assistant District Attorney Heney, was resumed yesterday. By the interposition of affidavits setting forth that it would be impossible to secure a fair and impartial trial in the present state of public opinion, the defense secured a continuance until today. The prosecution will file counter-affidavits. When court adjourned Ruef was taken back to the county jail.

Never before in the history of this city had such extensive police precautions been taken to safeguard a court of justice. Ten policemen on foot and six mounted men were on guard in front of the courtroom, and the streets for a block on either side of the building were patrolled by uniformed police.

Every person entering the building was closely scrutinized. In the corridors were stationed six policemen and inside the courtroom a dozen detectives were placed. The balconies above the main floor on both sides of the hall were empty, no one being allowed upstairs.

Nine Narrowly Escape Death

Newton, Mass., Nov. 17.—Eight men and a woman, employes at the Masten & Wells fireworks factory at Newton Upper Falls, had narrow escapes when an explosion occurred in one of the company's sheds in which they were at work. They were engaged in mixing a composition that is used in loading small firecrackers. In some way a panful of the mixture caught fire and flared up toward the ceiling. The nine employes had no sooner reached the open air than a deafening detonation rocked the neighborhood. The windows in the shed were blown out and in an instant the interior was a mass of flames.

Lived Over 104 Years

Haverhill, Mass., Nov. 17.—Mrs. Mary J. Stockbridge died here at the age of 104. Ill only three days, she retained the complete vigor and consciousness for which she was noted up to the last few hours. She was the mother of ten children, five of whom are still alive. Mrs. Stockbridge was born in Alton, N. H., April 20, 1804.

Decison Against Patrick

Washington Nov. 17.—The petition of Albert T. Patrick, the New York lawyer, who is serving a life sentence in the state prison at Sing Sing, N. Y., on the charge of having murdered the millionaire, William M. Rice, for a writ of habeas corpus was decided by the supreme court of the United States adversely to the petitioner.

DISPOSED OF IN RECORD TIME

Forger Sentenced Within Four Hours After His Arrest

LEADER IN CHICAGO BUSINESS

Real Estate Dealer Had Secured More Than $700,000 Through Sale of Forged Documents During Past Eighteen or Twenty Years, Having Perfected a Unique Device For Tracing Signatures

Chicago, Nov. 17.—Peter VanVlissingen, a real estate dealer, for years classed among the first of Chicago's prosperous and reputable business men, has confessed to having obtained, through forged deeds and notes, more than $700,000, and a few hours after his arrest, on his own urgent appeal to be punished, was sentenced to the penitentiary.

The arrest, the indictment, the confession and the sentence were the work of less than four hours. Taken in the midst of business from his office desk at 172 Washington street shortly after the noon hour, VanVlissingen appeared before the court and in tears confessed that for from eighteen to twenty years he had been securing money through the sale of forged documents and that though he had bought back many of these spurious instruments without detection, at least twenty-five people would lose an aggregate of more than $700,000 through the paper which he has not yet redeemed.

In forging notes he declared he had perfected an unique device. This consisted of a plate glass desk top, so arranged that by an electric light thrown up from beneath he could readily trace from originals forged signatures onto worthless paper.

Throughout his arrest and sentence the prisoner made no effort to defend himself, but only asked that his punishment be speedy. Asked if he had anything to say before sentence was imposed, Van Vlissingen replied, bowing his head:

"Only that I believe in my punishment at once." His term in the penitentiary was fixed as indeterminate, from one to fourteen years.

VanVlissingen, who is about 45 years old, was married Feb. 4, 1907, to Mrs. Jessie Roosevelt Blend, who was described at the time as a distant relative of President Roosevelt. The bride was a daughter of Wilton C. Roosevelt and had been divorced from a man named Blend. VanVlissingen had been a bachelor, living at the Calumet club. He was known as being of a philanthropic disposition, giving special attention to the welfare of boys.

The specific charge which led up to the spectacular arrest of VanVlissingen was made by two men who had bought forged mortgage notes. They are T. J. Lefens and W. C. Selpp, who have offices in the same building as that occupied by VanVlissingen. To the notes for $4500 held by them were signed the names of Joseph and Bertha Grossman. As was customary, Van Vlissingen copied the forged papers from originals, which he disposed of to other buyers. Lefens and Selpp said they first became suspicious of the note last Saturday, but took no action until yesterday.

When confronted in his office by a detective, VanVlissingen made no effort to conceal the truth. "Why am I wanted at the state attorney's office?" he asked.

"Because of some charges of forgery," replied the detective.

"Very well," replied the real estate dealer. "I am afraid the charges are true." He then put on his hat and coat and followed the detective. In Assistant State Attorney Barbour's office he made a full confession and signed the following:

"Chicago, Nov. 16, 1908.

"This is to certify that I alone am responsible for all the irregularities that have occurred in my office and that no one in my employ, or ever at any time in my employ, has any guilty knowledge of the irregularities that have occurred at any time.

"Peter VanVlissingen."

Discussing Sugar Schedule

Washington, Nov. 17.—The allegation that the so-called "sugar trust" controls the price paid to the grower and the price charged to the consumer of sugar, the fact that Secretary of War Wright put himself on record as a champion of free entry for Philippine sugar, and that generally all are in favor of "standing pat," were the features of yesterday's hearing on the proposed revision of the tariff.

Booming Root For Senator

New York, Nov. 17.—At a special meeting of the Republican assemblymen-elect of New York county the candidacy of Elihu Root for United States senator was endorsed. The Republican Club of the City of New York also adopted resolutions endorsing Root for United States senator and recommending that a committee of thirty be appointed to ask members of the legislature to vote for Root.

La France SHOE FOR WOMEN

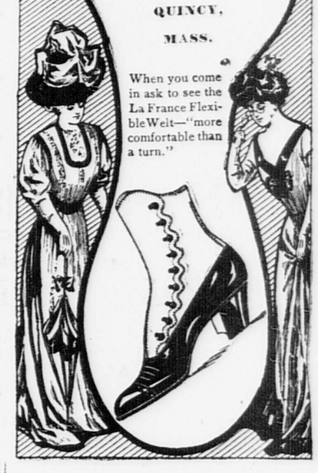

$3.00 SOLE, REASON- AND OTHERS $4.00

The reason La France shoes for women are comfortable is that they are made that way. If you had a pair of gloves which were full of ridges of superfluous leather, you know they would hurt you and look badly—but that is the way many shoes are made.

In La France Shoes the seams are even and smooth like those of a glove, and there are no inside ridges of leather to hurt or chafe your feet.

Therefore, they have a comfortable, glove-like feeling, and for the same reason they fit beautifully and always present—whether new or old—a neat, graceful and beautiful appearanec.

FELL OVER TWO HUNDRED FEET

Six Men Meet a Terrible Fate In Mine Shaft

Pittsburg, Nov. 17.—M. D. Walsh, E. G. Smyth and J. B. Newcomer, all young civil engineers, and three mine workers, known only by number, were instantly killed at the Ellsworth coal mines.

The three engineers had just completed a survey of the mine preparatory to starting new entries. A heavy wooden beam was loaded into the cage and its ends projected beyond the sides, the men riding on the timber. All went well until within seventy-five feet of the top of the shaft, when the projecting beam struck the sides of the shaft and the men were dumped out. The six fell to the bottom, a distance of 225 feet. The heavy timber came down on top of them and they were bruised and crushed almost beyond recognition.

Three other miners who were in the cage itself escaped practically unhurt.

APPROPRIATION OF $7000

Army Officer Alleged to Have Misused a Part of It

New York, Nov. 17.—Lieutenant Edward Gottlieb, an electrical expert attached to the army service, who was arrested in this city on Sept. 30 last, is on trial before a court martial at Governor's island, charged with presenting to the United States authorities for payment false and fraudulent claims and a number of other minor offenses.

Gottlieb received an appropriation of $7000 in December, 1906, from the government to conduct electrical experiments at Boston. One of the charges against him is that he misappropriated part of this money. It is further charged that he was away from duty without leave on fifteen different occasions, often for a week at a time.

A clerk from the Hotel Belmont testified that Gottlieb had been at that hotel many times during the past year when he was supposed to be on duty in Boston.

H. M. Shedd, a manufacturer of Roselle, N. J., said that last spring he became interested in Gottlieb's electrical devices and loaned him $350. Shedd said he gave Gottlieb a check on May 26, 1908, receiving a check from Gottlieb in return, payable June 30, at the Mechanics' Trust company, Boston. When the check was presented on that date, the witness said, he learned that the lieutenant never had had any money in the Mechanics' Trust company. He said Gottlieb's friends paid him the money and tried to have the matter hushed up.

Instead of bringing witnesses on from Boston to testify, the court martial will be transferred to that city as soon as the local witnesses have been examined.

Did Not Attempt Bribery

Johnston, R. I., Nov. 17.—Henry B. Scott, state senator-elect, was acquitted in court of a charge of giving a man money with intent to influence his vote on election day. Scott was arrested at a polling place in this town on the day of the national election, the complainant against him being Governor Higgins.

NO CUTTERS AT WORK

Strike on Dodge Bros. Factory May Close Whole Plant

Newburyport, Mass., Nov. 17.—A strike involving nearly 900 shoe workers is feared as the possible outcome of the strike of the forty cutters at Dodge Bros.' factory. Since the strike was inaugurated last Friday the firm has been advertising for cutters, and yesterday about a dozen Armenian workmen arrived here and went to work. When it came time for them to leave the factory last night they were met by representatives of the Cutters' union, and as a result the strikebreakers did not go back to work this morning.

Although Dodge Bros. claim they have a large number of orders to fill, unless they can get cutters the factory will in a short time be completely tied up, throwing their 900 employes out of work. A number of employes in the stitching room, the next department to the cutters, were laid off yesterday, and that room will have finished its work in a couple of days.

The officials of the union declare that they will endeavor to confine the difficulty to the Dodge factory. There are several other large shoe factories in this city and all are running to their full capacity.

HISGEN LEAVES POLITICAL ARENA

Purse and Business Suffered During Campaign Tour

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 17.—Thomas L. Hisgen of West Springfield, the Independence party candidate for president this year and last year candidate for governor, announces that he is out of politics for good.

THOMAS L. HISGEN.

"The campaign is all over, so far as I am concerned," Hisgen said. "The tour across the country cost me a lot of money and the loss of time has been detrimental to my business. I do not feel that I can afford to keep before the public eye as a politician, for I am not a politician in any sense of the word. I am thankful to all my friends for what they have done for me, but I am out of politics for good."

Two Men Electrocuted

Warren, R. I., Nov. 17.—In working among a number of high power electric wires at a power station at Brayton, William Quan, aged 35, and Fred Foss, 28, were killed. Quan, who was at work on a ladder, accidentally touched a live wire with his head, completing a circuit, and was instantly electrocuted. Foss met his death when he tried to pull Quan's body away from the wire.

Woman Sued For $5000

Stratford, Conn., Nov. 17.—William R. Wilder, member of a New York law firm, who has a summer home in Stratford, has instituted suit for $5000 damages against Mrs. Eliza Hill, a neighbor in Stratford, alleging malicious arrest. Mrs. Hill recently caused Wilder's arrest on a charge which was disproved and he was acquitted.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

"I'll tell you all about everything if you'll sit down," I said, but instead of doing as I asked he inquired with Opening my eyes to look straight into those of Mr. Brett.

a queer, worried expression on his face whether I had had lunch.

"No; nor breakfast either," I replied quite gayly, but with a watery smile.

"Good heavens," said he, going as red as if I had accused him of snatching it from my lips. "Then you must have both together before you begin to tell me anything."

"We might go out and have a sandwich somewhere," I suggested.

"There's nothing the matter with the Waldorf sandwiches."

"Except that they're expensive," said I. "You must remember you and I aren't millionaires."

"I have been doing pretty well lately," said he. "I can almost call myself rich. Please have some lunch. I can afford it, and if you refuse I'll know it's because"—

I guessed what he might be going to say, so I stopped him.

"Nonsense!" I exclaimed. "But I've run away from Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox, and I don't want to be found. If she or her brother should have come to New York or if anybody else"—

"I've thought of that," said he quickly, "but we've no time to waste. You're starving. If you wouldn't mind my getting you a private dining room and sending you in some lunch"—

"But I want you to be with me," I insisted.

He evidently hesitated, but only for a minute. I don't think he's the sort of man to hesitate long about anything.

"Very well, that's what I'd like best, of course, if you don't mind," he said. "I'll go and see to everything, and be back before you can count sixty, if you do it slowly."

I didn't do it at all, but thought how thankful I was that he had come to me, for I was sure everything would go right now.

In two or three minutes he came back to take me into a charming little dining room, where there was no danger that Mrs. Ess Kay or Potter could pounce upon us, as it was for Mr Brett and me alone. I shuddered to think what it must be costing, but his clothes were so exceedingly good I hoped he hadn't exaggerated about the luck that had come to him.

Naturally I couldn't tell the part of my story which concerned Potter Parker, but I said that Mrs. Ess Kay wanted me to do things which I didn't think it right to do, and I couldn't stay in her house even a day longer.

"I should like to go home," I went on, "but I can't yet, and the only other thing is to join Miss Woodburn in Chicago. You remember Miss Woodburn, don't you?"

He said he remembered her very well, had read in the newspapers that she had left Newport for Chicago and thought it was a wise idea of mine to join her.

"I'm glad you think that," said I, "for I want to start today, and I hope you'll tell me how to go, how much money it will be, how long it takes to get there and all about it."

He didn't answer for a minute, but sat looking very grave, staring at his brown hand on the white tablecloth as if he'd never seen it before. Then he said:

"Curiously enough, I am going west this afternoon too. Would you object to my being in the same train? I wouldn't suggest such a thing, only, you see, as you're a stranger in the country I might be able to help you a little."

"How splendid!" I exclaimed. "It seems almost too good to be true. You can't fancy what a relief it is to my mind."

He looked pleased at that and said I was very kind, though I should have thought it was the other way round.

"I'll get your ticket, then," he went on. "If you'll give me twenty-five dollars—five pounds, you know—I'll hand you back the change, but I'm afraid it won't be much."

"Change?" I echoed. "Why, I supposed it would be ever so much more than five pounds to get to Chicago, which is almost in central America, isn't it?"

"The people who live there think it's central," said Mr. Brett, "but they make the railroad men keep prices down so that dissatisfied New Yorkers can afford to go and live there. It isn't a bad journey, you'll find. I think it will interest you. You sleep and eat in the train, you know."

"What fun!" I exclaimed. "I've never slept in a train even on the continent."

"If you had it would be different from this one," said he. "Can you be ready in twenty-five minutes? The train which we call the Twentieth Century starts at 2:45."

"I'm ready now," said I. "The sooner we're on the way the better. But oh, about Vivace! Will they allow him to sleep and eat too?"

"I expect I can arrange that," Mr. Brett answered in such a confident way that I felt sure he could do it or anything else he set out to do. It really was lucky for me that he happened to be traveling west that same day, and such an extraordinary coincidence too.

"Are you going on journalistic business?" I asked.

"No; it's business I'm undertaking for a friend," he explained, "but I hope to get something good for myself out of it in the end."

"Oh, I do hope you will," I replied. "I'm sure you deserve to."

"I'm sure I don't," said he, laughing, "but I shall try hard for it all the same. You know you told me to be ambitious."

"I know I did," I answered.

A moment later he said that he must hurry off and attend to the tickets, and I had only time to glance through some papers the waiter brought me, with columns full of Mohunsleigh's marriage, when he was back again with a cab.

While I read an account of the wedding and gushing paragraphs about me I wondered if there mightn't be things not so flattering in the same papers tomorrow.

"If it got out that I had run away, would there be a scandal?" I asked Mr. Brett in the cab. But he said that I needn't be afraid. Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox was too clever a woman to let anything she wouldn't like get into the papers. She would send a paragraph to the effect that Lady Betty Bulkeley had been suddenly called home or had gone to visit other friends or something of that sort. "But she will almost certainly cable to your people," he went on.

"Yes, but she won't know where I've gone till afterward, and anyhow they can't object to my being with Miss Woodburn," I answered him.

"You don't think they'll send for you to come home at once?"

I shook my head. "They won't do that. They don't want—that is, they think it wiser for me to stop on this side longer, now I'm here."

"I'm very glad of that," said Mr. Brett and he looked at me as if he really were glad in spite of all the trouble I'd made him.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

A large number of juveniles were before the juvenile session of the district court this morning.

The City Council Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds meet Thursday evening.

Miss Marjorie E. Taber spent the week end with Mrs. Charles Patterson of Brockton.

Henry P. Furnald caters for the lunch at the Granite City club whist tournament Wednesday evening.

Ground was broken this morning for a new house for Hazen E. Ricker on Whitney road between the estates of Emery L. Crane and Nathan Ames.

The Adams sixth grade foot ball team refeated the Pioneers 10 to 5 on Monday night at the Glencoe place grounds.

The flag on Grand Army hall is at half mast today for George N. B. Thomas of Dorchester who will be brought to Quincy for burial.

Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Sheridan, nee Bertha Miles of Squantum street have returned from their honeymoon and taken up their residence in Dorchester.

The Quincy Choral society meets at Colonial hall tomorrow evening for rehearsal. The society is now at work on Mendelssohn's Elijah under the direction of Conductor Arthur S. Wonson.

Men are at work night and day on the battleship North Dakota, recently launched, in an attempt to finish the boat in record time. The way they are going now seems to indicate that some records will go.

In the tableaux of famous masterpieces at the Wollaston Unity club on Friday evening, it was Francis Adams, and not Hope Robinson who took the part of the child with Miss Hubbard in the "Madonna of the Chair," by Raphael.

Word comes from Hondo, Tex., of the death in that city Nov. 11 of William Shaw father of J. C. Shaw formerly of Quincy. Mr. Shaw was a Tennessean by birth and has always lived in the south. He was 80 years of age.

By some error it was announced that the annual visitation of the Masonic lodge at Wollaston had been changed from tonight to next Tuesday night, Nov. 24. The visitation will be held tonight as originally scheduled.

James F. Merrill has returned from Vicksburg, Miss., and was in Quincy this week calling on old friends. Mr. Merrill went south to attend the dedication of the Rhode Island state memorial monument in the National park at Vicksburg.

The hopes of the Quincy Point Social club will be realized tonight when their minstrel show is presented at Music hall. For two months they have worked continually to make the show a success and the dress rehearsal of last evening indicates that their work has not been in vain.

Foot Ball And Other Sports

A few weeks ago an article appeared in this column urging more interest in the bowling game this winter. Nothing seems to have been done in this line, and it is too bad that this game is so neglected. In Boston there are several leagues. In Brockton among the factories there are leagues. Why could not a league be formed right here in this city, say between the Knights of Columbus, the Elks, the A. O. H., etc.; or between the departments at the shipyard?

Another thing that ought to be pushed in this city is basket-ball. Now that the schedules of the Boston school leagues are out, the season is close upon us. Four or five years ago there were two teams in Quincy and both made money. Great rivalry existed between the two and the struggle between St. Mary's and Quincy for the championship will never be forgotten. Now there is no representative team her and it ought not to be so. Some one should get busy and start something.

Yesterday at Hotel Astor, New York, James E. Sullivan was unanimously elected president of the A. A. U. of the United States. By this election a precedent has been established, for President Sullivan is the first to be elected for more than two terms. Mr. Sullivan had announced that he would not accept a re-election, but after considering it, he decided to accept, if elected.

He said that if he refused, it might be taken by the English to mean that he had been wrong in the stand he took in the recent Olympic games and that his actions had not been sanctioned by the A. A. U. of the United States. The Union not only re-elected him, but also passed a resolution approving all his actions in England. This resolution was really embodied in the election, but the special resolution made it all the stronger.

All the records made during the past year in games run under the sanction of the A. A. U., were accepted yesterday. Shaw, the Dartmouth hurdler, Smithson of the far west, Sheridan of New York, besides many others, were credited with records.

One of the most interesting games of football scheduled for Thanksgiving Day afternoon will be that between the Boston College alumni and the Boston College varsity football teams. Dr. James H. Maloney of Quincy, one of the former B. C. gridiron stars, will hold down one of the guard positions during part of the game. It is expected that about 20 men will appear in the alumni lineup before the game is over. Among others who will be seen in the game are: T. F. Vahey, '98 brother of the Democratic candidate for governor, at quarterback; Tom Grady '97, formerly of the governor's council; "Jim" O'Connell '00, of the Boston Globe; Dr. "Billy" Holland, for many years holder of the intercollegiate quarter-mile record; Hugh McGrath formerly of the Charlesbank "gym," and "Hub" Hart, now of the Chicago White Sox. The line will average something like 225 pounds and the young boys will have to go some to beat the old boys.

An exciting and enthusiastic bowling tournament is in progress at the Houghs Neck Associates' clubhouse, open to members only. The matches began last night and will continue till Saturday night. A 15-pound turkey is the first prize and a 10-pounder the second. The two men having the highest three-string totals will get the prizes. The scores last night indicate that the tournament will be a close contest.

☞The Board of Education of New York City is committed to the extension of playgrounds. In the budget for next year it has requested funds for the organization of fifty new afternoon playgrounds; 106 summer playgrounds have been in operation under the Board of Education during the past summer. At a recent meeting the Board of Superintendents adopted resolutions to the effect that all new buildings should be provided with roof playgrounds; also that the organization of school gardens should be encouraged. The Board of Education decided on September 23d to open many buildings after school hours and on Saturdays ar recreation centers for vacation work. A standing committee of five commissioners will be appointed.

BAD CIRCULATION
CAUSES PILES—EXTERNAL TREATMENT WON'T CURE THEM.

Free circulation of blood in the lower bowel will cure any case of piles. Piles may be due to constipation or any of a dozen other causes. Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid, the only internal, tablet remedy for piles, opens a free circulation in the bowel, and cures the cause. 24 days' treament is sold for $1 at Clyde T. Cox's, Quincy, Mass., and is guaranteed fully. Dr. Leonhardt Co., Station B. Buffalo, N. Y. Write for booklet.

The Observations In the Daily Walk

Holbrook field has been the scene of many lively football games this month. Coached by the older boys, the smaller ones put up a stern fight against their young opponents.

The entrance to the boulevard from Webster street promises to be one of the most popular along the beach. Work is progressing toward completion and it is a pleasure for residents of Webster street to have this unsightly terminus to their thoroughfare put in such prime condition.

Two men were walking along Hancock street Monday about one o'clock behind an officer, when one coolly stopped and taking out a pint bottle of whisky emptied the contents. Then the men lighted cigaretts and continued. It was fortunate for them the officer was not given to looking backward.

Much favorable comment has been heard of late of the "Westland Quartette" of Boston, and therefore Quincy people are anxiously awaiting their first opportunity to hear these ladies sing, when they appear in Quincy for the first time on Monday evening November 30th, at Colonial Hall, they furnishing the evening's program for the second concert in the series for "Christ Church Organ Repair Fund."

PASTOR CALLED.

At an adjourned meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian society held in the vestry of the church on Monday evening it was unanimously voted to extend a call to the Rev. Carl G. Horst of West Upton to become pastor of the church. Mr. Horst has held pastorates in Athol and West Upton where he is very highly spoken of. Two of his brothers are also in the ministry.

GOOD ADVICE TO PARENTS.

One of our correspondents heard a Quincy minister say Sunday, "If the coming generation is to be a generation of church-going men and women, it rests largely with the parents of today to place before the child the example of church attendance. To train up the child in the way he should go, it is necessary to go with him in the way."

Eastern Star Whist Party

Quincy Council, Order of the Eastern Star held a largely attended whist party Monday evening at Electa hall. Whist was enjoyed for the first two hours. Following this ice cream and cake was served and then dancing was enjoyed.

Prizes for the best scores were awarded John G. Roberts, Mrs. C. W. Hayes, Mrs. Mary Thomas, Mrs. C. C. Gould and Duncan Blaikie.

The committee in charge of the affair were: Miss Jessie N. Raymond, Miss Lydia Raymond, Mrs. Lillian Forrest, Miss Rosella Carter, Mrs. Mary Hughes, Miss Clara Call, Mrs. Gertrude Torrey, Miss Lottie Barnicoat, Mrs. Ella Harris , Miss Mary Webb, Mrs. Jennie Brooks and Miss Myra Lester.

ELMENDORF LECTURE.

"Norway and the Land of the Midnight Sun" is the subject of Dwight Elmendorf's opening lecture at Tremont Temple, Boston, on Friday evening and Saturday afternoon, November 20th and 21st. Mr. Elmendorf has a host of friends in this vicinity who are waiting in great anticipation for his coming; for with this genial and instructive personal conductor, thousands of our people are enabled to travel abroad,—and yet never leave the city. The eye and the imagination furnish the means and Mr. Elmendorf's wonderfully realistic photographs the way by which this seemingly impossible thing is accomplished. The Norwegian fjords in all their mysterious grandeur, the majestic mountains, the picturesque islands of the west coast, the marvelous glories of the sun shining at midnight, all these pass before the travelers through the magic of Mr. Elmendorf's lantern, his exquisitely colored slides and fascinating motion pictures, coupled with his extremely interesting descriptions.

DANGER IN DELAY.

Kidney Diseases Are Too Dangerous for Quincy People to Neglect.

The great danger of kidney troubles is that they get a firm hold before the sufferer recognizes them. Health is gradually undermined. Backache, headache, nervousness, lameness, soreness, lumbago, urinary troubles, dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease follow in merciless succession. Don't neglect your kidneys. Cure the kidneys with the certain and safe remedy, Doan's Kidney Pills, which has cured people right here in Quincy.

Nicholas Albanese, living at 16 Gilmore street, Quincy, Mass., says: "I was annoyed by a dull backache for some time and often while at work, sharp shooting pains would dart through my loins and cause me great misery. I also had dizzy spells and my eyesight seemed to be affected. I tried many remedies but did not receive relief and as a last resort, decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I procured a box at the Cox Drug Store, began their use and was instantly relieved. I have no hesitancy in giving Doan's Kidney Pills the credit for my cure and I highly endorse them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Doctors
Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is a doctor's medicine. Doctors prescribe it, endorse it. Use it or not, as your doctor says.
You could not please us better than to ask your doctor about Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis. Thousands of families always keep it in the house. The approval of their physician and the experience of many years have given them great confidence in this cough medicine.

Norfolk County And Vicinity

A wood and cement bungalow on Marlboro street, DEDHAM, was burned last night with a loss of $1000. It is believed that an overheated stove was the cause.

Mrs. Peter Cosgrove of STOUGHTON died Sunday after a brief illness. The funeral will take place today from St. Mary's Catholic church.

An interesting old house, the Edward Devotion, the oldest in BROOKLINE was opened to the public last week, the opening commemorating the anniversary of the incorporation of the town. The house was built in 1680. Within its walls has been collected rare old colonial furniture, china, mirrors and household utensils.

Rev. Fr. Mathew F. McDonnell, pastor of St. Francis church, SOUTH BRAINTREE returned Sunday from a three months' trip to London, Paris, Rome and Ireland.

ANNIVERSARY PRESENT.

Timothy J. Collins the well known local correspondent of the Boston Globe and Mrs. Collins are receiving congratulations on the birth this morning of a little daughter.

The little girl comes as an anniversary present as today is the fifth anniversary of their marriage. Both mother and daughter are doing nicely.

☞The little store of W. T. Arnold on Revere road has long been the mecca of people who like artistic picture framing, art novelties in china, bric-a-brac and antique goods. CONVINCING FACTS.

There is no use denying the fact that Johnson Bros., are surely giving genuine bargains in food values. It will be hard indeed to find a store that is giving such excellent quality at such low prices.

Everything the best that money can buy, is their standard; and their customers know from past dealings that that is absolutely true. Now with our discount system, it is still more of an inducement to trade with us, and you will be surprised to find how fast your discount checks will count up.

We are displaying every day a choice assortment of Cut Meats, with the prices marked in plain figures, so that every one can see what they are paying for or we will cut it to your order, whichever you prefer.

We are pleased that so many of our customers have helped us to make this system a success, for it means a whole lot to them as well as to us. We do not think that any one objects to carrying home a purchase especially when they are paid to do so, which we are doing, with our discount check system.

We are receiving new seasonable goods every day, and it will be to your interest to visit our store and do business with us.

Beef, Lamb and Fresh Pork are all lower and we have a choice lot of Fresh Killed Chicken and Fowl constantly on hand, direct from William A. Drake of Braintree.

A tempting line of New Canned Goods, packed expressly for us.

An excellent stock of New Cereals, Buckwheat, Pan Cake Flour, and all the leading brands of Bread and Pastry Flour.

All kinds of Bottled Goods, Jellies, Jams, Olives and Pickles.

Fresh Hot House Lettuce, Choice Celery, Radishes, Cucumbers, and Fruits of all kinds.

Remember, that every day is BARGAIN day at Johnson Bros., so keep in the road, for all roads lead to our store.

And, remember that we give you 5 per cent discount on all cash purchases, if you take the purchase home, or 2 per cent discount when you ask us to deliver it.

Yours for Quality,

JOHNSON BROS., City Square, Quincy.

SOCIAL CLUB MINSTRELS.

A Pleasing Program With Many Beautiful Effects

The second annual minstrel show of the Quincy Point social club, was held Tuesday evening in Quincy Music hall, and the hall was packed to its utmost capacity. For two long months, two or three nights a week the big chorus has been practicing and last night the members were repaid for their trouble by the grand success of the show.

It was without a doubt the most elaborate show that has been presented to the people of Quincy for a long time, and though called a minstrel show, it was in reality a high class musical comedy. The costumes were from C. W. Ware of Boston and were extremely attractive and pleasing to the eye.

The colored lights from the gallery that were flashed upon the grand chorus of 80 voices, composed of the pick of Quincy's boys and girls caused a sight that will long remain in the minds of those who witnessed the performance. The show was under the personal direction of Dom F. Keegan, of Boston. Mr. Keegan is a wonder at this work and the way he brings out the different effects is surprising.

The performance, unlike the usual run of minstrel shows in Quincy, was full of action from start to finish. There was something to watch all the time, from the time the curtain went up on the opening chorus until it went down amid great applause on the grand finale, in which every one in the show appeared upon the stage at once.

The evening's entertainment began with an overture by Thomson's orchestra and promptly at 8 o'clock the big company burst forth into the first part of the opening chorus, which introduced Edmund J. Courtney, as interlocutor and four of the ends, "Din" Sweeney, Gertrude Walker, "Joe" Matthews and Gretchen Mischler.

Just as Mr. Courtney was saying "I take great pleasure etc.," there was a commotion and a wild yell in the back of the hall. Soon Francis Sweeney, in the garb of a Sumner street Jew was seen coming down the aisle with a basket on his arm. He was shouting at the top of his voice in his inimitable Jew dialect, asking the people to buy suspenders etc.

In his wake dressed as an officer of the law came "Bob" Smith, to see what was the matter. Straight up to the front of the hall went the peddler, and Mr. Courtney asked him why he was trying to break up the performance. "Francy" replied he didn't think he was doing so and said he was an actor. The interlocutor then asked him to come and sing, and the Jew sang that western love song, "Tough Guy Levi" and received great applause.

The rest of the opening chorus was then sung and the program continued in order, consisting of end songs and ballads by the cream of local minstrel beaus and belles. The first was, "I don't know who wrote 'Home Sweet Home,' but he must have been a single man," by Joe Matthews. Joe made his debut as an end but made a big hit with his song. Several original parodies on local topics brought out great applause.

A very popular young man followed with a ballad, Mr. Edwin C. Donovan. "Ed" sang "When I am away from you," and he made a great hit with his beautiful baritone voice. He was assisted by Roxbury's favorite, Anna A. Daly, who answered him from the balcony. This pair brought forth tremendous applause, for it was a feature entirely new to local people.

Two end songs followed in succession, by Gretchen Mischler, "Kiss your Minstrel boy, Good-bye," and by "Din" Sweeney, a well-known end, who sang, "Mother hasn't spoke to father since." This latter is an extremely funny and catchy song, and took the house. A few parodies also helped out and "Din" got a great hand.

At this point two of Quincy's most popular ends were introduced, "Francy" Sweeney, the Quincy "cut-up" and "Bob" Smith, long boy from West Quincy. Eva Jones, the pride of Quincy Point, then sang "Somewhere there is Some One I'd like to know." This is one of "Joe" Daly's big hits and Eva did it justice last night.

"Bob" Smith, the biggest man in the show was the next man, and he appeared as a country parson, singing "What you goin' to tell Old St. Peter?" "Bob" acted his part perfectly and brought down the house.

A tenor solo by W. Edgar Riley of Ashmont, introducing Joseph W. Daley's latest composition "Have I made a hit with you," certainly made a hit with the audience, and Mr. Riley was encored several times.

The girl that always pleases Quincy people, the girl that made such talk after the show last year was next, Gertrude Walker. She sang, "Good-bye Mr. Ragtime," in her catchy, lively way, and the audience was taken by storm. She was followed by Francis Sweeney, who needs no introduction. He sang "The Hen Roost Inspector Man" and his make-up was just suited to the song.

The first part ended with a finale by the entire circle, Peter M. Sullivan, singing, "My Dream of the U. S. A." assisted by, Russell Sullivan and Edwin C. Donovan. This trio make up harmony of their own and last winter became quite popular in Quincy and surrounding towns. The following tableaux were shown in the finale:—

1st Tableau, George Washington,—James Sullivan. Sailors—Harry J. Histen, Walter Bradley, Russell Sullivan, Edwin C. Donovan.

There were ten girls called the tambo girls, and with the ends, they made the tambos ring. They sat in the front row of the chorus, and went through several fancy dances together. They were: Katherine Regan, Abbie D. Griffin, Winifred M. Bradley, Vera A. Burke, Helen O'Meara, Margaret Matthews, Molly G. Starr, Eva Jones, Margaret M. Hastings, Viola C. Malcolm.

The chorus consisted of the following:—Gertrude L. Bradley, Josephine F. Burns, Alice L. Galvin, Mamie M. Curran, Carrie Blanding, Florence M. Farquhar, Annie G. Schneider, Ella M. Blanding, Etta M. Thurber, Helen D. Doue, Mamie Casey, Jane L. Dillon, M. Helen Gagen, Anabelle O'Meara, Emma T. Schneider, Ella M. Regan, Katherine Sullivan, Elizabeth Sullivan, Paul Avery, Henrietta Mischler, Jennie M. Malcolm, Peter Sullivan, Edwin C. Donovan, Russell Sullivan, Ralph W. Burnham, Harry J. Histen, George W. Fallon, Frank Avery, William J. Dorley, Walter Bradley, M. E. Sweeney, Henry Sullivan, John S. Higgins, Luther Bradbury, Snowden Jones, William Smith, Bernard Burke, Frank Taylor, William F. Mullen, Thomas J. Larkin, Edward Monks, Alex Thompson, Raymond Grady, Raymond R. Abildgaard, William Pratt, Joseph L. Ford, Arthur Warrington, George A. Hastings, Joseph Malley, James J. Elcock, Arthur F. Taylor, Edwin Saunders, Lawrence Moran, Joseph Mischler, William Mullin, Clarence Frasier.

The first sketch in this part was "The Ching-a-Ling- Maids." Florence Farquhar was the soloist and she was assisted by the following little chinks: Ella Blanding, Mamie Casey, Mamie Curran, Jane Dillon, Josephine Burns, Katherine Sullivan, Elizabeth Sullivan, Helen Gagen, Margaret Hastings, Anabelle O'Meara, Emma Schneider, Helen Doyle.

This sketch is original by Dom Keegan and the costumes were very attractive. The manner in which it was carried out showed thorough training.

This was followed by the "Newlyweds on their Honeymoon," a refined singing and dancing specialty, by six boys and six girls. The latter were dressed in spangled costumes, and the former in white flannel suits and straw hats. It was a very pretty sketch indeed. The following took part in this sketch: Raymond Abildgaard, William Smith, Thomas Fallon, George Hastings, Edwin Donovan, George Fallon, Winifred Bradley, Vera Burke, Viola Malcolm, Margaret Matthews, Helen O'Meara, Eva Jones.

The plantation boys came next, an original blackface sketch by Anna A. Daley, the soloist who sang "Goodbye Miss Johanna Johnson." Miss Daley is far and away the best coon singer that ever performed on the stage at Music hall or anywhere else in Quincy, and she made a tremendous hit. She is full of life and makes a fine appearance being natural in every move. She was assisted by the Georgia Pickaninny "Dom" Keegan's 10year-old son, George, who took the house with his dancing. He dances like a veteran, and, indeed though only 10 years old, he is fast becoming a veteran. The following boys assisted Miss Daley in the dancing specialty: Paul Avery, Walter Bradley, Raymond Grady, Lawrence Moran, Edmund Saunders, Luther Bradbury, William Dorley, Joseph Malley, William Mullin, Arthur Warrington, Special Feature—"The Georgia Pickaninny," Master George E. Keegan.

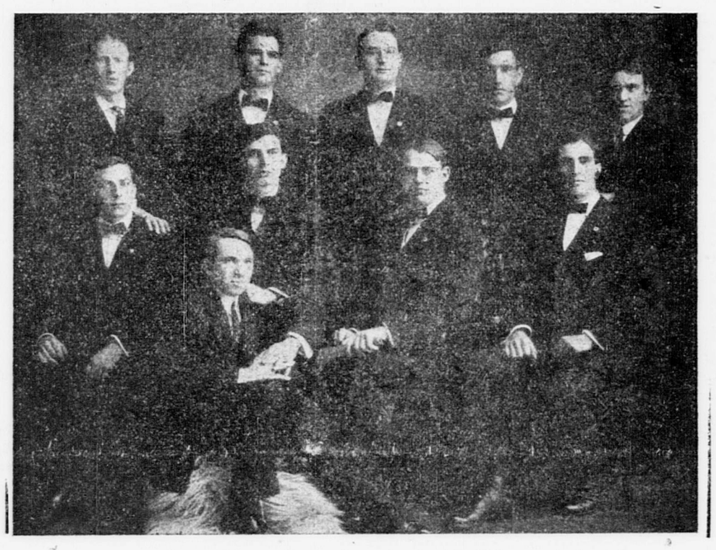

The snappy girls who created such a furore last year in their famous "Pony Sextette," made their appearance next, in their latest creation, "Mary My Heather Queen," with Gertrude Walker as soloist. She was assisted by the following: Gertrude Bradley, Carrie Blanding, Florence Farquhar, Katherine Regan, Annie Schneider, Etta Thurber.

The second part was concluded with the "Buster Brown" sketch, with Francis Sweeney as "Mary Jane" and "Bob" Smith as "Buster Brown." They were accompanied by ten boys as playmates and they were a perfection representation of a bunch of rollicking boys and girls just getting out of school. They were: S. Jones, Frank Avery, Arthur Taylor, Henry Sullivan, Bernard Burke, Edward Monks, Harry Histen, George Costello, William Pratt, Russell Sullivan.

The performance was concluded with a grand finale by the entire company.

The show was an unqualified success.

The committee who had charge of arranging the affair were the following who appear in the above picture: Edward P. Histen, chairman; Dennis S. Sweeney, Secretary; Frederick Lalley, Thomas H. Fallon, James Sullivan, Herbert Baker, George Costello, Joseph Matthews, Jere Coffey, George Thompson.

Among The WOMEN'S CLUBS of Quincy and Vicinity.

[A Wednesday Feature.]

Many members of the civics committees in the federated clubs attended the conference held by the civics department of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs last week in Boston. A long list of club activities is included under the head "Civics" and for each of them some one was present to speak. Medical inspection in schools; stamps savings systems, tuberculosis, the travelling health library, and juvenile court work, were all considered. The subject of playgrounds perhaps interested those attending the conference as much as any presented for consideration. The playground idea is growing and its growth is accompanied by an increasing appreciation of the innumerable benefits that come to a community in which these recreation spots are regarded as nothing less than necessities.

Junior Alliance of First church which has been meeting on Saturday evenings has changed to Monday as a more convenient night. The next meeting will be on Nov. 23d at the usual hour and place.

Junior Friday club had a very pleasant meeting Monday afternoon at West Newton meeting with Miss Grace M. Isaac. In the absence of Miss Prescott the program was carried out by Miss Randall after which the usual social hour and tea were enjoyed. The Dec. 7th meeting will be with Miss Randall instead of with Miss Prescott as announced by the club calendar.

With the meeting of the Wollaston Alliance this afternoon when Rev. Peter Goldsmith speaks on "The Higher Reason" there will not be another meeting until Dec. 2d.

The Hospital Aid association is to hold a donation party this evening in First Church chapel for the benefit of the Hospital. It is also a stocking social as little stockings have been distributed to be filled with pennies. Members of the association have been at work on the stockings since early summer.

At the Shakespeare society meeting tomorrow afternoon act three of "Antony and Cleopatra" will be read the parts being taken by members as scheduled in the year book.

Owing to next week being Thanksgiving the usual meeting of the Hospital Aid Association will be held tomorrow at the home of Mrs. Albert Keating, corner of Washington and Edwards streets.

The Junior Alliance of First church had as their subject last Saturday evening "Nineveh" and next week on Nov. 23d will devote the meeting to Babylon under the direction of Miss Irma C. Tilton.

Mrs. Emery L. Crane of Whitney road is hostess this week for the Friday club and the study of Venice will be continued under the direction of Mrs. Zenas S. Arnold with "Imperial Growth to League of Cambrai 1508" as the special subject. The next meeting will be with Mrs. Saville.

It is said the Fragment society made over eight hundred dollars at the fair held last week Wednesday in First Church chapel. A fine ending to several sewing bees and much earnest endeavor to make the fair a success.

Quincy Branch Alliance meets next Monday afternoon in First Church chapel when Mrs. F. S. Drew will speak on "Who is the True Christian." The Alliance is having a series of interesting meetings. One of the speakers in December will be Mrs. Charles R. Safford of Atlantic.

Recently the Quincy Day Nursery changed its quarters to Garfield street where it is pleasantly located. In recognition of the event the Nursery association is to have a house warming at the house on Saturday afternoon which will be reception day for members and friends of the Nursery also donation day.

At a meeting of the Quincy Catholic club held Monday evening, a letter was received from the Knights of Columbus tendering the use of their rooms in the Savings Bang building to the ladies of the club for two evenings in the month. This is in recognition of the good work of the society which is duly appreciated by the members. The sewing meetings prove very successful and much is being accomplished in repairing clothing and distributing it among the needy.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

Next Tuesday afternoon promises to be one of the most enjoyable of the series of entertainments on the Quincy Women's club calendar for it will be a home afternoon. First aid to the injured certainly bears on the home and a knowledge of food values, marketing and cooking goes a long way toward the making of a home.

In another sense it is a home afternoon for the speaker Mrs. Mary L. Wade of Atlantic is a member of the club and interested in its work, No one is better qualified to speak on the home than Mrs. Wade and her years of a experience in teaching cooking and demonstrating will give club members a most pleasant hour and later it is hoped that as an outcome of the lecture members will form a cooking class under Mrs. Wade. "Food Values; Marketing and Cooking" will be the subject of Mrs. Wade's lecture.

Preceding Mrs. Wade's lecture there will be a twenty minute talk on "First Aid to the Injured."

A writer in the Boston Record this week says:

"Last winter and again this fall I have heard of many young women who are taking instruction, through one source or another, in first aid to the injured. It is a most interesting subject to almost every one and none can tell how soon the knowledge may result in far more than the demonstration of a mere accomplishment.

Boston people are becoming more, and more devoted to the out-of-door life, and it is to be questioned if any other community equals in this respect. It is relatively a small part of the year that those who are governed only by inclination spend in town, and when out of town all sorts of emergencies occur. A man may be brought limping back from the hay-field cut by a scythe, anyone, may tear his hand on a rusty nail climbing a fence to reach a trout brook, or there may be a twisted ankle.

It is at such times that the young woman with some knowledge of what to do and what not to do shines. When the rest are filled with good intentions, but have no idea what to do, she is able to take command and control the situation until the doctor can arrive, if the case be serious.

However, many injuries that at first seem trivial, and for which no surgeon would be summoned, may readily develop septic conditions; but all the trouble that would be the inevitable result if nothing were done may be forestalled by the young woman who knows that certain tablets should be dissolved in the proper amount of water, the wound bathed in the solution and put up in gauze and collodion. And, too, she must know how to do it."

In the family where there are small children meeting with all kinds of accidents at all hours of the day, what to do as first aid until the doctor arrives is important and often saves a life or much suffering.

The club is interested in establishing a dispensary and has signified to the doctors of Quincy their readiness to cooperate with them if the work should be undertaken. Since the tuberculosis exhibition interest has awakened in Quincy and surely much good will result.

The meeting will be called to order promptly at half past two for a short business session which will precede the lectures.

The football team of the Sixth Grade at the Adams school is out with a challenge to any Sixth Grade team in the city. The boys are anxious to hear from any soccer teams at once. Address communications to the Adams school.

The City Council passed an order Monday night requesting the Mayor to secure in writing, from Charles A. Brigham, whose plans for a four room addition to the Lincoln school building have been accepted by the school committee, to waive all claims for architects fees if the addition should exceed the sum of $12,000. Meanwhile the order is hung up in the City Council. It is a very unusual thing for Quincy to take such a step as this. It is a wise one however and if it had been taken in other cases, the Coddington school for instance, the city would have saved money.

It has become a time honored custom in Quincy when architects compete to furnish plans for new buildings, to submit a low figure for the estimated amount for which said building can be built.

This has considerable weight with the committee and an order is reported appropriating the sum named in the estimate of the architect. Bids are advertised for and when opened it invariably turns out that they are all above the amount appropriated. The result is that an additional amount has to be appropriated. In the case of the Lincoln school the architects estimate was $11,000. The City Council did not believe this sufficient and made the amount $12,000. It now remains to be seen if Mr. Brigham will sign the agreement desired. Failure on his part to do this means that the Lincoln school addition matter must be gone all over again.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. ENJOYED WHITE HOUSE DINNER

Labor Men and Others High In Office at Festive Board

NEWSPAPER MEN ARE BARRED

Argument of Wide Range Regarding Labor's Attitude on Various Questions--President's Interest Awakened In Two Significant Suggestions, but He Does Not Commit Himself on Subjects Discussed

Washington, Nov. 18.—Subjecting his guests, many of whom were representatives of the leading labor organizations of the country, to a rapid crossfire of questions, President Roosevelt last night, at a dinner given by him at the White House, endeavored to find out what labor wants from congress and in what way he could be of assistance to the toilers of the country.

Although the dinner began at 8 o'clock, it was almost midnight before the gathering broke up. No newspaper men were present and the first intimation of what took place was eagerly sought from the guests as they left the White House.

While the president did not commit himself to any of the propositions submitted by the various labor leaders present, it was learned that he sought a full expression of sentiment from all of them. Labor's attitude on various questions was reiterated, it is said, and the president listened interestedly to each argument presented.

The dinner was a complete success, as far as could be learned. A spirit of harmony and co-operation seemed to prevail throughout the evening. No set speeches were made, the president merely rising and explaining to his guests, after the last course had been served, that he had brought them together for an interchange of views on public questions.

Seated at the centre of the long table in the state dining room, which was beautifully decorated with roses, the president talked informally with cabinet officers, members of the United States supreme court and labor leaders. Good fellowship prevailed and occasional flashes of humor or an apropos story enlivened the occasion.

The general impression prevailed among the labor leaders after the dinner that the president's message to congress will show some of the flavor of the conference.

Questioned about the dinner after they came out, several of the labor leaders declared they had enjoyed themselves immensely at the president's table. While none of those who had partaken of the president's hospitality would tell exactly what had been said at the table, they declared that the president had not committed himself on any of the subjects discussed.

Occasionally the labor leaders would become involved in a debate which would terminate in some tangible suggestion being offered. President Roosevelt, in his machine gun questioning, covered, it is said, every possible phase of the labor question. The labor leaders talked without reservation and were free to reiterate their pronounced attitude on some issues to which congress has in the past turned an unwilling ear.

But what seemed most significant of all, both to the president and other government officials present, was the suggestion that congress should pass a bill of rights into which all labor legislation should be incorporated, and should create a publicity board, whose purpose would be to investigate and make public the details of controversies between capital and labor.

The plea for a bill of rights was made by P. H. Morrissey, grand master of the Railway Trainmen, while the publicity board idea was advanced by T. J. Dolan, general secretary-treasurer of the International Brotherhood of Steam Shovel and Dredgemen.

The president's interest in these two propositions was keenly and obviously awakened, but as to his attitude upon them he was non-commital. Although many of the speakers voiced their opposition to the boycott and sympathetic strike propaganda, they urged that congress should better define the injunctive power of the courts and they asked for a modification of both this law and the Sherman anti-trust law. They also wanted congress to define the exact status of labor organizations in strikes and whether they should be permitted to "solicit peacefully."

Every angle of labor's demands was covered, but withal there was no concrete plan threshed out upon which the president may proceed with the conviction that his recommendation on some things will be acceptable to all of the labor interests represented at the dinner.

There was a divergence of opinion on some of the propositions advanced, but one of the leaders stated that the president told his guests that their differences would ultimately result in more comprehensive ideas and that he urged them to get together on everything, if possible, and present a united front.

Found Dead In Her Home

Boston, Nov. 18.—A recluse since the death of her husband, thirteen years ago, Mrs. Mary Maldt, aged 71, was found dead in her home at 25 Gray street by the police. The medical examiner declared the woman had been dead for weeks.

Pastor Resigns

Rev. E. W. Whitney for eighteen years pastor of the Universalist church in Milford read a letter of resignation on Sunday morning stating that family reasons compelled him to accept a generous and unexpected offer to live in Waltham, for many years the home of his parents. He would have no parish in the future.

Mr. Whitney was graduated from Tufts college nearly thirty-five years ago and ordained at Saugus. Since then he has been settled over parishes at Peabody, Cincinnati, O., Brattleboro, Vt., and Milford. Milford people give up his services most reluctantly and regret that the family is to leave the town after so many years residence.

Mrs. Whitney who passed her girlhood in Quincy will be remembered as Frankie French, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles S. French whose home was for many years at the corner of Chestnut and Hancock streets. She is the sister of Mrs. Charles H. Porter and Miss Dora A. French of Adams street, and a frequent visitor to the city.

—Another state—Rhode Island—has commemorated the valor of its soldiers in the Vicksburg National Military park, by the dedication of a beautiful and enduring monument. Glorious lessons attend the solemn ceremonies attendant upon the unveiling of memorials in this Valhalla.

The brotherly love triumphant when the blue and the gray mingle together upon such occasions, challenges the admiration of the world. In no other country are such fraternal celebrations possible, for the conditions obtain nowhere else. The very broadest civilization of all time is thus manifested upon the living altar of patriotism.

If the dead and gone heroes in the palace of immortality, might for a moment lift the veil, who can say but that such memorials would not be some alleviation for dying in their beloved cause? It were well worth fighting for a state that remembers her slain sons on a battlefield thousands of miles away. To the young man it is inspiring, to the patriarch it is gratifying.

Vicksburg is appreciative of these memorial offerings, erected in the great park at her door—destined to be developed by the government and the states into the most celebrated battle park of the universe.—Vicksburg (Miss.) Herald.

☞A donation party is to be held this evening at First church chapel by the Hospital Aid association for the benefit of the Hospital. Little stockings have been distributed to be filled with pennies and donations of all kinds will be welcomed by the committee. There is also to be an entertainment.

KAISER YIELDS TO VON BUELOW

Realizes That Chancellor Represents Empire's Will

JOYFUL SURPRISE IN BERLIN

Barman Monarch Promises to Transact All Affairs of State Through Channels Authorized by the Constitution--On This Assurance Von Buelow Remains In Office--Action Tends Toward Free Government

Berlin, Nov. 18.—Forced by the angry tide of popular feeling that swept the empire from end to end, Emperor William has yielded to the nation and promised henceforth to conform himself to constitutional methods of conducting the policies of Germany.

The climax to the public utterances of the emperor was reached in an interview which he gave to an Englishman, which was published in the London Daily Telegraph on Oct. 28. As the outcome of this the whole country was aroused; the reichstag endorsed the attitude of many of its most prominent members when they denounced the sovereign, and Chancellor Von Buelow, while he attempted to smooth away the affair, undertook to communicate to the emperor a straightforward and unvarnished statement of how the German people viewed his intervention in affairs of state.

EMPEROR WILLIAM.

The interview between the emperor and the imperial chancellor took place yesterday and at its conclusion the emperor made formal promise to his people that he would not in the future act except through the chancellor and his associate ministers. This promise was made public in The Reichsanzeiger, the official gazette of the empire. It was in the form of a note, printed on the front page, where decrees, the texts or treaties and the promulgation of new laws usually appear. It was as follows:

"During today's audience granted to the imperial chancellor, his majesty, the emperor and king, listened for several hours to a report by Prince Von Buelow. The imperial chancellor described the feeling and its causes among the German people in connection with the article published in The Daily Telegraph. He also explained the position he had taken during the course of the debates and interpellations on this subject in the reichstag. His majesty, the emperor, received the statements and explanations with great earnestness and then expressed his will as follows:

"'Heedless of the exaggerations of public criticism, which are regarded by him as incorrect, his majesty perceives that his principal imperial task is to insure the stability of the policies of the empire, under the guardianship of constitutional responsibilities. In conformity therewith, his majesty, the emperor, approves the chancellor's utterances in the reichstag and assures Prince Von Buelow of his continued confidence.'"

Prince Von Buelow had determined upon handing in his resignation if the emperor had not met the country's demands, but as such a situation did not arise, the audience ended with the emperor saying to the chancellor that he reposed full confidence in his wisdom.

Within half an hour after the chancellor's return to Berlin, bulletins issued gratis by the evening newspapers, reporting a favorable issue of the meeting between the emperor and prince, were eagerly snatched by an anxious public, who in the first moment of joyful surprise scarcely conceived the importance of the announcement to themselves and the empire. The whole nation had awaited with breathless suspense the word from the palace which would decide whether Von Buelow would quit his office and the "reign of personal policy" continue, or whether the chancellor would remain and the desire of the people be fulfilled, that the nation as well as the emperor would have a word in directing the policies of the country. It is certain now in the minds of the German people that a great step has been taken toward free government.

Interpreted by the events leading up to it, the least this declaration of the emperor can mean is that he promises to limit his freedom of speech and observe carefully the constitutional forms in taking no initiative without the advice and consent of his ministers

GOVERNMENT HAS FIRM HOLD

Regency Received Everywhere In China With Tranquility

COUNCILLORS SAY IT IS FINAL

Plainly Warn Princes That Any Opposition to Plans Laid Out Will Be Promptly Punished--Run on Banks Ceases--The Dowager Empress Strongly Guarded--Reform Influences Are Well Represented

Pekin, Nov. 18.—The local press is beginning to publish details of the occurrences of Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Up to the present time they have said practically nothing of the events at the palace and the promulgation of the regency.

The new dowager empress, Yehonala, with great presence of mind, arranged that the meetings of the grand council be held in her private apartments. Here a plan that already had been discussed and decided upon was adopted without loss of time. The councillors warned the princes that the regency was final, and in terms that were not open to misinterpretation they expressed the opinion that any opposition thereto would be promptly and adequately met and punished.

The police have succeeded in putting a stop to the runs on the native banks, fourteen of which have closed. The government contract business has been temporarily suspended.

Complete tranquility reigns in the city, and there are fewer gendarmes and sentries patrolling the streets. Four thousand soldiers are on duty at the palace of which Yehomala is in possession. Pu Yi, the heir presumptive, and Prince Chun, the regent, come to the palace daily. The regent is in constant conference with the members of the grand council.

The victory of the reform element and the fact that reform influences are well represented in the new regime have alarmed the Manchu organizations, and Manchu influence and power are thought to be in jeopardy.

Dispatches from the provinces set forth that the regency has everywhere been received with tranquility. The government is in complete power, a fact that testifies to its splendid organization. It is believed that Pekin will remain quiet and that no opportunity for disorder will be permitted.

Waved Stars and Stripes

Paris, Nov. 18.—A dispatch from St. Pierre, Miq., the French islands on the coast of Newfoundland, says that there has been a big manifestation in St. Pierre in favor of free schools. The movement was created by the Clerical party. The people got out of hand and made their way to the house of the governor, where they raised aloft the American flag. They they sung "The Marseilaise" and cried "Vive l'Amerique" and "Vive la Liberte." The trouble grows out of the old question of church and state, and an effort that is being made to establish a clerical or free school in St. Pierre.

Fire at Roosevelt Hospital

New York, Nov. 18.—Fire was discovered in the laundry at Roosevelt hospital this morning. An alarm was sounded and the orderlies and clerks of the institution hurriedly manned the standpipes in the building. Smoke penetrated into the wards, but the patients remained in their cots. The fire was quickly extinguished. It is believed the fire was caused by an explosion of gas.

Verdict Against Standard Oil

Des Moines, Nov. 18.—In a suit for damages brought by the Crystal Oil company of Des Moines against the Standard Oil company of Indiana, a jury returned a verdict of $6120 in favor of the plaintiff. It was alleged in the complaint that the Standard Oil company of Indiana, by unfair methods, had damaged the plaintiff's business.

THE
Young Men's Christian Association
OF QUINCY, MASS.
(Legal Title—Incorporated 1892.)

The Directors of the YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION of Quincy, with a firm faith in the great value of the work which is being done for the young men and boys of our city, make their appeal for donations and bequests toward paying the mortgage indebtedness on the new Association Building. When the building is free from debt it will serve as an Endowment, as there is a goodly income from the dormitories.

Should the Donor prefer, such sum as might be given could be used as an Endowment for an educational class or classes, the Boys Department, or as a special fund in other ways, and could be designated with the name of the Donor.

The Treasurer, WILLIAM F. CUMMINGS, 7 Clive Street, Quincy, or the General Secretary, ERNEST G. GAY, will be happy to answer inquiries.

OUR HOSPITAL

(Legal Title: City Hospital of Quincy)
INCORPORATED 1889

The Trustees of the City Hospital of Quincy earnestly appeal for donations and bequests for the Endowment fund. This now amounts to over $60,000 out a fund of at least $100,000 is urgently needed.

Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000) will endow a Free Bed to which such name may be given as the Donor may desire, but any sum for this noble institution which stands ready to serve us all in the hour of need will be most gratefully received.

The Secretary, TIMOTHY REED, Adams Street, Quincy, or the Treasurer, RICHARD D. CHASE, Quincy Savings Bank Building, Quincy, will be very glad to confer with any one or to answer any inquiries.

BUSINESS BADLY TANGLED

Van Vlissinger's Forgeries Prove to Be Remarkably Clever

Chicago, Nov. 18.—Peter VanVlissingen, arrested Monday and quickly sentenced to prison for forgeries which may reach $700,000, has decided to forego his desire to begin serving his sentence immediately. He will be held in Chicago a short time to aid in untangling his business affairs, which the Chicago Title and Trust company, assignee, found in a snarled condition. So clever were his forgeries of notes and mortgages that the assignees were unable to tell the genuine from the spurious and they had to be referred to the prisoner.

VanVlissingen's former office, now tenanted by the clerks of the assignee, was besieged by holders of paper purchased from the confessed forger.

The spurious paper so far brought to light is said to constitute but a small portion of the total loss. Eighty thousand dollars is the amount thus far unearthed, most of which was in the hands of prominent local brewers. A large number of people in moderate circumstances were swindled, however, for various sums.

The prisoner persisted in his refusal to see old friends, many of whom called to offer aid and moral support.

It is learned that VanVlissingen lost about $300,000 in the last five years in exploiting a salve for skin diseases.

GOVERNMENT BY COMMISSION

Citizens of Haverhill Greatly Interested In New Plan

Haverhill, Mass., Nov. 18.—For the first time under the new city charter, patterned after the Des Moines plan of government by commission, caucuses for the nomination of city officials were held yesterday. The two candidates for mayor to be nominated were former Mayor Moulton, who received 2047 votes, and Mayor Wood, who seeks a sixth term, and who received 1623 votes.

The unusual interest aroused in this new plan of government was evidenced by the heaviest vote cast in the city's history, when 6514 citizens out of a total registration of 8034 went to the polls. The weather was ideal.

There were seven candidates for the mayoralty nomination, but under the charter only the two receiving the most votes go before the voters for the election, which comes Dec. 8. In addition to the mayoralty nominations there were four nominations for alderman for one year, four for two years, four members of the school board for one year and four for two years.

Women voters to the number of 322 cast ballots for members of the school board.

Paying Too Much For Music

Boston, Nov. 18.—The finance commission sent in a report to the mayor last night, recommending that the music department of the city be abolished and that the open air concerts be under the supervision of the park department, while the school committee should look after the winter concerts. The commission declares the city would save $12,000 a year by following such procedure. The city pays an average of $142.72 for each concert, while the state gets the same or better service from the bands for $56.63.

Neck Broken by Elevator

Waterbury, Conn., Nov. 18.—John H. Jones, 25 years old, an elevator operator employed at the Scovill Manufacturing company, was found hanging by his neck, which was broken, between the elevator and a floor beam on the first floor of the factory. There was no eye-witness to the accident.

Chapter 14

THE train for Chicago is perfectly wonderful, not like an ordinary, human kind of train at all. I'm in it now, and have been writing everything about the wedding and what happened afterward because I have a whole room of my own and I'm much too excited to sleep.

There's a bed in the room—not a hard shelf, but quite a wide, springy bed, with an electric light close by the pillow; there are walls made of mirrors; there's a sofa, a washhand stand and a palm leaf fan; there's netting in the window so that you can have it open without getting black, and there would be plenty of places to put my things if I'd brought three times as many. But better than anything else, there's a soft, sweet, brown maid who goes with the room and isn't an extra. She's the same brown as the porters, only paler than most, and the train wasn't ten minutes outside New York when she appeared to ask what she could do for me. There was nothing at the time, but she didn't go away. She looked about for a minute, then pouncing on the palm leaf she began to fan me, slowly and gracefully, not holding on by anything, though the train was hurling itself through the state of New York apparently with the speed in which light travels around the world. (I never could remember how many times it can do the whole distance in a minute, but whatever it is, it has the air of being a boast.)

I thanked her a good deal and said I wouldn't trouble her any more, though it was very nice, but she kept straight on, like a mechanical doll, until I felt that in common humanity I ought to fan her. If any one in England, especially any one in her position (only there aren't such positions), had asked half as many questions as she did people would be extremely surprised and offended, but I would defy even the crossest person to be offended with this soft brown thing. It would have been too ungrateful not to answer her nicely when she was keeping my flies at bay with extreme inconvenience to herself, so I admitted that I was English, told what county I came from, how long I'd been in the States, where I'd been staying, how I liked America, where I was going now, and ended up by satisfying her as to my age and whether I had a mother. I also stated that I was neither married nor engaged. The dear creature rewarded me for all this by telling me a great deal about herself and her relatives, and a church picnic she attended last Sunday, where there were more young gentlemen than ladies—"which always makes parties so nice for us girls."

"I must say that's a mighty pretty hat you've got," said she at last. "I reckon it came from England. And my, but that is a sweet waist! I'd give my life for that waist."

If I had had a twin sister of the sweet waist with me I couldn't have resisted pressing it upon her, and I don't believe she would have refused.

As soon as Mr. Brett got me nicely settled in my room he said we wouldn't meet again during the journey. I was sorry and wanted to know why, so he explained that his ticket was different from mine. I hope that is the only reason, really, and that it isn't because he thinks he ought not to be traveling with me. I suppose he is going second class.

I did miss him at dinner, which I had in a grand restaurant car about half a mile away from me in the train. It was fun being there, seeing all the people and being served by fascinating black waiters, but it would have been more fun with him. I longed to exclaim to Mr. Brett about the glorious sunset which marched with us along the Hudson river for an enchanted hour, and I couldn't half enjoy it for wondering every minute as it changed from one beauty to another whether he were watching too.

We have tenderly radiant sunsets at home, which I love, but they're not startlingly magnificent as in America, where all things—even cloud effects—are managed on such a sensational scale. I saw some skies to remember in Newport, though never one like this, but perhaps the magical charm of it was partly dependent on the gleaming river.

When the daylight blue had faded there was a kind of dusky lull; then, as if flames leaped up out of the clear water, river and mountains and sky ran gold, reddening slowly till the color burned deep and vivid at the heart of a rose. From crimson was born violet, soft blue violet that hung like a robe over the mountains, while the living azure of the river was slashed with silver, and as one gazed and gazed, afraid to turn away, there broke a sudden flood of amethyst light out of the floating haze. It was dazzling for a moment, but before one realized the change the brilliance had been drunk up by purple shadows. The outline of trees and foothills melted into the pansy gloom, and, at last, with one dying quiver of light, all warmth of color was blotted out. Water and sky paled to a pensive gray-blue, and, as the French say, "it made night."

There was a tremendous menu for dinner, such as we used to have for breakfast on shipboard, and droves of things whose names I'd never heard before. Just for curiosity I ordered several of the strangest, and some of them were a great success. For instance, there was "succotash," which sounds as if it might be a guttural insult flung at the mouth of one red Indian brave by another, but when it was (figuratively speaking) flung at mine by a black waiter it turned out to be something more in the nature of a compliment. It looked like beryls mixed with pearls, though it was really only green beans stirred up with American corn, and the two got on so well together you felt they had been born for each other.

It's now about 2 o'clock in the morning, and it seems as if we must have raced across half America, but we have a long, long way to go still, so says the soft brown thing, who looked in on me about an hour ago to ask in a casual way whether, if she should go to Europe to live, she might not be taken for an Italian?

When I was a little girl and my nurse used to make up tales to put me to sleep at night, I would sometimes get impatient and tell her to "go down into the story and find out what happened next." Just now I feel as if that is what I should like to do in my future.

FIGHTING TUBERCULOSIS.

According to a statement issued by the National association for the study and prevention of tuberculosis there are today in the United States 211 associations with a total membership of more than 20,000 engaged in an active war on consumption, and if the present rate of increase is sustained it is estimated that this number will be doubled within a year.

The states which lead in the number of these associations are headed by Massachusetts with 26, the others being New Jersey 22, New York 19, Michigan 16, Pennsylvania 14. Thirty-five states have each one or more.

That these organizations are instrumental in saving life is shown by the reduced death rate in several states and cities. In Boston the death rate, through the work of the local association, was reduced from 21.70 to 18.46 percent.

The dispensary, a place to which any one who thinks or knows he has consumption may go and be examined and be given advice and treatment free of charge or for a nominal fee, is one of the phases in the antituberculosis campaign that is receiving strong support. Four years ago there were only 19 dispensaries in the country; today there are 165 and new ones are being established at the rate of one a week.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

George Morrisey and John Morrisey have severed their connection with S. Penniman & Son.

Large flocks of noisy geese flying southward and snow flurries indicate that winter is most here.

The removal of the sign boards between Dr. Jones and Chase's bake house is a decided improvement in the looks of Hancock street.

The time for filing nomination papers of candidates to be voted for at the coming municipal election expires at 5 o'clock tonight.

C. A. Coburn, field secretary of the state work and E. C. Norman, college secretary, will speak at a members' supper at the local Y. M. C. A. this evening.

Coming Events Of Y. M. C. A

The third annual Y. M. C. A. road race on Thanksgiving morning will be held as usual this year. A new departure will be made in allowing any man or boy in Quincy to run whether he is a member of the Y. M. C. A. or not. The only qualification is that he must be a registered amateur.

The prizes will be donated by public spirited citizens and will be the best that have been offered.

As in former years the course will be down Hancock street to Wollaston depot, Beal street to East Milton depot; Adams and Willard streets to West Quincy depot; Copeland street to Brewers corner; then through Granite street to the association building.

The record for the course is held by Richard Jones, the small giant of the Gym, who also has the distinction of being the longest in active Gym work of association members.

It is hoped that a large number of non members will enter the race. A large number of Scotch and English runners who work at the shipyard should enter and help promote the sport. Entries should be made to G. S. Maxwell.

Directors Dinner

A party of twenty-two Y. M. C. A. directors and committee men attended a meeting and dinner at Ford hall, Boston, Tuesday afternoon and evening. The principal speakers were: Dr. George W. Tupper, on the "Newer American", P. L. Gillette, International Secretary for Seoul, Korea, Dr. G. J. Fisher, International Secretary for physical work, Col. Halford of the army, and Robert E. Spear of New York. The last two spoke at the dinner and gave masterly addresses along the line of personal service.

The Quincy Association Boys' orchestra of eight pieces furnished the music during the afternoon and evening doing great credit to themselves and to the association. This is a new organization and is composed of the following boys, E. Lee Brooks, Everett Rhodes, Theodore Corey, S. Corliss Berry, Harry Smith, Alex Wendall Clarke, William Manning, Lester H. Clee.

Arrested for Setting Fire

William St. Pierre was arrested by Chief Burrell and Inspector McKay Tuesday night on a warrant charging him with burning insured property.

St. Pierre, is a bicycle dealer and accupied a store in the building at 1653 Hancock street owned by Charles M. Jenness.

The building was discovered to be on fire on the night of Nov. 5. The fire was located in a blind stairway in the rear of the store occupied by St. Pierre.

The fire was in a pile of old hay and when the firemen arrived they detectd a strong odor of kerosene oil.

The damage to the building was estimated at $500 largely by smoke.

Chief William became suspicious that all was not right and notified the state Fire Marshal who made an investigation.

It is alleged that St. Pierre was seen to leave the building a few minutes before the fire.

The police also say that a few days after the fire St. Pierre put in a claim for a $500 fire damage loss.

In court this morning he was held in $1000 until Nov. 25.

State Election Celebrated

The Scandinavian Republican club celebrated the party victory at the recent state election Tuesday evening by a jollification gathering in Protection hall.

William Gelotte president of the club was in the presiding officer's chair and there was a large attendance of members.

Others present were Senator-elect Eugene C. Hultman, Representative-elect William R. Thomas and Louis F. R. Langelier, President Ralph W. Hobbs of the City Council and Eugene R. Stone, Republican candidate for Mayor.

All of the gentlemen were called upon for remarks and expressed their pleasure at the large Republican vote polled at the recent election and looked for a still larger vote and victory at the coming election.

Candidate Stone outlined his idea of how the administration of city affairs should be conducted.

He spoke particularly of the liquor law. Also of the valuation of real estate about which many complaints are now heard. If elected he should see that the liquor law was inforced and that a fair valuation was placed on property.

After the speaking refreshments were served and there was a social hour.

Anti-Tuberculosis Association

A large number of physicians of Quincy met Tuesday night at the residence of Dr. John A. Gordon and agreed to organize an anti-tuberculosis association for the relief, control and prevention of tuberculosis in Quincy. An adjourned meeting will be held next Tuesday evening, November 24, at Colonial hall. All persons in Quincy interested in this movement are earnestly requested to be present when a permanent organization will be formed.

WOLLASTON SOCIAL SOCIETY.

A meeting of the Wollaston Social society was held in the Unitarian vestry on Tuesday evening. After a short business meeting, partners were chosen and five minute conversations were in order upon such momentous subjects as: "Should bachelors be taxed," "At what age is a girl an old maid," and others equally interesting. Numbered slips of paper were then passed and various would-be artists drew on the board the animal allotted to him which the rest attempted to guess.

A reading by Miss Marjorie Fay and vocal selections by Miss Poore, accompanied by Mrs. Moulton were enjoyed during the evening. Going to Jerusalem and kindred games were also played. Light refreshments were served.

Today's Court.

George Richardson was arraigned for violation of the automobile law at Quincy. Case continued until Friday.

Joseph McCarthy was fined $5 for drunkenness at Quincy.

James Regan of Braintree, who was fined $25 ror carrying a loaded revolver and $15 for drunkenness and was defaulted came into court and paid his fines.

Roosevelt Praises Y. W. C. A.

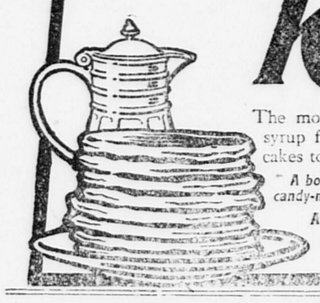

Washington, Nov. 18.—"I doubt if there is a movement among the movements that one can broadly term philanthropic which better deserves the interest and support of our people than the movement for Young Women's Christian Associations." Thus spoke President Roosevelt to a gathering of young women of Washington who called at the White House on the president's invitation to receive his congratulations on the splendid work being done by the Young Women's Christian Association in this city.

Masonic Visitation

There was a very large attendance at the special communication of Wollaston Masonic lodge, Tuesday evening, the occasion being the official visitation of Rt. Wor. Herbert F. French, D. D. G. M. of the twenty-fourth Masonic district.

On his suit were Wor. Bro. Frank B. Granger of Norfolk Union lodge of Randolph as Grand Marshal; Wor. Bor. Hartley L. White of Rural lodge of Quincy as Grand Senior Warden; Wor. Bro. Edgar W. Farwell of Paul Revere lodge of Brockton as Grand Junior Warden; Wor. Bro. George A. Warren of Paul Revere lodge of Brockton as Grand Treasurer and Wor. Bro. O. P. Dickerman of John Cutler lodge of Abington as Grand Secretary.

Others on the suit were: Wor. Bro. Edward Lawton of Caleb Butler lodge of Ayer; Wor. Bro. A. H. HoHlbrook of Norfolk Union lodge Randolph; Wor. Bro. Thomas J. Breen of Cordwainaw Ward lodge of London, England; Wor. Bro. Roy F. Allen of Puritan lodge of Whitman; Wor. Bro. William H. Cook of Puritan lodge Whitman and Wor. Bro. S. A. Hargraves of DeWitt Clinton lodge of Sandwich.

The work of the evening was the third degree which was exemplified in a fine manner by the officers of Wollaston lodge.

After the work the deputy took occasion to compliment the officers on their work. He also had a word to say on the Masonic Home subject which was very gratifying to Wollaston lodge. This was that Wollaston lodge came within a few dollars of being the banner lodge of the twenty-fourth district in the amount contributed. Rural lodge of Quincy being first.

Wollaston lodge was the youngest lodge in the district but had grown to be a bouncing baby.

There were something like 1900 Masons affiliated with the lodges in this district and they had contributed over $4,000 toward the new home.

Wollaston lodge has been very prosperous this year under Wor. Master Sidney F. Copeland. During the year it has added twenty-three to its membership. Death has removed two members and three have been demitted. This leaves the total membership to date as 188. Wollaston lodge was instituted Jan. 2, 1900 and its growth has been remarkable.

Day Nursery Reception Day

The Quincy Day Nursery association and all friends of the nursery are cordially invited on Saturday afternoon from two until four o'clock to inspect the new home at 76 Garfield street near Brewers corner, into which the nursery was compelled to move in September, having outgrown its former home. Also to learn of the good work being done by the nursery in aiding deserving mothers who are obliged to go out from their homes seeking employment to support themselves and their children.

Some of the women are widows, others whose husbands have deserted their family and often times the father is sick and unable to work. The mothers are self respecting women who show and express the greatest gratitude in having a place to leave their dear little children where they have the care and attenion that is bestowed upon them.

The nursery does not permit to go unrelieved any cases that come to their attention of mothers temporarily unable from sickness or other sufficient cause, to earn their living. So we occasionally "Cast our bread upon the waters" therefore, thought this is reception day it will be perfectly in order and will be heartily welcomed if freinds send donations of any kind. We feel that we can justly claim a right to be included in the ranks of those contributing to aid the worthy poor of Quincy.

—A gentleman in Chicago is accused of filing six petitions in bankruptcy in five years. It is apparent that he was guilty of gross carelessness in not filing some of them somewhere else.

Doctors

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is a doctor's medicine. Doctors prescribe it, endorse it. Use it or not, as your doctor says.

You could not please us better than to ask your doctor about Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis. Thousands of families always keep it in the house. The approval of their physician and the experience of many years have given them great confidence in this cough medicine.

Foot Ball And Other Sports

There is talk of forming a cross-country team at Quincy High school, and considerable interest is being shown. Cross-country running is a sport that should be developed around Boston, the home of track sports. New England in general is behind in this sport, and should wake up to the fact right away.

Now that the football season is drawing to a close basket-ball is beginning to boom. Several games have already been played and in another month this popular indoor game will be in full swing. This game is getting to be more and more popular every winter and many games are scheduled for every night through the season.

The followers of long-distance running are anxiously waiting for the big race between Dorando, the Italian who was pushed and half carried across the tape in the Olympic Marathon, and John Hayes, to whom the race was given when Dorando was disqualified. The race will be run over again on Thanksgiving eve in Madison square garden, New York City.

Dorando arrived in the Metropolis yesterday and will immediately start training for the big event. Many, especially the English, claim the London race should have been given to the Italian, but about this there can be no argument. The fact is Dorando did not finish. The very fact that he was carried across the line shows this. Of course in reality he finished but technically did not.

However, it should be a grand race, for the little son of Italy is certainly a wonderful runner. He was not in the condition that Hayes was in and that was the cause of his defeat. Dorando should put up a good race against Hayes, but he will have a hard time beating his little American rival.

The injuries from football do not seem to decrease, even though there has been a radical change in the rules. In fact there has been an increase, for thus far 272 injuries have been reported, while 10 accidents had fatal results. Although the deaths are 14 less, there are 72 more injuries than there were in 1905, when the record prompted coaches to change the rules. These figures include college, high school and athletic club players.

Relatives Found

The police succeeded Tuesday in finding the relatives of the two men who died suddenly the night before.

They found that James Ryan, the coachman for Henry E. Hardwick, had a brother named Thomas H. Ryan who resided in South Boston. He was notified and came to Quincy for the body this morning.

Through the Charlestown police they were able to trace the man Mahoney who was found dead in a South street boarding house.

It was found that he formerly worked in Charlestown and that his name was John A. Mahoney.

The only relative he was known to have was a Thomas Mahoney who resided in Brooklyn, N. Y. The police telegraphed him but had received no response up to noon.

Norfolk County And Vicinity

Senator Jenney of HYDE PARK is seriously ill with appendicitis at the Corey Hill hospital in Brookline.

Rev. Melvin Nash of Hanover well-known in this vicinity, being pastor for several years over the Universalist churches at WEYMOUTH and NORTH WEYMOUTH, is a candidate for the presidency of the Senate. Mr. Nash has been Representative for two terms and is conversant with affairs at the State House.

It is reported from Boothby Hospital that Edward Fahey, the RANDOLPH boy, who was accidentally shot two weeks ago, is rapidly getting well and will be home soon.

The annual meeting and banquet of the St. Mary's T. A. S. of STOUGHTON was held last evening. After the banquet a pleasing entertainment was given.

Our Methods Save You Money

To every wage earner who runs a house, our proposition is a money saver. Some folks have the Boston buying fever, and think no one in Quincy can sell as cheaply as Boston stores.

Here's our proposition—Find any piece of furniture, any rug or carpet offered for sale in any store in Boston—give us the number or style of the article and the Boston price and we agree to sell you the identical article at from 5 to 20 per cent lower. Just try this proposition for your own information. We are saving money for thousands of families, we can do the same for you. Its volume of business we want and we are getting it too. We are satisfied with a pinch of profit—the rest is all for you.

Stocking Social

A person who had a small foot and stuck strictly to the announcement was able to obtain admittance to the stocking social and donation party for a small sum.

The affair was for the benefit of the Quincy City Hospital and was held in the chapel of the First church under the auspices of the Hospital Aid society.

Some days ago envelopes, directed to nearly every family were sent through the mail. With the announcement of the social and donation party were a pair of calico socks. Not much care was given to see that the socks were mates in color for they would answer the purpose just as well if not mated.

On the inside page of the announcement the use to which the stocking was to be put was set forth in blank verse. In brief it was that the receiver should place inside money just twice the size of the sock they wore. It was a novelty in its way and made a hit.

Owing to the fact that there were a number of events scheduled for Wednesday evening the social was not as well attended as it would otherwise have been. Many however who were unable to attend called long enough to drop their stocking in the bowl near the door. In this manner something over $50 was received.

Every body who left a sock stuck to the text. Some however, perhaps a little modest as to making public the size of their sock stuffed it out with a dollar bill. These were the kind of stockings that brought happy smiles to the faces of the ladies in charge.

On the platform in the chapel was a tea table at which Mrs. Harry L. Rice poured. There was also a table where there was tea, candy and some other articles for sale presided over by Mrs. Joseph C. Morse and a donation table upon which donations for the hospital could be left.

The program for the evening was a very entertaining one. It opened with a piano solo by Miss Lucy Newcomb. Then there came a group of songs by Mrs. Ross K. Whiton and readings by Miss Minie-Reese Richardson.

Miss Richardson is a pupil of the Emerson school of oratory and her readings were a delight to the audience. She was down on the program for two numbers and response to encores gave two more. Her selections were well chosen and Miss Richardson will be sure of a warm welcome when she again appears in Quincy.

Mrs. Whiton's voice is familiar to Quincy audiences and it is only necessary to say that her selections were equally as pleasing on this occasion as at other times.

Miss Newcomb's selections at the piano were also very pleasing.

NOMINATION PAPERS FILED

For Mayor And Council Wilson Papers Not Filed

The time for filing nomination papers of candidates to be voted for at the municipal election Dec. 1, expired at 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. In order to have the papers accepted however it was necessary that they should be in the hands of the Registrars of Voters before that time.

Before the City Clerk could accept a paper it must bear the signatures of the registrars certifying that it contained the requisite number of names.

In order to examine papers promptly the board was in session all of the afternoon.

But three sets of papers were filed and these all came in early. The first were a set of several nominating William T. Shea as a Citizens candidate for Mayor.

The other papers filed were those nominating George H. Corliss as a Republican Independent candidate for Councilman from Ward Two and Robert J. Teasdale as a Citizen's candidate for Councilman from Ward Four.

Mr. Shea already has the Democratic nomination for Mayor and Mr. Teasdale the Republican nomination for councilman.

Some surprise is expressed that the papers of George H. Wilson about which there has been considerable talk were not filed. These were expected up to the last minute but although the registrars were in session until 5 o'clock they did not come.

The same was true of the papers taken out by the Socialists. They were expected up to the last minute.

The only other paper out that was not returned was that of Alfred N. LaBrecque as Councilman from Ward One.

Mr. LaBrecque was defeated for the nomination at the caucuses and took out papers. He had the required number of signatures to his paper but for some reason decided not to file them.

QUINCY CHORAL SOCIETY.

At the third rehearsal of the Quincy Choral society on Wednesday evening, earnest work on the oratorio of Elijah was resumed under Conductor Wonson, a large number attending. It is decided that the society shall give only one concert this season, probably in February, when "Elijah" will be given, the chorus to be assisted by eminent soloists and a first class orchestra. Everything pertaining to the success of the undertaking is now favorable. Treasurer John F. Hunt reports a paid active membership of more than seventy, and new members are leaving their names at each meeting. The executive board means, if possible, to carry out plans which shall insure a firm financial basis, long life and successful work to the Choral society. Every music lover in Quincy will join in wishing them success.

Second Night Of Minstrels

The minstrel show of the Quincy Point social club was repeated last night and it was even better than the performance the night before. The experience of the first night put the chorus and ends on edge, and they were full of life from start to finish.

The house was packed to the doors, every seat being filled 20 minutes before the performance began. The large attendance was a great tribute to the popularity of the club members and to the reputation they have made as high-class entertainers.

"Dom" Keegan the director, was there strong, and he never appeared to better advantage. "Dom" deserves great credit for the wonderful way in which the show was carried out.

All the features of the first night were given and the applause that came as each feature was presented was surely gratifying to all. Each of the sketches showed great work and faithful drilling. The black-face sketch, with Anna Daly and Master George Keegan, was the hit of the evening and was encored time after time.

"Din" Sweeney was the same old favorite, and brought down the house with his parodies on that catchy song entitled, "Mother hasn't spoke to Father since." Several prominent Quincy men were knocked by this minstrel boy, and the audience showed its appreciation by applauding "Din" to the echo.

There was a large number of Elks present, they coming to see their brother Elk, "Ed" Courtney, who acted as interlocutor. "Ed" was at his best last night and the Elks gave him a great reception when he stepped upon the stage. He was knocked once or twice but took it in good part, for all Elks are used to knocking.

The Quincy Point Social club has led the way now for putting on minstrel shows, and it will be hard for any other local club to surpass their efforts. These shows will be held annually. Last year the show was run one night, this year two, next year it will be three nights and then the performance will be put on for a week running.

After the performance, dancing was enjoyed till 3. The crowd stayed all the time, and when the last waltz was played, one could hardly notice the difference between numbers at that time and at the beginning of the dance.

The floor was in charge of Edward P. Histen, president of the club, and Dennis S. Sweeney was assistant floor director. They were assisted by the following aids:—Herbert Baker, Jere Coffey, George C. Costello, Thos. H. Fallon, H. Fred Lalley, Joseph Matthews, James Sullivan, George Thompson, Francis Sweeney, John J. Fallon, William A. Carey, Harry Histen, Peter Sullivan,, Edwin Donovan, Robert Smith, Russell Sullivan, James Elcock, Guy Baker, Joseph Monahan.

A buffet lunch was served during the entire evening by A. J. Lacroix.

With the orchestra playing "Home Sweet Home," the merry dancers ceased their jollification, and the second annual was a matter of history.

GRANITE CITY WHIST.

Eight tables participated in the weekly whist tournament at the Granite City club Wednesday evening. Some good scores were made W. W. Ewell scoring 75 percent and J. H. Johnson 74 percent. There were likewise some equally low scores.

The booby honor score was 10 points won and 52 lost or 16 percent. The lunch served after the play included sandwiches, home made doughnuts, coffee, crackers and cheese.

Newspaper Extras

George B. Gavin, assistant day editor of the Boston Globe gave an address before the pupils of the Stetson High school at Randolph Wednesday on 'Extra Editions of Newspapers."

Mr. Gavin, to illustrate his subject, took the "Extras" which were issued by the Globe on the day of the Chelsea conflagration. He explained in a very lucid manner the perfect system by which the office force was gathered together from greater Boston and even as far as Plymouth.

The celerity with which this paper was issued with a very incomplete corps of workers. In a happy vein he related some of the amusing incidents connected with the event.

Mr. Gavin held the rapt attention of the pupils during his entire talk.

WOULD UNITE CIVIC CLUBS.

Edward K. Summerwell of New York, read a paper on "A new Type of Club Life." In the course of it he said:

"My purpose is to make a special plea for a new and better type of club life. Local clubs or societies are the mainspring of civic activity. They are the media through which the plans of the great national bodies reach the mass of our people. Through them charity in all its forms is dispensed and civic interest is nurtured and maintained. To them we are indebted for the working out of our most notable reforms. Yet, in some important respects, they are structurally unsound, and they usually fall far short of attaining the best results. In nearly every community we have a number of clubs. They embrace a wide variety of objects, but usually tend toward social and civic betterment in one form or another. Among them may be named charity bureaus, civic study clubs, improvement societies, settlement clubs, university extensions and the wide range of women's clubs. Membership is usually confined to one sex, and the clubs are usually built around a single idea or have been organized for specific work. The result is the maintenance of a large number of small, weak clubs, each struggling along with inadequate membership and wasting time in fruitless efforts to increase the membership and raise the funds necessary for the specific work in hand.

"The waste of valuable time in conducting the work of such societies is appalling. Each requires its full quota of officers, governing boards and committees. Each meeting consumes an entire afternoon or evening, often with meagre results, whereas the actual work could readily be accomplished in a short time and the residue devoted to other work. Upon the plan I propose several "sections" will meet concurrently, thus utilizing the time and attaining the maximum results. One of the worst features of the present plan is the division of interest between the male and female members of a family. All are really intent upon the same good work. Nothing occurs at these meetings in which all could not properly participate. The great defect in the present system is the lack of coordination. Clubs often overlap and trench upon each other, engendering jealousies and bickerings. Thus time, money and efforts are wasted, and the public interest weaned away from meritorious causes, merely for lack of a system under which these forces may be properly directed.

"My idea is that the small local clubs should be coordinated and strengthened through the formation of a strong central body in each community. This should be a large, popular club, embracing men and women, old and young, of all creeds and beliefs. It should be non-sectarian and non-political. It should embrace the best features of existing social and civic clubs, but should relegate the details to proper sections or departments, so arranged as to deal effectively with specific subjects, merged in or affiliated with the main body. Members of the main body should be entitled to become members of the sections merely by registering their names therein or upon compliance with certain simple requisites, and they should be allowed to resign from one section and join another at will, without affecting their membership in the main body. The plan of dividing the general work which good citizens are interested in in one form or another into appropriate sections, which one may enter or leave as conditions may require, offers a means of enlisting an increased interest in this work."—Boston Transcript.

Electa hall was well filled Wednesday evening with members of Maple lodge, K. and L. of H. It was a most pleasant and enjoyable evening and a good time was enjoyed by all. The D. D. P., Mrs. Cunningham and other members from Somerville were special guests. After the business meeting a salad supper was enjoyed under the direction of Mrs. C. G. Fletcher and an able score of assistants followed by an entertainment which was enjoyed for two hours. This is only one of the many good times that is looked forward to during the coming winter.

Fall Show Mens Club

The annual fall show of the Christ church Men's club, was held Wednesday evening at the parish house. There was a large attendance present, and the concert was enjoyed very much. All the members were encored several times which lengthened the programme out considerably.

The feature of the evening was the Riverside Male Quartette of Boston. This quartette had been heralded as one of the best in the business, and it certainly lived up to its reputation. The quartette was accompanied by a reader, Mr. Gaston Hill, and his readings were high class and very much appreciated.

The first number on the programme was a selection by the quartette entitled "Onward." This is a beautiful composition and it was rendered in excellent fashion. It was encored several times.

This was followed by a reading by Mr. Hill, "Signs of the Times." Mr. Hill is a wonderful elocutionist and he was forced to come on time after time.

The local talent had a chance next, and a baritone solo by J. Edward Rollins brought forth much applause. Clarence Fouche, the well-known Quincy piano player, followed with a piano solo by request.

The rest of the programme consisted of selections by the quartette and readings by Mr. Hill, interpersed with piano solos by Mr. Fouche, and tenor solos by Charles Johnson.

The programme was concluded by a selection "Good Night" by the quartette, which was the best of the evening.

The entertainment committee are to be commended for their judgment in selecting the talent for such a concert. It is hard to get something to suit everybody, but the committee in this case succeeded very well.

COUNCIL CRITICISED.

Editor Daily Ledger:

I would like through your columns to protest against the many wasteful and unnecessary orders which are forever and eternally brought up in the City Council. The one I shall write about now, very briefly, is the motion of last Monday night by Councilman Whiton for the sum of $5,000 for a new engine to take the place of the old one.

Let me right here ask, has the old one ever paid? I think not. You may ask how I figure it out that way.

Well lets see—we'll say, $5,000 for an engine; $4,000 for horses and keep (basis of 10 years) engineer and driver about $16,000, making a total of $25,000, which I think is underestimated. Has it paid for its keep? I think not.

Not since the Music hall fire has it paid its "wash bill" so to speak, and might not then if the present high pressure hydrant water had been installed. How many fires in the past few years has it been thought necessary to use the engine? Not many. Our buildings are not high enough or crowded together enough to pay for what to me, seems an unnecessary expenditure of the taxpayers' money. The time has got to come when the taxpayers will have to call a halt—if the Councilmen don't. If we had not had an engine we could have had that $1250 interest money to help out on our ever increasing debt. Every little bit added to a little makes a little bit more—whether debt or credit. I should like to write about a large fire etc., how the present engine could be used, the relief, and outside call, but time will not allow.

Yours for retrenchment.
W. Harvey Dunbar.

SURPRISE PARTY.

There was a large gathering at Electa hall on Tuesday evening when a surprise party was tendered to Thomas Hennessey. Miss Ellen Nelson made the presentation speech.

Games were played during the evening and there was an impromptu entertainment. There were solos by M. Dillon and C. Johnson and selection by the Water street quartet.

A feature of the evening was a song composed by the Rank A. A. baseball team and sung by the Cranch sextette.

After the entertainment dancing was enjoyed until 12, Richardson's orchestra furnishing the music. Refreshments were served during the evening.

If it is desired to preserve the glass in the windows at the Adams Acaemy building it will be necessary to board them up. Already several windows have been smashed by stones being thrown through them and others are sure to follow. It is a great temptation to boys to throw a stone through a glass window.

The failure to file papers nominating George H. Wilson as a candidate for Mayor as well as the failure of the Socialists to file the papers which they took out means that the contest for the chief office in the gift of the citizens of Quincy is narrowed down between Mayor Shea and Eugene R. Stone. From what is known of both gentlemen, it means that the contest while keen will be free from the objectionable features that have characterized many of the elections in Quincy in other years. In addition to the regular nomination of the Democratic party Mayor Shea's name on the ballot wil also be followed by the word "citizens" as papers nominating him as such were filed. These papers contained 250 signatures.

No Socialists papers of any kind having been filed it means that for the first time for years there will be no names on the official ballot of that party. Papers for Mayor and Councilmen at Large were taken out but for some reason they were not returned.

COMPLEXION OF REICHSTAG

It Blocks German Aspiration For Free Government

INTEREST OF CONSERVATIVES

It Lies In Keeping Emperor and Cabinet Free From Parliament Control--Multiplicity of the Parties Prevents Bringing Together of Elements Capable of Working Together Harmoniously

Berlin, Nov. 19.—The German emperor has given his imperial pledge to hold himself within close constitutional bounds hereafter in matters concerning affairs of state, but, though the situation has cleared, serious questionings have arisen in political circles as to the significance of the emperor's action with respect to the future relations between the reichstag and the executive branch of the government.

While calm observers interpret the emperor's surrender of what he had considered his prerogative as registering a remarkable victory for public opinion, they fully recognize the fact that it leaves Germany far removed from popular government. The emperor, it is pointed out, yielded to the most impressive demonstration of the people's will ever seen in Germany, but such an occasion can hardly arise once in a generation, when the minds of the whole people are fixed with such unanimity upon a single demand, as in this case.

Yet, even under these unusual circumstances, the reichstag, when the subject of the emperor's intervention in national affairs came up for debate, was unable to agree upon the simple course of sending an address to the emperor, setting forth the views of the members of the reichstag, who were one in their opposition to his majesty's course. No action could be taken because the Conservatives refused to cooperate, on the pretext that the reichstag did not possess the right to address the crown.

The Radicals and Socialists, however, intend to attempt to pass a resolution demanding an amendment to the constitution, making the ministers responsible to the reichstag, but it is already certain that this resolution will be rejected.

The Conservatives will present a united front against all proposals of this kind. They have everything to gain and nothing to lose in maintaining the present system, under which they supply the ministers of the crown by traditional right and fill all the valuable diplomatic, military and civil positions in the gift of the government.

As conditions are now, they are in a position to create an atmosphere of political ideas which can cover the governmental policies, whereas a change to parliamentary government would signify the surrender of innumerable privileges on their part. Their interest, therefore, manifestly lies in keeping the emperor and the cabinet free from parliamentary control, since under normal circumstances the Conservatives are able to shape public policy.

The Clerical party, while it contains democratic elements, is too accustomed to the tradition of authority acting from above to permit it to accept a political transformation not in harmony with that tradition.

The Liberal party is too permeated with Conservative ideals to admit the expectation that its representatives would agree to support an amendment shifting ministerial responsibility wholly to the reichstag. Nevertheless, the Liberals are likely to accept some compromise measure, giving the reichstag greater influence in shaping the decisions of the government.

This leaves only the Radicals and Socialists, with the possible assistance of the Poles, making together barely one-fourth the membership of the house, to support an out-and-out demand for parliamentary government.

It is further pointed out that a lack of large unified parties unfits Germany for parliamentary government. It would be impossible, with the present multiplicity of parties in the reichstag, to bring enough homeogenous elements together to form a majority capable of working together harmoniously for any length of time. Even Chancellor Von Buelow's present alliance of Conservative and Liberal elements has shown on more than one occasion signs of disintegration, yet these "bloc" parties would contemplate with dismay a situation wherein the Clericals, Socialists and other opposition parties might secure a majority of the seats from the coalition and demand to take the reins of government.

For these reasons, men best acquainted with the political characteristics of the German people say that it will require a long period of practical schooling in politics before a parliamentary government can be introduced with beneficial results for the Fatherland.

Brothers In Fatal Quarrel

Pittsburg, Nov. 19.—Reuben Crown, until recently a follower of eastern race tracks, is dead from a bullet wound. Joseph Crown, his brother, an attorney and well known about the city, is hovering between life and death, a bullet having penetrated his breast. Both shots, it is alleged, were fired by Reuben Crown, following a quarrel between the brothers over money matters.

DEEP WATERWAY NEEDS

They Are Outlined In Resolutions Adopted by Convention

Baltimore, Nov. 19.—The business sessions of the first annual convention of the Atlantic deep waterways convention, which began Tuesday morning, have come to a close. One of the most important events of the convention was the adoption of resolutions which declare that the work proposed should be done by congressional appropriation as a permanent remunerative national improvement for the benefit of the whole people, and that the canals should be maintained by the government for the free use of all. The resolutions which were adopted recommend:

The purchase of the present Chesapeake and Delaware canal and the construction of a new one; deepening the Hudson river to the point where it connects by canal with the lakes; selecting a route through Massachusetts from Narragansett bay to Boston; deepening the present waterways from the North Carolina sounds to Norfolk; surveying New Jersey and New York and along the Florida coast preliminary to further development.

It is contemplated that the work be urged in each locality independently, according to its own conditions, each improvement to be made on its own merits. The whole, when linked by the existing waterways and raised to its greatest efficiency by the improvement of present inland transportation facilities, will make a chain covering the Atlantic coast and avoiding several points now of great danger to shipping.

The specific benefits, it is claimed, will be in enabling shippers to send their slow or bulk freight by inland waters safely and economically, reducing the cost of shipment to a minimum and making possible the upbuilding of great industrial communities all along the line.

AGITATORS CRY FOR ANNEXATION

Would Have Miquelon Islands Under Old Glory

St. Pierre, Miq., Nov. 19.—The agitation over the question of free schools continues. Many of the agitators talk loudly of uniting the colony with the United States, contending that such a step would mean not only civil and religious liberty for the population, but would revive the fishing industry.

It is understood the colonial officials have decided to ask the home government to send for the island vessels of the French navy now at New York to assist in preserving order.

The government house has been occupied since Tuesday night by an armed force. All town and government officials have taken refuge at the house.

The government was powerless to prevent teachers, backed by a large number of citizens, from opening the doors of the schools.

While a large number of the clerical supporters were parading windows of the government schoolhouse were broken by stone-throwers and there was a demonstration against Judge Siegfred, who imposed the fine upon the school teachers for keeping the schools open. Siegfred's residence was made the target of stones, and when he appeared at the front of the house stones were hurled at him and he was hooted by the mob. Other officials received similar treatment.

Taft Wants Root In Cabinet

Hot Springs, Va., Nov. 19.—The political future of Secretary of State Root was the leading topic of a conference here. It is the opinion that the secretary will be the successor of Senator Platt, providing Root wants to be. But Root as the premier of Taft's cabinet would be more to the liking of the president-elect, who has had no hesitancy from the first in giving positive expression to this desire. Taft had stated that if his persuasion can prevail Root will retain his portfolio, despite his senatorial ambitions.

Everything the best that money can buy, is their standard; and their customers know from past dealings that that is absolutely true. Now with our discount system, it is still more of an inducement to trade with us, and you will be surprised to find how fast your discount checks will count up.

We are displaying every day a choice assortment of Cut Meats, with the prices marked in plain figures, so that every one can see what they are paying for or we will cut it to your order, whichever you prefer.

We are pleased that so many of our customers have helped us to make this system a success, for it means a whole lot to them as well as to us. We do not think that any one objects to carrying home a purchase especially when they are paid to do so, which we are doing, with our discount check system.

We are receiving new seasonable goods every day, and it will be to your interest to visit our store and do business with us.

Beef, Lamb and Fresh Pork are all lower and we have a choice lot of Fresh Killed Chicken and Fowl constantly on hand, direct from William A. Drake of Braintree.

A tempting line of New Canned Goods, packed expressly for us.

An excellent stock of New Cereals, Buckwheat, Pan Cake Flour, and all the leading brands of Bread and Pastry Flour.

All kinds of Bottled Goods, Jellies, Jams, Olives and Pickles.

Fresh Hot House Lettuce, Choice Celery, Radishes, Cucumbers, and Fruits of all kinds.

Remember, that every day is BARGAIN day at Johnson Bros., so keep in the road, for all roads lead to our store.

And, remember that we give you 5 per cent discount on all cash purchases, if you take the purchase home, or 2 per cent discount when you ask us to deliver it.

Yours for Quality,

JOHNSON BROS., City Square, Quincy.

ROOSEVELT'S LABOR DINNER

Proves to Have Been of "Illuminating Value" to Him

THE NEEDS OF WORKINGMEN

Views at First Hand Given to Officials of the Government--Labor Unions Encouraged to Employ High Legal Talent to Advise Them on Matters of Policy and to Represent Them In Their Contests

Washington, Nov. 19.—Further conferences at the White House yesterday between the president and men who are prominent in labor matters have made the attitude of the administration toward proposed labor legislation a subject of keen discussion in Washington.

Among those who saw the president yesterday were Commissioner of Labor Neill, United States Attorney Stimson of New York, Edward J. Gavegan of New York, attorney for labor unions, and Charles H. Sherrill, an attorney of New York, all of whom attended the labor dinner at the White House Tuesday evening.

It is learned from the highest authority that the object of the president in giving a dinner to friends of labor and in holding the subsequent conferences was primarily to bring about a better understanding between representatives of the government and labor leaders, and to impress upon the labor interests of the country the disposition of the administration to receive its representatives in conference on an equality with all others.

The desire of the president, it was explained, is to have a labor man feel that he has a right to present his grievances and demands, and to demonstrate that "neither the labor leader nor the millionaire need come to the back door of the White House at midnight in order to have a conference with the president."

It was suggested that a mere invitation to the White House was not to be taken as conclusive evidence of an agreement between those invited and the administration on the matters under discussion or on subjects that may develop later.

While the president believes that this attitude of the administration had been demonstrated by the dinner that was given upon the occasion of the visit of John Morley, the noted English parliamentarian, to this country, and when labor leaders of Butte, Mont., were entertained at the White House, it is explained that he desires, before he retires from office, to make this disposition of the authorities even more evident. The reason members of the supreme court of the United States and executive officials were invited was merely to enable them to learn from the leaders direct what they regard as their needs.

Men who are in a position to know the attitude of the president on the subject say that he has been deeply impressed with the idea of labor unions employing attorneys of high character and sound legal training to advise them on matters of policy and to represent them in their contests. To encourage this practice by indicating his sympathy with it, he invited several attorneys who have been identified with labor unions to participate in the labor conference held Tuesday night.

The occasion is said to have afforded a free exchange of ideas and to have been of "illuminating value" to the president. While he may not adopt a labor program at the close of his administration, lest he might thereby embarrass his successor, it is believed that he will set forth his views on the needs of labor, either in his annual message to congress when it convenes the first Monday in December or in a special labor message, submitted subsequently. The ideas gathered at the dinner will be of value in his discussion of what the president considers are the primary steps in the improvement of labor conditions.

The various conferences of the past two days are said to have brought out more plainly than ever before the desire of the labor interests to abandon law suits in collecting damages under employers' liability laws. It has been found, the labor leaders claim, that the law suits result in benefit to lawyers only and that they are not a necessary step in the insurance of justice to either side. As to a remedy for the alleged abuses of the injunction there still seems to be a wide difference of views among labor leaders.

Rabbit Led to Hidden Fortune

Oil City, Pa., Nov. 19.—While digging around a hole in which a rabbit had disappeared, Edward Woods and Thomas Dickinson uncovered an iron kettle containing $3600 in gold and silver coins. Old residents of this section believe the money was buried by John Caldwell, an eccentric farmer, who died in an insane asylum nearly thirty years ago.

Child Burned to Death

Fall River, Mass., Nov. 19.—Locked in his home and unable to escape from the fire which he probably started while playing with matches, Edward Kelley, 6 years old, was burned to death. The boy's parents are employed in the mills and it had been their custom to lock the little fellow in the house. The dwelling was not damaged.

Danderine

Grows Hair and we can PROVE IT!

DANDERINE is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow abundantly long, strong and beautiful. It at once imparts a sparkling brilliancy and velvety softness to the hair, and a few weeks' use will cause new hair to sprout all over the scalp. Use it every day for a short time, after which two or three times a week will be sufficient to complete whatever growth you desire.

A lady from St. Paul writes in substance, as follows:
"When I began using Danderine my hair would not come to my shoulders and now it is away below my hips."

Another from Newark, N. J.
"I have been using Danderine regularly. When I first started to use it I had very little hair, now I have the most beautiful long and thick hair anyone would want to have."

NOW at all druggists in three sizes 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle

Danderine enjoys a greater sale than any other one preparation regardless of kind or brand, and it has a much greater sale than all of the other hair preparations in the world combined.

Cut This Out

FREE To show how quickly Danderine acts, we will send a large sample free by return mail to anyone who sends this free coupon to the KNOWLTON DANDERINE CO., CHICAGO, ILL., with their name and address and 10c in silver or stamps to pay postage.

Chapter 15

THE first face I saw on the platform when we arrived in Chicago was Mr. Brett's. He was waiting to help me and looked as fresh as if he hadn't spent eighteen hours in the train. He said I looked fresh, too, but if I did it must have been excitement, as I'd written half the night and dreamed desperately the other half about Potter Parker—dressed like one of those red Indians they have for cigar signs in New York—pursuing me with a jeweled tomahawk.

Mr. Brett had insisted on my telegraphing to Sally before we left New York to say I was coming and asking her to meet the train; therefore we were surprised not to find her at the station. I was rather anxious, and so, I could see, was Mr. Brett. He thought he had better not drive in a cab with me to the friend's house where she was staying, but he told me the name of a hotel where he would go at once and made me promise that I would send him a line by the cabman to say whether everything was well with me.

"Miss Woodburn probably has a headache or perhaps is out of town for the day," said he. "It can't be anything else. Still I shall be a little uneasy till I hear. And you know I hold myself absolutely at your service."

"What about your friend whose business you've come to attend to?" I asked. "I mustn't be so selfish as to interfere with that, whatever happens."

"Oh, I can attend to both interests," he assured me, "without neglecting either. I shan't need to let one interfere with the other. And remember, I won't stir out of my hotel till I've had your note."

Bereft of him, Chicago overawed me and took my breath away. It is a good thing I saw New York first, for if I'd come straight from England with only memories of peaceful London to support me through the ordeal, I don't know but it might have affected my brain.

It was a long drive, though, and as I had time to calm down I saw that numbers of the huge buildings are nobly designed and very magnificent in decoration, making a splendid effect in spite of their vast size rather than because of it. And such shops too! They're like the fairy palaces my nurse used to tell me about, as big as whole cities, where you could get anything you wanted just by wishing.

At last we stopped before a large, handsome house with a lawn round it and no fence. The house was stone in front, but had brick sides, which gave it a queer effect, yet somehow didn't spoil it, and wherever there wasn't a porch it had broken out in bow windows.

I told the cabman to wait and then ran up the four or five steps to ring the front door bell. In a minute a maid came who could have been very smart looking if she had only worn a proper cap.

"Is Miss Woodburn stopping here?" I asked.

"No, she isn't," returned the young woman, with a glint of the eye which seemed to say she would perish sooner than call any one "Miss."

"Are you sure?" I persisted, my heart preparing for a plunge bootward.

"I guess so," said the girl with a superior but not ill natured smile. "She was staying with us, but she went day before yesterday. I don't think she'll be back, because she's gone to take care of a friend who's real sick way back in Ohio somewhere."

"Way back in Ohio somewhere!" The words were like a knell for all my hopes. I didn't know what was to become of me now.

"I am sorry," I said. "Do you know if a telegram came for Miss Woodburn yesterday?"

"Yes, indeed," replied the young woman, all in one word, but her face brightened. Suddenly she was looking at me like a long lost friend. "I guess you're expected. Mrs. Hale, that's the lady of the house here, sent the telegram on, and Miss Woodburn telegraphed back about you. Mrs. Hale went to meet your train, but may be she didn't recognize you or else she got caught at the bridge. Anyhow, she hasn't come back yet. I guess you'd better come in. Your room is all ready for you."

"I can't do that, though I'm very grateful indeed to Mrs. Hale," I said. "I—I have other plans. I'll just scribble a little note to tell her so and thank her, then I must go."

"She'll just never forgive me if I let you," protested the young woman.

I began to be a little afraid that I might be detained by well meant force, but when I had written a letter to Mrs. Hale (squeezing Vivace under one arm and sitting at a desk in a bright, charming drawing room where three Persian cats, six Japanese spaniels and a number of birds played about the floor) I contrived to persuade the hospitable creature that my immediate departure was practically a matter of life or death.

So instead of writing my news to Mr. Brett I went back with it to him, like a bad penny. He must have been surprised when he heard that a lady was waiting in the drawing room of his hotel and hurried in to see me sitting there. I should have felt ready to die if he had looked bored, but he didn't a bit.

I told him all my adventures and about the dogs and cats and birds, and then I asked what on earth I should do now. "I suppose I shall have to go back to New York," I said gloomily, "and cable to my brother. I could stop at some pension and wait till I heard—a quiet pension Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox wouldn't be likely to know about."

"You alone in a New York boarding house!" exclaimed Mr. Brett. "Never."

"Then could you find me a Chicago one?"

"There'd be nothing to choose between. No, Lady Betty, but I can suggest something better. Only—I don't know how you'll take it. Wouldn't you rather be near Miss Woodburn than anything else until your future plans are settled?"

"Of course," said I, "but that's impossible now."

"I'm not so sure. I think—in fact I know, where she is. You say Mrs. Hale's maid told you she'd gone to Ohio, to take care of a sick friend. I can tell you where that friend lives and her name, because I have relatives in the neighborhood. I don't often go there, but I've heard from them of Miss Woodburn's visits. My cousins have a farm, and I was wondering whether you could content yourself boarding with them for awhile, so near Miss Woodburn you could see her every day?"

"Oh, I should love it," I cried. "But would they have me?"

"They would be happy to have you, I know. The only question is, would you be happy? They're simple folk, with simple ways, such as you would expect of my people, Lady Betty, but they've hearts of gold."

"Like yours," I thought, but I didn't say it. I said instead that I was fond of simple ways, and I asked where the place was and if it was far off?

"It will take us about twelve hours to get there," he answered.

"Us?" I echoed. "Why, you can't"—

"I can if you'll let me," said he, growing red. "I've finished my business in Chicago already and"—

"What, while I was away?"

"It was a short affair, though important."

ROCKEFELLER ON THE STAND

Tells Story of How the Standard Oil Company Began

ITS GROWTH WAS REMARKABLE

Had Only $4000 In 1862 and Developed, Under Adverse Conditions, Into a Corporation Capitalized at $1,000,000--Success Based Upon a Loan of $2000--No Aggressive Policy to Obtain Mastery of Trade

New York, Nov. 19.—Testifying with the air of a country gentleman of kindly mein, engaging a host of friends with incidents of days long past, John D. Rockefeller, president of the Standard Oil company, reviewed the history of the early oil trade and the evolution of the first companies into the present so-called oil trust. Rockefeller was a witness for the defense for more than two hours in the suit to dissolve the Standard Oil company, which is being prosecuted by the United States government, and his appearance at the hearings before Referee Ferris brought a large crowd to the customs building.

The once-active head of the big oil combine was surrounded by an imposing circle of counsel, and when he began his testimony he gazed complacently upon a swarm of newspaper men, close behind whom pressed a throng of people. Rockefeller appeared at complete ease and when John G. Milburn, of counsel for the company, propounded his first question the witness spoke as if he desired the most distant spectator in the room to hear. Then, in a manner that indicated pleasure at what he was about to tell, Rockefeller described his beginning in the oil business and how, under adverse conditions, that business grew to the proportions of the Standard Oil company of Ohio, with its capitalization of $1,000,000.

Mr. Rockefeller's eyes kindled in reflecting on that early financial organization and, speaking of its $1,000,000 capitalization with almost boyish enthusiasm, he said: "It seemed very large to us, who began with only $4000 in 1862."

Indeed, the proceedings lost in a sense their judicial aspect because of the manner which Rockefeller displayed, and his answers now and then contained flashes of kindly humor. A glow of health shows in his smooth-shaven face. He was dressed in a plain dark business suit and across his vest ran a heavy gold watch chain. A dark purple necktie, in which a large pearl pin was set, snuggled close to a high collar.

During a brief recess Rockefeller chatted with the reporters on the Standard's growth, saying: "What a wonderful thing it all has been—the growth of this business. It all seems like a dream to me, and here I am accused of doing the very wicked thing of selling a good article at a lower price than anyone else.

"This testimony here today brings back to my mind so clearly early days in Cleveland, where we were all friends and neighbors together. How well I remember that day in Cleveland when I went into the bank of T. P. Handy, who afterwards became one of my dearest friends. I wanted to borrow money, but I didn't have any collateral nor anyone to endorse my note. I told him what I wanted to do with it and then he asked me how much I wanted. 'I need $2000,' I said, and I got it. To that loan I attribute whatever success I have had in life since."

The development of Rockefeller's testimony, which carried him to the organization of the Standard Oil company of Ohio, indicates that one of the lines of the defense will be that the Standard Oil company is not the result of an aggressive policy to obtain a mastery of the oil trade, as charged, but rather the natural outcome of the exigencies of the oil industry.

The taking of Rockefeller's testimony is not finished.

Unique Bequest to Son-In-Law

Philadelphia, Nov. 19.—The feeling entertained by the late George D. Wolf of Sommerdale toward Charles W. Wenzel, his son-in-law, is shown in the following paragraph in his will, which was admitted to probate yesterday: "That 50 cents be paid to my son-in-law, Charles W. Wenzel, a native of Huntingdon, Pa., to enable him to buy a good, stout rope with which to hang himself." The decedent left an estate valued at $10,500.

Police Want Pepper" Joker"

Waltham, Mass., Nov. 19.—As the result of a practical joke, perpetrated during the moving picture performance in a theatre here, Miss Alice Comey may lose her sight. The police, authorized by the management of the theatre, offer $100 for information leading to the arrest of the person or persons who hurled red pepper from the balcony, throwing the audience into an uproar and causing the injuries to Miss Comey.

Perpetuation of Catholicism

Chicago, Nov. 19.—The first Catholic missionary congress closed last night. On every hand were heard expressions of satisfaction at the work of the congress in outlining a new missionary movement designed in particular to perpetuate the Catholicism of immigrants from Catholic countries and to send priests to sparsely settled regions.

EDITORIAL.

That public playgrounds be established in and made a part of the proposed park extension plan for Springfield, O., is the demand made by the labor men of the city. They are taking a keen interest in the movement, which they believe will make for the physical and social welfare of their children.

According to a recent estimate,there are in the United States more than two million miles of public roads, but not more than ten per cent of these are held as improved. If all of these two millions of mileage were properly and permanently constructed and kept in good shape, the estimated saving to farmers and to the public generally would equal two hundred and sixty millions annually. If our country roads were the really excellent thoroughfares that they are in England, France and Germany, there would be less need of railroad extensions. The railroads would then gladly send out freight automobiles to collect produce and passengers, thus greatly reducing the cost and labor to farmers and doing more than President Roosevelt's Commission to bring about the millennial agricultural condition that he probably has in imagination.

The educated, well-informed and well-read man of modern times has no opportunity for ennui. The events of the world are daily spread before him. What with the bloodless revolution in Turkey; a presidential election in the United States; the turning of the French worm on its German tormentor in the Casa Blanca affair; the humiliation of the most arrogant of European rulers in the eyes of the world and even in the eyes of his hitherto subservient subjects; the almost simultaneous demise of the real and the puppet ruler of China; here is matter for study, thought and contemplation.

To Vote On Playground Act

The voters of Quincy are to have an opportunity at the coming municipal election of voting yes or no on the question "Shall chapter 513 of the acts of the year 1908 requiring certain cities and towns to provide public playgrounds be accepted by this city."

The act makes it compulsory upon every city or town of a population of more than ten thousand that has not already satisfied the provisions of this act, to vote on the question.

The first three sections of this act read as follows:

Section 1. Every city and town in the commonwealth having a population of more than ten thousand, accepting the provisions of this act shall, after the first day of July in the year nineteen hundred and ten, provide and maintain at least one public playground conveniently located and of suitable size and equipment, for the recreation and physical education of the minors of each city or town, and at least one other playground for every additional twenty thousand of its population.

Section 2. Cities and towns may appoint, and determine the compensation of, a qualified supervisor of each playground, who shall direct the sports and exercises thereon.

Section 3. In cities and towns where the provisions of this act are not already satisfied, land for the purpose aforesaid may be taken, and the money necessary to pay for such land may be raised in accordance with sections nineteen, twenty and twenty-one of chapter twenty-eight of tee Revised Laws; and any land owned by the city or town may be set aside by vote of the city council, or of the baard of selectmen, for the purposes of this act.

PRESIDENT'S THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

Once again the season is at hand when, according to the ancient custom of our people it becomes the duty of the President to appoint a day of praise and of thanksgiving to God.

Year by year this nation grows in strength and worldly power. During the century and a quarter that has elapsed since our entry into the circle of independence peoples, we have grown and prospered in material things to a degree never known before, and not now known in any other country.

The 13 colonies which struggled along the seacoast of the Atlantic and were hemmed in but a few miles west of tide water by the Indian-haunted wilderness have been transformed into the mightiest republic which the world has ever seen. Its domains stretch across the continent from one to the other of the two greatest oceans, and it exercises dominion alike in the Arctic and tropic realms.

The growth of wealth and population has surpassed even the growth in territory. Nowhere else in the world is the average of individual comfort and material well-being as high as in our fortunate land.

For the very reason that in material well-being we have thus abounded, we owe it to the Almighty to show equal progress in moral and spiritual things.

With a nation, as with the indivnduals who make up a nation, material well-being is an indispensable foundation. But the foundation avails nothing by itself. That life is wasted and worse than wasted which is spent in piling, heap upon heap, those things which minister merely to the pleasure of the body and to the power that rests only on wealth.

Upon material well-being as a foundation must be raised the structure of the lofty life of the spirit, if this nation is properly to fulfill its great mission and to accomplish all that we so ardently hope and desire.

The things of the body are good, the things of the intellect better; but best of all are the things of the soul, for in the nation, as in the individual, in the long run it is character that counts.

Let us therefore, as a people set our faces resolutely against evil and with broad charity, with kindliness and good will toward all men, but with unflinching determination to smite down wrong, strive with all the strength that is given us for righteousness in public and in private life.

"Now, therefore, I, Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States, do set apart Thursday, the 26th day of November next, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, and on that day I recommend that the people shall cease from their daily work, and, in their homes, or in their churches meet devoutly to thank the Almighty for the many and great blessings they have received in the past, and to pray that they may be given strength so to order their lives as to deserve a continuation of these blessings in the future."

—The latest scheme is a line of dirigible baloons, 150 feet long, to carry seven passengers each, to be constructed and used on a passenger line between Boston and New York. Israel Ludlow, head of the department of aeronautics at the Jamestown exposition, is at the head of the proposed company.

TESTIMONY NOT TO THE POINT

No Proof of Conspiracy by Harley and Others

New York, Nov. 19.—After much testimony as to the treatment of laborers employed by the Florida East Coast Railroad company in the construction of its extension across the Florida keys, the case of David E. Harley, an agent of the railroad company, accused of conspiring with three employment agents of this city to lure men to Florida and there keep them in a state of compulsory labor equivalent to peonage and slavery, was dismissed by Judge Hough in the United States circuit court after the jury, acting upon instructions from the bench, had returned a verdict of not guilty.

The testimony as to the treatment of the men procured by Harley and his associates was repeatedly qualified as irrevelant, the judicial contention being that what was to be proven to the satisfaction of the judge and jury was not that the men had been maltreated, but that the four defendants had conspired to submit them to maltreatment.

The prosecution persisting in its effort to introduce evidence of coercion and enslavement, Hough halted the trial and, on the motion of the attorneys for the defense, instructed the jury to acquit the defendants.

Wright's Presence of Mind

Le Mans, Nov. 19.—Wilbur Wright, the American aeroplanist, had a narrow escape from serious injury in an accident similar to that which happened to his brother Orville's aeroplane at Fort Myer some weeks ago. The chain attached to one of the propellers broke when he was making a flight and the machine began to turn over. Wright, with marvelous presence of mind, re-established the balance of the aeroplane by leaning to one side and cut off the motor, descending in safety.

$4000 Pension For Harvard's Head

New York, Nov. 19.—When President Eliot retires from the presidency of Harvard college he will receive an annuity of $4000 from the Carnegie fund. This announcement was made public at the meeting of the Carnegie fund trustees. It was made clear that the income from the $15,000,000 fund provided by Carnegie would be regarded as the rightful heritage of retiring college presidents and teachers, and that it shall not be regarded as charity in any sense.

Persian Ruler's Proposition

Teheran, Nov. 19.—The shah has summoned the representatives of the various classes in Persia to appear before him and to hear his decision in the matter of a constitutional government for the country. It is understood that the shah purposes the formation of what may be called a council of state, of forty members, elected on limited suffrage and with power to control the ministers, but without executive powers.

Will Remain In Insane Asylum

Providence, Nov. 19.—The commission in lunacy appointed to examine James A. Tefft of Westerly, charged with having murdered his wife, reported that Tefft is hopelessly insane. He will therefore be kept at the state insane asylum at Cranston, where he has been under observation.

Wilhelmina In Seclusion

The Hague, Nov. 19.—In view of the fact that an interesting event is expected next spring, Queen Wilhelmina has been forbidden by her physicians to hold her customary private audiences. This precautionary measure is for the purpose of avoiding fatigue.

Identification of Skeleton

Bangor, Me., Nov. 19.—Remains found in the woods seven miles from Sebois have been identified as those of William F. Pomeroy, 45, of Bangor, a camp cook, who, on Dec. 1, 1906, while hunting, became lost in a snowstorm and died, it is supposed, from exposure. The identification was made by means of a watch, gun and wallet found with the skeleton.

DANGER IN DELAY.

Kidney Diseases Are Too Dangerous for Quincy People to Neglect.

The great danger of kidney troubles is that they get a firm hold before the sufferer recognizes them. Health is gradually undermined. Backache, headache, nervousness, lameness, soreness, lumbago, urinary troubles, dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease follow in merciless succession. Don't neglect your kidneys. Cure the kidneys with the certain and safe remedy, Doan's Kidney Pills, which has cured people right here in Quincy.

Nicholas Albanese, living at 16 Gilmore street, Quincy, Mass., says: "I was annoyed by a dull backache for some time and often while at work, sharp shooting pains would dart through my loins and cause me great misery. I also had dizzy spells and my eyesight seemed to be affected. I tried many remedies but did not receive relief and as a last resort, decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I procured a box at the Cox Drug Store, began their use and was instantly relieved. I have no hesitancy in giving Doan's Kidney Pills the credit for my cure and I highly endorse them."

LIEUTENANT EVANS IS REPRIMANDED

His Case Is Regarded as "Peculiarly Deplorable"

Washington, Nov. 19.—Lieutenant Frank T. Evans, U. S. N., who was recently reduced 150 numbers in rank for conduct unbecoming an officer and prejudicial to the service, was reprimanded by Acting Secretary Newberry in accordance with the findings of the court martial in the following language:

"The department, for reasons obvious to the service, regards this as a peculiarly deplorable case, and in publishing its disapproval of the conduct of Lieutenant Evans refrains from expressing fully its condemnation of the actions of this officer on the occasion in question. A casual reading, however, of the charges and specifications, with the findings thereon, will be sufficient to enable the service to form its own estimate of an officer who has been found guilty of the acts alleged in this case."

Admiral Sperry, commander-in-chief of the Atlantic fleet of battleships, in approving the findings, said that he did so "In order that Lieutenant Evans should not entirely escape punishment," but made known his belief that the officer had not been adequately punished. The court martial found Evans guilty of leaving his station before being adequately relieved, of disrespectful language to his superior officer, and of inviting two enlisted men to have a bottle of beer in his room.

Bartlett Will Disallowed

Exeter, N. H., Nov. 19.—A rescript was handed down in the superior court disallowing the will of Ellen A. Bartlett of Kingston. The matter came up on an appeal from the decision of the judge of probate brought by Levi Bartlett, a brother of the testator, who alleged that his sister was of unsound mind and was unduly influenced by Mrs. Belle Draper, a cousin, in disposing of her property.

CONVINCING FACTS.

There is no use denying the fact that Johnson Bros., are surely giving genuine bargains in food values. It will be hard indeed to find a store that is giving such excellent quality at such low prices.

Everything the best that money can buy, is their standard; and their customers know from past dealings that that is absolutely true. Now with our discount system, it is still more of an inducement to trade with us, and you will be surprised to find how fast your discount checks will count up.

We are displaying every day a choice assortment of Cut Meats, with the prices marked in plain figures, so that every one can see what they are paying for or we will cut it to your order, whichever you prefer.

We are pleased that so many of our customers have helped us to make this system a success, for it means a whole lot to them as well as to us. We do not think that any one objects to carrying home a purchase especially when they are paid to do so, which we are doing, with our discount check system.

We are receiving new seasonable goods every day, and it will be to your interest to visit our store and do business with us.

Beef, Lamb and Fresh Pork are all lower and we have a choice lot of Fresh Killed Chicken and Fowl constantly on hand, direct from William A. Drake of Braintree.

A tempting line of New Canned Goods, packed expressly for us.

An excellent stock of New Cereals, Buckwheat, Pan Cake Flour, and all the leading brands of Bread and Pastry Flour.

All kinds of Bottled Goods, Jellies, Jams, Olives and Pickles.

Fresh Hot House Lettuce, Choice Celery, Radishes, Cucumbers, and Fruits of all kinds.

Remember, that every day is BARGAIN day at Johnson Bros., so keep in the road, for all roads lead to our store.

And, remember that we give you 5 per cent discount on all cash purchases, if you take the purchase home, or 2 per cent discount when you ask us to deliver it.

Yours for Quality,

ANNUAL MEETING

Charitable Society Encouraging Reports

On Dec. 17, 1907 the Quincy Charitable Society entered upon the seventy-first consecutive year of its work among those needing its assistance and sympathy, with the following as officers and directors: President, Rev. Ellery Channing Butler; vice president, Mr. Frederick W. Plummer; secretary, Mrs. Thomas A. Addison; treasurer, Mrs. Helen Bass; directors, Mrs. E. Granville Pratt, Mrs. Arthur Mitchell, Mrs. Frederick Jones, Mrs. Robert Teasdale, Mrs. Frederick C. Peirce, Miss Gertrude Sampson and Mrs. Thomas Fenno.

The present membership of the society is one hundred and forty-one, and the executive board is composed of the eleven as enumerated. During the year six meetings of the executive board have been held. At these meetings all the routine work of the society was gone over, and questions relating to its objects, and purposes discussed. The following votes pertaining to the work of the organization were also passed. December 17, 1907.

To retain the service of Mrs. Arthur L. Mitchell as director in Ward 3 her knowledge of the work and personal influence with our pensioners of God, making her priceless, and most valuable to the management.

That the meeting of the officers and directors, be held at the residence of the vice president, Mr. Frederick W. Plummer.

That the secretary draw resolutions, thanking the retiring president, Rev. Edward Norton for his efficient, and zealous services, for the society, and report the same, at the next meeting.

At meeting held Jan. 20, 1908 it was voted that the meetings of the executive board be held the first Thursday of each month.

The secretary reported resolutions in favor of Rev. Edward Norton, and the same were accepted and voted that a copy be sent to Mr. Norton and incorporated in the minutes. At meeting held Feb. 17th 1908 it was voted that Miss Amey Newcomb be elected to substitute as a director for Miss Sampson until such time as Miss Sampson would be able to resume her duties.

At meeting March 5, 1908, Mrs. Fenno, Mrs. Pratt, with Mrs. Addison, were invited to represent the Quincy Charitable society, in their wards, at the Conference of Charity Workers, a new organization in Quincy.

A report was made concerning a family, by the directors of Ward 4. It was an especially pitiable story and interest and sympathy were at once enlisted. Three of the managing board were appointed to take charge of the case. The committee at once took up their work. It was a household of five in number, father, mother, and three little folks, their children. The father had been stricken with an incurable illness. It was in its incipient stage. Because of the infectious character of the father's malady, the mother who was of sufficient power, and resources to obtain a living for the family was prohibited from so doing. They expressing a strong desire to return to their native land, clothing and necessary articles being obtained for them through one of the circles of the Bethany King's Daughters, tickets were purchased by this society and they were accompanied to the steamer on which they sailed. A communication was afterwards received, stating that they had arrived safely at their home in England, expressing the greatest gratitude, and thanks, for what the societies had done for them. The following summer he died leaving his family with their own kin.

During the whole year, the work of the society has been carried on in accordance with its purposes and in keeping with the principles and theory upon which it is based. Forty-five families have been visited, and assisted, and made to feel the benefits of the organization. While the work which has hitherto been accomplished has been done in an unostentatious manner, it has been at the same time effective, and that is the primary object of the society. In this method, the officers and directors, have received and deserve much praise, as well for the interest, and enthusiasm which they have manifested throughout the year, as for the effectual result, which they have obtained.

Mary E. Addison, Secretary.

Birthday Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Dexter E. Wadsworth observed the 75th birthday Thursday of Col. Edward Anderson, Mrs. Wadsworth's father, by entertaining the Boston Authors' club. It was a house warming as well, for Mr. and Mrs. Wadsworth have recently moved into their new home on Presidents Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. Wadsworth were assisted in receiving by Miss Carolyn Ticknor, second Vice President and Oscar Fay Adams, Secretary and Mrs. E. D. Wadsworth. Letters of regret and congratulations were received from the President, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe who is visiting her daughter at Gardiner, Maine, and could not be present, and Col. Wentworth Higginson who was kept away by his physician's order.

The pourers were Miss Emily Ticknor, Miss Alison Howard and Miss Louise Kidder. The rooms and tea tables were decorated with yellow chrysanthemums as fitting for such a golden occasion. A large spray of chrysanthemums received from the Authors' club and many authors, editions of poems and prose.

Among those present were:

Nixon Waterman, Nathan Haskell Dole, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Long, Mr. Willis Boyd Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Dallas Love Sharp, Samuel T. Pickard, Mrs. Von Mark, Prof. Laurence B. Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Horace P. Chandler, Madam Delano.

Nevin Recital Colonial Hall

The first of a series of recitals under the direction of Miss Carrie Follett Spear was given at Colonial hall Thursday evening. It was a most excellent concert, but unfortunately but slimly attended.

Thursday evening's program included selections from the compositions of Ethelbert Nevin, who was at one time organist at Christ church and director of the Quincy Musical society.

The program opened with Keller's American hymn, composition by Nevin, which was rendered by an orchestra. Miss Spear than gave Nevin's "Bed Time Song" and two songs from "Child's Garden of Verses." Mr. Fjelbeck followed with a violin solo "Barcarole" with Miss Carruthers as accompanist.

Miss Abbie Penley rendered "Herbstgefuhl" and "Beat upon mine, little heart" with Miss Florence G. Olney as accompanist.

Other numbers included "O that we two were maying" by Misses Josephine and Angela McCarthy, "Du bist wie eine blume" by Miss Bertha Carlson, piano duet by Miss Olney and Miss Newcomb, piano solo "Love song" by Miss Carruthers, "Lehn deine wang' an eine wang" by Miss Spear with L. Dowley Williams as accompanyist.

Between the Nevin selections Miss Spear read the story of the number from a sketch book.

FUNERAL PATRICK O'BRIEN.

The funeral of Patrick O'Brien was held this morning from St. John's church and was very largely attended. Delegations were present from Quincy Council Knights of Columbus, Division 5 A. O. H. and the Irish national Forresters. Each of these organizations sent floral tributes.

A solemn high mass, of requiem, was celebrated by Rev. John J. Coan with Rev. Julian E. Johnstone as deacon and Rev. John J. Casey as subdeacon. The Gregorian mass was sung by the choir. At the offertory Joseph K. Burns sang "Domine Jesu Christe." The burial was at St. Mary's cemetery.

—An interesting exhibition is open to the public this week in the rooms of the Appalachian Mountain club, Tremont building, Boston, of gypsy and browntail moths prepared by A. H. Kirkland of the State commission and of insects. It is an education in the general knowledge of insect life, from the tiniest of ant, not much bigger than a pinhead, to the robust numming-bird moth, which many times is mistaken for a humming bird itself.

Ward Four Smoke Talk

A Republican rally was held Thursday evening in Sandberg's hall, West Quincy, under the auspices of the Ward Four committee. It was in the form of a "smoker" and was mainly for the purpose of having Candidate Stone meet those who are working for his interests. It was largely attended over 200 being present.

Councilman J. Leonard Ferguson was the presiding officer, and among the speakers were E. J. Sandberg, R. J. Teasdale, Andrew Nelson, Albert Whitman of Ward Two and Eugene R. Stone.

Mr. Stone spoke about the increase in valuation and said he would do all in his power to bring about a change. He said he intended to carry on a clean campaign, and had no fault to find with the present administration.

A campaign committee was formed, consisting of about 50 Ward Four men. This committee is to look after the affairs of Mr. Stone in that ward.

Refreshments, consisting of coffee and sandwiches, were served and cigars were passed.

WOLLASTON'S SLOGAN.

Editor of Ledger:

Do you know what is to be Wollaston's slogan in the approaching municipal election? It is two regular night police officers and a permanent day officer. Forebearance has ceased to be a virtue and we have reached the limit of our endurance. It would be farcical if there were not a possible tragedy in the spectacle of one night officer spreading himself over Wollaston! It is not an impossibility that the robbery of Rev. Mr. Webber's house will be repeated over and over again. It's an easy thing to know when our one, sole, individual, only night officer is patroling one part of the town for any one man or a gang to get in their work the other side of Wollaston. The writer is no alarmist, but he has it from police authority that it is feared the yeggmen who robbed and did not stop short of murder on the north side of Boston may leave for pastures new and visit our section. And what an easy mark Wollaston now is!

Within a month suspicious characters have been prowling around our town. In the first instance those who knew of it kept lights burning at night; and in addition I was compelled to take in for the night, for possible protection my next door neighbors, two ladies, the man of the house being absent. Last Monday a suspicious character was in evidence on Newport avenue all day long. I know that some of our merchants were alarmed as he was evidently taking notes. And some of them warned their customers. If we had a day policeman the fellow would have been run in by afternoon sized up and hustled out of town. There is hardly a town which is left so utterly unprotected as Wollaston in the day time, as so many of us leave home in the morning to return at night. My own house has been robbed in the daytime. And it is not uncommon for my wife to report a call from some undesirable specimen of humanity during the day.

Now it is up to the next Council to pass an appropriation for three police officers, permanent, for Wollaston. Mayor Shea last September said to a committee who asked for more police protection, in Wollaston, that the question admitted of no argument. And then because our ladies were nervous because of several breaks at night he exerted himself to the utmost and sent an additional night officer who has now left us because Mayor Shea's contingent fund would not admit of further payments on this account. What will Mr. Freeman and his colleague do for us? What will the Councilmen at large who also ask for our votes, do for us when the appropriation bill comes up? Mayor Shea is already on record as anxious that Wollaston should be sufficiently protected. So far as the writer can learn the only issue before us at the coming City election is the choice of men who will (and they can if they will give us three permanent police officers.

GUILD SUPPER.

A rainy evening made no difference apparently in the attendance at the supper and apron sale given by the Women's Guild of St. Chrysostom's church in the parish rooms Thursday evening, which was a success in every way.

The supper was under the efficient management of Mrs. Daniel C. Miller who is also president of the Guild, ably assisted by Mrs. Atkins, Mrs. Brokaw, Mrs. Croucher, Mrs. Hennigar, Mrs. Leslie, Mrs. Parlee, Mrs. Purdom, Mrs. Spinney, Mrs Wheelen, Mrs. Whiteacre and Mrs. Packard.

The menu was: Beef loaf with gravy, creamed potatoes, baked beans, brown bread, chicken salad, pickles, chow chow, rolls, coffee, tea, mince, squash and lemon pies.

The apron table was in charge of the Misses Clean and Mrs. Stanley. The Misses Alice Hennigar and Helen Crocker were at the candy table.

Basket Party And Dance

The concert, basket party and dance held at Electa hall Thursday evening under the auspices of John Adams, Commandery Knights of Malta was largely attended and was likewise a very enjoyable affair.

During the first part of the evening a very pleasing program was given. This included a piano solo by Mrs. Effie Rhines, songs by Charles Eaglesham, D. E. McKimmock, Robert Mitchell, Roy Prout and James Brown and flute solos by Joseph Urgurt.

The auction sale of baskets followed the entertainment and was one of the amusing features of the evening. The ladies who brought the baskets had filled them with samples of their cooking.

For the unmarried, but willing to be married young ladies, it was a golden opportunity. Men like a good cook for a wife and here was an opportunity to learn what kind of cooks the ladies were. The contents of the baskets were not exposed at this time so that the outside was all that was shown. Many were decorated in an attractive way.

George Ruxton was the auctioneer and was equal to the occasion. One very attractive looking basket brought 75 cents but the average price paid was from 40 to 50 cents.

After getting his basket the purpurchaser looked inside for the name of the lady who had prepared it. The two then sought out a cosy corner and enjoyed the contents.

The committee also served ice cream and cake and coffee. After the lunch there was dancing until midnight.

Ladies' Night Quincy L. O. L.

The annual fall Ladies' Night of Quincy L. O. L. lodge was held Thursday evening at Wilson's hall. It was attended by many of the lady friends of its members. Andrew Stewart was chairman of the committee in charge who had provided a very pleasing program for the evening's entertainment.

This opened with a piano solo by William Westland. Other numbers included vocal solos by William Warmington, and Miss Annie Wright, recitations by Miss Cassie Rundle, Miss Phillis Smith and J. Brown; flute duet by the Littlewood brothers and a violin solo by Miss Mary Stewart.

There were also brief remarks by Rev. A. M. Thompson of the Pleasant street Presbyterian church, Rev. Dr. Edwin N. Hardy of Bethany church, William Corbett, Deputy Master of Norfolk county and by Mrs. Annie McKenzie, mistress of the Daughters of John Adams.

Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the entertainment and this was followed by dancing.

The evening proved to be one of the most enjoyable of the many held by Quincy lodge.

EDITORIAL.

There is a growing spirit of skepticism with reference to the perfection of our public schools and it has come none too soon. The profuse cant of the Fourth of July orator and his gushing, unqualified praise of the American educational system in public schools, has been too long unquestioned and uncriticized.

The Post Office deficit for the present fiscal year is nearly seventeen million of dollars. When the causes of this deficit are considered, it is nothing short of a national disgrace. The Post Office establishment ought to pay the Government at least seventeen millions of dollars yearly instead of bringing it that much in debt. The rural free delivery does not pay, but it is universally known that it can be made to pay handsomely. The Postmaster Gen. recommends a limited local parcels post system on the rural routes to make them self-sustaining as well as a blessing to the farmer and the country merchant and to that great and constantly increasing class of people who, owing to improved transportation, live all or part of the year in the country. He suggests as a rate, five cents for one pound and two cents for each additional pound up to eleven pounds. Nearly all rural carriers use horses and wagons. An average burden of only fifty-five pounds a trip would amount annually to over fifteen millions of dollars, nearly all of which would be profit. No man or concern would hesitate to act on such a plain business like proposition. There are four reasons, however, why the Government of the United States does not act. The four reasons are the four express companies, viz: American Express Company, Adams Express Company, Wells, Fargo Express Company, and the United States Express Company. They are not legitimate reasons, but they are very stubborn and potent ones. The Postmaster General would like a general and unlimited parcels post system and the reason why he recommends a limited system is because he has no hope of getting what he wants and what the country is entitled to and what every other civilized nation in the world has.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

The no-license campaign opens Sunday evening by a no-license meeting, held in the Point church.

A. L. Hayden is to sing Sunday evening at the 7.30 service at the Point.

J. Peterson of the Point has had such an increase of business, that a new barn and store room is being built for his accommodation.

Rev. William B. Barr of Central Falls, R. I., plans to visit friends in this city on Dec. 4th and in the evening is to lecture at the Point church on "A Trip to Yosemite Valley."

John L. Miller of South Quincy and William F. Cummings of Atlantic are two of the speakers at the no-license meeting, Sunday evening at the Washington Street church, Quincy Point.

The Granite City Male quartet gave a pleasing musical entertainment and concert at the M. E. church, West Quincy, Wednesday evening. The reading by Miss Moyle and Mr. Gremagne were finely rendered.

Boys connected with the Point gymnasium, give an exhibition, assisted by the Y. M. C. A. in the vestry of the Point church, Dec. 2d. Parents and friends of the boys will have an opportunity to see the members of this gymnasium play Blind Man's Buff and Whip Tag; also give an exhibition of the wand drill, calisthenics and apparatus work. The gymnasium was the result of plans of the Fresh Air Camp association for some genial sport for the winter.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

STRICT FEDERAL QUARANTINE

It Applies to All Cattle In New York and Pennsylvania

BUFFALO YARDS ARE CLOSED

General Cleaning Up and Investigation of the Outbreak of Foot and Mouth Disease Will Occupy at Least Three Weeks' Time--Trouble Caused by Two Carloads of Animals From the West

Buffalo, Nov. 20.—For the first time in their history, the East Buffalo stock yards are under a quarantine. Because two carloads of cattle which were delivered in western Pennsylvania and which were found to be infected with foot and mouth disease were traced back to East Buffalo, the federal and state authorities have closed this market until a general cleaning up of the yards and a further investigation of the outbreak of the disease, so much dreaded by stockmen, have been made.

As a direct result of the conditions growing out of the investigation of the Pennsylvania shipment, word came from the bureau of animal industry of the department of agriculture ordering the entire states of New York and Pennsylvania to be quarantined. Pennsylvania state authorities have declared a quarantine against New York state, and Commissioner Pearson of the department of agriculture of this state, who is now here, ordered that a strict quarantine be placed on five counties in western New York, namely, Erie, Niagara, Orleans, Wyoming and Genessee.

Animals infected with the foot and mouth disease have been discovered in each of these counties by government inspectors who have been quietly at work in this vicinity for over a week. Practically all the cases, it is said, have been traced back to Buffalo.

Chief Melvin of the Washington bureau has been here in personal charge of the crusade to stamp out the disease, and under him are working a score of inspectors from the federal bureau of animal industry.

The federal quarantine will apply to all cattle in this state and Pennsylvania. No one is prepared to say how long it will last. Over 200 men were put to work today on the East Buffalo yards disinfecting every inch of ground. This work will take at least three weeks. The state department's quarantine will be very strict in the five counties already mentioned.

There were eighty animals in the two carloads of yearlings which caused the trouble. They came from the west, but the exact points from which they were assembled have not yet been learned. Dr. Wends, chief inspector in the Buffalo branch of the federal bureau of animal industry, has a clue that they came from Michigan and he has started for there to follow it up.

Secretary Wilson's Orders

Washington, Nov. 20.—Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture has issued orders placing in quarantine the entire states of New York and Pennsylvania, and forbidding the interstate movement of cattle, sheep, swine and goats as a result of the sudden outbreak of foot and mouth disease.

Seventy-five of the most skilled veterinarians in the service of the department have been rushed into the two states for immediate investigation of the disease. Dr. Melvin, chief of the bureau of animal industry, says that his forces probably will be able to prevent the outbreak from assuming alarming proportions.

The disease first appeared in the United States in the winter of 1902 and 1903, when it affected portions of New England, but by prompt action on the part of the department and the state authorities the infection was stamped out.

Ban on Cattle, Hay and Straw

London, Nov. 20.—In addition to an order promulgated by the British board of agriculture, prohibiting the importation of cattle from Pennsylvania, owing to the outbreak of the foot and mouth disease there, the board has prohibited the importation, to date from Nov. 21, of hay and straw for either fodder or litter purposes. Special steps have been taken to deal with cargoes of animals already on the high seas. The Irish board of agriculture also has prohibited the importation of cattle from Pennsylvania.

Fire In Steamer's Hold

Norfolk, Nov. 20.—Refusing all assistance, despite a raging fire in her forward hold, steamer Chattahoochee, plying between Savannah and Boston, made this port and Captain Rowlett beached the vessel on the flats just below the city. The fire was discovered off the Carolina coast and as it proved stubborn Rowlett immediately made for this port. It is believed the fire is now under control. The Chattahoochee has a cargo of 4000 bales of cotton.

Three Confess to Killing

Vineland, N. J., Nov. 20.—The circumstances surrounding the murder of William Read have apparently been made clear by the confession of Herbert Grigg, who, with Walter Zeller, Read's grandson, and Cline Wheeler, were arrested for the crime. The only point on which the three confessions materially differ is as to who did the shooting.

TOM JOHNSON IS "BROKE"

Cannot Afford to Live In Mansion Owned by His Wife

Cleveland, Nov. 20.—Mayor Tom L. Johnson, who for years has been credited with possessing a very large fortune, announces that he has lost everything and will be compelled to give up his beautiful home on Euclid avenue and move into smaller and less expensive quarters. The mayor says also that he will give up his automobiles and other luxuries, because he can no longer afford to keep them.

His fortune was wrecked, the mayor declares, by his devotion to the affairs of the estate of his dead brother, Albert, who was heavily interested in traction properties in the east.

"Back in my prosperous days I gave the home on Euclid avenue to my wife. It is hers yet, and she'll own it still, even though we can't afford to live in it," said Johnson.

"Don't you suppose it will be worth something to me to have my friends realize that I entered the mayor's office rich and left it poor? The realization of what all that means is worth more to me than the money I've lost. I'm going to keep on just as I've started. I'm going to be a candidate for mayor again when this term is over."

The Municipal Traction company, of which Johnson was treasurer, passed into the hands of receivers in the federal court several days ago. Upon this came the transfer to two local banks of the Depositors' Savings and Trust company, of which Johnson was president. It is said this action was precipitated by the threats of Johnson's individual creditors to file suits to obtain payment on notes endorsed by the mayor.

DIRECT TESTIMONY IS CONCLUDED

Rockefeller Must Now Submit to Cross-Examination

New York, Nov. 20.—Having given the history of the first twenty years of the Standard Oil company, the testimony of John D. Rockefeller, president of the oil combine, on direct examination in the federal suit to dissolve the Standard Oil company, was brought to an unexpected close. He told yesterday of the processes and causes of the company's growth up to the trust agreement of 1882 and, after he had identified the parties to that agreement, counsel for the defense announced that he had concluded his direct testimony.

Mr. Rockefeller will go on the witness stand today under sharp cross-examination by Frank B. Kellogg, special assistant attorney general prosecuting the case for the government. The cross-examination by the government will be generally confined to the period from 1862 to 1882, except where the testimony has a direct bearing on developments in the company's affairs in its later period. Counsel for the Standard let it be known that the history of the company from the trust agreement of 1882 will be given on the witness stand by John D. Archbold, vice president of the company.

Mr. Rockefeller's testimony yesterday had to do principally with the acquisitions of other refining companies, transportation concerns and pipe line systems, which, he declared, were necessitated by the natural growth of the Standard's business.

Taft Interested In Tariff

Hot Springs, Va., Nov. 20.—That President-elect Taft entertains a vigorous determination that the forthcoming revision of the tariff shall be thorough, made in good faith, and in accordance with the pledge of the party, is daily evidenced by the earnestness with which he talks on this subject with his political callers.

Minister Acquired Love For Liquor

Lacrosse, Wis., Nov. 20.—Alleging that he became a dipsomaniac while pastor of a fashionable church at Newport, R. I., where the Vanderbilts were members of his congregation, friends of Rev. S. W. Moran, an Episcopal clergyman, 56 years old, had Moran committed to the Mendota hospital for the insane.

Our Methods Save You Money

To every wage earner who runs a house, our proposition is a money saver. Some folks have the Boston buying fever, and think no one in Quincy can sell as cheaply as Boston stores.

Here's our proposition—Find any piece of furniture, any rug or carpet offered for sale in any store in Boston—give us the number or style of the article and the Boston price and we agree to sell you the identical article at from 5 to 20 per cent lower. Just try this proposition for your own information. We are saving money for thousands of families, we can do the same for you. Its volume of business we want and we are getting it too. We are satisfied with a pinch of profit—the rest is all for you.

MOST VALUABLE RAW MATERIAL

Boys and Girls of Our Country Are Thus Considered

FEARFUL "WASTE" IS SHOWN

Promotion of Industrial Education the Object of Society In Convention at Atlanta--Proper Training Will Enable United States to Eventually Rival Germany In the Perfection of Her Industrial Output

Atlanta, Nov. 20.—Of great national interest and importance is the second annual convention of the National Society For the Promotion of Industrial Education, which begins its first business session here today. Many of the most prominent educators of the United States are gathered here to discuss the question of fitting the boys and girls of the country for the pursuit of their future vocations.

The objects of the society are to bring to public attention the importance of industrial education as a factor in the industrial and educational development of the United States, to provide opportunities for the study and discussion of the various phases of the problem, to make available the results of experience in the field of industrial education both in this country and abroad and to promote the establishment of institutions for industrial training.

The officers of the society are: President, Carroll D. Wright, president of Clark college and former United States commissioner of labor; vice president, Magnus W. Alexander of Lynn, Mass.; treasurer, Frederick B. Pratt of the Pratt institute, Brooklyn; secretary, James P. Haney of New York.

In speaking of the importance of the convention Walter G. Cooper, secretary of the Atlanta chamber of commerce and the man who has been in charge of all the details of the convention, said:

"In this country, and particularly in the south, we have been guilty of fearful waste in the employment of the most valuable raw material we have—the boys and the girls. By training them along industrial lines, by giving them the advantages of technical schools such as Germany supports, we will soon rival Germany in the perfection of her industrial output. Last year in Chicago Dr. Pritchet stated that in Germany 55 percent of boys between the ages of fourteen and sixteen who had left the grammar schools were engaged in some kind of industrial schools, preparing for their life work. He showed that less than 1 percent of the boys of similar age in Chicago were similarly employed or had similar advantages. But we have shown a marked interest in technical schools, and it promises much."

Big Tobacco Deal Closed

Louisville, Nov. 20.—The deal between the American Tobacco company and the Burley Tobacco company for the 1906 and part of the 1907 crops of tobacco has been closed here. The price agreed on in the transaction is an average of 20½ cents for the 1906 crop and 17 cents a pound for the 1907 product. The deal involves nearly 80,000,000 pounds of tobacco held in the pool by the Burley Tobacco society and an outlay of something like $14,000,000 on the part of the American Tobacco company.

Failure of Baltimore Brokers

Philadelphia, Nov. 20.—The firm of John A. Boardman & Co., stock brokers of this city, with nineteen branches in New York, Baltimore and other cities, has made a voluntary assignment. No statement of assets or liabilities has been issued. The firm has had considerable trouble with the authorities and about a year ago Boardman was arrested on a charge of violating the "bucket shop" law in this state. His case was never brought to trial.

Testimony Against Lamphere

Laporte, Ind., Nov. 20.—That Ray Lamphere made damaging admissions amounting to a partial confession of setting fire to the home of Mrs. Belle Gunness was testified to in court by Deputy Sheriff Anstiss and Deputy Sheriff Marr in the trial of Lamphere for the alleged murder of Mrs. Belle Gunness and her children.

Yankee Skipper Pays $200 Fine

Port Aux Basques, N. F., Nov. 20.—Captain Morrisey of the Gloucester schooner Arethusa, when arraigned before Magistrate Squary here on two charges of setting trawls within the three-mile limit, pleaded guilty and was fined $100 for each offense. Morrisey paid the fines and costs and was released.

To Resume Work In Car Shops

Lawrence, Mass., Nov. 20.—Orders were received in this city to prepare the Boston and Maine car shops for a resumption of work on Monday next. The shops were closed up during the early stages of the financial depression of last year.

La France Shoe FOR WOMEN

A STYLISH FIT AND PERFECTLY COMFORTABLE

There Is a Difference Between Stylish Appearance in a Show-Window and Stylish Appearance on the Foot.

There is a difference between the comfort of a shoe that is made to fit and one made merely with an eye to beauty. La France shoes for women are unique in this respect—they combine the highest degree of grace and stylish beauty on the foot with perfect ease and comfort.

¶ That is because the material which enters into every portion of the shoe from the sole upward is carefully chosen with a view to the particular requirements which it must meet.

¶ Every woman who has bought a pair of La France shoes at this store knows that they hold their shape and present a smooth, dainty, unwrinkled appearance as long as they last—and that they last a surprisingly long time. ¶ Buy just one pair and you will realize how true all this is.

$3.00 TO $4.00

The La France Flexible Welt combines the comfort and ease of a turn shoe with the style and smartness of a welt shoe.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

"But I thought you weren't going to leave the hotel till I wrote?"

"I didn't need to. My friend came to me, and we fixed up everything between us in a few minutes. Now I'm free again, and my idea in any case was to drop in on my Ohio cousins. You see, twelve hours' traveling is nothing to us Americans, and they wouldn't like it if I didn't just say 'how do you do' when I'm so near."

"Oh, well, if that's really true and you aren't doing it only to help me," said I, with a sigh of relief. "I was afraid you were. I shouldn't mind the journey a bit if you were with me, but I do hope we'll have the same kind of ticket this time. Do get mine like yours, won't you?"

His eyes had a beautiful expression in them as he thanked me and said he would do the best he could, only I couldn't exactly make it out.

"The best train to take would be this evening," he went on. "That would give my cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Trowbridge, plenty of time to get ready for you, too, for I'll wire them that you're coming. But how could you pass the day? Would you—let me show you the sights of Chicago?"

"Would I? It would be the best of fun. Oh, I am glad I came, after all."

"Then that's settled. I'll send off that telegram and one or two others and come back with an automobile. Don't look like that, please, Lady Betty. It isn't going to cost me all I've got to hire one. They're cheap here; besides I know a man who will give me one for the day for next to nothing. And I'll bring you one of those silk things with talc windows to wear over your head and face, so no one will see that Lady Betty Bulkeley is 'doing' Chicago today."

I was as pleased as Punch. As Caro Pitchley said when she was engaged, I felt I was "going to have the time of my life." And it was fun. I shall never forget that day of mine in Chicago with Mr. Brett if I live to be a hundred.

The best fun of all was the Chinese restaurant, where we had dinner. It's in a queer street where there are some famous pawnshops, it seems, and I wanted to go into them, but Mr. Brett wouldn't take me. To get to the restaurant you go up a long flight of marble stairs, with two grinning Chinese devil heads, like watchdogs, on the wall at the top.

Mr. Brett had to pay with a number of expensive looking greenback things, but he laughed when he saw my frightened face and said the dinner didn't really cost all that, he only wanted change. I begged him to let me go halves with everything, as I'd invited myself in a way, but he told me I didn't understand American customs yet and asked if I had the heart to spoil the happiest day of his life.

I couldn't resist telling him it was the happiest of mine, too—that I had never amused myself half as well.

"Not even in Newport?" said he.

"Not even in Newport," I repeated. "It was delightful there, and everybody was kind and charming to me, but you see I had no real friends like you to go about with, and that makes the greatest difference, doesn't it?"

His eyes lit up again at that, and I could see the blood mounting under his brown skin.

"All the difference in the world," he answered in a low voice. Then he looked as if he were going to say something else, but shut his lips tight together and didn't. One wouldn't dare speak out the truth like this to a rich man one might be supposed to be trying to marry. I remember enough of what mother and Vic have told me about proper behavior in a debutante to know that. But I've never wanted to talk in such a way to any man except Mr. Brett, which is lucky, as he always understands me, and that's one reason why it's pleasanter to be with him than any other person I've ever met yet.

Chapter 16

AFTER all, Mr. Brett's ticket was different from mine again, but I suppose he couldn't arrange to have the same kind and see something of me on the journey, because, as I'd asked him, he would have done it if possible. We went back part of the way we had come the night before, in the same grand kind of train, as far as Cleveland, which we reached in the morning quite early. We got out there, for no fine trains like that stop at the village near which Mr. Brett's cousins live, and he said the best thing we could do would be to drive to the farm in a motor car. It was about forty miles away, but with a good car, which he could easily get, we wouldn't be more than two hours, allowing for bad roads. If we didn't take a motor, we should have to wait half the morning for a slow train, and then have a drive at the end of six or seven miles in some kind of a country conveyance.

When I hesitated, thinking of expense, Mr. Brett explained that among his many other occupations he had once acted as a chauffeur, therefore, knowing the tricks of the trade and being a sort of professional himself, he could always hire a motor at a nominal price. This settled my doubts. We drove in a cab to a hotel, where he left me with Vivace, while he went to search for a car. Presently he came back with a smart gray thing which matched my clothes, and not only was there a gray chauffeur to go with it, but a gray holland coat for me, and a gray silk hood, with a lace curtain. I do think they do things well in America.

I looked forward to seeing the country between Cleveland and Aristo, which is the name of the town nearest to the Valley farm, because except for the drives I had had near Newport I knew nothing at all of the real country in America. I had an idea that we should pass some fine country houses and see a number of pretty little nestling villages.

The name of Aristo was rather impressive and classical sounding, I thought, and I had visions of meeting on the way pretty girls driving or riding, and good looking, well groomed men such as I had met always in the country round Newport. But as we went on and on I was disappointed. The scenery itself was lovely, rich and peaceful, with groves of maple trees which would have been quite new to me if I hadn't seen a few in the east. But the villages were blots rather than beauty spots, and we saw only peasants and farm people.

Mr. Brett was driving the car, with me beside him, while the chauffeur sat behind, and I made some such remark to him before I stopped to remember that his relatives were farm people. I could have bitten my tongue then, but he didn't seem to be offended.

"Outside the towns in the west there are few of what you would call gentlefolk," he said, with just the faintest emphasis of good natured scorn for English prejudice; "nor are there any 'country houses' as you understand the name in England. Here people live in the country to till the land and to live by tilling it, yet they don't call themselves 'peasants,' either. It isn't that they're snobbish and want to seem to be what they are not, don't think that for a moment. But they—well, I won't try to describe them. Many people from the old world would never understand what they really are or their point of view, but you will, Lady Betty. You are quick and sympathetic and intelligent, and when I ask you to define for me the difference between the farmers of Ohio, as typified by my cousins and their neighbors in Summer county, I shall be surprised if you don't exactly hit the nail on the head. They'll surprise you a little at first, I warn you, and for about ten minutes maybe you won't know what to make of them. But I count on you to see the point in spite of all your traditions."

"What have my traditions got to do with it?" I asked.

"Wait and see."

I laughed. "Well, I only wish I knew what my traditions are," said I. "I suppose I ought to know, but I don't think I do."

"You may feel them pricking up and down your spine for a bit, while you're getting used to a new order of things at the Valley farm," answered Mr. Brett. "And yet I don't know. I shall be enormously interested in watching the effect upon you before I—have to say goodby."

I forgot everything else he had been saying when I heard that last sentence.

"Will you have to say goodby soon?" I asked him in a crestfallen voice.

He didn't speak for a minute, perhaps on account of a series of bumps in the road.

At last he said, "To tell you the truth, Lady Betty, I should like to stop and pay my cousins a little visit, but—I don't know if I have a right to."

"Oh, why not?" I asked. "Wouldn't they be delighted to keep you?"

"Perhaps. I hope so. But what about you?"

"If it depended one bit on me, you'd make a long visit."

"Wouldn't you really mind seeing me hanging around—sometimes? Just at meals, you know—or to take you a drive once in awhile?"

I looked at him merrily through my talc window, for I felt happy and lighthearted, and the world seemed such a very nice place to live in at that moment.

"Do you truly need to have me answer that question?" I asked. "If you do, we can't be real friends as I thought, after all."

"You say that because you are kind—too kind to have reflected enough perhaps. An accident—the happiest accident in the world for me—has given me a chance to see something of you, Lady Betty, but do you understand that only by an accident could a rough fellow like me have any place at all in your life, no matter how small or temporary? I don't want to take advantage of that sweet kindness of yours, which is partly all your own and partly the essence of your youth and innocence."

"Now, you are making me very cross," said I. "I won't hear you talk so. You may laugh at me, because we've known each other such a short time, but really and truly you are the best friend I've ever had. I wouldn't lose you for any one or anything in the world, and I don't mean to, unless you get tired of me—so, there!"

"Tired of you! Good heavens, I tired of you!"

"Very well, then," said I flippantly, "so far as I'm concerned you needn't say 'goodby' to the Valley farm until you feel the first symptoms coming on."

"Lady Betty," remarked Mr. Brett, "I wonder if there's another girl like you in the world?"

"According to my mother, there isn't another so vexing," I replied.

We both laughed, and then he suddenly said, "Here is Aristo."

I stared about wildly. "Where, where?" I asked.

He laughed a great deal more. "Why, you're looking right at the postoffice and the grocery and dry goods store."

Sure enough, there was a brown wooden building at the top of a dusty hill we were just climbing, but there was nothing else anywhere, except a clear brown creek and some sweet smelling meadows with a white horse gazing in a bored way over rather a queer fence, and some cows asleep under a clump of maple trees on our side of a young birch grove.

"Where's the rest of it?" I went on "Where are the other shops and the houses and the people?"

"Oh, the other shops and the houses aren't built yet, but they may be any time, and then the people will come. But the fact that they haven't come yet doesn't prevent this from being Aristo. But you mustn't think this is the only place you will have to do your shopping when you're at the Valley farm. Wait till you see Hermann's Corners. There's a great emporium there, and you'll ruffle the feelings of half the ladies of Summer county if you don't fall in love with it and its proprietor, Whit Walker. Promise you'll let me be the first one to introduce you to both?"

LAST MOMENTS ARE DESCRIBED

Emperor and Dowager Empress of China Not Poisoned

FOREIGN DOCTORS REJECTED

Final Illness of "Terrible Woman" Dated From First of Month, When She Terrified Court by Outbursts of Uncontrolled Temper--Inhuman Formality and Etiquette of Centuries Fully Adhered To Pekin, Nov. 20.—Accurate information concerning the last days of the emperor and the dowager empress has just been obtained from officials of the palace. The various foreign legations, in attempting to determine the causes of the death of the emperor and the dowager empress, have abandoned the poison theory and have concluded that the symptoms of the emperor indicate that death resulted from neurasthenia and cardiac weakness, with other complications. The foreign board denies the rumors that either of their majesties was poisoned.

It has been learned that when the members of the foreign legations were last received in audience they took with them to the palace foreign physicians, with the idea of discovering what malady it was from which the emperor suffered. They were unsuccessful.

The emperor made a speech less than one hour before his death. He passed away during the greatest excitement and confusion. His native physicians had been temporarily dismissed, under the impression that there was no change in the condition of the emperor, and that he might live for some time. There was a sudden turn for the worse, however, and they were quickly recalled. They at once gave orders, in accordance with a custom of the imperial family observed for centuries past, that the emperor be dressed for death and that imperial yellow clay be spread over the road leading from the winter palace to the Forbidden City. At the same time an imperial conveyance was made ready to convey the dowager empress to the death chamber.

The last illness of the dowager empress dated from Nov. 1. On that day the court was terrified by an outburst of uncontrolled temper by her. On Nov. 12 she suffered a paralytic stroke upon being informed of the precarious condition of the emperor. On Nov. 13 Prince Ching returned from her mausoleum in the eastern hills, whither she had sent him to make a religious offering in the hope of propitiating the ghost that in her dreams had beckoned her to follow him out to these hills.

An official of high standing says that the empress died of apoplexy and that she was able to talk and did talk up to within a few hours of passing away. Both the emperor and empress awaited the coming of the grim reaper clad in their full official robes and surrounded by hundreds of court officials and followers. It was a barbarous exhibition of the soulless and inhuman formality and etiquette of the court.

On the night of Nov. 13 the dowager empress called the members of the grand council together and talked with them for some time. She was lying prone, but fully dressed. After one hour's consultation the councillors were dismissed, but they were told to return at 2 o'clock in the morning with the edicts prepared to announce the succession to the throne. She was able to signify her assent to these particular edicts, but immediately after having done this she declared: "I can bear no more," and relapsed into unconsciousness.

The emperor and the dowager empress were dead or moribund when the regency edicts were issued.

As soon as it was actually known throughout the palace that their majesties were dead a condition of panic ensued. The widow of Tung Chi attempted to commit suicide because she perceived she would not be made dowager empress. There was an outbreak of wailing and general pandemonium such as accompanied the giving of the order that their majesties should be clad in their imperial robes for death. Many of the palace eunuchs fled, carrying with them such valuables as they could lay their hands on. Dowager Empress Yehonala was one of the few who retained her presence of mind. She ordered that the gates be guarded and gave other instructions for the maintenance and restoration of order.

The eunuchs returned yesterday and have been reinstated, and except for the continuance of funeral obsequies and observances, conditions at the palace are normal. The principal concubines of the late Kuang Hsu have been pensioned.

Pu Yi, the baby emperor, has been taken from his family and is sedulously cared for within the palace precincts. He is popularly reported as crying day and night for his old nurse.

Smuggled Chinamen Across Border

Rutland, Vt., Nov. 20.—Pleading guilty to five counts of an indictment charging him with smuggling Chinamen into this country, Alphe Lamothe of Bedford, P. Q., was fined $200 on each of these counts in court here. He paid the fine, amounting in all to $1000. Charley Sing also pleaded guilty to smuggling Chinamen across the line. Sentence was suspended in this case and his bail was placed at $1000.

EDITORIAL.

According to James F. Burke one of Quincy's real estate agents, West Quincy is looking for a boom next spring such as it has not had for many years.

The completion of the boulevard from Adams street to Copeland street has opened up much desirable residential property that has been dormant for the reason of its inaccessability.

According to Mr. Burke this property is to be thrown on the market. In fact it is already on the market. A number of house lots in this section have already been sold and the early spring wil see active building operations.

The communication in Thursday's Ledger relative to the purchase of a new steam fire engine was timely. Unless Quincy can dispose of the two steamers it now owns it seems like a waste of money to purchase another. The present steamer in commission was purchased many years ago and has done excellent service. It is doubtless a little old but still capable of doing what is required of it.

The records will doubtless show that while it responded to practically all of the alarms during the present year that its actual working time at fire would amount to but few hours for the entire year.

Quincy is fortunate in having an excellent water service with very high pressure so that unless a fire is of unusual magnitude or the building located far from a hydrant there would be but little use for the steamer.

It has been the policy of the city to have hydrants at frequent intervals along its water mains and there are few localities that can not be readily reached by a line of hose.

In addition to the steamer in service there is a relief steamer obtained from the Fore River Co. which could be brought into service in case of a conflagration.

This steamer is at present stored in the basement of the Wollaston fire station.

If the city has $5000 it can expend for any purpose, it can be used to much better advantage on some of our main thoroughfares.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

Frank Flood of Fayette street, who was buyer for Boynton & Russell for several years, is now with Edwin C. Snowdon of Brook street.

E. H. Wight of Elm street has invented a tree protector which citizens of the city think is a sure prevention against the browntail moth and other pests. Mr. Wight is protecting his new invention by a patent and has commenced to manufacture.

The Sewing circle connected with Dorothy Q lodge No. 55, met with Mrs. Mary Douglass of Old Colony terrace Thursday afternoon. They are sewing for a sale to be given in the spring. Refreshments were served. The next meeting is with Mrs. Abbie Grey of Newton street, Dec. 2d.

The social dance given under the auspices of the American Benefit society at Brasee hall Tuesday evening, proved a successful affair, socially as well as financially. Thirty-five couples participated in the march led by Mr. Simpson of Quincy and Mrs. L. C. Merrill. Wilson's orchestra furnished the music. Ice cream and fancy crackers were served.

The city ought to supply each playground with material and apparatus so that our children could enjoy themselves.

The Unity Circle of King's Daughters are holding a rummage sale today in the Adams building. All kinds of articles are on sale, ranging in price from a penny to a quarter. Many useful articles can be obtained at very reasonable prices.

The men who have tickets offered them for the mass meeting for Laymen at Symphony hall, Boston, Sunday evening will miss hearing a speaker of much interest if they do not attend as Dr. Grenfell of Labrador is the speaker of the evening.

John Adams Chapter, Junior Sons and Daughters of the Revolution are to meet at the birthplace of President John Adams Saturday afternoon at half-past two, when their new director Mrs. Charles Belcher of Randolph will be present to meet the chapter and a few friends.

The regular monthly business meeting of the Sans Souci Dramatic club of South Quincy was held Thursday evening at the home of Miss Anna R. Giles, president Collins presiding. After the business, a social hour was enjoyed, instrumental and vocal selections being rendered by members of the club.

STEAMER NOT WANTED.

Editors Quincy Daily Ledger:

It seems to me that Mr. Dunbar's letter in Thursday's Ledger against the extravagance of the city buying another steam fire engine is well worth looking into before the City Council commits itself in favor of the proposed $5000 appropriation.

Quincy's high pressure service has been in successful operation for a considerable number of years and has proved itself amply able to cope with a number of the largest fires which have occurred without even having the steam fire engine coupled on to a hydrant—notably the destruction of the Old Colony Street Railway's car barn at City Square a few years ago. Through good management and a large volume of water from the high pressure service, a fire, which at the outset appeared to menace every building in the square was kept within the walls of the building in which it started.

With hydrants located throughout the city but a few hundred feet apart, each capable of delivering water at from 70 to 82 pounds pressure, there can be concentrated at any point enough lines of hose to drown out any fire before it attains the magnitude of a conflagration. If that will not stop it then the question resolves itself into one of executive ability of our engineers.

With a tax rate of $20.50 and the great bulk of our taxable property on a higher valuation making in reality a rate based on the 1907 valuation of $21.75. I hope that the Council will go slow on this order and every other order involving expenditures outside of the actual current expenses, which is brought before it. We are now overburdened with taxation through thoughtless legislation. Let's stop right here. Get out the pruning knife and sharpen it up. It is either that or a Finance Commission established by the Legislature. Old Slow.

THREE LAUNCHINGS.

The last two of the four ocean tugs built for the United States government by the Fore River Ship Building Co. were successfully launched at 8 o'clock this morning.

The tugs which are named Gen. R. B. Ayres and Gen. J. M. Brannan were sent over without ceremony or sponsor.

The launch however was witnessed by a number of the Fore River officials.

Immediately following the launch of tugs a large car float built for New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad was launched.

This float was launched practically completed and she will leave tomorrow morning for Oak Point, N. Y., in tow of the tug Waltham.

A BAD FALL.

Two carpenters, whose names could not be learned fell from the roof of George Hinkley's house at Atlantic this morning and were more or less injured. The men were at work shingling the house and at the time were half way up the roof.

Suddenly there was a crack as the staging gave way and the men came tumbling down. They landed heavily on the ground some thirty feet below.

A depot carriage was called and they were taken to their homes.

☞Boston finds its municipal music too expensive. The concerts averaged nearly $200 each last season while the state gets the same result from its concerts at an average of a little over $50 per concert. Looks as though there was still room for considerable retrenchment in old Boston.

☞John F. Hunt of the Savings Bank building has taken the agency of the State Mutual Life Assurance Company of Worcester which as a life insurance has a record of over sixty years.

☞H. R. Holmes for so many years connected with Frank Fessenden Crane in the furniture and repairing business and later in real estate is to open a store next to the Ledger office where he will make a specialty of antique furniture, furniture repairing etc.

BURYING A DEAD ISSUE

Yankees Fish In Newfoundland Waters Under New Regulations

Boston, Nov. 20.—American fishermen in northern waters have found a way in which the modus vivendi between the United States and Great Britain governing the operations of the fishing fleet are easily set aside, according to information brought by the revenue cutter Gresham, which has arrived at this port from her fall cruise to Newfoundland. The situation results from the willingness of the Americans to take advantage of local regulations which, it is said, practically make the modus vivendi a dead letter.

Under the provisions of the latter instrument an American vessel should ship her crew on the high seas if she intends to fish in Newfoundland waters. The laws of that province, however, permit the American skipper, upon agreement to pay a custom duty on his fare of fish, which at the outside estimate is a nominal sum, to pick up his crew at Birchly Cove.

As the amount payable on a good catch is between $50 and $75, the American captain has found it profitable to pay this sum and get his men from the Newfoundland port. According to the Gresham's information the arrangement was first tried last year and was found so satisfactory to all parties that it has become a general practice.

WELCOME SURPRISE FOR MILL WORKERS

No Reduction In Wages of Fall River Operatives

Fall River, Mass., Nov. 20.—A welcome surprise came to the 25,000 operatives, working under the sliding scale agreement in the print cloth mills, when the Cotton Manufacturers' association announced that the cut of 8 percent in wages, which was expected to take effect under the agreement on Dec. 7, will not be enforced, and that the wage scale which has been operative since last May, when an 18 percent cut in wages went into effect, will be continued.

The announcement of the decision of the manufacturers not to enforce the cut was made by President Hills of the Cotton Manufacturers' association, when he called the leaders of the various labor unions in conference last night. After he had explained to them the action of the manufacturers, a meeting of the Textile Council was held and the action was approved. Hills, as president of the Manufacturers' association, signed the agreement, and the signatures of Messrs. Tansey, Whitehead, O'Donnell, Taylor and Harwood, representing the five unions, were added within an hour after the news was broken to the labor men.

There was great rejoicing on all sides when the news became known in the city, as it had been supposed that the wage cut of 8 percent, which the sliding scale agreement between the manufacturers and the unions made possible, would be put into effect next month.

No Reply From Root

Washington, Nov. 20.—A plea that the American government see that proper protection is afforded the natives of the Congo country under the new regime was made to Secretary Root by a committee representing the Congo Reform Association of the United States. Rev. Joseph Clark, who has been in the Congo country for twenty-three years, representing the American Baptist Missionary union, told Root of atrocities which he said have been practiced to compel the natives to pay the so-called labor tax. The secretary gave his visitors a courteous hearing, but made no reply.

Opium Smuggled In Cement

Manila, Nov. 20.—Evidences of an extensive plot to smuggle opium here from China have been discovered. A fortnight ago workmen employed on military buildings at Camp Stotzenberg discovered a quantity of opium concealed in cement which had been shipped from Hong Kong. Workmen engaged yesterday on the Manila forts opened a supposed barrel of cement and found it to be half full of opium. The government is now investigating.

Not For Partisan Exploitation

Kansas City, Nov. 20.—Nicholas M. Butler, president of Columbia university, speaking here at the annual dinner of the Kansas City Commercial club, declared that the great questions of banking and currency, regulation of the transportation systems of the country and trusts were not properly a matter for partisan exploitation or for party differences. Those questions, he said, could be solved only by intelligent study and reflection.

Brothers Die Together

North Sydney, N. S., Nov. 20.—Word has reached here of the drowning of six men at Fredericton, N. F. The victims are Ernest Chalk, George Chalk, Charles Chalk, all brothers, Jacob Coles, and Jeremiah Elkins and Abraham Elkins, brothers. The men had left Aspey Bay in a skiff for their homes at Glacier Bay. The boat was capsized by a heavy wind.

Ecquador Has a Revolution

Guayaquil, Nov. 20.—Owing to the reports of threatened uprisings, the Ecuadorian government has declared the army on a war footing and is taking active measures to maintain order. General Arellano and Colonel Navarro have been placed under arrest.

ARE YOU SATISFIED WITH YOUR SOCKS?

DO THEY HONESTLY WEAR AS YOU WOULD LIKE TO HAVE THEM?

One manufacturer has hit the nail on the head---the toe-nail at that. He has discovered a way of overcoming the puncture of the toe by the new wear-resisting

The hosiery made in this new way has a beautiful silky lisle finish and is free from "those terrible seams" the dealer hears so much about.

Another good point is the price, 25c. When you buy interwoven you get a regular top grade, 25c half-hose, together with the additional marvelous wearing qualities of toe and heel, which make one pair of these outwear three or four pairs of any other kind.

The Best Job Printing at This Office

Foot Ball And Other Sports

The local High school team closes the season of 1908 tomorrow, when they play the Dorchester High school team at the Dunbar avenue grounds, Dorchester. This is Quincy's big game of the season, and the local boys are going to play their heads off to take the game. It will be a hot game that the bunch of rooters, to accompany the team from here, will see, and will be worth watching.

The dope seems to give Quincy an excellent chance. Brockton the other day beat Dorchester 18-0, while a week before, the Shoe City team had a hard time of scoring one touchdown, while Quincy got a touchdown against her. According to this then, the local boys ought to put up a game and perhaps trim the Dorchester team.

The local soccer fans will have a chance to see their favorite game on Saturday, for the Fore Rivers will entertain at their grounds at Quincy Point, the Howard & Bullough team of Pawtucket. Fore River is now at the bottom of the league and bids fair to be the cellar champions this year. This should not be so, for there is excellent material for a team, if it could only be handled.

Tomorrow is the big football day of the season. Down at New Haven all the hotels are rapidly filling and there is much speculation in regard to the winner of the Harvard-Yale game. The odds favor the Crimson slightly, but the Eli backers have plenty of money that says Yale will defeat Harvard.

The Yale team has a powerful team, a fact that came out in the game against Princeton. Coy is certainly the sensation of the season, and the question is, can he stand the strain of two big games in succession. If he can he should beat Harvard, but without him Yale would be weak. Harvard has not won since 1902, and this is her year if ever.

A very funny order was given out yesterday by the Boston High school masters and athletic supervisors in regard to basket ball. In the future the basket ball teams of the Boston schools must content themselves with playing Boston teams only. They must not play teams like Winthrop, Quincy, Milton, Malden or the like.

The claim is that there is too much rough playing, and that the game should be won by skilful playing than by brute strength. This is a very good point, no doubt, but won't the boys be just as rough among themselves as they would against suburban teams. This edict will do a lot towards taking away the interest in the game, especially among the schoolboys of Boston.

Tin Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. John Peterson of Glendale road celebrated the tenth anniversary of their marriage last night at their home. A large number of relatives and friends were present to enjoy the hospitality of the couple and extend congratulations and best wishes.

In behalf of those present Mrs. A. P. Hanson presented Mr. and Mrs. Peterson with a handsome rocking chair. They responded briefly but befittingly.

A few brief remarks of congratulation were made by A. E. Lundin, G. E. Hedman and G. R. Blomquist.

The guests were entertained during the evening with piano duets by Miss Hilda Johnson and Miss Wilbas, and selections on the violin and guitar.

Another touching occasion of the evening was when Mrs. Hanson in behalf of all those present, presented Miss Elizabeth Erickson with a sum of money. Miss Erickson, although taken by surprise thanked all those present for the gift.

Dancing Party At Atlantic

The first dance of the season, an invitation party, filled Atlantic Music hall with a crowd of happy young folks Friday evening. The club room was made into a cosy corner with rugs and pillows and was a popular retreat between the dances, while the main hall was trimmed with flowers and ferns. The party was matronized by Mrs. Frederick J. Peirce, Mrs. William R. Gay and Mrs. Ralph Hobbs, who wore very effective and charming gowns. The order of dances included all the latest novelties among which was the famous "moonlight waltz." The lights in the hall were extinguished during this feature and an electric moon was made to rise slowly over the gallery until it cast its light from the centre of the ceiling. It was a most effective dance and was repeatedly encored.

The party was in charge of Gordon Jenkins and Kenneth Gay and was successful from start to finish.

Just before intermission, Mr. Morrison, who leases the hall, was called upon to give an exhibition of his house-cleaning, and with a broom and two aids he "fell to" in fine style. When he rounded up a neat little pile of dirt in the centre of the hall he was generously applauded. He modestly retired, however, without bowing his thanks. This little affair was delightfully informal.

Now that the dancing season has opened, many more parties are promised in the near future.

THE OTHER TEASDALE.

In the account of the Ward Four Republican smoke talk in Friday's Ledger it was inavertantly stated that Councilman R. J. Teasdale was among the speakers. It was however W. H. Teasdale, formerly chairman of the Board of Health who spoke.

TWENTY-FIVE PROBABLY DEAD

Gas Explosion In Brooklyn Water Main Excavation

STREET SURFACE BLOWN UP

Rescuers Must Dig Through Fifty Feet of Dirt, Rocks, Pipe and Timber to Reach the Victims--Great Tongues of Flame and Geysers of Water Shoot From Wreckage--Houses Shaken For Blocks Around

New York, Nov. 21.—Twenty-five persons are believed to have lost their lives in an explosion of gas which tore up a great section of Gold street, Brooklyn.

It is definitely known that fifteen persons were buried under the hundreds of tons of earth and timber that were thrown into the air by the explosion, and ten more persons are reported as missing.

The exact number of dead has not been determined, for those working to recover the entombed bodies must dig through fifty feet of dirt, rock and a tangle of pipes and timber. The explosion occurred in a fifty-foot deep excavation which had been made in Gold street, between York and Front streets, where a water main was being laid.

The gas main recently sprung aleak, and in a manner unknown a spark came in contact with the escaping gas. Immediately there was a terrific explosion, which lifted the surface of the street for half a block in both directions and hurled dirt, paving stones and debris into the air.

When the smoke and dust cleared away it was seen that the street had been opened from doorstep to doorstep over an area of nearly a block. The loosened earth and debris had fallen into the excavation, burying the score of laborers who were at work when the accident happened.

Great tongues of flame shot out of cracks in the street, and beside them geysers of water leaped into the air from a water main shattered by the explosion. Two bodies were sticking out of the wreckage.

Gold street was crowded with school children when the explosion occurred and that scores of children were not killed or injured was remarkable. A woman and three children were almost opposite the excavation when the earth crumbled under their feet and they were swept down into the hole under tons of wreckage. Two other children were on the opposite side of the street when the sidewalk caved in and they lost their lives.

Only four of the men working in the excavation escaped, and their escape was remarkable. They were digging near the opening of a four-foot sewer and the force of the explosion blew them to the entrance of it. Arthur Strand was hurled farthest in and he pulled the other three men after him.

Water from the broken main began to pour into the sewer and the four men were in danger of being drowned. They began to run toward the river, where there was an outlet to the sewer.

The explosion shook houses for blocks around. Thousands of persons were attracted to the scene and the police had difficulty in keeping them from crowding too close to the smoking pit of wreckage. Police lines were formed and the work of recovering the dead began within half an hour of the accident.

Business Improvement Continues

New York, Nov. 21.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says that gains are now almost universal, each week surpassing its predecessor in volume of trade, while manufacturing plants increase active capacity and confidence is finding expression in extensive plans for the future. There is a gratifying change for the better in regard to the promptness of collections.

Hit by Business Boom

Union, S. C., Nov. 21.—The Union Buffalo cotton mills, which operate more spindles and looms than any other textile corporation in the south, have orders to run each of its three plants to the fullest capacity. This places in operation 17,000 spindles and 800 looms which were idle during the summer. The mills employ 2000 people.

Indians In Pitiable Plight

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 21.—Word has been received that 500 Indians in the Fort George region are on the verge of starvation. The tribe is about 200 miles east of the Hudson Bay post's base of supply, and ran out of provisions three weeks ago. Large packs of wolves are overrunning the country, killing off the game.

To Straighten Out St. Pierre

Paris, Nov. 21.—The government has appointed Pierre Diedlot administrator of St. Pierre, Miq. He will sail for St. Pierre next Sunday on board the cruiser Gloire. He has been given broad instructions to examine into the situation and to do everything possible to remove the causes of the discontent.

Execution at Culebra

Panama, Nov. 21.—Hubert Stout, a native of Barbados, was hanged at Culebra for the murder of a Panama woman. This was the first execution in the canal zone since the American government has had charge of it.

NONE SERIOUSLY HURT

Demonstration Against Strikebreakers In Shoe Factory

Newburyport, Mass., Nov. 21.—The first demonstration arising from the recent strike of cutters at Dodge Bros.' shoe factory occurred late yesterday, when the strikebreakers now working in the cutters' places, numbering about forty, were met by a large crowd of union sympathizers at the factory doors when they were leaving work for the day, and pursued through the streets. None of the strikebreakers was seriously hurt, although several received minor injuries by being jostled about by the crowd. One of the fleeing men was knocked down on the street and had his nose and face severely bruised, while several took refuge in a Haverhill street car. About 200 people surrounded the car, hooting and jeering and flinging epithets at its occupants.

Arthur Hodgson, who had taken advantage of the concern's offer to teach young men the trade since the cutters went out, was one of those assailed by the mob, and when pressed too closely drew a revolver and is alleged to have pointed it at the mob. He was arrested and was followed to the police station by the majority of the crowd. Here Edward Hoyt took strenuous objection to a policeman's action, who is alleged to have kicked a boy for attempting to trip the policeman up, and Hoyt was taken into custody. Hodgson was later released after being reprimanded by the police.

HISTORIC TOWN CELEBRATES

White Plains, N. Y., Has 225th Birthday Today

White Plains, N. Y., Nov. 21.—Today marks the two hundred and twenty-fifth birthday of this historic village, and the occasion is being celebrated with parades, speeches and all sorts of rejoicing. White Plains is proud of the prominent part it took during the Revolutionary war, although the Americans under Washington met defeat here. Its people are fond of proclaiming to the world the fact that Washington had his headquarters here.

WASHINGTON'S HEADQUARTERS AT WHITE PLAINS.

The Miller house, at one time Washington's headquarters, is the centre of interest of today's celebration. It is being visited by a throng of pilgrims from all parts of the surrounding country eager to inspect again the collection of time honored Revolutionary relics that is stored there.

Among the features of today's celebration is a parade, participated in by members of the Westchester county and New York city militia. Governor Hughes of New York and Governor Woodruff of Connecticut have received invitations to be present at the celebration of the birthday of the venerable village.

Tonight the residences and business buildings of the village will be illuminated. Fires will also be kindled on Chatterton and Dusenberry hills, where the battle of White Plains was fought Oct. 28, 1776.

Champ Clark's Opinion of Tariff

Washington, Nov. 21.—"A universal grab game" is the appellation given the tariff by Representative Champ Clark of Missouri at the hearing before the ways and means committee on the tariff schedule for wood and wood manufactures. Several lumbermen said they wanted a protective tariff on lumber because other articles are protected by the present law. This called forth the term "grab" from Clark.

Loving Cup For Gompers

Denver, Nov. 21.—The approval of the convention of the American Federation of Labor was given President Gompers by the adoption of his annual report in full as presented. Delegate Lewis of the miners interrupted the proceedings and presented on behalf of the convention to Gompers a handsome silver loving cup and to Mrs. Gompers a diamond ring.

The Vote of Kentuckey

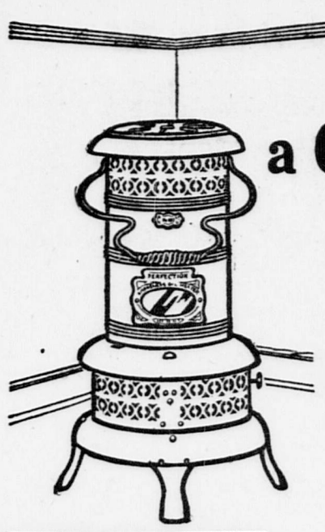

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 21.—Official returns from the 119 counties of Kentucky, completed last night, show that Bryan received 244,243 votes and Taft 235,334. The vote for other presidential nominees in Kentucky follows: Prohibition, 5866; Socialist, 4037; Socialist Labor, 342; People's party, 324; Independence party, 77.

Prairie Land In Danger

Little Rock, Nov. 21.—Without a cloud in the sky, and forest fires rapidly approaching, the residents of Grand Prairie offered prayers yesterday for rain, which it is believed will be necessary to save 30,000 acres of prairie land from devastation.

Sailing Ship Makes New Record

Norfolk, Nov. 21.—The Norwegian sailing ship Lancing arrived here from New Caledonia, South Pacific ocean, after a record-breaking voyage of over 12,000 miles in ninety-seven days.

GOVERNOR GUILD'S THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

"Earnest and sincere belief in Divine guidance, deep rooted faith that even present apparent evil must ultimately convert to good, upheld the founders of New England through trials that everywhere utterly destroyed settlements made by men less completely convinced of their own duty, less deeply trustful Divine wisdom. Not for ease, but for strength, was the prayer of the Puritan, and in his prayer he disciplined his soul by seeking cause less for repining than for praise.

"In accordance with the beautiful custom which, since Governor Bradford called the colonists together after their first harvest, has yearly set aside a day at this season for the special acknowledgment of the mercies vouchsafed to us, I therefore, with the advice and consent of the honorable council, appoint Thursday, Nov. 26, as a day for the giving of thanks to Almighty God.

"In our testimony of gratitude for evil escaped or good achieved, whether we bear it by spoken word in the house of worship or in the quiet communings of our own hearts, let us not forget reverently to acknowledge the blessing of peace.

"Peace has entered among the nations. The long impending crisis that was to drench Europe with blood has passed. There has come with it not war, but the liberation of a patient and ancient race from a yoke of centuries old. The white fleet of our country bears our flag to the Orient and to the South Seas, but that there ever was a prophecy of the exasperation of enemies is forgotten in a world-wide revelation of friends.

"To the ancient sources of barbaric assault on civilization, the regions of immemorial oppression ,the lands of the Scythian, the Persian, the Turk and the Tartar, has come the gospel of popular freedom; and freedom, not license, is peace.

"Peace is spread among the creeds. The old races, the mingling of whose blood swells the veins of the new, virile, strong American race, have brought to this soil varying methods of worship, but the old intolerance has gone forever. Every year men quarrel less and less over the difference in the manner of their devotion. Every year with the greater measure of mutual respect, comes the deeper sense of brotherhood under the same Divine Father.

"May this great gift of peace abide. May it never be confounded with servility or sloth. As war is death, so peace is life. May we reverently use it not each for himself alone, but each for his least fortunate neighbor, that he, too, may revel in life and enjoy it more abundantly."

Blue and the Crimson Clash on Yale Gridiron Today

BETTING IS AT EVEN MONEY

All the Men Picked to Battle For College's Supremacy In Premier Sport Are Reported to Be In Splendid Shape--Both Cabtains to Participate In Game--How Eevens Will Line Up

New Haven, Nov. 21.—When this afternoon's game on Yale field is over the football championship of the year will be decided. Whether the honors will go to Houghton's huskies from Harvard or Bigelow's boys of Yale is the question of the hour in New Haven, and it may be said in all fairness that opinion seems to be equally divided with mathematical exactness.

The even balance of the public mind in regard to the great question is reflected in the betting, which stands at even money. This is probably the most significant evidence of the evenness of today's match, since in most of the recent years the supporters of the blue team have been compelled to give odds if thy wanted to back their good opinion of their team with money. Much money has been wagered on the result of the game.

The two teams left their training quarters today for the field in the very best of condition. There is far less talk of injuries than usual, and it is agreed on all sides that victory this afternoon will perch on the banner of the eleven which plays the better football. From tackle to tackle the Yale line is the heavier and probably a trifle slower than the Harvard line. To find holes in it will be a difficult task for John Harvard's men, but when end runs, forward passes and onside kicks are mentioned the supporters of the crimson look knowing and smile confidently. The back fields are evenly matched, save that it is generally conceded that Coy, Yale's fullback, is something more than a match for Kennard or Ver Wiebe of Harvard.

Records of the Two Elevens

In style of play the two teams have differed somewhat throughout the season, Yale relying on her strength in the line and her ability to smash through all opposition toward her opponent's goal line. Only in the Yale game with Brown, which ended in a 10 to 10 tie, and in last Saturday's fierce struggle at Princeton, at the end of which the score was 11 to 6 in favor of the blue, has Yale been scored on. Harvard has also a clean slate in the matter of scores save in two games. The Annapolis middies held her to a 6 to 6 score, and Brown compelled her to accept a safety score. In the latter case the final score was 6 to 2.

Thus far Yale's opponents have scored 16 points, while the total tally against Harvard is 8. Yale has rolled up 153 points, while Harvard's record is 128 points. Brown is the only team that has played both Harvard and Yale, so that no comparison of the two elevens on the ground of comparative scores can be made.

The reliance of Harvard this afternoon will probably be placed on her knowledge of football as it is played under the new rules. The forward pass is Harvard's strong card, and it will be played until it is worn to a "frazzle," as Harvard's distinguished alumnus would say. Harvard's play throughout the season has been marked by the splendid use of the forward pass and brilliant runs by her fast backs. Today, however, she meets a team that has beenn especially trained to oppose such plays, and the result will probably be in doubt until the final screech of the referee's whistle is heard. It will be a battle royal without a doubt, and on all sides here is heard the opinion that the final score will be close. There is, however, little talk of a tie score being possible, as both teams will play with desperation if any scoring is done in the first half. Today is both the end and the culmination of their season, and victory means everything to the men who have been trained for months with the winning of today's game as the reward for all their bone and nerve-trying work.

Both Captains In the Game

One fact that has elicited universal applause is the announcement, made several days ago, that both Captain Burr of Harvard and Captain Burch of Yale will be in this afternoon's game. They have been kept on the side lines recently by injuries and have been forced to see their teams do battle with other elevens while they were themselves unable to don their armor. Today, however, all that is forgotten in the "stern joy that warriors feel," and it is expected that Burr at left guard and Burch at right end will give good accounts of themselves unless disabled at an early stage of the struggle.

Unless injuries supervene, there will probably be not much change in this lineup, although the crimson team is well supplied with substitutes.

New Haven is filled today with the usual football crowd. From far and near, even from foreign countries, the alumni have scented the battle and have gathered in mighty cohorts to cheer and sing "Fair Harvard" or "Boola Boola," according to their colors. There is the usual abundance of pretty maidens and handsome matrons to grace the scene, and the town wears its annual decorations. Naturally there is a little more blue than crimson to be seen, but what the Harvard forces lack in color they seem to be making up in noise.

VAN VLISSENGEN'S GREAT FORGERIES

Amount to Over a Million and a Half Dollars

Chicago, Nov. 21.—After an examination of the various documents in the office of Peter VanVlissingen, convicted forger of mortgages, notes and trust deeds, William C. Niblack, receiver for the VanVlissingen properties, declared that the forgeries amount to $1,539,423.

Only a thorough examination of all the papers will disclose to the receiver and the creditors how many have been taken up by VanVlissingen, who is now a convict in the Joliet penitentiary. Since VanVlissingen's confession of guilt, which startled the business world and preceded his sentence only a few hours, he has asserted that $750,000 would cover the forged paper which he sold.

Objection to Negro Students

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 21.—Thirty-four members of the junior class in the Grand Rapids veterinary college walked out of a classroom when two negro students entered to resume their studies. Because of the objections of other students the negroes had been denied admission when they returned to college this year and the negroes appealed to the courts. Judge Perkins mandamused the college management to admit the two negro students. After yesterday's strike the school authorities suspended the entire junior class, including the two negroes, until next Tuesday.

Prosecution Cost $500,000

New York, Nov. 21.—Charles W. Russel, special assistant to the United States attorney general, announces that he does not intend to proceed against Francesco Sabbi, the employment agent, on the indictments charging kidnapping of men in this city and shipping them to labor camps on the Florida Keys. This action ends the prosecution of the Florida peonage cases, which were three years in preparation and cost the United States government $500,000.

Disaster In Montana Mine

Butte, Mont., Nov. 21.—As a result of a fire in the Northwestern Improvement company's coal mine at Red Lodge, three men are dead and six are missing. The six missing miners attempted to escape by No. 2 entry and it is stated that there is not a chance that they have escaped, for in that section of the mine the fire is raging fiercely. The fire was started by the lights on the caps of the miners and is still raging. The damage will be heavy.

Another Uprising In Hayti

Port Au Prince, Hayti, Nov. 21.—General Simon, commander of the south for twenty years, having refused to comply with the recent request of President Alexis to come to Port Au Prince and confer with the president on the political situation, has been declared a rebel. The revolutionary movement appears to be serious, for Simon is in possession of arms and ammunition.

Football Not Morally Uplifting

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 21.—Professor Josiah Royce of the department of philosophy at Harvard, in an article in the football number of the Harvard Illustrated Magazine, declares that "the prevalent result of football is not favorable to the best moral education of the great body of our youth. It does not," continues Royce, "train loyalty to see another man's bones broken."

Airship Garages In France

Paris, Nov. 21.—The chamber of deputies unanimously adopted the government's motion for a subvention of $20,000 with which to begin the establishment of a system of garages throughout the country that will command the principal "aerial routes of travel," and out of which prizes for aviation also will be offered.

The Weather Forecast

JIM'S HOT FINISH.

By COLIN S. COLLINS.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

"What luck?" asked Ben Strome, as Jim Pettie his partner, and the other half of the Altair Brothers, emerged from the red ticket wagon, where Richard Clute was "counting up" the afternoon receipts.

"Worst sort of luck," was the reply. "I thought if I tackled the old man after a good matinee I could catch him in a fine humor, but it seems that the sheriff held him up just before I got there. One of the grafters he pinched told that the old man got a rakeoff, and the sheriff came around to get his—and I got mine. The old man's going to send Daisy to boarding school, and he mentioned a place I might go to—but it's nowhere near Daisy's school. You can bet on that."

"Can't you two hook it?" suggested Ben. "Its pretty close to the end of the season. If we lose a couple of weeks, I can stand my share of the loss if I don't get a chance to work a single act at some of the late fairs. See what the kid thinks."

"I don't have to see," was the gloomy response. "I know now what her answer would be. She won't beat it. She's going to have a regular wedding, with the old man giving her away or there won't be a wedding. She's told me that a dozen times, and she means it when she says it."

Strome nodded. Ever since they had joined the Clute show in midseason Pettie had been making violent love to Daisy Clute, the owner's daughter. It was not a large circus—a one ring affair—though they traveled by railroad instead of by wagon.

The performers all lived in a single car and in theory formed one large family. Daisy and her father had a car to themselves, but she was much around the tents, and her preference for the clean limbed young gymnast had soon become a matter for comment.

By supper time the fact that the old man had refused his consent to their marriage was all over the dressing tent, and you'd not need Daisy's red rimmed eyes and Pettie's frown to confirm the report.

Daisy was standing near the entrance when Pettie came out for the double act. He did a turn on the flying rings earlier on the bill, while Strome did a strong man act in the ring. Their double act in the air was the ring feature of the show—"the hottest act in the business," they claimed—and Daisy always tried to be near in case of accident, though she could not bear to watch them.

Strome did the "bearing," catching Jim as he leaped from his own trapeze to Strome's hands. He was a reliable worker, but Daisy always feared that some night those steady nerves would fail and that Jim's body would go hurling through the air until it struck the ring bank or the seats, a limp and lifeless mass. She had seen one accident, and it had remained vivid in her memory.

Presently Strome joined the pair as they stood talking, and an instant later the four horses used in the double riding act dashed into the tent, followed by Paul and Letty Murphy, who boasted very different names on the bill.

The band struck up their music, and the two men ran into the ring. It was the work of a moment to climb to their perches. The apparatus consisted of two trapeze swings, one long one used by Pettie for the leaps and the shorter one from which Strome hung when he made the catches. On Pettie's end there was a platform from which he leaped to gain momentum, and this was but a few feet from the center pole which held up the tent.

The first two swings were made without trouble, and then Strome did some single work to give Pettie an opportunity to rest. Jim leaned against the ropes to steady himself and glanced below at the well filled tent. A sea of faces, white in the flare of the lamps, gazed intently upward as Strome hung by his toes from the short swing.

An odd roar caught Pettie's attention, and he glanced at the lamps. A cluster of gasoline flares hung from the center pole and supplied light for the tent.

Two huge reservoirs were fastened together to form a ring about the pole, and from these radiated the burners. Clute was old fashioned in many of his ideas, and his fondness for the old fashioned light amounted to a hobby.

Jim could see that one of the tanks had sprung a leak, and in some way the escaping gas had caught fire from the flames below. The heat was vaporizing the inflammable liquid more rapidly than usual, and it was only a matter of minutes before the heat would cause an explosion that would send the blazing fluid flying over the crowd below and the tinderlike tent.

There had been no rain for several days, and, on the other hand, the blazing sun had been pouring its rays on the tent since early morning. The flames would run to the guy ropes, and when these gave way the crowd below would be enveloped in a mass of flame.

There was no time to signal below to lower the lights. It was too far to jump to the pole. Strome was just climbing to the trapeze bar for a moment's rest, and Jim seized his own swing.

Strome gasped as he saw the movement and hurried to reverse on the trapeze. Jim took the count from his swing, and Strome could not understand the move. As the long swing reached the limit of its flight Strome caught Jim's voice.

He heard only the words "Emergency lights," but he guessed the rest, and as coolly as though it was a part of the act he dropped to the net below as being the quickest way down.

The big swing reached the platform and went beyond, then with increased momentum swung toward the opposite side again. A second time it swung toward the platform, and as it reached the farthest point Jim let go and kept on toward the pole.

Straight through the air he flew until his arms clasped the blue pole, and for a moment he hung there, the breath forced from his body by the shock of the impact. Then he began to climb upward.

The lights dazzled his eyes, and the heat was terrfic, but he did not realize it. He knew only that seconds were precious, and right into the very heart of the blaze he climbed to reach the valve wheels that regulated the supply for the burners.

In a second the place was in darkness, but the band played its noisiest and the ring attendants were patrolling the ring and shouting that there was no danger, even while they kept their eyes on the single flame that still burned above the tanks.

Unmindful of the hot burners Jim forced his way between them, though they seared his skin through his thin silk shirt, and a moment late he clapped his hand upon the flame and held it upon the heated metal until the blaze was gone.

For a moment he swayed dizzily in the darkness; then from below there came a glare of light, and he heard Strome's voice above the blare of the band.

"Ride the lights down!" he was shouting, and Jim threw his blistered arms about the reservoirs as the men started to lower the apparatus.

They were within a few feet of the ring when strength failed, and Jim let go his hold. A dozen men swarmed to his aid, and, accompanied by two physicians from the audience, they bore him to the dressing tent.

When he came to the main tent was dark, and only the light in the dressing tent was burning.

"Did they get out?" he asked weakly.

"Every one of them," declared the old man's hearty voice. "They thought it was the 'sensational finish' we advertise until they saw what you were up to, and then we had the emergency lights going, and the crowd went out in order. It's a pity you didn't hear the applause they gave you."

"I was busy—just then," explained Jim, with a faint smile. He half raised his head to look about him, and Clute guessed his thoughts.

"Daisy has gone on the train to make up a berth in our own car," he explained. "She insists upon nursing you herself. The ambulance will be here in a minute to take you down. You want to get well quick, Jim, for there's a wedding ahead of you, and it's to be Clute & Pettie's show next year, with our own electric light plant."

Clute hustled away to look for the ambulance, and Jim turned to his partner. He was too happy to realize how his burns hurt. He thought only of the fact that he had won Daisy.

"Ben," he said, with a grin, "we always told 'em we did the 'hottest act in the business,' but that's the hottest finish we ever did. It's a pity we can't keep it in."

Why We Wear Glasses.

Man's eyes at rest are far focused—will make no effort when seeing the moon or earthly horizons. Birds' and fishes' eyes at rest are near focused—will make no effort when looking at nearby worms and minnows. Man's elastic lenses are under constant flattening compression. Imagine a rubber ball of flattened convex lenslike shape laid in between two disks of canvas and the uniting edges of these cloths stretched to a ring. They would flatten the rubber, and if relaxed it would thicken by its own elasticity. The thicker the lens the shorter its focus. For reading or threading a needle we relax the tension on the lens by contracting a ring of muscle surrounding each lens and then wait for the lenses to thicken through their elasticity. In fish the lens is set against the cornea (approximately), short focus, and when it wants to see whether the shadowy object some feet away is a shark or a log it pulls the entire round lens toward the retina and gets as clear a vision as possible. Now we see why so many human beings need "spectacles" as they grow old—the elasticity of the lenses is gradually lost, just as it is in rubber. —Harper's.

The Finger Nails.

In days when superstition was more prevalent than it is now the shape and appearance of the finger nails were considered to have reference to one's destiny. To learn the message of the finger nails it was necessary to rub them over with a compound of wax and soot and then to hold them so that the sunlight fell fully on them. Then on the horny, transparent substance certain signs and characters were supposed to appear, from which the future could be interpreted. Persons, too, having certain kinds of nails were credited with the possession of certain characteristics. Thus a man with red and spotted nails was supposed to have a hot temper, while pale, lead colored nails were considered to denote a melancholy temperament. Narrow nails were supposed to betray ambition and a quarrelsome nature, while round shaped nails were the distinguishing marks of lovers of knowledge and people of liberal sentiment. Conceited, narrow minded and obstinate folk were supposed to have small nails, indolent people fleshy nails and those of a gentle, retiring nature broad nails.

EDITORIAL.

International affairs, which have been disturbing, are now more settled than for several months. The deaths of the Emperor and Dowager Empress of China fortunately produced no crisis and none is expected. The reproof which has been administered to the Emperor of Germany, unpalatable as it may have been, will work for the peace of the world, which more than once has been seriously threatened by his indiscreet utterances. Balkan affairs are also quiet for the time being, though disturbances there are nearly always possible. Fortunately these problems will come before an International Conference, the chief purpose of which will be to maintain peace. The financial markets of Europe are in better condition than a year ago, though there has been no such recuperation on the other side as here. The United States leads not only in booms but in recoveries from panic; thus sustaining its reputation for strength and optimism.

From outward appearances one would hardly realize that a city election was but a little more than a week away. Mr. Stone has held a few smoke talks in some of the wards but up to the present time there has been no public meeting in the interest of Mayor Shea. There is plenty of time yet however and the coming week will doubtless see politics livening up.

A few years ago at election time the papers were full of communications signed "Injured Mother" "Citizen" "Tired Father" "Tax payer" and the like in which candidates for office were assailed.

The general public had no knowledge as to the writer, other than he was some person who lacked the courage to sign his own name. As a rule these communications were paid for by the writer.

Then the revised election law was passed which sounded the death knell to this class of political writers. This law, among other things, provided that the name and address of some responsible person must be signed to all such articles and furthermore that the word "Advertisement" should be printed at the top or bottom of the letter.

This was a wise law for previous to its passage many a good man had his character assailed in such communications by persons who did not have the courage or were ashamed to let it be known who the author was.

Save from circulars issued by some of the Ward Two candidates for the City Council, no political literature has been issued as yet. Early next week however will probably see hundreds of poster cards, posted bearing the pictures of Candidates Stone and Shea.

In wards where there is a contest something will probably be done in this same line to boom things. There is one thing that the voters can rest assured will be done, that is that the political committees will do their best to get out a large vote on Dec. 1.

UNION THANKSGIVING SERVICE.

Announcements are made today of the Thanksgiving service at Bethany Church on Thanksgiving Day. Last year a similar service was held which was most successful and attracted a large and very representative audience from all over the city. This season the programme is so attractive that the congregation should be even larger than a year ago. Evidently the service is to be non-partisan and non-sectarian as possible. It provides public service in which all may unite on the common basis of good citizenship and in worship of the one God. The general theme for discussion is the Civic Spirit, as fostered by the home, the schools, the social organizations and the church, with these well known citizens as speakers Col. Edward Anderson, Mr. Edward Southworth, Mr. H. M. Faxon and Rev. A. M. Thompson. Mrs. E. C. Page will be the soloist and Mrs. Morey organist. The hour of the service has been placed sufficiently early, ten o'clock, to accommodate all who may wish to attend. The character of the service and the speakers will insure the interest of all public spirited citizens.

—It will soon be necessary to make rules regarding balloons and airships. Connecticut has already taken the initiative for Tuesday at Rockville the authorities locked up a balloon which descended on the town, destroying some fences, grape arbors, etc. When all damages are settled for the balloon will be released.

Shea--Manion Nuptials

The marriage of Miss Nellie Agatha Manion of Weymouth and Mr. Daniel Thomas Shea of Brooklyn, N. Y., took place at the parochial residence of the church of the Sacred Heart, Weymouth, Monday noon. Rev. J. B. Holland performed the ceremony. The bride was attired in a charming costume of white messaline satin and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Mary Barrett, who wore white over pink silk and carried a bouquet of forget-me-nots. The best man was the groom's brother, Walter Shea of Quincy. A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents on Keith street from one until 3.30 o'clock.

Gusts were present from Albany and Brooklyn, N. Y., Hyde Park, Brockton, Boston, Cambridge, Fitchburg, Quincy, Braintree and the Weymouths. The couple were the recipients of many handsome and costly gifts. Mr. and Mrs. Shea left on an afternoon train for their wedding tour and on their return will reside at 219 De Kalb avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., where the ywill be at home to their friends after January 1.

STUDENTS RECITALS.

The committee in charge of the students' recitals see encouraging signs of audiences who enjoy music for music's sake. The composer is interpreted by each performer as best he has grasped the work from his present standpoint and because he enjoys it. The appreciation of the audience on Thursday evening at Colonial hall was very gratifying. Naturally many present were Ethelbert Nevin's personal friends in whose memory Miss Spear had arranged the program. No one had been asked to subscribe but in response to the fact published in the Ledger that tickets would be sold only at the door the receipts were encouraging and at least three more recitals are guaranted, December 3, 10 and 17. On Dec. 3, compositions by William Chaminade will be given for the most part by singers and soloists other than those who appeared this week. These interpretations will acquaint the listeners with the work of this French composer, who is visiting America for the first time and appears in public in Boston Dec. 12. The small admission fee goes toward the expense of the recitals and to further music interests in Quincy.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

A social gathering was held at the home of Miss Bertha Wendall, Thursday evening. The party was in honor of her eighteenth birthday. During the evening games were played. Miss Wendall was the recepient of many gifts including a music cabinet from a few of her intimate friends.

Among those present were Alice Wendall, Gertrude Carr, Percy Allen, Roy Allen, Rose Capiferri, Anna Hennessy, Vera Spear, Agnes Collins, Marion Chamberlain, Mary Hennessy, Katherine Barry, Ruth Sullivan, Margaret Hennessy, Mary Powers, Elizabeth Smith, Helen Cuffe, Annie Griffin, Martin Dillon, John Capiferri, Herndon Avery, Thomas Hennessy, Joseph Capiferri, Francis Burns, William Berry, Edwin Hayes, John Byron, Frank Wendall, Harry Brooks, William Rourke, Michael Donahue.

Today's Court.

Vincenzo De Mario was find $75 and Pasquale De Angelio $100 for violation of the liquor law at Braintree.

The continued case of Edgar Hayden for violation of the liquor law at Braintree, was called and he was defaulted.

The case of John Moir for violation of the liquor law at Braintree was continued until Nov. 28.

The continued cases of Frank B. Collins and Robert Kerrigan for robbery from Martin Kain was heard. Collins was found not guilty and discharged. The case against Kerrigan was then continued until next Saturday and a new warrant issued against him for larceny.

—Thousands of trout have died in Massachusetts streams this fall as the result of the serious drought, and poor fishing will follow for some time although the Fish and Game Commission is doing all they can to repair the damage.

THE HEAT OF THE SUN.

Why It Is Warmer on the Plains Than on Mountain Tops.

There is one thing in connection with the heat of the sun that many people do not understand, says the Chicago News. Citing the well known fact that the nearer we get to a fire the more we feel its heat, they ask why it is that we find the air so much colder on the top of a high mountain than on the plain below. On the plain the sun's rays pour down with an intensity that causes actual suffering, while on the mountain, three miles nearer the source of heat, there is perpetual snow.

That apparent inconsistency is perfectly understood by those that have given even casual study to atmospheric phenomena, for it is in the earth's atmosphere that the cause may be found. The sun's rays impart little of their heat to the air. It is the surface of the earth that they warm, and their radiation from the surface warms the superincumbent air. It is a law of nature that all hot bodies throw off their heat into space. The earth throws off at night part of the heat that it receives from the sun during the day. It would throw it off with almost equal facility during the day if it were not for the atmospheric coat that surrounds it. That atmospheric coat may be compared to the glass top of a hothouse—it permits the sun's heat to enter readily, but prevents it from escaping.

We see, therefore, why in precisely the same latitude the heat on the plains may be so great as to parch the vegetation, while on the mountain top there may be snow and ice the whole year around. The air is so dense on the lower levels that free radiation of heat from the earth's surface is impossible. Therefore the lower levels are warm. But on the mountain top the air is not nearly so dense, and heat is thrown off into space almost as fast as it is received.

GOOD PARLOR TRICK.

The Demon Lump of Sugar Will Amuse the Audience.

An audience rather enjoys a laugh against itself sometimes, so try the conjuring trick with the demon lump of sugar and give it them.

Borrow two hats and place them crowns downward on the table. Take care to elaborately call attention to the fact that there is nothing under either of them.

Next demand a lump of sugar—be insistent that it may be one of a peculiar shape, easily recognized again by your audience.

When you have received it, hold it up well to public inspection and explain that after having swallowed it before their eyes you will after a very short interval bring it under either of the two hats, whichever your audience may choose.

The company—all agog with your last trick—will expect some clever sleight-of-hand and will watch you closely to see that there is no humbugging and that you really eat and swallow the lump of sugar.

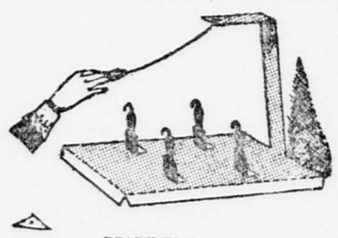

Eat it openly before them all—crunch it unmistakably, so that they may hear you do it—and then ask with a great show of confidence under which hat you shall bring the lump.

The choice having been made, place the chosen hat with great solemnity on your head and thus fulfill your undertaking.

Your little piece of fooling will raise a hearty laugh in the audience at their own expense and establish a feeling of good fellowship that will make your other tricks go off smoothly and well.

Homemade Ring Game.

With very little trouble you may construct this game from strong cardboard. Upon the top of the four cardboard posts should be fastened hooks, each being of such a height that when the ring is permitted to swing forward upon the length of its cord it may be possible to encircle the hook with the ring.

READY TO PLAY.

The players swing the ring in turn. The object of the game is to encircle the four posts, which, by the way, should be numbered 1, 2, 3, 4. First No. 1 post must be encircled, then Nos. 2, 3 and 4 in order. The player gains another turn every time he swings the ring over a post, but if by chance the ring should encircle the wrong post he must begin over again with No. 1 post. He who first places the ring over the four posts in proper order wins the game. — Philadelphia North American.

Harry's Arithmetic.

I'm glad I have a good sized slate,
With lots of room to calculate.
Bring on your sums! I'm ready now.
My slate is clean, and I know how.
But don't you ask me to subtract.
I like to have my slate well packed
And only two long rows, you know
Make such a miserable show.
And please don't bring me sums to add.
Well, multiplying's just as bad.
And, say, I'd rather not divide—
Bring me something I haven't tried!

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

A number from Quincy will witness the football game between Harvard and Yale today.

The scores made at the great Harvard-Yale football game today will be promptly bulletined at the Ledger office.

The officers of the Boys' club recently organized at Christ church are President, Theodore Turner; Vice President, Elton Chase; Treasurer, Edward Skinner; Secretary, Robert Brown.

Rev. Alfred R. Atwood lectured at the 2d Cougregational church, Winchester, Friday evening. The lecture was illustrated by the stereopticon.

On Tuesday and Wednesday evenings the Women's Missionary society of the Park and Downs Congregational church held their annual fair and also served a roast beef supper on these evenings, which proved a decided success, both financially and otherwise.

The adjourned meeting for the organization of the Quincy Antituberculosis Association will be held at Colonial hall on Tuesday evening, November 24, at eight o'clock. All interested in the movement are invited to be present and join the association.

Now that First church has a new organ more of a feature will be made of organ music at the services. On Sunday morning Miss Haskell will render "Andante Cantabile" by Tcharkowsky, as a voluntary and for the postlude, Mendelssohn's Sonata in C. There will also be a fine program by the church quartet.

Instead of the usual session of First Church Sunday school on Sunday they are to have a harvest concert in the chapel at half-past three to which parents and friends are invited. Fruit, vegetables, etc., will be used as decorations and may be left at the chapel Saturday morning. After the concert they will be distributed to needy families as Thanksgiving offerings.

St. Ry. Location Approved

The Railroad Commissioners issued an order Friday night approving the location granted the Old Colony street railway on Quincy avenue under an order passed by the City Council, Oct. 12, and approved by the Highway Commission Nov. 10.

This location is for a curve track to connect the tracks of the street railway company on Quincy avenue with the private track of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company.

The order passed by the City Council makes the location void unless built before December 1. This means that the work must be done next week.

The railway officials say that the material for the work has been ordered and but three days will be required to do the work.

Our Methods Save You Money

To every wage earner who runs a house, our proposition is a money saver. Some folks have the Boston buying fever, and think no one in Quincy can sell as cheaply as Boston stores.

Here's our proposition—Find any piece of furniture, any rug or carpet offered for sale in any store in Boston—give us the number or style of the article and the Boston price and we agree to sell you the identical article at from 5 to 20 per cent lower. Just try this proposition for your own information. We are saving money for thousands of families, we can do the same for you. Its volume of business we want and we are getting it too. We are satisfied with a pinch of profit—the rest is all for you.

LAND COURT.

To Abbie L. Studley, Joseph W. Whiting, Elizabeth Williams, Henry M. Faxon, Frank A. Page, Peter Williams and Emma E. Whiting of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk, and said Commonwealth; Mary F. Hayward of Braintree, in said County of Norfolk; William H. Faxon of Buffalo, in the State of New York; the heirs, devisees or legal representatives of Daniel Baxter, late of said Quincy, deceased; and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Richard D. Chase, Administrator of estate of James B. Whiting, late of said Quincy, deceased, to register and confirm his title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situate in said Quincy, bounded and described as follows: Northerly on Quincy Avenue, easterly by land of Elizabeth Williams and land of Mary F. Hayward, southerly by land of Mary F. Hayward, and westerly by land of Peter Williams and land of the heirs of Job Faxon.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition, and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the fourteenth day of December A. D., 1908, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Witness, Leonard A. Jones, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twentieth day of November in the year nineteen hundred and eight.

Attest with Seal of said Court,

BRAINTREE.

George Jennings of Quincy was the guest of his friend, Harrison Perkins of Safford street, Saturday.

Friends of Mrs. Stella Porter of Randall avenue are glad to know that she is able to walk out on pleasant days.

The house which was formerly beside Thayer academy and occupied by Prof. Townsend and his family has been moved to Hobart avenue.

Mrs. Frank Jenkins of Washington street has returned from a week's sojourn in Providence.

Mrs. A. A. Cook of Mt. Vernon avenue who is an assistant inspector of the Massachusetss Division of S. of V. Auxiliaries has been quite busy having to inspect the auxiliaries at East Weymouth, Quincy, Whitman, Duxbury, Hanson and Marion.

Miss Marion Fiske, who has been making an extended visit with her sister, Mrs. George E. Snow of Hancock street, returned to her home in West Dennis, Monday. She was accompanied home by her sister, who remained a few days.

The Krow Eldeen society were very pleasantly entertained last Tuesday evening by Miss Anna Mae Thayer. About twenty-five were present. Miss Clara Day assisted Miss Thayer in caring for her guests. The society will not meet next week as many are engaged in Thanksgiving festivities.

Saturday afternoon, the square was the scene of unusual animation as a number of people had gathered to watch for the runners in the 54 mile relay contest from Providence to Boston. About four o'clock, a runner passed through the square preceded and followed by automobiles. The message, which the runners carried in a small silver tube, was from the president of the Y. M. C. A. in Providence, R. I., to the president of the same association in Boston, expressing the strong fraternal feeling which exists. There were 108 contestants and each received a souvenir badge.

Braintree Grange, No. 262, is going to confer the third and fourth degree on several candidates at Odd Fellows hall, South Braintree, Monday evening, Nov. 23. Braintree Grange has grown rapidly the past year, with bright prospects for the New Year.

Mrs. Willard Dow was hostess for the Evening club, last Tuesday.

It is expected that Mr. John Barbour will occupy his handsome remodelled house, next week.

Hiram Kelley of Washington street, leaves in the near future for California, going all the way by boat. He will be gone all winter.

Mr. J. F. Perry of Park street has returned this week to California after a few weeks' visit with his family.

Mr. H. W. Woodworth of Mount Vernon avenue took a business trip to New York the first of the week.

Members of the Philergians are requested to send magazines to Cochato hall, by Dec. 1st, as barrels will be packed and sent to sanitariums and life saving stations before Christmas.

"The Ladies of Cranford" will appear before the public in Cochato hall, Dec. 4, for the benefit of Village Improvement.

Mrs. Thomas Simms has returned from a ten days' visit at New Haven and Hartford, Conn.

Mrs. Frederick Lincoln Flowers returned from New York after a two weeks' visit at the homes of Mrs. Charles Van Voorhees and Miss Louise Miller. Mrs. Flowers is well kown in musical circles in New York and Brooklyn.

Mr. Harold Wellington of Columbia university, N. Y., is expected home for Thanksgiving.

Edwin A. Ferguson of Weymouth, who was badly injured some months ago, by being struck by a car of the Old Colony Street Railway, while driving out of the street near the residence of George Fogg, on Quincy avenue, was awarded $3,800 by a jury in the superior court at Dedham last week. He sued for $20,000.

Williard Metcalf, artist of New York, will visit his parents Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Metcalf of Lisle street over Thanksgiving.

Mrs. Peck, of Warren, R. I., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Dexter of Elm Knoll road.

The green houses at Glen Rose farm have been taken down by Hayward Bros., and transported to the Kendall residence at Cohasset.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Wight, 237 Quincy avenue, will remove to Quincy. Mr. Wight has been florist and caretaker at the Glen Rose farm for a long term of years. They will be missed from this vicinity, and the best wishes of their friends follow them to their new home in Quincy.

The annual Thanksgiving service of the churches of Weymouth and East Braintree will be held in the Union Congregational church, Wednesday evening Nov. 25th at 7.30 P. M. Rev. R. L. Roberts of the Methodist Episcopal church will deliver the sermon.

Gov. Report on Building Material

Great as the advance in fire-proof construction has been during the last ten years there has been no let-up in the use of lumber, and both architects and builders find themselves so dependent on wood today that they are compelled to admit that the forests of the country are likely to be the chief source of building material for many years to come.

"The use of cement, terra cotta, brick and stone, with a framework of steel, will make it possible soon to do away with wood entirely," is a remark often heard, and, indeed, when one stands on lower Broadway and looks up at the towering skyscrapers, the statement seems to contain much truth. As a matter of fact, however ,the popular idea that fire-proof materials will do away with the need of using lumber in a comparatively few years is a very erroneous one. All of the various fire-proof materials going into the approved construction of the more substantial buildings are used in greater quantities now than the world dreamed of a few years ago, yet the heavy demand for lumber continues.

That wood predominates is shown by the annual building records. Of the permits used for buildings erected last year, approximately 61 per cent were constructed of wood, and the remaining 39 per cent of fire resisting material, according to a report issued by the Geological Survey on operations in forty-nine leading cities of the country. These figures are the more significant when it is realized that they only represent the building activities in the largest cities ;they do not take into account the construction of dwellings, stores and other buildings in the thousands of small cities and towns scattered over and not included in the forty-nine cities on which the reckoning is made.

In towns and small cities wood is usually the predominating building material and it is safe to say that if the statistics had included figures for all places of whatever size, the percentage of wooden construction would have been much greater. These figures, as a rule, are only for the corporate limits, and the suburbs of these cities have each very large amounts to be added. The cost, also, is relatively higher in these cities than in towns nearer the base of the supply.

PHILERGIANS.

November 17th the Philergians met at Braintree Miss Susan J. Avery the president in the chair. After reading of reports and notices, the entertainment for the afternoon was under the direction of the arts and crafts committee, Mrs. Harry P. Readmon, chairman. Miss Jessie Lane Burbanks was presented who talked on "Methods and Results in Handicraft." The subject was well treated and the exhibit of hand woven fabrics, jewelry, stencil work, silver and copper articles, showing the spirit of the old craft workers, was appreciated by the large number of club members present.

The history of the arts and crafts movement is so well known by the well informed, that it is not necessary to go into the detail of the talk given by Miss Burbank—but if as a good result of such talks and exhibits the fitness and beauty of decoration is shown in every day life—most certainly the movement is worth while.

The name, Arts and Crafts, as a method of doing things is not the idea we wish to convey. What we do want is the spirit of the old craftworkers the honesty of purpose, and the desire for beauty in the thing itself. If arts and crafts societies stand for one thing more than another is it not for the growth on the line of "good taste" or the fitness of things in matters of decorative art. The evils of commercialism as affecting art, are the evils of bad taste, and can be cured only by the example of good taste.

The interest in arts and crafts is too superficial. The real workers, the producers, know little about it and care less. The workers must be brought under the influence of good teachers. The study of design and works of art with an idea of discerning and establishing standards, should be introduced into courses of manual training, for technical training without the knowledge of design, is useless. As Dr. Denman Ross has said: "The all round complete artist with his knowledge of the fine thing, his discernment and judgment, his standard and ideals, his knowledge of tools and materials, of ways, means and methods, that is the man we want before we can hope to see the arts and crafts active again. The arts and crafts committee are to be congratulated on the interest shown during the afternoon in the talk exhibit.

Classes will be formed under competent teachers, about Jan. 1st. Information can be obtained by applying to Mrs. Harry P. Readmon, 306 Washington street. A cooking class may also be formed. Club members may consult with Mrs. F. Engene Dyer, chairman of household economics, for information on this subject. A social hour was enjoyed with tea served by its Hospitality committee, Mrs. Charles A. Boyce, chairman; Mrs. Thomas A. Watson and Mrs. George H. Wetherbee, Jr., presiding at the beautifully decorated tea table.

The Woman's Exchange of the Philergians, under the direction of Mrs. Fred W. McCarter, is always a point of interest on club afternoons. This exchange is the most successful financially and artistically, of any such movement connected with a woman's club in the state of Massachusetts. The tables are always filled with attrative and appetizing articles There is also the opportunity given to purchase as well as dispose of good things.

Acceptance Nightingale Ave.

Editors of the Quincy Daily Ledger:

In view of the incomplete, and for that reason misleading report in the Ledger of the discussion in the City Council Monday on the question of the acceptance of Nightingale avenue, I am sure you will allow me to state the facts more in detail.

My opposition to the acceptance of the street was merely because it does not even substantially comply with the requirements of the ordinance as was stated at the meeting by the Commissioner of Public Works in answer to question by Councilman Bryant. The question then resolved itself into whether we should enforce the ordinance, and I had no alternative. An ordinance is law until repealed or amended, and certainly ought to be enforced. The City Solicitor had previously informed the Committee on Streets that although the Council might over-ride the ordinance, still if we passed an order accepting a street not in compliance with the ordinance he would feel it his duty to advise the Mayor to veto it. That would seem to be the proper position to take. If the ordinance is too strict it ought to be changed, but until then, it should have the force of law. However, almost every city and town has a similar ordinance and by comparison with some, ours is mild.

If we ignore the ordinance the acceptance of streets becomes a matter of politics pure and simple, and that is the present situation here in Quincy. The subject is only acted upon around election time, and then they are usually accepted in lots of six, one for each ward, and selected with little or no regard as to whether they comply with the ordinance. Each year we are spending about $10,000 to put newly accepted streets into the condition in which, if the ordinance were complied with, they should be before acceptance. If this money were used for the repair of our old streets it could be used to great advantage, and that is where it is really needed at present. We are expending practically as much for new construction as we are for the repair and maintenance of our old streets. In view of our large city debt and high tax rate, this would seem to be great extravagance.

The argument was advanced that we have not lived up to the ordinance in the past, and that is true, but the result has been that money has been wasted and that streets have been accepted that had scarcely any existence except on paper and which were designed to aid in the promotion of land schemes.

The report in the Ledger would give the impression that if a street does not comply with the ordinance it cannot be made a public street. This is wrong. If a street does not comply with the ordinance it may be laid out under the betterment act which places a part of the cost, not exceeding one-half, upon the abutting owners. This act was accepted by the City in 1890 and at least a dozen streets were laid out under it in various sections of the City. The act has been accepted generally throughout the state and is quite generally made use of in laying out streets elsewhere. I believe there are good reasons for making Nightingale avenue a public street, but there is no good reason why the abutters should not pay part of the expense especially as the order calls for an appropriation of $1230, and they will all derive some special benefit. If all the streets which have been reported upon favorably by the Street Committee, none of which, by the way, comply with the ordinance, are accepted, they will involve an expense of over $10,000. Almost without exception all the persons who appeared at the public hearings a few weeks ago in favor of accepting the various streets expressed their willingness to pay their share of the cost under the betterment act. By doing the work in this way the expense to the city will be greatly reduced.

The general following of the betterment act would make the laying out of streets a matter of business and not of politics, as it now is. It would also be the means of preventing a good deal of waste as at present, and would enable the City to use the money to better advantage in keeping the streets already accepted in proper repair.

Very truly,
George W. Abele.

DANGER IN DELAY.

Kidney Diseases Are Too Dangerous for Quincy People to Neglect.

The great danger of kidney troubles is that they get a firm hold before the sufferer recognizes them. Health is gradually undermined. Backache, headache, nervousness, lameness, soreness, lumbago, urinary troubles, dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease follow in merciless succession. Don't neglect your kidneys. Cure the kidneys with the certain and safe remedy, Doan's Kidney Pills, which has cured people right here in Quincy.

Nicholas Albanese, living at 16 Gilmore street, Quincy, Mass., says: "I was annoyed by a dull backache for some time and often while at work, sharp shooting pains would dart through my loins and cause me great misery. I also had dizzy spells and my eyesight seemed to be affected. I tried many remedies but did not receive relief and as a last resort, decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I procured a box at the Cox Drug Store, began their use and was instantly relieved. I have no hesitancy in giving Doan's Kidney Pills the credit for my cure and I highly endorse them."

THE FIGHT FOR FAME.

Man's Heroic Effort to Clutch the Priceless Jewel.

His way was in a bloody lane where clanking caissons splashed along, his goal the line where blazing guns laughed out their song of death. On, on, on he went. His ears were filled with sounds of quick commands, bugle blasts, discordant drums. No fluttering fear was in his heart, no thought of home, no specter of the dread despair that waited at the hearth if he never came again. To him there was no terror in the saber's flashing blade, no warning in the bullet's deadly hiss. Youth trod all reason underfoot; ambition saw all glory overhead. On, on he went to woo and win his bride, the priceless jewel—fame!

Another in a garret sighed for fame. Crusts were his portion and his raiment only rags. Hermit-like he toiled alone, nor cold nor hunger ever daunted him. He marshaled all his hosts, and visions came and went. On, on he toiled. In the snowflakes that drifted in and touched his hands he read a message from the world without, all white, all cheerless. Still as a chrysalis his fancy wove and spun and made its garments wondrous, then burst in splendor on a waiting world.

Both fought the fight, each in his way, one for a heroic shape of bronze, one for a speechless marble face, each for the epitaph, that all the ages in the dust of time might know "he did and died."—Wade Mountfortt in Era Magazine.

YOUR UMBRELLA.

A Simple and Effective Method of Marking It.

Name plates on the handle seldom assist in the recovery of even borrowed, to say nothing of lost, umbrellas. But there is a way by which you may so mark your umbrellas that the finders and borrowers thereof will be reminded of your name and address every time they stealthily sally forth with your umbrella over their heads. Make a paste of cornstarch with water; brush over the inner surface of the umbrella where you wish to have your initials or your name in full, either with or without your street address. When this paste is dry paint your name on the cornstarch, using pure white lead. Let the paint dry thoroughly; rub a stiffish brush over the whitened surface until the cornstarch is removed.

You will thereupon find the white letters of your name standing forth immaculately against the black background of your umbrella cover. The cornstarch paste is applied to keep the oils of the paint from penetrating the umbrella cover and showing on the outer side. As it is, no unsightly grease spots come through. Your name is fixed and if painted near the tip it will be unobtrusive to you, though a constant reminder to the borrower or lender.—Scientific American.

An Error In Geography.

On one occasion the British lost a point in their war with Russia by reason of an error in their geography. This was when Commodore Elliot had succeeded in blockading the Russian fleet in the gulf of Saghalin, on the east coast of Siberia. The Russians were in a cul-de-sac, and the British ships waited contentedly for such time as the enemy should venture to put to sea. But they waited in vain, and at last an investigation was made. It was found that the Russian fleet had vanished. While the British commodore waited at the south end of the gulf, the Russian ships slipped away through the shallows at the north end into the sea of Okhotsk. Until this discovery was made the British government had believed Saghalin to be a peninsula. Now, too late, they learned that it was an island, with a very narrow channel at the north end of the gulf running into the sea of Okhotsk.—New York Tribune.

Hay on Church Floor.

A curious custom is annually observed at Old Neston church on St. Swithin's day. The church is dedicated to St. Swithin, and on festival day the church is strewn with hay. Many years ago some donor left a field to provide money for bread which is distributed four times a year. The tenant of the field has to supply the hay to strew the church. The custom is supposed to have orginated from the fact that on festival Sunday the parishioners wear new boots, and the idea of the donor was to have the hay laid down to stop the squeaking incidental to new footwear.—London Standard.

MILTON.

The junior class of the 4 o'clock club hold a cake and candy sale next Tuesday.

The first annual dance of the Milton Veteran Firemen's Association will be held at the Town Hall, Dec. 9.

A handsome new black and gold street sign has been placed on Adams street near the East Milton depot.

Mrs. Louise Duncanson of New York is the guest of F. M. Richardson.

George Eaton and Ralph Eaton are confined to their homes by injuries received during a foot ball game last Saturday.

A civil service examination for police and firemen will be held Dec. 21.

A subscription dancing party will be held at Ellsworth hall Nov. 30, under the direction of Mrs. Gilbert Stancliff Hamlin.

Alfred Martin has accepted a position on a plantation of the United Fruit Company at Jamaica for which port he sails next week.

The new bungalow of L. A. C. Kelley on Grafton avenue is approaching completion.

☞Don't you want to go around the world with Albert Bushnell Hart, Prof. of History at Harvard University? He will begin a series of thirty or more letters next Saturday, Nov. 28, in the Transcript for "Tarry at Home" travellers. By means of these letters Prof. Hart will take every reader of the Transcript to those regions and countries whose present day activities and struggles are the focus of the world's attention. It will be an education as well as vitally interesting to read these letters. The first will describe the wonderful development by Americans and others of the great Canadian Northwest and will tell why our citizens are deserting their own country to build homes there. Subsequent articles will describe those new conditions and striking movements in the States of Washington and Oregon and in Alaska territory, regarding which well posted Americans should be informed. Crossing the Pacific he will visit Japan, China and the Philippine Islands, and will return home by way of Egypt, the Balkan States and other interesting parts of Europe. Do not miss these letters, but order your Transcript today.

—Chicago is considering establishing trade schools for girls to be located in the three sections of the city. In addition to advanced courses in sewing, cooking and general housekeeping, these schools will give instruction in the various trades which have been invaded by feminine labor. In this way, in addition to turning out skilled mechanics and shop workers, the public schools will have to their credit a body of "sweet girl graduates" who can make gloves, superintend a weaving room or enter an office as an expert stenographer or accountant.

—At a complimentary dinner tendered the venerable Rev. Robert Collyer, pastor of the church of the Messiah of New York by the Unitarian club of that city on Wednesday Andrew Carnegie was introduced as a representative of all churches and in responding said: "I am glad to be introduced as a representative of all churches," said Mr. Carnegie, "for I have learned to believe that we should look above the narrow boundaries that divide our Christian brothers one from the other."

OUR HOSPITAL

(Legal Title: City Hospital of Quincy)

INCORPORATED 1896

The trustees of the City Hospital are now early seven for donations and bequests to the Quincy Hospital Fund. This fund amounts now to but a little of at least $100,000 is urgently needed.

Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000) will endow a bed to which such name may be given as the Donor may desire, but any sum for less or more than which stands ready to serve us at all times and will be most gratefully received.

The Secretary, TIMOTHY KELLEY, Clerk of Quincy, or the Treasurer, RICHARD D. CHASE, Quincy Bank Building, Quincy, will be very glad to confer with any one who is interested and inquiries.

THE Young Men's Christian Association OF QUINCY, MASS.

(Legal Title: Incorporated 1894.)

The Directors of the Young Men's Christian Association of Quincy, with a firm faith in the great value of the work which is being done for the young men and boys of our city, make their appeal for donations and bequests toward paying the mortgage indebtedness on the new Association Building. When the building is free from debt it will serve as an Endowment, as there is a goodly income from the dormatories.

Should the Donor prefer, such sum as might be given could be used as an Endowment for an educational class or classes, the Boys Department, or as a special fund in other ways, and could be designated with the name of the Donor.

The Treasurer, WILLIAM F. CUMMINGS, 7 Clive Street, Quincy, or the General Secretary, ERNEST G. GRAY, will be happy to answer inquiries.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Dore us, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

III—Lady Betty gets her first impression of America. On the dock she is rescued from reporters by the steerage hero, who tells her he is Jim Brett, employed at the Manhattan club, New York. In Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid New York home Betty meets Lieutenant Parker brother of the hostess, who is to take them to visit West Point.

IV—Vivace, a beautiful and expensive dog, is sent to Betty. Mrs. Ess Kay does not know who the donor is, and Betty does not tell her that it is Brett. Lieutenant Parker, whom Betty does not like, makes love to her.

V—Lady Betty has a good time at West Point despite Parker's proposal, which she rejects.

VI—In a walk in Central park Sally tells Betty her love story (she had been seperated years before from the poor man she loved by her family, the man becoming a monk) and advises Betty to marry only when she is sure of her love. They meet Brett.

VII—Betty is introduced to Mrs. Harvey Richmount Taylour, a typical young society woman.

VIII—At Newport Betty falls in love with Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid "cottage," the Moorings. Parker continues his attentions. Mrs. Ess Kay is chagrined on learning that Mrs. Van der Windt, Newport's leader, has planned to "cut" her and her acquaintance, Mrs. Pitchley. Mrs. Ess Kay relies on Lady Betty's presence to maintain her social prestige. She plans an entertainment to introduce Betty.

X—Mrs. Ess Kay plans a fancy dress ball, the features of which are to be Aladdin's cave and the Maze. An invitation is sent to Mohunsleigh's friend, Jameson B. Harborough, a new San Francisco millioniare. Betty is to appear as a frost sprite.

XI—At the ball Parker proposes again. Betty is rescued from him by Brett, who hints that he is there as a reporter. She declares her faith in his future.

XII—Harborough fails to appear at the wedding of Cora Pitchley and Mohunsleigh, to which he has been invited. Everybody at Newport is anxious to meet him. Sally, having quarreled with Mrs. Ess Kay, is visiting a friend in Chicago and has asked Betty to go to Chicago if anything at Newport displeases her. Parker again proposes to Betty and is refused again, whereupon Mrs. Ess Kay tells Betty that her mother, the duchess, plans to have her either engaged to Parker or stay in America until her sister is engaged.

XIII and XIV—Betty runs away from Mrs. Ess Kay, going to New York on her way to Miss Woodburn in Chicago. She appeals to Brett for aid in getting to Chicago. He tells her he is going there also and offers to travel with her.

XV—In Chicago Betty misses Sally, who has gone to Ohio to visit a sick relative. She has nowhere to go before hearing from England. Brett shows her the sights of Chicago after offering to take her to board with some relatives of his own near Sally.

XVI—Betty finds refuge in a pleasant old fashioned Ohio farm homestead with Brett's cousin, Fanny Trowbridge, and her husband, Hezekiah, with whom two girls, Patty and Ide, are staying.

We were in a sweet and gracious country now. It looked as if Mother Nature would never allow any of her children who obeyed her to be poor or unhappy here. As we whizzed along the up and down road between billowing meadows of grain we could see here and there a farmhouse showing between trees or peering over the brow of a rounded hill, but there was none where I longed to stop until we came in sight of a dear, old, red brick house—really old, not what some Americans call old. It was set back several hundred yards from the road and an avenue of magnificent maples—each one a great green temple—led up to the comfortable, rose draped porch which sheltered the door. There was an old fashioned garden on one side, with a running flame of hollyhocks hemming it in. The background was a dark green oak and maple grove, and in a clover meadow beyond the garden was a colony of beehives. It looked an ideal, story book place, and I wished it might be the Valley farm, but thought such a thing too good to be true. When one is going to stop at a house one has never seen, as Vic says, it usually turns out to be the one of all others you like least.

So I was delighted when we turned in at the open gate, with its guardian apple tree on either side. We sailed up the avenue under the maples, but instead of making for the front entrance, turned off into a farm road which led round the side of the house, and the tooting of our horn brought three women smiling and waving to a door under a long, narrow veranda before we stopped.

One was a tall, thin, middle aged woman, with gray-brown hair pulled away from her forehead and done in a knob at the back of her head. Her skin was sunburned; she wore a black and white print frock, without so much as a ruffle or tuck, and her sleeves were rolled up over her sun-browned arms above the elbow; she had no real pretensions of being pretty, and yet, somehow, she was one of the nicest looking women I ever saw. She had the sort of expression in her eyes and in her smile you would like your mother to have, if you could have had your mother made to order exactly according to your own ideas.

On her right stood a very pretty girl with a dazzling white complexion, all the whiter for a gold powder of freckles, black eyes rather deep set, dimples and a quantity of curly, bright red hair wound in a crown of braids round her head. She was in print, too, but it was blue and very becoming.

On the tall woman's left was another girl, also pretty, though in a florid way, with great blue eyes, a full mouth and a mouse colored fringe down to her eyebrows. She was more elaborately dressed than the others, with a lot of coarse lace on her blouse and a pink skirt. But she hadn't the look of simple refinement which the first two had in spite of their plain clothes and rolled up sleeves. All three waved something excitedly. One had a huge kitchen spoon, another a book and the third a towel.

"Howdy, Cousin Jim!" cried the nice woman with the expression, as Mr. Brett stopped the car in front of the door. "We're mighty glad to see you again. This is the young Lady Bulkeley, isn't it? We're mighty glad to see her, too, and we're going to try to make her as happy as we can."

"I knew you would, Cousin Fanny, or I wouldn't have brought her to you," said Mr. Brett, jumping out and helping me down. "But she's Lady Betty."

"I thought that would be a little too familiar to begin with," said the dear woman, with a perfectly angelic smile and a pleasant American accent with rather more roll of the "r" than I'd heard in the east. "But you shall be called just what you like best, my dear."

"Shall I? Then I should like you to call me Betty," said I, shaking hands hard with Mr. Brett's Cousin Fanny, and my heart warming to her for her own sake as well as his. There was a good smell about her of linen dried on the grass and of freshly baked cake. I can never smell those smells, I know, without remembering her.

She smiled and pressed my hand. "Why, you are just like an American girl, my dear," she exclaimed. "Not a bit stiff and English, like we supposed you would be. We all thought we were going to be afraid of you, but I guess we won't, will we, Patty and Ide?"

I saw that I was expected to take this as an introduction. I smiled and bowed to the two girls, and when they put out their hands I put mine out too.

"I'm very happy to know you," said Patty, the pretty red haired one.

"How do you do?" inquired Ide, the one with the fringe.

I fancied that they must both be Mrs. Trowbridge's daughters, but she continued the ceremony of presentation by saying:

"Patty is Miss Pinkerton, and Ide is Miss Jay. They generally stay with Mr. Trowbridge and me pretty nearly all the year round. Patty takes music lessons in Arcona twice a week and keeps up her other studies, and Ide helps me look after the house and the milk. I should have hard work to get along without either one of them, it seems to me, and I expect I shall be feeling just the same way about you before you leave us. Here comes Mr. Trowbridge now. See, Cousin Jim, here comes your Cousin Hezekiah. He's been hiving a swarm of bees. That's why he's got that mosquito net veil around his hat. Something like your automobile one, Lady Betty."

A man of fifty or more, in white duck trousers and a bluish shirt with a turned down collar a little open at the neck, was coming toward the house from the direction of the beehive colony. He had on no coat—in fact, I think a gray linen thing hanging over a wooden rocking chair on the veranda must have been his. His battered straw hat, with the "mosquito net veil" which Mrs. Trowbridge had mentioned, was on the back of his head, and when he saw us he snatched it off and waved it as his wife had waved her spoon and Ide her towel. From a distance he looked just an ordinary farmer, but when he came near enough for me to make out his features I saw that he was very far from ordinary. He had a splendid head, the head of a statesman, and his face was clear and intellectual, with keen, kind eyes.

He shook hands, too, with me and Mr. Brett, but first he wiped some honey from his fingers on the side of his trousers. As he did it, it was a dignified and laudable act. There was no reason why he should have been glad to see me, a perfect stranger, but he seemed to be so honestly pleased that it warmed my heart, and made me feel already at home in the sweet, old, red brick farmhouse, which reminded me, in its soft colors, of a great bunch of wall flowers.

"I reckon we're going to be real good friends," said he. "If we'd known just how you was coming, Jim, I'd have liked to meet you and her little ladyship—the first ladyship we've had in these parts. You didn't give us any idea, though, and now I see why. But look here, mother, you might have had the front door open. I'm afraid the young lady from England will think we're mighty informal."

"I shouldn't wonder if that's just about what she'll like to think, father," said Mrs. Trowbridge, with her smile that was so motherly and friendly at the same time. "Miss Woodburn would have been over to see you if she could; she was just ready to jump for joy when Patty ran across to tell her you were coming, but Mis' Randal is pretty sick, and Sally felt she couldn't leave her yet awhile. So she sent you her love, and she'll be along the minute she can git away."

Just for an instant it struck me as odd to hear this simple farm woman in her straight print calmly calling my charming, dainty friend "Sally," as if there could be no shadow of doubt in any one's mind of their perfect social equality. But in another second I could have boxed my own ears for my denseness and snobbish stupidity. Already—even in these few minutes—I was beginning faintly to understand some of the "points" at which Mr. Brett had hinted.

"Maybe you'd like to go and have a look at your room," went on Mrs. Trowbridge. "Patty and Ide have picked you some flowers, and I hope you'll find everything right"—

"Oh, Mis' Trowbridge, do let me take her," exclaimed Patty.

"Me too!" cried Ide.

"They're just like children. I guess we'll have to humor them this once," laughed Mr. Brett's Cousin Fanny.

When I smiled at Patty, she cuddled her arm around me, and then Ide promptly did the same. Thus interlaced the procession moved into the house.

The door of the veranda opens into a cozy sitting room. There is nothing which you could point out as pretty in the furnishing, and decoration there is none, but the room has a delicious, welcoming look and makes you want to live in it.

"What a nice room!" I exclaimed to the girls, pausing for a glance around. They looked surprised.

"Do you think so?" asked Patty. "We were afraid maybe you wouldn't. The things you're used to must be a good deal handsomer. Everything's so old here."

"I love old things," said I. "Our house at home is very old, and I wouldn't have anything changed for worlds, even if it were to be made better."

"Why, that's kind of the way I feel, too!" exclaimed Patty, giving my waist a sympathetic squeeze. "I like this living room, but Ide doesn't admire it a little bit."

"If I was Mis' Trowbridge, I'd always sit in the parlor," said Ide, "instead of keeping it shut up except for best just because Mr. Trowbridge's ma did before her. It's a real pretty room.

I thanked her, but thought we had better put off the treat until another time, as we were on our way to my room. I was wondering how to define the difference between Patty and Ide. I saw that it was very marked, yet I didn't quite understand. The two girls appeared to be on the same footing in the house, I said to myself, but Ide was far more showy than Patty, seeming to put herself forward as if she were afraid of not being noticed, and then she was dressed so much more elaborately. Perhaps, I thought, Patty was poor and in a more dependent position than Ide.

The stairway, very steep and narrow, leads straight up from the "living room," which is apparently in the center of the house and fills the place of a hall. There are no balusters, but a whitewashed wall on either side, and only one person can go up at a time. At the top is a landing, with a bare painted floor, and doors opening from it. One of the doors is mine, and as they showed me in I could see that Patty and Ide both waited breathlessly for my verdict, their faces looking quite strained and anxious until I exclaimed:

"How fresh and pretty it is here!"

I meant it too. It is a dear room, with something pathetic about its simple sweetness, and the kind thought to give me pleasure which shows in every little innocent detail. The floor is covered with a white straw matting, and there are no two pieces of furniture that match. There's a wide wooden bed of no particular period that I can recognize, yet with an air of being old fashioned, and there are stiff, square shams to hide the pillows and turn down over the top of the sheet with fluted frills round the edges. The scent of dried rose leaves and lavender mingles with the perfume of the pinks, and some of the summer house pagodas on the wall are hidden with old fashioned steel engravings and photographs in homemade frames.

I didn't stop to examine the pictures at first, but after Patty and Ide had tripped away ("to see about my dinner," they said), I was attracted by a faded cabinet photograph framed with shells. It was a full length figure of a young man on horseback. He was dressed something like those splendid cowboys they took me to see at Earlscourt when I was a little girl, and the face was Mr. Brett's. It was so handsome and dashing I could hardly stop staring at it while I washed off the dust of motoring. Evidently the photograph in its frame has been on the wall a long time. I am glad they happened to put it in what they call the "spare room," so I can look at it whenever I like without any one noticing.

Our method of supplying your requirements in Furs has made The Dunlap-Cooke Canadian Furs famous as the Furs of Quality. The Canadian Climate produces the finest furs known to commerce, because of the long, cold winters. The fur-bearing animals of Canada are provided by nature with a coat that is warmer, finer and more lustrous than temperate climates can produce.

The Duty on Manufactured Canadian Furs is 35%—We receive our Canadian Furs in the Raw State Duty Free. We have our own fur stores in Canadian centres; here we receive the raw furs from the trappers. We are the only Canadian Fur concern with a store in the United States. In this respect the strength of our position is unequalled. When you buy direct from us you save middlemen's profits and secure skins taken in prime season from the best sections, because we know where and when to buy the best that Canada offers.

A SPECIALIST SAYS:

"Piles Can't be Thoroughly Cured by Outward Treatment"

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt of Lincoln, Neb., the celebrated specialist, who has studied every phase of piles, says: "Piles can't be thoroughly cured by ointments, nor any other outside treatment. The cause is internal, and needs internal treatment." Dr. Leonhardt perfected Hem-Roid, the first internal pile cure. It frees circulation in the lower bowel, and has cured 98 per cent, of cases.

EARNING POWER OF OIL TRUST

Much Light Shed In the Cross-Examination of Rockefeller

1907 DIVIDENDS $40,000,000

Standard Company Earned as Much More and Added It to Its Surplus --Earnings of Nearly $500,000,000 Within Last Eight Years--O I King Thinks That Profits Do Not Determine the Risk In Business

New York, Nov. 21.—For over five hours John D. Rockefeller, witness for the defense in the government's suit to dissolve the Standard Oil company, faced an unceasing fire of questions from the federal counsel, Frank B. Kellogg, and when adjournment was taken until Monday the head of the oil combine was still being cross-examined on charges that in its early days the company accepted rebates to the disadvantage of its rivals. Rockefeller's cross-examination will probably not be concluded until late Tuesday, for Kellogg made it known that he would inquire about every detail of the company's business from Rockefeller.

The enormous earning power of the company was sharply brought out in yesterday's hearing when, after testifying that the Standard paid dividends amounting to $103,000,000 in 1907, Rockefeller said it earned as much more and that this was added to the company's surplus, which was stated by the government's counsel to be $300,000,000. It was further said by Kellogg that within the last eight years the company has earned nearly $500,000,000.

In response to questions about the hazardous nature of the oil business owing to the possibility of failure of supply, Rockefeller said that the production of crude oil in the Pennsylvania field had steadily increased from 1862 to 1900. Kellogg read figures from an official report showing that the Pennsylvania field reached its highest point of production in 1900. Rockefeller denied that the supply of crude oil had always been ample and asserted that it had fluctuated, but that the supply is larger now than when he was actively engaged in business.

"Do you consider a business hazardous that, on an original investment of $67,000,000, paid dividends amounting to $791,000,000 and had left a surplus of $300,000,000?" asked Kellogg.

"I do not consider the amount of money made determines whether the business is hazardous or not," said Rockefeller.

He was asked about the trust agreement of 1882 and whether the trust certificates did not show a value of $70,000,000 and that the stocks held under the agreement had an actual value of $55,710,630. Rockefeller said he believed those figures to be correct. Kellogg then asked whether the stock certificates issued thereafter were for stock dividends or for additional properties acquired, but John G. Milburn, of Rockefeller's counsel, objected on the ground that this was not within the scope of Rockefeller's direct testimony. Rockefeller replied: "I suppose so."

"The record shows that up to 1906 the net earnings of the company were $551,922,904. What was the dividend in 1907?" asked Kellogg.

"I should say about 40 percent."

"That was about $39,000,000.?"

"That would be a million in favor of the poor old Standard," said Rockefeller. He added that the net earnings for 1907 were approximately $80,000,000. Kellogg again asked if he considered the business risky on such a showing, and Rockefeller again retorted that the profits did not determine the risk. It was evidence that the business was prosperous.

The course of Rockefeller's testimony under conduct of the government's counsel ran not so smoothly as that of Thursday, when he testified under direction of friendly counsel, but the rapid interrogations of the prosecutor were met with imperturbability and readiness except when, as the witness explained: "It is quite impossible for me to remember after thirty-five years. I do not recall."

Rockefeller was questioned closely regarding rebates which the Standard was charged with receiving, but aside from the agreement with the Pennsylvania railroad, which Rockefeller explained gave the Standard a rebate because it effected an equalization of oil shipments, Rockefeller could not recall any other rebates, though he thought it likely that he might have heard of them at the time.

When he learned that the government counsel would not be able to conclude the examination by tonight, Rockefeller suggested an adjournment until Monday, which was agreed to by counsel.

No Chance of Conviction

New York, Nov. 21.—The manslaughter indictment against the New York Central Railroad company, growing out of a fatal wreck in which more than twenty persons were killed in February, 1907, was dismissed yesterday. District Attorney Jerome said that in view of the fact that the government had been unable to convict an official of the road, against whom a similar indictment was filed, it would be useless to bring the present case to trial.

FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE

Four Pennsylvania Chidren Have Contracted It From Cattle

Washington, Nov. 21.—Alarming results from the outbreak of foot and mouth disease in New York and Pennsylvania, causing those states to be quarantined against interstate shipments of cattle, etc., are shown in advices which have reached Secretary of Agriculture Wilson. These advices say that four children in Danville, Pa., have contracted the disease. A rigid investigation is in progress in Danville and elsewhere to determine whether other persons have become similarly affected.

The officials believe that the spread of the contagion will be checked, but they admit that the situation is grave and will require energetic and concerted action by the state and federal authorities.

Cattle Shipments Checked

New York, Nov. 21.—Shipments of cattle to foreign ports from New York and Philadelphia were brought to an abrupt close yesterday by a cattle quarantine established in this state and in Pennsylvania, on account of the outbreak of foot and mouth disease. The quarantine does not affect ports outside of New York and Philadelphia, except as to cattle from the two states affected by the ruling.

STRICT NEUTRALITY BY UNCLE SAM

Will Give No Aid to Any Venezuelan Revolutionists

Washington, Nov. 21.—Revolutionary movements in Venezuela, reports regarding which have come by way of Willemstad, are not causing any surprise in diplomatic circles.

Those officials have been keeping a close watch on affairs in that country, not, they say, that there is any specific reason for fresh outbreaks, but because of the chronic disposition of the discontented element there to foment trouble.

Official statements are that there is no change in the Venezuelan situation so far as the American government is concerned and no information appears to be available at the state department regarding the intentions of The Netherlands government. The latter has three or four war vessels at Curacao or thereabouts, but her ultimate designs regarding Venezuela still appear to be a mystery.

The United States government will maintain strict neutrality so far as any revolutionary movements against the Castro government emanating from the United States are concerned and will prohibit any shipment of arms to Venezuela intended for revolutionary purposes.

Relay Message to Roosevelt

New York, Nov. 21.—The young athletes in the relay race organized by the physical department of the Y. M. C. A. between this city and Washington started on their 241-mile sprint at 3:45 yesterday, the runners bearing a message in a silver tube to President Roosevelt. The message remained over night at Trenton, N. J., and at 6 o'clock this morning the race for Washington was resumed by way of Camden, Wilmington and Baltimore. Unless some unexpected hitch occurs the message will reach the hands of the president at 11:30 tonight.

Diplomat Snubbed Prince

Belgrade, Nov. 21.—A chance meeting at the entrance of the palace between Crown Prince George and the Austro-Hungarian minister, Count Forgach, led to an awkward incident of which more is expected to be heard. Forgach omitted to greet the prince, who said with some warmth, "Perhaps you do not recognize me, Count." Forgach turned and tendered his excuses, but the crown prince, without a word, turned away, ignoring the minister's apologies.

A Woodruff Senatorial Boom

New York, Nov. 21.—Timothy L. Woodruff was formally endorsed for the United States senate at a meeting of the Queens County Republican committee last night. A resolution reciting Woodruff's success in large business enterprises and the ability with which he served the state was unanimously adopted.

Strike Was Short Lived

Fall River, Mass., Nov. 21.—The 250 weavers at the No. 4 mill of the Fall River Iron Works company who went out on strike Thursday morning because of dissatisfaction over the discharge of an overseer have returned to work. It appeared that the overseer did not desire to return to his position.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Engineer Lawrence M. Hopkins of the barge Powell was swept overboard by a huge sea off Block Island, R. I., and drowned.

Four track laborers were killed and five injured when the handcar on which they were riding was run down by a train between Highland and Lagrange, Ills.

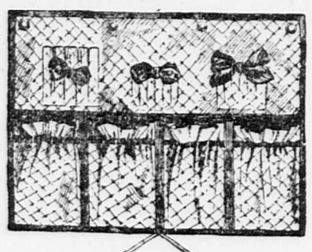

Colonel John C. Babcock, who was one of the principal scouts for the Army of the Potomac during the Civil war, died at his home at Mount Vernon, N. Y. He was 72 years of age.

Joseph Doane, aged 21, employed in the mills of the Eastern Manufacturing company at South Brewer, Me., was caught in a gang-edger saw and instantly killed, the head being terribly mangled.

GIFTS

Homemade Presents For the Dainty Woman—Shoe Case For Traveling—Night-dress Case—Holder For Baby Ribbon.

For women who travel as well as those who stay at home there are many novelties in workbags and sewing cases being shown in the shops which are not only attractive, but essentially practical. While the cost of these is not exorbitant, any one of them may be made at home from odd pieces of ribbon, chintz, silk or linen, which, with the addition of a bit of hand embroidery, make pretty gifts.

Four brass eyelets.

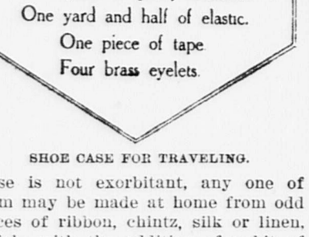

SHOE CASE FOR TRAVELING.

The shoe bag or case is a useful article which also may be constructed at home at a trifling expense from almost any material one chooses, provided it is heavy enough to keep its shape. Either linen or cretonne is particularly effective, the four pockets accommodating two pairs of shoes or slippers. These pockets are bound and fastened to the case with ribbons or tape matching or harmonizing with the material of the case, in the top of which are set four brass eyelets. In this way the necessity of tacking in place is avoided, the eyelets being slipped over brass hooks screwed in door or wall.

A convenient pocket pincushion and pin case are bowed with ribbon and set above the shoe pockets. When traveling the case is simply rolled and tied with a matching ribbon tacked at one end on the outer side.

A pretty case for the robe de nuit embroidered with a heavy mercerized thread on a heavy linen identifies the long envelope case with its embroidered buttoned flap as that in which the particular girl carries her dainty night robe. This is made of heavy white butcher's linen in envelope pattern, embroidered in white cotton thread, and may be lined, if one elects.

MATERIALS REQUIRED.

One yard of heavy butcher's linen.
Three skeins white mercenzed cotton.
One and a half yards China silk.
Sachet powder.
One pearl button.

NIGHTDRESS CASE.

with a dainty pink and blue china silk, beneath which is laid a single sheet of sachet scented wadding.

Every girl who uses baby ribbon would be delighted with a case filled with three or four different shades as a Christmas gift. Here are two attractive ways to prepare such a gift: For the first take a long, shallow pasteboard box just wide enough to hold a ten yard roll of baby ribbon and long enough for as many bolts as you may wish to give. Cover this box neatly inside and out with wall paper or a pretty fancy silk, first having made as many small slits on the top as there are bolts of ribbon.

Paste the covering on the box, and if it is found difficult to turn in the edges neatly around the slits do not attempt it, but cover the roughness with a narrow edge of gilt paper for braid.

Put the ribbon in the box, first having removed the paper and rewrapped the ribbon and put one end through each slit so it is about an inch on the outside of the lid. If these ends are fastened through bodkins, for which narrow strips have been provided on the top of lid to hold them in place, it will add much to the convenience of the gift.

Workbag For Christmas.

A capacious workbag is made of silk a yard and a quarter long. Across each end featherbone is sewed; then the selvage on either side is gathered up as close as possible and secured so that the two pieces meet.

Ribbons tie the opening together in the middle, and the bag is carried by handles of ribbons that start from big bows on either side where the silk is drawn up.

BOUGHT OFF THE BURGLAR.

An Old Banker's Bargain With His Unwelcome Visitor.

"William Winslow Sherman, the old banker, had the coolest nerve of any man I know," said a man who knew him. "Some years ago, when Sherman was an old man and partially crippled by reason of a fall from a horse, he entered his bedroom late at night to find a masked burglar ransacking it.

"The thief had a big gun trained on Sherman in a minute. The banker just waved it aside with a tired hand. 'Put that away,' he said irritably. 'Let us discuss this matter like gentlemen.' The burglar was so surprised he laughed. 'Now, you could hurt me if you wanted to and might get away with some little knick-knacks,' said Sherman. 'But you might be caught, and there's a slight probability that you could dispose of my toilet articles profitably. What would you consider a fair cash proposition to go away?' They talked it over in all peace.

"The burglar thought he ought to have $10, but Sherman, after inquiring into the man's habits, said $8 was enough. 'You see,' he said, 'you're a known thief. If this were your first offense, I'd pay your price, but now the police have your picture you ought to be glad to accept any fair compromise and run no risk.'

"The burglar finally agreed to take $8. Sherman pulled out a ten dollar bill. 'Give me $2 change,' said he. And he got it before he paid."—Kansas City Star.

American Humor.

American humor exists, it distinguishes the national character, it permeates all our affairs. It is not of aboriginal descent. It was not brought from England or Holland by the fathers. Its saving grace was lacking under Puritan rule. The humor of Diedrich Knickerbocker is all the more taking because of the absence of all sense of humor in the subjects of his chronicle. If our humor came over from Erin in the first rush of immigration it was quickly adapted to its new environment. It was modified and changed by new circumstances and conditions, geographical, ethnological, atmospheric. Wherever it came from it is a boon which saves us from a lot of needless trouble and worry.—New York Times.

Why We're Ahead.

A curious explanation of the reason why "Canada has but about 7,000,000 people against America's 80,000,000" is given in a review of the world's production of coal and iron. Canada produces but 9,000,000 tons of coal against 370,000,000 tons produced by the United States, and that is why, as long as the coal age lasts, "Canada is not likely to grow to anything like the dimensions of her southern neighbor." This is an English view, and it is not open to the charge of bias.—Boston Globe.

A Doubtful Future.

"Biggins has developed a habit of saying rude and sarcastic things."

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne. "I am waiting to see whether he is going to be recognized as a great bore or a social lion."—Washington Star.

Not Modesty.

Blox—Bimberly is exceedingly modest, isn't he? Knox—I hadn't noticed it. Blox—Well, he never talks about himself. Knox—Oh, that isn't modesty. It's discretion.—Chicago News.

A Winner.

Tommy—Ma, may I play make b'lieve that I'm entertainin' another little boy? Ma—Certainly, dear. Tommy—All right; gimme some cake for him then.—Philadelphia Press.

I could hardly feel much confidence in a man who had never been imposed upon.—Hare.

THE "DOCTOR."

An Important Functionary on Merchant Vessels Is the Cook.

There is one functionary on merchant vessels of all kinds who has very much more to do with the "peace and dignity" of the floating commonwealth than shore folks usually imagine. I refer to the cook, who is sometimes called the "doctor." Why he is given this cognomen is not altogether plain, for his handiwork seldom has any therapeutic value and in the past, at least, has had much to do with sending poor sailormen to a doctor, if not to Davy Jones' locker. In fact, there was a time in nautical history when the presiding genius of the galley was in such bad repute that to call a man a "son of a sea cook" was a most opprobrious epithet and one that would be emphatically resented. In those days (and to some extent today) the cook was covertly despised by the occupants both of the forecastle and the cabin, though the men "forrard" outwardly professed affection for him and apparently were never so happy as when they could wash his clothes or do him various other favors, with the hope of getting sundry "leavin's" from the cabin table or being granted such privileges as "hanging out" in the galley when rough weather at night made the watch on deck grateful for such shelter. In other ways it was found highly salutary to keep in good graces of his culinary majesty, who frequently was a more powerful person in some respects than the "old man" himself. It is almost needless to add that the more skilled as a cook the cook was the more profound was his influence both fore and aft. But he wasn't often much in the way of skill, all the same.—Shipping Illustrated.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

Today is an ideal one for the great football game.

The Squantum Yacht club are to hold a dancing party Dec. 2.

Sunlight dances are to be held Thanksgiving afternoon in several sections of the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Q. Hodges of Adams street, East Milton, have moved to Belcher circle.

The Board of Health have their hands full making the Syrians keep their boarding houses clean.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. McBurnie of Old Colony street have welcomed a daughter into their home.

The next meeting of the Whatsoever Circle will be held Nov. 23 at 7.45 with Mrs. A. T. Leavitt, Lincoln avenue.

No regular meeting of the City Council will be held until Dec. 7. It is possible however that a special meeting may have to be called to draw jurors.

Miss Rena B. Grant of Rawson road underwent an operation for appendicitis Thursday morning at the Boothby hospital. She is getting along as well as can be expected.

There will be special music at the Atlantic Memorial church on Sunday. A soloist from the New England Conservatory of Music will sing. The pastor Rev. Mr. Price will preach.

Frederick R. Stockford has purchased for investment the two family house numbered 80 and 82 Glover avenue and also the single house on 110 Hollis street, which he will shortly occupy for a residence.

Rev. Gertrude von Petzold will preach at the Wollaston Unitarian church Sunday morning. She was a prominent figure in the International Congress of Liberal Religions which was held in Boston in 1907.

The men who have tickets offered them for the mass meeting for Laymen at Symphony hall, Boston, Sunday evening will miss hearing a speaker of much interest if they do not attend as Dr. Grenfell of Labrador is the speaker of the evening.

Quincy lodge of Elks will receive an official visitation Tuesday evening from Deputy Grand Exalted Ruler, William H. Crone of southeast Massachusetts. He will be accompanied by Charles F. J. McCue, as Grand Esquire.

The attractive subject of Dr. Hardy's illustrated address at Bethany church tomorrow evening "The Old New England Home Life" will interest those who appreciate what the New England home has been. It is a most timely and interesting subject for Thanksgiving Sunday.

At the next meeting of the Unity club, Febr[illegible] 17th, Mr. Conti will give a review of the recent political events in Germany in relation to the suppressed interview with the Kaiser particularly. There are to be German songs and Mrs. Park will tell about housekeeping in Germany—mentioning many pitfalls of the unwary American who attempts to domesticate himself in Europe.

The police have not been able to obtain much information as to the relatives of John J. Mahoney who died suddenly at a South street boarding house this week. They find that his home was in Charlestown. While he has several cousins his nearest relative is a brother who lives in Brooklyn, N. Y. He has been communicated with but nothing definite has been heard from him.

Mrs. George Snow of Henry street who has been ill with the grip for the past two weeks is reported much better.

A dancing party will be held in Wollaston hall on the evening of November 25 by the Young People's Social society of Wollaston.

A meeting of the Wollaston Y. P. R. U. will held in the vestry of the Unitarian church Sunday evening, November 22. Mr. H. Peters of the Harvard Divinity school will be the speaker and Miss Almira Simmons will have charge of the meeting.

SUNDAY: 12 TO 1—SHARP

Bethany Church, City Square

If YOU are a young man, and not associated with any other Quincy church, YOU are most cordially invited to come to our meeting.

A warm welcome—Hearty singing—A helpful hour together.

—Postmaster Mansfield of Boston has issued an order prohibiting the carriers smoking or chewing when in uniform, whether on duty or not.

Norfolk County And Vicinity

At the annual social gathering of the Old Boston schoolboys at Young's on Wednesday, one of the most prominent persons present was Charles J. Capen of DEDHAM. Mr. Capen was headmaster of Boston Latin school for 57 years.

The Men's Social club of MEDFIELD will meet Monday evening in the Baptist vestry. Supper will be served at 7, and an address by Rev. James E. Norcross of Boston will follow.

A benefit entertainment was given Wednesday evening by the NEEDHAM Dramatic company, complimentary to one of its most esteemed members, Mr. R. D. Gillette. "Old Acre Folks" was the name of the play given.

Perseverance Rebekah lodge of STOUGHTON held a supper and entertainment in Odd Fellow's hall last evening. A play was presented, entitled, "How the Story Grew."

Rev. C. F. Hill Crathern of the South Braintree Congregational church conducted the services last night at the Winthrop church, HOLBROOK.

William Baker of RANDOLPH was injured Wednesday evening while alighting from a Brockton electric car. Baker missed his footing and struck his head on the rail.

Mrs. Mary V. Williams of FOXBORO has entered a suit against the Merchants' club of Boston to recover $866, which she says her husband lost at cards in the club. The defendants deny the allegations of Mrs. Williams, but the latter is still persistent in her claims.

The Harvard Congregational church of BROOKLINE has extended a call to Rev. Dr. Ambrose W. Vernon of the Yale Divinity school, and he has accepted. He will begin his new duties the first of the new year.

At Christ's Episcopal church, HYDE PARK, tomorrow, Col. Elijah W. Halford of New York, one of the laymen's missionary speakers, will occupy the pulpit.

Frederick Griffin of Norwell was found by the roadside in HINGHAM early Friday morning with a broken leg, having been hit by an automobile during the night. The occupants did not slacken their speed.

MILTON RAILROAD LOOP LINE.

Milton is again preparing to prevent the construction of a railroad across the Neponset marshes between the Milton and the East Milton branches of the New Haven railroad. A petition for legislation to permit the building of this connecting link has been filed at the State House by Charles A. Ufford of Dorchester, along with petitions for legislation covering other proposed changes in the railroad arrangements south of Boston, which seem desirable to the petitioner.

Two years ago a bill was put in for a railroad line across the marshes and it came very near becoming a law, but was defeated largely through the efforts of Milton people. Among the objections to such a line are that it would cross public park lands and that it would seriously injure the view over the marshes. Mr. Ufford wants a line built from near the Cedar Grove station across the river to the East Milton branch so as to make posible a loop line between Boston and Braintree, trains going one way over the Milton and East Milton branches and the other way over the main line of the Plymouth division.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

AMUSEMENTS.

ELMENDORF ON "HOLLAND."

"Quaint Holland, the Land of Dykes and Windmills" is the second subject in Dwight L. Elmendorf's course "From the Polar Sea to the Garden of Allah," and will be presented by him next Friday evening and Saturday afternoon, Nov. 27, and 28, at Tremont Temple, Boston. His descriptive talk will be plentifully interspersed with many beautiful views of this delightful little land, where the dykes and windmills working together contrive to keep back the encroaching and ever-hungrey sea. Most interesting, too, are his photographs of scenes in the great and famous cities of Amsterdam, Rotterdam, and The Hague, not to mention many other important and picturesque towns. The chief feature of this "Holland" lecture, however, is placed at the very end of Mr. Elmendorf's discourse, when he will project some of the most remarkable colored photographs he has ever made. These were taken by a new process during the past summer, and show the world's masterpieces in paintings now hanging in the Rijks Museum at Amsterdam. Every facility was afforded Mr. Elmendorf to make these reproductions, which really mark a new era in photography.

Keith's Theatre.

A very strong program has been arranged for Thanksgiving week at Keith's theatre, the principal feature being Stella Mayhew in her latest songs. Miss Mayhew is now one of the most popular women entertainers in vaudeville, and is perhaps the only rival of May Irwin in her bright line of entertainment. A special extra performance will be given on Thanksgiving morning beginning at ten o'clock and lasting until one, when all the leading features of the week will be given. These morning performances on holidays have become the most popular feature at Keith's so much that there have been numerous requests to have them continued. The bill for the week will include many other strong features, for instance Novello's Circus with its great hord of elephants, one of the biggest acts of the kind ever introduced in vaudeville. Others are the Eight Madcaps, Walter Law & Co., in a sketch called "On the Threshold," Phillipi Brothers, the eqilibrists; Low Wells in a musical monologue and others to be announced.

Boston Theatre.

For Thanksgiving week at the Boston theatre, Mr. Keith has secured an attraction fully in keeping with the season, one that is always popular, in "Sky Farm," the rural drama by Edward Kidder, which had its first production at the Old Boston Museum. Since then it has been seen in Boston and always to crowded houses. It was one of the most popular of last season's successes as given by the stock company, and the present production will be on an even greater scale. The stock company season is now at its height and every week is finding larger and more appreciative audiences at the Boston theatre. The favorites of last year have won thousands of new friends, while the newcomers, such as Miss Binley, Dudley Hawley and that sterling actor, Frank Losee, have firmly established themselves in the effections of the Boston audiences. In "Sky Farm" all will have an opportunity to give free play to those qualities that have endeared them to the patrons of this house. One of the most successful weeks of the season is predicted.

Orpheum Theatre.

Grace Hazard in her costume novelty "Five Feet of Comic Opera" is the head-liner at the Orpheum theatre next week. Felix and Caire, those youthful impersonators who have developed into twin stars, bring their farcical sketch "Just Kids." Harry Corson Clarke and his company bring their latest nonsensical sketch, to which they give no name but which it has been proven is the most amusing thing that Mr. Clarke has ever appeared in. The Rohrs make their debut in Boston in one of the most sensational and thrilling acts ever put on the stage, and the eight Sunflower Girls, all pretty, vivacious and clever have a splendid song scene. In addition to these, Vasco the Mad Musician and Mlle. Alexandra and Mr. Bertie in their aerial act are retained for a second week.

Winter Garden.

The new Winter Garden in Park Square, Boston, has already proved its necessity and popularity for it has been crowded afternoon and evening since its opening last Monday at noon. On some few evenings of the week there has been a great crush but everybody was happy and evidently controlled by the jovial spirit of "The more the merrier." The chief matter of astonishment connected with this new enterprise is how so much can be given for so little asked in return. For ten cents admission at the main gates one is given entrance of equal value to any of the interior shows, such for instance as the moving picture theatre where the very latest films are shown and the very latest illustrated songs sung; or to Willard's famous Temple of Music where the most entrancing melodies are extracted from all sorts of the most novel instruments; or to the Hindoo Temple where one is mystified by performances of Indian magic and mystery and so on through the whole long line of fine attractions.

Castle Square Theatre.

It is no exaggeration to say that "Are You A Mason?" is funnier than "The Man on the Box" and the next week at the Castle Square we shall be able to test and to laugh at its comic scenes and characters. Its author, Leo Ditrichstein, is a born humorist and comedian, and "In Are You A Mason?" he provides three hours of fun-making of the cleanest and most uproarious sort. The action of the play takes place in New York and its plot tells how Amos Bloodgood, a citizen of Rockford, Ill., has a wife who demands that he become a mason. He merely pretends to join the order, and year after year he keeps up the pretense, even going so far as to claim that he has been elected grand master of his lodge. All sorts of trouble naturally ensue, and the audience is kept on the continuous qui vive of mystery and humor. In the final act, all the complications are untangled and set aright, as are also the love affairs of two juvenile sweethearts who give romance to the play during its entire course. "Are You A Mason?" will be played on the Castle Square stage for only one week.

Sportsman's Show.

The Sportsman's show of this year, which will be the third given under the management of this association, will be the most ambitious and elaborate of the trio, which means also that it will be the most picturesque and the most instructive so far planned. It will be especially strong in novelties and tournaments such as an athletic carnival, fly-casting competition, rifle-shooting contests, water-polo and other aquatic sports including races and diving and swimming exhibitions by well-known young women swimmers and in loan exhibits by private citizens, by the United States and Canadian governments, by many of the States and Territories and by clubs and associations. The entire Mechanics Building with all its halls and basements will be utilized for this immense exhibition. About all of this vast space is already certain of occupancy.

—There is a great falling off in Boston this year of women voters; 1500 less than in 1907. It looks as though the women of Boston do not care for suffrage or else they wish full privileges or none, to get up the proper amount of interest.

Cities to Vote On Playgrounds

Of the thirty-one Massachusetts cities that have local elections in December of least twenty will vote on the question "Shall chapter 513 of the acts of the year 1908, requiring certain towns and cities to provide public playgrounds, be accepted by this city?" The application of the referendum principal makes Massachusetts a pioneer, this being the first state in the country to take such official action on the national playground movement.

The law passed by the last legislature provides that every city and town of 10,000 inhabitants accepting the act shall provide and maintain at least one public playground conveniently located and suitably equipped, "for the recreation and physical education of the minors of such city or town." The cities now sure to vote on this matter ,according to information gathered to date by the Massachusetts Civic League, are Brockton, Chicopee, Everett, Fall River, Gloucester, Lawrence, Lowell, Melrose, Northampton, North Adams, New Bedford, Pittsfield, Quincy, Springfield, Taunton and Woburn. The matter is under consideration in Lynn, Marlboro, Holyoke, Worcester, Fitchburg, Beverly and other cities.

As the law reads, cities and towns of the specified population "which have not already satisfied the provisions of this act" shall give the voting citizens a chance to pass on the question. Neverthless, some of the cities that have not provided suitable playgrounds and thus do not comply with the law, are apparently hesitating, notwithstanding the definite language of the law, about placing the question on the official ballots.

The friends of playgrounds claim that this hesitation is due to local conditions, a misunderstanding of the true function of playgrounds or to personal objections on the part of city officials having the preparation of the ballots in charge. One such official refused to place the question on the ballot because it would cause extra labor counting and tabulating the vote. In another city the claim was set up that there were sufficient playgrounds, notwithstanding the fact that none of the grounds were more than open lots on which the boys play ball, without any provision for small children or for girls.

In speaking of the playground referendum, Joseph Lee, the prominent Boston philanthrophist, who is the accredited father of American playgrounds said today, the whole country is watching the action of Massachusetts under this law. It is hoped that every city and town will do its part toward placing our state in the lead in the great movement for giving the children of the country a chance for moral development under the conditions of modern life. It will be noted on reading the law that municipalities do not satisfy the provisions of the act unless they not only possess the required number of playgrounds, but also have those playgrounds conveniently located and of suitable size and equipment for the physical education and recreation of the minors of such city or town. The act contemplates giving all the children a chance, girls as well as boys, small children as well as large. This requirement is not satisfied by a common or ball field alone, or by a playground on the outskirts of the town. it includes suitable provision for every class of children and conveniently accessible to them. Most cities have already done something in the way of providing playgrounds; some have done a great deal. But the present question is making provision that shall be at least approximately commensurate with the need."

—The first municipal playground of Bangor, Me., has been a great success. The work was carried on both by funds appropriated by the city and by private subscriptions. The success was largely due to the employment of an experienced playground worker to take charge during the summer. The work will be extended to the more congested sections of the city next year.

DORCHESTER 10 QUINCY HIGH 0

Played Good Game But Lost Blake's Tackling A Feature

The Quincy High school football team closed its season with defeat Saturday, losing to the Dorchester team by the score of 10-0, on the Dunbar avenue grounds, Dorchester. It was a great game, full of spectacular plays from start to finish. The local boys played a strong game all through and only lost on a little hard luck for themselves with several pieces of good luck for Dorchester.

The contest was going hard and close, and the first half was fast coming to a close, when Quincy on her own 50 yard line tried a forward pass. It was an excellent pass and looked good till Fraser jumped in, grabbed the ball and reeled off 45 yards, before he was nailed from behind by Clapp on a beautiful tackle.

Even then Quincy nearly kept Dorchester from scoring, for it took Larry Conly three plays to carry the ball five yards and go over for the touchdown. He then kicked the goal.

The other piece of hard luck came when the local boys on straight football carried the ball on the kick-off to the Dorchester's 15 yard line, only to lose it on a forward pass and have it kicked out of danger. A goal from the field followed this which added four to the score.

A big bunch of rooters accompanied the team, the fair sex being out in force. Their colors reminded one of a big college game. About 150 left Quincy square at 2 o'clock on 3 special cars, and arrived just in time for the game. With Harold Gore, the first string quarterback, who is out of the game, as cheer-leader, they kept up a continuous noise all the time with their songs and cheers.

The game started off with Quincy kicking to the home team, C. Carlson nailing Larry Conley after the latter had run back 5 yards. Dorchester was held and kicked to "Russ' Bates. Quincy immediately lost the ball on a fumble. The home team then got offside and was penalized 5 yards, which forced a punt. Quincy failed to gain and kicked to Ross. Clapp nailed him in his tracks, showing great speed in getting down the field under the punt. Larry Conley then slid off left tackle for 8 yards, but on the next play there was no gain. Dorchester was again penalized for offside play and kicked to Hendry, Larry Conley sending off a beautiful spiral. Howe and Clapp on two plays got a first down, but that ever fateful forward pass hit the ground on the next play and a penalty of 15 yards was imposed. This of course forced Bates to kick and Larry Conley got 5 yards on the run-in. A penalty for offside and a tackle by "Sausage" Carlson for a loss, necessitated a kick on the part of Dorchester. "Russ" Bates came back with a 10 yard run before he was downed. The "Granite City" boys could not seem to gain however and Rich kicked to Larry Conley who was nailed by R. Bates.

Right here Blake, the star centre of the local team started to play his game. Three times the Dorchester backs attempted to get through the Quincy line, and three times Blake foiled these attempts on beautiful tackles. It was a clever piece of following the play and did not stop here. Blake kept it up all through, time after time nailing the runner in all parts of the field.

This clever work by Blake made Dorchester kick to "Russ" Bates, who again came back for 10 yards through a broken field. "Russ" was right on the job Saturday, handling the punts in fine style, and never failing to gain on the run-in.

Quincy then tried that unlucky forward pass, which was intercepted by Fraser and resulted in a touchdown and goal, as described above. It was hard luck pure and simple, but all due credit must be given to Fraser for being in the right place at the right time.

There was just time for a kickoff and about four plays, when the half ended with Dorchester in the lead 6 -0.

Dorchester kicked to Quincy to start the second half and Clapp came in for 10 yards. He followed this with plunge for 9 more through right guard. Bates made a first down through the same place, "Venus" Carlson and Rich opening up in excellent fashion. An onside kick failed to gain and "Russ" Bates punted to Larry Conley, who got 10 yards. Dorchester failed to advance the ball the required distance in three downs and punted to Hendry.

Nothing daunted by this setback Quincy started down the field with a rush. Howe, Clapp and Bates went through the opposing line for substantial gains each time, Clapp once getting 20 yards straight through right guard on a trick play. Coupled with two 5 yard penalties for Dorchester offside, the local boys placed the ball on the 15 yard line. Here the unlucky forward pass gave the ball to Dorchester and Quincy's hopes were shattered by a beautiful punt from Larry Conley's good right leg.

"Russ" Bates caught the punt and ran it back 15 yards. A forward pass to Rich caused a penalty of 15 yards, for the tackle cannot receive the ball on this play. Quincy then kicked to Larry Conly and Dorchester. that is Larry Conley, started down the field. The ball was at the middle of the field when Howe got in front of one of Ross' forward passes and, got 10 yards before he was tackled.

"Russ" Bates went through the line for a 20 yard gain, but the referee claimed it was the quarterback. Hence, as the quarterback must go 5 yards outside of centre before he can advance the ball, this play was against the rules. A 15 yard penalty was imposed and a punt followed.

This placed the ball in Dorchester's possession on the 35 yard line, for that 15 yard penalty on Quincy brought the ball way back to the 5 yard line. The ball was directly in front of the goal-posts, and the signal was given for a drop gick. Larry Conley dropped back and standing calmly on the 45 yard line, received the ball, dropped it, and just as it struck the ground he booted it. The pigskin went sailing over the cross-bar for one of the prettiest field goals seen this season.

This proved to be a fitting ending for a great game, as the whis'le blew shortly afterwards. Final score, Dorchester 10, Quincy 0.

Larry Conley was the bright particular star in the Dorchester constellation, and without him the Dorchester team would be exceedingly weak. Fraser, Ross and Cruikshank also played well for Dorchester. For Quincy, Rich, the Carlsons and the backfield played an excellent game. The summary:

Junior S. and D. Entertain

The Junior society of Sons and Daughters of Revolution gave a reception Saturday afternoon to Mrs. Belcher the new directoress of the society. Miss Florence Burnham, the president of the society presided and after the routine business presented Mrs. Belcher with a book of quotations by Bartlett. Miss Lucile Hannum of Ashmont and Miss Agnes Littlefield of Dorchester sang and there were brief remarks by Mrs. Belcher, Mrs. E. G. Pratt and Mrs. F. F. Prescott. Mrs. Belcher expressed her pleasure at being present and thanked the juniors for their very pleasing gift. Light refreshments were served.

NO LICENSE RALLY.

The annual crusade against license in Quincy was begun on Sunday evening, when a no-license rally was held at the Washington street congregational church, Quincy Point. The meeting was largely attended and proved to be a great success in every way.

Albert L. Hayden sang several pleasing songs during the evening.

Thomas B. Pollard presided, and urged those present to remember what they were to hear from the speakers and to go among their friends and influence them to vote "No" on the first of December.

William F. Cummings of Atlantic was the first speaker and spoke strongly against license showing the evils that accrue from it and exhorting the people for the sake of the city and the children to vote "No."

John L. Miller of South Quincy was the last speaker, and he told how Quincy had gone on for 20 years without license, steadily gaining in population and wealth. He said that there was absolutely no reason why it should not go on for 20 years more in the same way and hoped with Mr. Pollard and Mr. Cummings, that all who were eligible to vote, would cast a vote for No-license on election day.

GAVE LIQUOR TO PRISONER.

Fred Hayden was in court this morning to answer to a complaint charging him with delivering liquor to a prisoner in a place of confinement. A friend of Hayden was under arrest at the police station and Sunday he called to see him. In order to cheer his friend up during his forced confinement Hayden passed him a bottle of liquor. Inspector Goodhue saw the act and taking possession of the whiskey, locked Hayden up in a cell adjoining that occupied by his friend.

HARVEST CONCERT.

There was a large attendance Sunday afternoon at the Harvest concert of the Sunday school of the First church. The children had been invited to bring vegetables. The response was generous and a large lot of winter vegetables was piled in front of the platform in the chapel. These were later distributed among the worthy poor of the city.

The program included speaking and singing by the members of the school under the direction of Supt. Johnson.

Large Fine For Jewelry Peddler

Two men who gave their names as Stephen A. Daley and John F. Scott were arrested Friday afternoon by Officer Hinchon at Brewers corner for peddling jewelry without a permit. It is alleged that the men were trying to dispose of ruby rings for $2 which were said to cost less than that amount per dozen. In order to better sell the rings they had a hard luck story to tell and were doing a thriving trade among servant girls when Officer Hinchon took them in. Both were in court Saturday for peddling jewelry without a license and Daley was fined $25. There was not sufficient evidence to convict Scott and he was discharged.

BOYS DEPARTMENT Y. M. C. A.

Another great week for the Boys' Department of the Young Men's Christian association has closed. All the Bible classes were held as usual and great interest is being shown along these lines. Thursday evening a supper was held by employed boys and was a great success. The plan of the employed boys is to hold a similar supper once a month for a social and educational time. Practical talks are to be held such as was held last week. G. S. Maxwell physical director spoke on "Exercise" and all present enjoyed it very much. Saturday evening a pancake and salmagundi party was held by the juniors and every fellow present had a good time.

This week is a busy week for the boys. The orchestra meets tonight at eight o'clock. The employed boys' club at 6.45. The Junior Bible classes Tuesday at 6 P. M. The Tan Sigma Kappa at 8.00. The Oyhn at 4 P. M. Wednesday. Saturday at 9 A. M. a big meeting is to be held for boys under fourteen years of age. Every boy in Quincy is invited and a large number of boys are expected. Seventy-five pictures and the story "The Shuttered Window" is the program. The membership is steadily increasing and this is indeed a great year.

Saturday morning an athletic meet was held for members of the Junior class. It was one of the most interesting times held in the gym, this season. The events were closely contested and the winner could not be picked until the last man had left the mark. The following events were run off, standing broad jump, 15-yd. dash, potato race and relay race. The winners in the events were for broad jump, George Jennings, first, Richard Crane second, and Walter Morrison, third. In the 15-yd. dash Walter Morrison. Potato race, George Jennings, first, Sam Prout, second. The relay team was John Reynolds, H. Chapman, Carl Ahktrom and Ralph Marr.

MILTON FIRE.

A large barn on Canton avenue was burned to the ground Sunday night together with its contents of hay. The fire made a bright illumination which could be seen for miles. The cause of the fire is unknown. The barn was owned by Milton Academy. Loss $2000.

—Stand by your town. Not a dollar invested there but some good comes of it. There is no family like one's own wife; there should be no town like one's own town, where we live, educate our children, on whose streets our babies play, and where we may some day sleep. The newspapers stand by the town, and let the business men stand by the newspapers and let us make our home as famous as possible.

About fifteen members of the National Sportsmans club of West Quincy held a clam bake Saturday night in its club rooms on Copeland street.

The communication of Councilman Abele in Saturday's Ledger contained much food for careful thought, and has been complimented upon favorably by many, who think the time has come to call a halt in appropriating large sums of money, late in the year that can not posibly be expended until spring of the following year. This same matter was one of the points touched upon by Mayor Shea in his inaugural address last January.

According to Elisha Gibbs, of Middleboro who is known as the Long Neck weather prophet, we are going to have a rip-roaring long tough winter and plenty of snow and ice. He says "We are going to have a long cold winter this year, and don't forget what I tell you. You just watch it and see if I am correct when it's past. They can guess by their goose bones and all sorts of things, but I watch the kind of weather we are getting and judge by that."

With commendable zeal the Citizens' No-License league has entered upon an active campaign to keep Quincy not only a No-License city but well to the front on election day with a larger no vote than ever. They have contracted for half a page in text Saturday's Ledger to announce the Sunday night No-license meetings, have secured a fine list of speakers and have also issued considerable campaign literature. The endeavors of these citizens year after year and throughout the year are great factors in keeping Quincy a clean temperance city.

The Civic improvement committees in many places are taking up the matter of the unsightly advertising boards that disfigure the natural beauty of cities. Right here in Quincy there are many examples of these same advertising boards. The owners of the boards are not at all particular of the class of advertising that is given space on these boards and they are fast becoming a public nuisance. Along nearly every main thoroughfare in Quincy there are several of these boards and the time has come when something should be done to elimate them altogether or at least control them in some way so that they will cease to be a nuisance. The Civic committee of the Quincy Womens' club has done much to improve the general appearance of certain localities, especially near the Quincy depot, and could if they took hold of this question accomplish much in that direction. Certainly they would receive the thanks of all good citizens who take pride in having their home city look attractive.

Quincy follows the good old New England custom of holding church services on Thanksgiving day. A union meeting is to be held in Quincy centre at Bethany church with "The Civic Spirit" as the theme, sub-divided as follows: "The Home," speaker Rev. Edward Anderson; "The School," Mr. Edward Southworth; "The Social Organization," Mr. Henry M. Faxon and "The Church," Rev. A. M. Thompson. No better observance could be made of the day than for the citizens to get together and discuss the civic welfare of the community. Services are also to be held in other sections of the city.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

There will be no meeting for the City Council tonight, the next regular meeting being scheduled for Monday, Dec. 7.

Large poster cards bearing the pictures of the two candidates for Mayor at the coming election have been plentifully distributed about the city.

Sunday was an ideal day to be out of doors and many improved the opportunity to enjoy one more pleasant walk before winter weather sets in. Days like Sunday are very rare for this season of the year.

Quincy was well represented Saturday at New Haven at the great foot ball game between Harvard and Yale. Many others would liked to have gone but could not obtain the necessary tickets. The Ledger promptly bulletined the score, so that the result was known in Quincy inside of five minutes after the first goal was made. The final result was also promptly bulletined and the late editions contained the final score.

NEW ENGLAND RESOURCES

Their Conservation the Subject of Important Discussion

SIX GOVERNORS IN SESSION

Other Officials of the Various States In Conference at Boston In the Interests of Forests, Orchards, Fisheries and Automobile Legislation--Uniform Laws Desired For the Commonwealths

Boston, Nov. 23.—This city is today the scene of a notable gathering of New England leaders in the persons of the governors, lieutenant governors, incoming governors, national and state legislators and other officials of the six New England states. The purpose of their coming together is to discuss the preservation of the natural resources of the states in line with the recent gathering in Washington of officials and others representing the entire country. Today's meeting may be said to be an outgrowth of the national assemblage.

The conference will last two days. The subjects to be discussed are forestry and fruit raising, the protection of the fisheries, the construction of good roads and the regulation of automobiles. Proposed legislation concerning these matters will be laid before the officials by some of the best known experts of the country.

The first session this afternoon will be devoted to tree planting, and Gifford Pinchot, the national forester, will speak on the future of forest trees in New England. The consideration of orchards in New England and the great opportunity that exists for fruit culture here will be treated by Professor John Craig, head of the department of horticulture at Cornell university.

Tomorrow morning's session will be given to the preservation and cultivation of shellfish, now rapidly vanishing from the New England coast.

The third session, tomorrow afternoon, will be devoted to highways and their use. The first paper will be read by Harold Parker, chairman of the Massachusetts highway commision. He will treat of the construction of highways.

In the second paper of the session James A. MacDonald, the highway commissioner of Connecticut, will lay out plans for trunk lines of highways for New England.

The third and last paper of the session will be delivered by ex-governor Nahum J. Bachelder of New Hampshire, master of the national grange, who will talk of the regulation of automobiles. It is hoped to secure for all New England one uniform, reasonable law by which the regulation and, if possible, the taxation of these vehicles shall be the same in all the New England states.

All papers read and suggestions made will be referred to the state chiefs of departments covering forestry, shellfish and highways, with instructions to meet, consider and report to the incoming governors before Jan. 1 thier findings in regard to uniform laws for New England.

Crazed by Alcohol

New York, Nov. 23.—Overpowering an attendant in charge of the male division of the alcoholic ward at Bellevue hospital, Ulrich Fournier wrested the keys from the guard, escaped from the ward, ran to the East river, jumped into the water and was drowned. There were sixty-five patients in the ward and Fournier's wild act created a panic. The patients ran screaming about the room in a frenzy, and a number of them walked out of the pavilion. They were captured and returned to the ward.

Diplomacy Instead of War

Rome, Nov. 23.—Signor Tittoni, the Italian foreign minister; M. Milovanovics, the Servian foreign minister, and M. Marrere, the French ambassador, had a lengthy conference here on the situation in the Balkans. They reached the conclusion that war certainly could be avoided, and that the proposed international congress would settle satisfactorily all pending questions.

Castro Going Under the Knife

Caracas, Nov. 23.—President Castro is about to leave Venezuela for Europe to undergo an operation. This will be the first time the president has ever left Venezuelan territory. There is reason to believe that Castro contemplates leaving La Guaira Nov. 24 on steamer Guadeloupe, which runs between Havre and West Indian ports.

King and Queen Visiting Paris

Paris, Nov. 23.—King Gustave and the Queen of Sweden, who have spent the last week with King Edward at Windsor, arrived here on their first state visit. They were welcomed by President Fallieres and the members of his cabinet. They were given a hearty greeting by the crowds and later King Gustave held a reception.

Portuguese Towns Shaken Up

Lisbon, Nov. 23.—Earth shocks were experienced yesterday at Alhambra, Alverca, Villafranca and Arruda, all small towns located near Lisbon. The residents were thrown into a panic, but there were no casualties. The walls of some of the houses were badly cracked.

ATTLEBORO FIREBUGS BUSY

Three Sunday Night Fires With a Heavy Loss of Property

Attleboro, Mass., Nov. 23.—The third Sunday night incendiary fire to occur on successive week-end nights in this town last night consumed the farm house and barns of Benjamin Estes, burning, besides the buildings, twenty-five head of cattle and three horses, valuable modern farming implements and hay and grain. The loss is about $7500.

Estes had left his barn but a few moments when he heard an explosion and saw flames streaming from both ends and the windows on every side. The barn was quickly consumed and the house followed before the fire fighting apparatus could stay the flames.

The fire was undoubtedly the work of an incendiary and resembles the fires of the past two Sunday nights. Last week the farm buildings of Alexander Smith were totally destroyed at a loss of $4500, and the week previously the Collis farm was swept by flames and a loss of $3500 suffered. The police have started an investigation.

TANG SHAO YI ARRIVES AT SAN FRANCISCO

High Chinese Official Hears of Empress Dowager's Death

San Francisco, Nov. 23.—Conveying to the American government the gratitude of the Chinese people for remittance of a debt amounting to nearly $14,000,000, Tang Shao Yi, a powerful figure in the affairs of the Chinese empire, arrived in San Francisco on the steamer Mongolia. With him was Prince Tsai Fu, a member of the royal family, and a large retinue.

Thrice in the history of the Chinese nation has there arisen occasion for the appointment of such a commission as is domiciled in the Fairmont hotel, and never has a foreign power been so strongly represented through diplomatic channels during a crisis of world-wide importance. In his honor the Dragon flag flew from the mastheads of a score of vessels in the bay, guns mounted on the harbor front boomed out a salute and thousands of his countrymen thronged the wharf where his escort landed.

Not until the Mongolia dropped anchor in the harbor did Tang Shao Yi and his staff learn that the Dowager Empress of China was dead. In Honolulu the cable brought news of the emperor's death, but said nothing about the illness that threatened the end of the dowager empress' remarkable career. When the distinguished visitor was acquainted with the full extent of the changes that had occurred since his departure even the habitual Oriental reserve did not suffice to conceal his perturbation.

A Persistent Bomb Thrower

Chicago, Nov. 23.—The mysterious bomb thrower, who for two years has eluded and puzzled the Chicago police, threw a bomb on the roof of a building occupied by John D. Gazzolo's saloon. Although no one was injured, part of the roof was torn out, windows were broken and the report was heard for blocks around. This is the twenty-sixth bomb which has been hurled at alleged gambling resorts. As has been his custom, the bomb thrower called up a newspaper office to make public the fact of the explosion.

Hanging In Front Yard

Swansea, Mass., Nov. 23.—When Edward B. Lake and family went to spend Sunday at their summer camp on the banks of Cole's river yesterday, they found the dead body of a man swinging to and fro in the wind from the limb of a tree in the front yard of the camp. The man was apparently an Italian of about 45 years. On the body was found a silver watch and small amount of change.

Balloon Journeyed 1150 Miles

London, Nov. 23.—The balloon owned by The Daily Graphic, which ascended from this city in an attempt to reach Siberia and break the long distance record, was compelled to discend in a gale near Novoalexandovsk, Russia, after having traveled about 1150 miles. The long distance record is held by Count de la Vaulx, who succeeded in covering a distance of 1193 miles.

Troops Surround Haytian Rebels

Port Au Prince, Hayti, Nov. 23.—Official notification has been issued of the blockade of the port of Aux Cayes, the only town in the republic in a state of rebellion. All other places in the south have remained loyal to President Alexis. Troops have surrounded Aux Cayes, where General Simon, who has been declared a rebel, is directing the movement against the government.

Satisfied With Gompers

Denver, Nov. 23.—As the result of the election in the American Federation of Labor convention the executive council, which is made up of the officers, shows no change with the exception of the substitution of John R. Alpine for Daniel J. Keefe. Gompers was re-elected to the presidency, only one discontented representative of the Socialist party voting against him.

CARNEGIE'S VIEWS ON TARIFF

Says Duties on Manufactured Goods Should Be Reduced or Abolished--Favors Tax on Luxuries Used by the Rich--Duties Upon Imports For Needed Revenue Should Not Become a Party Question

New York, Nov. 23.—A notable article from Andrew Carnegie, dealing with the tariff, will appear in the forthcoming December number of the Century Magazine, in which the iron master takes the position that "infant industries" no longer need protection.

He declares that the steel and other industries have now grown beyond the need of tariff protection; that duties on luxuries used by the rich should be maintained, but that those on manufactured articles should be reduced greatly, or abolished entirely when no longer needed.

Mr. Carnegie's article is entitled "My Experience With and Views Upon the Tariff." He reviews the tariff movements down to the present Dingley law, and says that conditions have changed so greatly in the interval that the tariff should now be viewed from a new standpoint. He assumes that a decided majority of American voters are agreed:

"First—That it is advisable for new countries to encourage capital by protective duties, when seen to be necessary to develop new industries.

"Second—That after full and exhaustive trials, if success be not finally attained, such protection should cease, except as noted hereunder.

"Third—That should the experiment succeed, protection becomes unnecessary, and should steadily but gradually be abolished, provided that the home supply of any article absolutely necessary for the national safety shall not hereby be endangered."

Further on Mr. Carnegie says: "We have already become by far the greatest of all manufacturing nations. Our 'infant industries' of the past have reached maturity, and, speaking generally, are now quite able to protect themselves.

"While the tariff as a whole, even today, has ceased to be primarily beneficial as a measure of protection, it has become of vast importance from the standpoint of revenue, and it is to this feature I bespeak the special attention of readers of all parties, for duties upon imports, not for protection, but for needed revenue should not become a party question. Reasonable men of all parties may be expected to approve this plan of obtaining revenue."

After giving tables showing that the bulk of tariff duties are collected on luxuries used by the rich, Carnegie says:

"Thus does the American tariff, in happy contrast to others, almost exempt the poor and heavily tax the rich, just as it should; for it is they who have the ability to pay as required by the highest enonomic law."

Mr. Carnegie says of future tariff legislation: "The next congress dealing with the tariff will probably be inclined at first to reduce duties all around, and, perhaps, to abolish some, but its first care should be to maintain present duties, and even in some cases increase them on some articles used almost exclusively by the rich, and this not for protection, but for revenue not drawn from the workers, but from the rich.

"This is the first and prime duty of congress. We should not forget that government expenditures have increased enormously in recent years and that additional revenue is required.

"Its second duty is to reduce duties greatly upon manufactured articles and to abolish entirely those no longer needed."

Further on he says: "The infant we have nursed approaches the day when he should be weaned from tariff milk and fed upon the stronger food of free competition. It needs little if any more nourishing, but the change should not be made abruptly.

"There is no occasion for haste or for any revolutionary step in coming tariff legislation. It is better to go a little too slow than a little too fast."

Three Killed In Tunnel Accident

Westfield, Mass., Nov. 23.—Three workmen were killed by gas generated by a dynamite blast in the tunnel which is being built for the Springfield municipal water works under Cobble mountain. Two other men were rescued in an unconscious condition and were revived after they were taken to the open air.

Old Man Perished In Fire

York, Me., Nov. 23.—James Hutchins, 80 years of age, who lived alone in a small house about five miles from York village, was burned to death in his home. It is supposed that in lighting his pipe he accidentally set fire to the building, which was entirely consumed.

Boiler Explosion Kills Ten

New Orleans, Nov. 23.—Ten persons were killed and a score were injured by the explosion of the boiler on the Mississippi river steamer H. M. Carter near Bayou Goula. Fire followed the explosion and the boat was burned to the water's edge.

Chapter 17

WHEN I went downstairs dinner was ready in cool, shady dining roo with a bare floor paint brown and a long tab'e down the middle. It wasn't quite 2 o'clock, but it turned out that the family had had their dinner at noon exactly, and this was a meal only for Mr. Brett and me, with Patty and Ide to bring us things from the kitchen and wait upon us, while Mrs. Trowbridge flitted in smiling from time to time to ask how we were "getting along." It was she who was cooking for us, and I felt quite distressed at the trouble I was giving, on such a hot day, too, but she said she was enjoying it.

It was a very funny dinner, according to my ideas, for I never had a meal like it at home, even when I was small and dined in the daytime with the governess. But it was tremendously good though none of the things went together properly. We had delicious young chicken—quite babies they were, poor dears—fried with cream, and wreathed all around our plates in a semicircle were a quantity of tiny dishes. Each one had a big dab of something different in it; mashed potatoes, succotash, green peas, a kind of vegetable marrow to which they gave the unworthy name of "squash," raw tomatoes, sweet green pickles, preserved strawberries, and goodness knows what all besides, while, if we stopped eating to breathe or speak, Patty flew in with a plate of freshly made things of the most heavenly nature, called corn fritters. Mrs. Trowbridge beamed all over when I said I should like to live on them for a month.

We were obliged to eat a good deal of everything, otherwise Mrs. Trowbridge would have felt hurt, and I felt sleepy when we had finished, but I refused to go and lie down to rest, as they wanted me to, it seemed such a waste of time. At last Mr. Trowbridge offered to show "Cousin Jim" around the farm, and maybe I looked wistful, for when they found that I was determined not to take a nap, they asked if I would go with them.

Mr. Trowbridge had on a linen coat now, a long, yellow one, which I should laugh at if I saw it on the stage in a play, but it suited him, and he looked quite impressive in it. He fanned himself with a large straw hat, without any ribbon, and talked splendidly to us, as we three walked together under the trees.

If any English person should write a novel and make a farmer in it talk like Mr. Trowbridge, every one who read the book would say he was impossible. His way of speaking was a little slipshod sometimes—though not a bit more than ours when we drop our "g's" and things like that, only more guileless sounding—but without seeming a bit as if he wanted to show off what he knew, which is so boring, he quoted Shakespeare and Wordsworth and Tennyson and in mentioning his work at the hives in the morning asked if we had read Maeterlinck's "Life of the Bee." From that he fell to discussing other things of Maeterlinck's with Mr. Brett and incidentally talked of Ibsen. There wasn't the least affectation about it all.

By and by he left us alone for a few minutes while he went to speak to a man who works on the farm. He was going to show us the maple sugar camp when he came back, and we sat on a felled oak and waited, with a smell of clover coming to us on the warm breeze and the "tinkle-tankle" of cowbells in the distance.

"What an extraordinary man!" I said to Mr. Brett.

"You mean because he's a farmer," said he, his eyes laughing.

"Well, I suppose I do. But, then, of course he's a gentleman farmer, not an ordinary one at all."

"He's a gentleman in the way that all the good people in the country round are gentlefolk—because they're self respecting and kind hearted and intelligent. But he comes of generations of workers. They make no pretensions to blue blood, though perhaps they may have some in their veins, and don't think themselves superior socially to their own farm hands, like that one over there. Nor do they consider themselves inferior to anybody. Not that they would think of asserting their claims to equality with your friend Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox, for instance. They simply take it for granted that they are the equals of any other American or, for the matter of that, persons of any foreign nations. What would your mother the duchess think of them—now, honor bright! Don't dream you'll hurt my feelings because they're my cousins and we may come of the same stock."

I thought for a minute, and then I said:

"Mother would begin to patronize them graciously at first, as if they could be classified with our farmers—I mean, the peasant ones, not the younger son or poor gentleman kind. When she found she couldn't, she would be inclined to resent it. Then at last, when a dim, puzzled inkling of the truth came into her head, and she found out that they knew as much as she about books and politics and all sorts of things—oh, I can hardly fancy exactly what she would feel, but I'd trust Mr. and Mrs. Trowbridge or any one like them not to appear at a disadvantage with her, whatever she did with them. They wouldn't have self consciousness enough to be overawed by her, though she can be so dreadfully alarming. Why, Mr. Brett, in a way I believe they're like us—more like us, really, deep down and far back, than a good many enormously rich people I met at Newport, who think no end of themselves and live in palaces and know royalties abroad. Just as I said once to Sally—Miss Woodburn—we take ourselves for granted, and then don't make any more fuss or bother about our manners or whether we're going to do the right thing or not. But a few of the people even in your Four Hundred don't seem quite easy in their minds about themselves. I've never seen anything in big houses at home where I've been with mother of Vic to come near the luxury of theirs, yet several I've met can't seem to relax and look thoroughly comfortable, as if they really liked it. They don't loll about as we do; they only pretend to loll, because it's in their part in the play they're acting—oh, such a smart, society kind of play, with lots of changes of dress and scene in every act.

"They build castles because it's the smartest thing they can do and because grand people always did it a long time ago. Of course in old times you had to live in them and couldn't have nice seaside cottages with balconies, because if you did your enemies shot off your head or poured boiling oil on you, but nowadays they merely say horrid things behind your back, and it's just play acting to build new ones. People talk about a man being 'worth' so many millions, as if it didn't matter what else he's worth, and they seem to be worrying a lot about themselves. Now, I can't imagine your cousins doing that. They just take themselves for granted, as we do in England. Their behavior is like the air they breathe and as much a part of themselves as that air is when it's in their lungs. There's a kind of invisible bond between our kind of people at home and people like this, I think, if you come to study it. Partly it's from having all one's natural interests in the country, maybe, and not just going into the country from a town to play. They are real. There's nothing artificial about them."

"You've got hold of things even sooner than I thought you would, Lady Betty," said Mr. Brett when I stopped, horrified at myself for my long harangue, in which I'd been thinking out things as I went on. "But all the same, though these new types and this pleasant Ohio farm interest you now, you know you'd rather die than be doomed to live among such people and in such a place."

"Perhaps I should be bored after awhile, but I don't feel now as if I should. I know I could be happy if I had people with me whom I loved."

"But could you love anyone who"—

"Well, I've got rid of that fellow,' said Mr. Trowbridge cheerfully. "Now we'll have a look around the camp, and I'll show you how we tap the maple trees for the sap, then afterward we'll go into the sugar house where we boil it down and make the maple sirup."

We'd been talking so earnestly tha we hadn't heard him come up, and I felt quite dazed for a minute.

He explained everything to us, or rather to me, for Mr. Brett knew all about it beforehand. Then we had a long walk over the hills, which are billowy and wooded like Surrey, and when we came back Mr. Trowbridge took me to the beehives to get some honey and show me what a queen bee is like. He gave me a hat with a mosquito net veil and put on one himself. Then he opened a hive, and when I wasn't a bit nervous, because I trusted him, he said, "I tell you what it is, Lady Betty, you're a trump. I shouldn't be surprised if there isn't something in blood after all."

I was pleased, for I don't think that he or any of the others at the Valley farm are the kind to say nice things to you unless they really mean them.

After we had done all this sightseeing, it was past 5 o'clock, and I was longing for tea. "We shall have it soon now," I said to myself, as we sat on the side veranda on benches and rocking chairs, fanning ourselves with palm leaf fans.

GREAT GAP IN STEAMER'S SIDE

Mount Desert Rammed by Admiral Dewey In Dense Fog

PASSENGERS PANIC-STRICKEN

Captain of Fruiter Keeps His Vessel Fastened to Disabled One While Men, Women and Children Fought to Climp Over Rails to Place of Safety--Number of Persons Injured In Stampede

New York, Nov. 23.—The lives of more than 500 persons were imperilled when the fruit steamer Admiral Dewey, inward bound from Jamaica, ran into the steamer Mount Desert, outward bound for the fishing banks. The Admiral Dewey, coming suddenly out of a fog bank, struck the Mount Desert almost amidships, opening a gap in the fishing vessel which extended from the upper decks to the water's edge. There were 450 passengers, including twenty women and six children, on the Mount Desert, and the Admiral Dewey carried forty-five passengers.

Panic immediately followed the collision and it was due to Captain Davidson of the Admiral Dewey that a catastrophe was averted, for the passengers on the fishing steamer began piling over the guard rails of that vessel and jumped to the deck of the Admiral Dewey. Had he backed his steamer away they would have fallen into the water.

Captain Davidson signalled the engine room to keep the steamer moving slowly ahead and th... kept the sharp prow of the steamer in the rent that had been made and afforded safety for the frightened passengers of the Mount Desert. Thus the two steamers moved slowly toward the east bank of the lower bay, while a wild scene was occuring on the decks.

It was believed that the Mount Desert would sink, and the passengers fought frantically to get to the deck of the Admiral Dewey. Many of the women on the fishing steamer fainted. The children ran about the deck crying, and men battled with each other to reach the steamer's deck. Above the uproar could be heard the voices of Captain Davidson of the Admiral Dewey and Captain Beebe of the Mount Desert, assuring the terror-stricken people that there was no danger.

A number of persons were slightly injured in the stampede. Men and women crowded over the guard rails so rapidly that they trampled upon each other. Captain Hayes and Lieutenant Belton of the city police department were passengers on the Admiral Dewey and it was largely due to them that no one was seriously injured. Belton rescued one woman who had been pushed from the deck of the Mount Desert and was hanging by one hand to the shattered guard rail of the Mount Desert, and he and Hayes stood at the prow of the Admiral Dewey and pulled the men and women to safety as they swarmed on the deck.

In a brief fifteen minutes fully 350 of the passengers of the Mount Desert reached the deck of the Admiral Dewey. By this time the Admiral Dewey had pushed the Mount Desert close to the east bank. The former drew more water and Davidson discovered that his steamer was striking bottom.

Nearly all the passengers of the Mount Desert had been transferred and the panic was subsiding, so Davidson signalled to the engines to stop, and a few minutes later the boats drifted apart.

Wrecking tugs and other boats had been dispatched to the scene as soon as word of the accident reached quarantine and then New York. The Mount Desert was taken in tow, but later went under her own steam to South Brooklyn, where she docked to permit the rest of the passengers to go ashore. She then went to a drydock for repairs.

Meantime the Admiral Dewey proceeded through the Narrows and up the river to her pier, where the passengers, including those from the Mount Desert, were landed. The Admiral Dewey is in the service of the United Fruit company.

Taft's Turkey Executed

Westerly, R. I., Nov. 23.—The Rhode Island turkey which Horace Vose will send to the president, according to his annual custom, to grace the table of the White House on Thanksgiving day, went on the execution block yesterday and was shipped to Washington today. The bird weighs twenty-six pounds. President Grant was the first occupant of the White House to receive a Thanksgiving turkey from the Vose flocks, and each year since then the gift has been renewed.

Liabilities Well Up In Millions

Chicago, Nov. 23.—The auditor's financial statement of the assets of Booth & Co., the fish firm which some time ago went into a receivership, deals with the conditions of the firm on Sept. 10, when the receiver was appointed, and shows an apparent surplus of assets of $777,120. The liabilities are given as $7,241,700.

The usual number of Sunday automobile accidents were recorded in this mornings papers.

C. C. Ewell of Hamden circle has recovered from his long illness and resumed his duties in Boston today.

Mrs. Electa E. Field of Hancock street is to spend Thanksgiving with her granddaughter and friends at Hanson.

Things in police circles were quiet Saturday night and Sunday. The usual number of drunks were pulled in however.

Mrs. Annie M. Chick of Hancock street has been entertaining the past week her brother from New Zealand, whom she has not seen for over forty years.

The Daily Ledger was somewhat handicapped today by having its electric power shut off for an hour at noontime, one of the busy hours of the day. Some repairs at the electric light plant was the cause.

A verdict of $1250 was given at Dedham last week in favor of Charlotte B. Stoddard of East Weymouth in her suit for $10,000 against the Old Colony Street Railway Company, for injuries sustained by her in the derailment of one of the defendant company's cars in Pleasant street, Weymouth, Aug. 1, 1906. Her husband, Charles S. Stoddard sued for $5000, for the loss of his wife's service and was awarded $250.

The trees along Washington street are being trimmed.

Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Fletcher of Garfield street leave today for a short visit at Portland, Maine.

The holes in Washington street between River street and the bridge are being filled up with crush stone.

Miss Jessie Gardner has severed her connection with F. A. Skinner and accepted a position with the Abbott & Miller express company.

Mr. and Mrs. Storer of Wollaston, who have only been residents of this city a few months, left Saturday for Camden, N. J., where he has accepted a position as draughtsman.

Victor Rebekah lodge of Upham's Corner will perform the work on Friday evening in their new silk paraphernalia. Several members of George L. Gill lodge of this city will attend and witness the work.

Asa Sewell has nearly completed another house on Edison park. It has a new kind of chimney for these parts; the chimney is one of the Edison kind, made of cement blocks and topped out with cement brick. It is pronounced a success and other such chimneys are to be introduced into the construction of new houses in the vicinity.

The many friends and acquaintances of Miss Annie Gibson will be sorry to learn that she has severed her connections with G. W. Wheeler, a formerly Miss C. S. Hubbard, and hes accepted a position with C. F. Hovey & Co. of Boston. She will be greatly missed by her many customers as she was always courteous, willing and obliging.

Foot Ball And Other Sports

The local High school football season came to an end on Saturday at Dorchester. The season is considered one of the most successful in the history of the school, and indeed it was a creditable showing that the boys made against the best teams of Greater Boston. An outline of the season's work will appear in a few days.

The Crimson triumphed over the Blue on Saturday for the first time since 1901, the score 4-0, being the closest in the history of these annual struggles between Harvard and Yale. Harvard was confident of vistory, but that she would win on a goal from the field was hardly thought of by the coaches, players, or undergrauates.

It was surely a great piece of headwork, almost intuition, that prompted Coach Percy Haughton to pull Ver Viebe from the game and substitute "Vic" Kennard, for the sole purpose of dropping a goal from the field. It is a question who is the hero, Kennard or Haughton. But whoever it is, it is certain that both will go down in Harvard football history as the men who beat Yale in 1908.

While Harvard won, and while Kennard and Haughton are being lauded to the skies by football enthusiasts throughout the country, one man who wore the good old blue of Yale must not be forgotten. "Ted" Coy, the wonderful fullback of the Eli team deserves a lot of credit for his grand work, it might almost be said, unaided and alone.

This blonde haired defender of the Blue was a tower of strength and twice on terrific plunges through the line, he carried the ball the whole length of the field, only to have his team lose it on a fumble. It will be recalled how in the Yale-Princeton game, this same Coy twice went down the field carrying the ball time after time till he had scored two touchdowns and beat the Tigers after hope of victory had almost been given up.

This week will bring the football season to a close. The two big games this week are those between Pennsylvania and Cornell on Thanksgiving day at Philadelphia, and Annapolis and West Point in the Quaker City, on Saturday. There are also several important local high school games scheduled notably the English High Boston Latin game and the Somerville-Rindge game on Thanksgiving day.

The New England Kennell club held its weekly shoot Saturday at Braintree. There were three events and W. O. Gay won the cup.

R. H. Morgan won a leg in the season's trophy and won in shooting from a tower 65 feet high and 35 feet from the target.

Y. M. C. A. ROAD RACE.

Quite a number of men have already promised to enter the race on Thanksgiving morning at 10 o'clock. It is hoped that more non-members may enter to make the race more interesting. Some of the prizes offered are on exhibition at the Y. M. C. A. building.

SOUTH WALNUTS VS. PIONEERS.

The Pioneers defeated the South Walnuts Saturday on Reynold's field by the score of 24 to 0. Laing and Ferguson for the Pioneers and Connors and Thompson for the Walnuts put up a good name.

ARE GHOSTS UNHAPPY?

While doubting the existence of ghosts, Professor G. Stanley Hall, of Clark University, the institution which recently offered a cash prize for the capture or authentic proof of the existence of a spook, has startled telepathists and investigators generally by announcing that if ghosts do exist they are undoubtedly unhappy—what Huck Finn would call a "poor lot." After investigating hundreds of cases, Dr. Hall is more than ever unconvinced of the existence of ghosts and in an explanation of his attitude which he contributes to Appleton's magazine cites his reasons for his position. "No ghost was ever seen to do or say anything important," he says, "but all their reputed acts and owrds are so trivial as to initimate that such a life as they lead must be boresome."

The president of the ghost-seeking university, in answer to the assertions of persons who declare that they have seen ghosts, makes the novel retort that plenty of persons who have been struck on the head have seen sparks, without the sparks being in any way real. "Till comparatively recently," says he, "the whole world believed that the sun went around the earth, but this concensus does not add an iota to the probability that it ever did so."

"Likewise," says the University president, "it is not logical to believe that ghosts exist simply because some people believe in them. The list of once universal superstitions is a long one, but it does not prove anything. It is hard to realize that our intimate friends, especially if they died suddenly and afar off, so that we did not see the corpse or the interment, are really dead, and this has a good deal to do with cases of those supposed to return to earth." The chief result of years of investigation, however, leads Dr. Hall to conclude that by their manifestations, even if such manifestations be accepted, ghosts must be a sorrowful lot, a statement which shows the possibilites for the formation of a society for the amelioration of the condition of spooks.

Benjamin Johnson has recently purchased a large tract of land at Adams shore on Swan road, containing over 30,000 feet.

Two Sides to Liquor Question

The right side and the wrong side.
The moral side and the immoral side.
The thrifty side and the poverty side.
The empty jail side and the full docket side.
The more policemen side and the half-hour court session side.
The unsafe-after-dark street side and the clean, happy thoroughfare side.
The citizen rule side and the rum rule side.

SURPRISE PARTY.

A very enjoyable evening was spent Saturday at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Oxford, 14 River street, on the occasion of Mr. Oxford's sixtieth birthday. It was a surprise party by his numerous friends who presented him with a handsome morris chair. The evening was pleasantly passed with games, singing and dancing. At 11 o'clock a collation was served by a well known Boston caterer.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. George M. Bates of Waltham, Dr. and Mrs. W. P. Middleton and daughter Edith, Chief of Police Frank E. Burrell and family, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Miner and daughter Clara, Mr. and Mrs. William Bond of Weymouth, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Muellier and daughter Dorothy, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin B. Langley, Mr. and Mrs. George Shepard, Mr. and Mrs. Kittridge, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence and Mr. and Mrs. McGilvray.

Chap. 513, Acts of 1908.

AN ACT TO PROVIDE FOR PLAYGROUNDS IN CERTAIN CITIES AND TOWNS.

Be it enacted, etc., as follows:

SECTION 1. Every city and town in the commonwealth having a population of more than ten thousand, accepting the provisions of this act shall, after the first day of July in the year nineteen hundred and ten, provide and maintain at least one public playground conveniently located and of suitable size and equipment, for the recreation and physical education of the minors of such city or towns, and at least one other playground for every additional twenty thousand of its population.

SECTION 2. Cities and towns may appoint, and determine the compensation of, a qualified supervisor of each playground, who shall direct the sports and exercises thereon.

SECTION 3. In cities and towns where the provisions of this act are not already satisfied, land for the purpose aforesaid may be taken, and the money necessary to pay for such land may be raised in accordance with sections nineteen, twenty and twenty-one of chapter twenty-eight of the Revised Laws; and any land owned by the city and town may be set aside by vote of the city council, or of the board of selectmen, for the purpose of this act,

SECTION 4. In cities and towns which have a population of more than ten thousand, and which have not already satisfied the provisions of this act, the following question shall be placed on the official ballot at the next city or town election:—Shall chapter 513, of the acts of the year nineteen hundred and eight, requiring certain cities and towns to provide public playgrounds, be accepted by this (city or town?)

SECTION 5. This act shall take effect in any city or town to which it applies upon its acceptance by a majority of the voters voting as aforesaid. (Approved May 12, 1908.)

Fore Rivers Play Tie Game

The Fore River soccer team can't seem to win a game, the best they can get being tie games. A week ago they played a draw with the Fall River Rovers, and Saturday another with the Howard and Bullough team of Pawtucket. The score was 1-1, and this shows how very close the contest was.

These two teams always play even, close scores being the result of nearly every game. However, although the play is close and exciting, no fights mar any of the contests. This is one good feature, for in the Fore River-Rovers games, there is always a fight. Fore River still remains at the foot of the league and probably will finish there, as Saturday's game was the last home game. The season closes next Saturday, when the local team plays Howard and Bullough at Pawtucket. The summary:

FORE RIVER	HOWARD & BULLOUGH
Malcolm g	g Titmes
Temple rb	lb G. McAllister
Melville lb	rb W. O'Toole
McDonnell rh	lh Pendleton
Holiday ch	ch Robinson
Eliot lh	rh Brown
Ritchie rof	lof J. McAllister
D. McDonald rif	lif Blakeley
McGregor cf	cf Dennison
J. McDonald lif	rif W. Pemberton
Carruthers lof	rof E. Penberton

Score—Fore River, 1; Howard & Bullough, 1. Goals—Carruthers, E. Pemberton. Referee—Gore of New Bedford. Linesmen, Frazer for Fore River; Arnold for Howard & Bullough. Time—45 m. halves.

DUPLICATE WHIST.

The Wollaston Whist club held its weekly tournament Saturday evening with R. T. Anthony of South Central avenue. The score was:

SUIT FOR $40,000.

Suit for $40,000 damages, John Jellow plaintiff, and the Fore River Shipbuilding Company defendant, was begun in the Norfolk Superior Civil Court at Dedham last week. Jellow seeks to recover for injuries sustained by him while working in the defendant company's yard on Oct. 31, 1905. He alleges that the loss of one eye at that time and injury to the other was due both to his having furnished unsuitable tools and to the incapacity of fellow workmen. He was engaged in cutting armor with a cape chisel when injured.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

SPILLS AT THE FINISH

Five Bicycle Racers Tie at 1320 Miles and a Lap In Hub Race

Boston, Nov. 23.—Never before in the history of bicycle racing in this city has there been such a sensational finish as that witnessed Saturday night at the Park Square Coliseum, when six teams of a field of ten fell during the final sprint and left the saucer track, bruised and bleeding. Five riders finished, McKay of the McKay-Drobeck team, who was among those who fell, taking to his wheel again and finishing.

When the five riders crossed the line Iver Lawson of the Lawson-Anders team was ahead, with Mitten, Logan's teammate, second; Carlo Vanoni of the Vanoni-Williams team was third, Eddie Root of the Root-Collins team fourth and McKay fifth. They were all tied at 1320 miles and 1 lap.

The race was one of the most interesting contests of this character ever seen in Boston. Records were broken in the first mile of the race, and the remarkable speed was continued throughout. With the exception of Saturday night's spills, the race has been notable for its small number of accidents.

ONCE RICH WOMAN DIES AMID SQUALOR

Mrs. Morrell Established an Academy of Fine Arts

Washington, Nov. 23.—Mrs. Imogene R. Morrell, a celebrated portrait and historical painter, died in the small room of a lodging house, alone and friendless, and amid surroundings of squalor and distress. A half century ago she was a student under some of the world's masters in Europe. In 1879 she established the National Academy of Fine Arts in this city. She had received scores of medals for notable works.

Mrs. Morrell enjoyed the distinction of being the only woman whose painting occupies a place in the United States Capitol, she having painted the notable picture of General John A. Dix.

More than 200 works of her brush were destroyed in a disastrous fire twelve years ago. She was a native of Attleboro, Mass.

Crimson Downs the Blue

New Haven, Nov. 23.—A crimson tide of banners swept in triumph over Yale field in the dying light of Saturday afternoon, for the men of Harvard, after seven long years, had beaten Yale 4 to 0. A goal from the field kicked by Victor P. Kennard, fresh from the side lines, and standing on Yale's 28-yard line with the Crimson line planted on the 15-yard line, was the deciding point just as the first half was closing. The game was a battle of football giants, the like of which has not been seen on Yale field.

Family In Auto Smashup

Pawtucket, R. I., Nov. 23.—Mrs. Marshall Raymond is dying in this city, her husband is perhaps fatally injured and their two sons, Edward and Frank, are badly cut and bruised as a result of an automobile accident on the road between North Attleboro and Pawtucket. Raymond's automobile ran into the rear of a carriage driven by Joseph Bergeron. The carriage was smashed to kindlings, but Bergeron landed in bushes without suffering serious injuries. The horse was badly cut up.

Democratic Campaign Fund

Chicago, Nov. 23.—The Democratic national committee received in all $620,644.77 and spent $619,410.06 during the recent presidential campaign, leaving a balance in hand of $1234.71. So reads a statement made public by the officers of the committee, and the itemized statement will be filed for record in the office of the secretary of state of New York in compliance with a resolution adopted by the national committee last July.

Navy Yard Recommendations

Washington, Nov. 23.—Rear Admiral Hollyday, chief of the bureau of yards and docks of the United States navy, makes a strong plea for more extensive improvements at insular stations and for a higher standard in the maintenance of home navy yards, in his annual report to the secretary of the navy. No extensive improvements, he says, have been made during the last year at the insular stations.

Counterfeit Silver Certificates

Washington, Nov. 23.—Chief Wilkie of the secret service announces that a new counterfeit $5 silver certificate (Indian head) has been detected in circulation. It purports to be one of those authorized by the act of Aug. 4, 1886, series of 1899, check letter D, face plate number 2, back plate number 666, with portrait of Onepapa. The officials declare it is a dangerous photomechanical production.

Something New In Airships

Turin, Nov. 23.—Two brothers named Gemma, living at Novara, have invented an aeroplane which, from its shape, they call an aerocurve. They claim that it is capable of making a flight of sixty miles an hour and can ascend to a height of 2000 feet.

Government Will Do the Job

Washington, Nov. 23.—All the bids for the building of the machinery of the battleship Florida have been rejected by Assistant Secretary Newberry of the navy and the machinery will be built by the government in the Brooklyn navy yard.

Plays at Conservatory Recital

Miss Margaret Carruthers, one of the Quincy girls who are taking work at the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston, made a public appearance last Saturday afternoon at one of the recitals which are given each week as exercises in performing under actual concert conditions. She took the piano part in a spirited interpretation of the prelude for pianoforte, violin and violoncello by Horatio Parker, her associates being Maurice Warner of New York City, and Mildred Ridley of Chelsea. These weekly recitals at the Conservatory are drawing large audiences not only of music students but of other people from Boston and the suburbs who are interested in hearing competent performances of the best classical and modern music.

GOVERNNORS' CONFERENCE.

Eleven Governors and Governors-elect of New England states yesterday joined Gov. Guild of Massachusetts at the Tremont theatre in a conference the first of its kind ever held in this state, to promote uniformity of laws, especially those relating to forestry, fisheries and highways and for the development of natural resources.

Gov. Guild has long been interested in the proposition to pass uniform laws throughout New England for the conservation of her natural resources, and he has interested the officials of neighboring states to such an extent that today's conference was decided upon.

The gathering included the Governors and Governors-elect, all the United States Senators excepting Senators Lodge and Crane, who were unavoidably absent, the congressmen and the majority of the men in each state who have attained prominence in work of conservation.

NEW CHARTER FOR QUINCY

Organizations Asked to Meet With Citizens' Association

An important meeting of the Citizens' Association has been called for next Monday evening. The subject for discussion at the meeting is on the advisability of changing the City Charter.

Some weeks ago a special committee of the association reported two drafts of the proposed new charter for Quincy. These were discussed informally at the meeting but no definite action was taken on account of the small atendance.

Realizing the importance of the subject and the desire to get more formal expression of the citizens as to the advisability of amending the charter action was postponed until a future meeting.

Invitations have been sent to all the clubs and associations of the city, inviting them to send a committee to the meeting next Monday evening.

The response to these invitations will probably serve to get an expression of public sentiment on the subject.

Early in the year the matter was called to the attention of the City Council and a special committee was appointed to consider the subject. The committee advertised and held a public haring some weeks later in th Council Chamber.

The hearing was attended by less than a dozen citizens not one of whom desired to be heard. Then the Citizens' Association took up the matter but up to the present time have met with but little more success than did the Council Committee.

Foot Ball And Other Sports

One of the biggest surprises of the season was the easy manner in which Waltham took the Everett team into camp on Saturday. Waltham was expected to win but that she would roll up a 21-0 score was more than the most sanguine rooters expected. This only goes to show the extreme uncertainty of the great game of football.

Now for basket ball. The High school had one of the best teams around Boston last season and there are very good prospects for a successful five this year. Practice will begin in another week and the first game is scheduled for the latter part of December.

Of last year's team there are several regulars left who will be trying for their old positions. These are Hawe, Marsh, Gourlie and Marden, who will form a strong aucleus for a winning team. A large squad is expected to report at the first call for candidates.

Cross-country running will be one of the features in the athletic line at the High school this year. The boys are already out and under the tutelage of Mr. Hermann, the physical instructor, are making excellent progress. This is a sport that is not fostered as much as should be about Boston, New York and other places being far ahead of us in this branch.

The football fans of Quincy and Braintree will have a chance to see a hot game Thanksgiving day when the Dublin Stars of Quincy face the Royals of Braintree on French's common at 10 A. M. Intense rivalry exists between these two teams and both are out to win. The local team was beaten in baseball by the Royals and so the latter will have to work hard to win.

REELECTED VICE PRESIDENT.

At the annual meeting of the American Federation of Labor at Denver, Col., Saturday, James Duncan of Quincy, Secretary-Treasurer of the Granite Cutters union was reelected vice president of that body. Samuel Gompers, about whom there has been discussion on account of his advocating the election of William J. Bryan at the recent national election, was reelected president with practically no opposition.

TO SPEAK AT HOUGHS NECK.

Mayor Shea and Eugene R. Stone, the two candidates for Mayor are making a fight for the 135 votes registered from Houghs Neck. Mr. Stone speaks at a smoke talk in that section Friday night and Mayor Shea Saturday night.

—The liberals of Spain have outlined their policy in favor of state education and liberty of conscience. They also wish to determine the functions of the state as opposed to those of the church.

New Catholic Association

There is a a movement on foot in Quincy to form, among the Catholic men of the city, an association to further social and athletic interest among the Catholics of Quincy and surrounding towns. It is the intention of those who are behind the movement to have suitable clubrooms and a gymnasium, so that all will become interested.

The new club will be practically a Holy Name club such as the Newport Holy Name society, South Boston and others, and will be open to any Catholic man in the city, who is deemed worthy. It will be somewhat similar to the Young Men's Catholic Association of Boston and other cities, where there are spacious clubhouses with bowling alleys, billard rooms and gymnasium.

Mayor William T. Shea, as ever is ready to give his moral and financial support to anything that will further the interests of the city in any way, is heartily in favor of the new plan. John W. McAnarney, the city solicitor, is also taking a keen interest in the matter, and with such men behind it, the association should be a reality in the near future.

This is a matter in which every Catholic man in Quincy should be interested. The young men of Quincy have no association of their own and it is a very lamentable state of affairs. In a city the size of Quincy, there should be a representative Catholic society and now that a movement has been started in favor of an association, every Catholic should be heart and soul in the matter.

CALEB CHASE.

Caleb Chase senior member of the firm of Chase & Sanborn of Boston passed away on Monday at his home Corey hill, Brookline, after an illness of several months. His widow is a half sister of Mrs. James H. Stetson of this city and well known to many Quincy people.

Mr. Chase was a charitable and public spirited man. He always took an active interest in his native town Harwich on the Cape where he had a beautiful summer home. At his personal expense he improved Herring river. He contributed largely to the betterment of the roads in the town, gave to West Harwich its library building and another building for a town hall. He gave liberally to his own Baptist Church in West Harwich and to the other churches in the town, irrespective of denomination. To the Brookline schools he gave a fund for the purpose of placing in the schoolrooms copies of some of the world's best sculpture.

One notable gift was that to the Boston Salvation Army of $15,000 for its People's Palace, the main hall of which is named in his honor, "Caleb Chase Hall." Mr. Chase's private charity was widespread, and it was said of him that he could never resist the appeal of misery or distress. It is certain that there are many who will remember his generosity and personal sympathy in times of adversity.

Word has just been received in Quincy that John P. Smoots of 1433 Hancock street, accidently shot the guide of a hunting party of which he was a member. The authorities of Lancaster N. H. where the accident occurred, will take no action, as they consider Mr. Smoot entirely blameless.

Makes Plain His Position

Editors Quincy Ledger:

Gentlemen:—Permit me through the columns of your valuable paper to make public my position regarding the Mayoralty contest.

During the past few weeks numerous friends and voters have asked me to state the reasons why I so earnestly canvassed and worked for Mr. Shea last year, and as earnestly worked against him this present year. Deeming the request pertinent and following out my usual custom of expressing myself in matters of this kind. I deem it not only a privilege but my duty to state some facts.

Last year many Republicans and Independents believed that considerable "dead-wood" in the administration then in power should be set adrift. While there was no particular objection to Mr. Piper as a man, as he is eminently qualified, they felt that the necessary changes could best be made by a Democrat. As I had only a slight acquaintance with Mr. Shea I was guided largely by his friends who professed to have known him for a long period of time. This together with the assurance given by Mr. Shea of a fair and impartial business administration led me to do all that I could for his election.

Now it is one year later. The matter of suppressing the unmuffled boat nuisance has occupied much of my attention during this past summer. This has brought me in contact with his Honor upon numerous occasions, and the results have been unsatisfactory, so much so, that I am quite as earnest in doing what I can towards the election of Mr. Stone. I wish to state in explanation to this that I am no "sore head" as I have neither asked for favors or desired public office. Mr. Shea as a man may be all right socially, but in the administration of public affairs I cannot say so much for him. unless it be that a genial smile and frequent shakes of the hand can be construed as essential to a business administration.

When Mr. Shea was elected he laid special stress upon the fact that he would fairly and impartially administer the affairs of the City and that his administration would be a credit to himself and to the whole City. That statement proved true to a certain extent, as he has fulfilled his promise to the credit of the City of Quincy, but that "credit" has been unwillingly endorsed by the taxpayers. If Mr. Shea is re-elected we may expect the continuance of the boom, that is, in so far as increased valuations and higher rates are concerned. All voters who are in favor of these conditions are respectfully invited to vote for Mr. Shea. But being one of those who do not look at matters through the same pair of glasses which Mr. Shea and his friends do, I desire to be counted as a voter for Mr. Stone.

At the present time Mr. Shea is very desirous of being re-elected as an endorsement to his previous administration and makes claim that those who voted for him last year will do so again this year. "Perhaps." Last year the solid vote of Houghs Neck was given to Mr. Shea, but the motor boat nuisance which Mr. Shea as chief executive failed to suppress, has not materially helped him to get "all" the votes of Houghs Neck this year, notwithstanding his lieutenants claim to "deliver the goods." There is also a considerable number of residents of Quincy Point and other sections of Quincy on the shores who have not forgotten the suffering endured by his neglect to suppress the motor boat nuisance as required by the Board of Health.

While the voters do not care particularly who the Commissioner of Public Works is they want a man who is competent, so that it will not be necessary to have two men to do the work which has in the past been done by one man.

Most all the regular street appropriations were used in hostile sections, where Mr. Shea got the least number of votes. No doubt the object was to fortify himself and make his re-election certain. But how about the districts that supported him?

Mr. Shea should explain why he has not suppressed the unmuffled beat nuisance without throwing it at the Police or Board of Health. He had the remedy; why did he not apply it?

THE BINNIAN MANSION.

Weymouth is to have a Mt. Vernon in the spring an exact reproduction of the home of George Washington in Virginia. This is to be the home of William H. Binnian, who for the past four years has lived in Quincy, coming here from Peoria, Ill. The house which is now building is located on King Oak Hill, from where a view of the surrounding country for miles around can be had.

Mr. Binnian has travelled the world over, and has picked this spot out as the best and most diversified of all. He has chosen to build a house of the Mt. Vernon style because of the high type of colonial architecture. The house will be of wooden construction and will be almost an exact counterpiece of Washington's home. Of course the interior will be thoroughly modern and up-to-date in every way. Mr. Binnian spends a large part of his time at the house now, being keenly interested in its construction.

Installation And Banquet

The newly elected officers of Rural lodge A. F. and A. M. were publicly installed Monday evening. The ceremony was witnessed by a large gathering of brothers and their ladies. The installing officer was Wor. D. D. G. M. Herbert F. French with Wor. Frank C. Granger as marshal.

During the installation ceremonies music was furnished by the Webber quartette and at its conclusion a banquet was served.

The officers installed were:
W. M., Charles Sampson.
S. W., Arthur M. Parker
J. W., Frank A. Reed.
Secretary, Walter E. Simmons.
Treasurer, Alexander Falconer.
S. D., H. Everett Crane.
J. D., Fred E. Tupper.
Chaplain, Rev. A. K. Atwood.
Marshal, Horace E. Spear.

SPECIAL WORK ON THE WAY.

The street railway company received word this morning that the special work, for the curve track that is to connect its line on Quincy avenue with the tracks of the Fore River Ship Building Co, was shipped from Pennsylvania Saturday and should reach Quincy not later than tonight.

They have a gang of workmen all ready to commence work building the location and there is but little doubt but what it will all be completed and in operation before the end of the present week.

MEETING FOR MR. STONE.

A meeting of the voters of Ward One which crowded the rooms of the Republican City Committee was held last evening in furtherance of the interests of Eugene R. Stone, the Republican candidate for Mayor. An outline of his service in the City Council and his work on various committees there was given by Mr. Stone and this was followed by his views on municipal problems especially on assessments and taxations which were listened to with approval.

After this the meeting resolved itself into a committee to work and bring about the election of Mr. Stone.

RIGHT ARM FRACTURED.

The danger of trying to board a street car while it is in motion was again illustrated Monday afternoon when Fred Hutchingson, aged 11 years of Island avenue had his right arm fractured. The car had just left Houghs Neck when the Hutchingson boy tried to get aboard.

He caught the step handle with his right hand but missed the opposite handle. The result was that he was thrown against the car and his right arm fractured.

FOUR MILES UNDERGROUND

Boston's Great Railroad Tunnel System Is Completed

OFFICIAL TRIP OF INSPECTION

Addition to Subway Considered a Masterpiece of Engineering--Cost Exceeded $10,000,000--Facilitates Travel In the Heart of the City--Great Accommodations at the Stations--Scarce y a Bit of Wood Used

Boston, Nov. 24.—The Washington street tunnel, which has been under construction for a trifle more than four years, was formally opened when two trains, bearing invited guests of the Boston transit commission and the Boston Elevated Railway company, traversed the entire length of the new bore. The tunnel will not be opened for public travel, however, for another fortnight or more.

The trip was in the nature of an official inspection, and the thousand persons who were the guests of the transit commission and the railway company appeared greatly and favorably impressed with the new tunnel, which is considered a masterpiece of engineering.

The first train through the tunnel consisted of eight cars, the kind of train that will be operated when the tube is opened to public travel. As in the case of the trains which are now operated through the Tremont street subway and which are to be transferred to the new tunnel, motive force is supplied through the "third rail."

The Washington street tunnel was built by the Boston transit commission and has been leased to the Boston Elevated Railway company for twenty-five years. Its cost, including approaches and equipment, exceeded $10,000,000.

The opening of the new tunnel will give Boston a total underground railroad system of approximately four miles. The Tremont street subway, which was the first of its kind to be built in this country, is one mile and a quarter long; the East Boston tunnel, running under the harbor, is one and a half miles long, while the new tunnel is 5676 feet from portal to portal, making a total distance of 20,196 feet, or nearly four miles.

The new tunnel provides a two-track system throughout its entire length, with five stations for northbound and five for southbound trains. Each station has a platform 350 feet long, capable of accommodating eight-car trains.

The stations are in the very heart of the shopping, theatre and hotel districts. There are no doors at any of the entrances or exits of the tunnel, all being left open for the free passage of air, being closed when not in use only by grillwork. The entrance lobbies are of hammered granite composition and the interior of the tunnel for the most part is of white glazed tile. Mosaic lettering designates the name of the station and indicates the various stations of the tunnel in both directions.

Each station is supplied with a parcel room, telephone booths, news stand and clock, while a limited space is reserved for advertisements. The lighting is by incandescent lamps arranged in the hollows of arch ceilings, so as to be but little seen. Three sources of supply prevent the plunging of stations into darkness through unavoidable accidents, and to keep the tunnel free from water two powerful pumps are installed which act automatically. Four fan chambers, situated along the length of the tunnel, will exhaust the foul air through ducts in the ceiling, fresh air entering at the stations.

Except for the hand rails at the entrances, there is scarcely a bit of wood throughout the tunnel, doors, ticket offices, telephone booths and package rooms being of sheet bronze, while the closets, stands and seats are of concrete.

The tunnel connects with the East Boston tunnel at State street and here, as at one or two other points, escalators facilitate the transfer of passengers between the different levels.

To Correct Banking Evils

Washington, Nov. 24.—General revision of the American financial system cannot be hoped for at the coming session of congress, but the members of the national monetary commission expect that a law will be passed correcting some of the evils of the administrative features of banking. These probabilities were evident when the commission held its first meeting, preliminary to making its report.

Innocent Man Killed by Posse

Jackson, Miss., Nov. 24.—Will Anderson, suspected of being Will Mack, a negro who criminally assaulted Miss Meyers, a 16-year-old white girl, at Pelahatchie, was shot to death by a sheriff's posse near Brandon. The negro refused to halt when the command was given to surrender. Governor Noel has offered a reward of $500 for the capture of Mack.

Plentiful Supply of Turkeys

Boston, Nov. 24.—Thirty-seven thousand turkeys arrived here on a New York Central freight train from Cincinnati last evening. The shipment was the largest of the kind ever sent to this city. The train consisted of twenty-six cars.

SUPREMACY ON THE OCEAN

Roberts Tells Lords That England May Soon Lose It

PLEA FOR STRONGER ARMY

Invasion of British Isles Could Be Accomplished by Germany With Comparative Ease, Compelling Submission to Most Humiliating Conditions--Speech of Field Marshall Likely to Stir Europe

London, Nov. 24.—Speaking in the house of lords last night, Field Marshal Lord Roberts expressed the conviction that the lack of a military force sufficient to make hopeless the attempt of an invasion would, in all probability, be the cause of the loss of Great Britain's supremacy at sea.

In a studied speech he pointed out the comparative ease with which Germany could land an army on the shores of England. Under the present conditions England would be forced, he said, to submit to most humiliating demands. He disclaimed all hostility to or fear of Germany, but he declared that the defense of the islands required immediate attenton. There should be an army so strong in numbers and efficient in quality that the most formidable of foreign nations would hesitate to make a landing in England.

He had ascertained, the speaker continued, that vessels capable of accommodating 200,000 men were always available in the northern ports of Germany and that, as a result of the new German service law, 200,000 men could be collected in the districts of the nearest port without any trouble. The great German steamship lines were in constant practice in embarking and disembarking and as the railroads were owned by the state, all preliminaries, up to the dispatch of troops, could be carried out with the utmost secrecy.

"It would be folly," declared Roberts, "to shut our eyes to these possibilities, however much peace is desired. The startling events in the Near East have brought home to the most careless observer that nothing could save that country which is not prepared to protect itself. If Great Britain continues to neglect the most ordinary precautions she may some day find herself in the hands of the invader and forced to submit to the most humiliating conditions.

"Ths danger is daily becoming more threatening. Within a decade Germany has created the greatest sea power that ever existed, except Great Britain's, and at the present moment it is formidable. Measures are being taken to increase that power. It is calculated that there are 80,000 Germans in employment in Great Britain. They are trained soldiers and if a German force once landed on these shores they would be ready to help."

Lord Roberts contended that it was not absolutely essential for a nation to command the sea in order to carry out an invasion. A temporary local command would suffice, and this was perfectly understood in Germany. The main temptation to the invasion of Great Britain was the want of a home army which ought to consist of a million men. Across the narrow sea were sixty million Germans, who, by perseverance, industry, sound education and military training, had made themselves a great nation. They required outlets for their commerce and population.

Lord Roberts' speech caused a sensation in the house. The Earl of Crewe remarked on the seriousness of such statements in the present high-strung condition of Europe's nerves, saying he feared there might be regrettable consequences.

Lord Roberts' resolution to the effect that "the defense of the islands necessitates the immediate attention of the government to make provision for such a strong and efficient army that the most formidable foreign nation will hesitate before making an attempt at landing" was adopted by a vote of 74 to 32.

Fighting Cattle Disease

Philadelphia, Nov. 24.—The authorities yesterday destroyed a number of cows and sheep which had been in contact with animals found suffering from the foot and mouth disease. It is stated that new cases have been discovered in Dauphin, Potter and Northumberland counties. It is also reported that the disease has made its appearance among hogs.

Wool Merchant Arrested

Boston, Nov. 24.—The fourth arrest in connection with the alleged wholesale larceny of wool from the plant of the American Woolen company at Lawrence was made last night when Henry Garrity was taken into custody. Garrity is a wool merchant with an office on Atlantic avenue. The charge of larceny against Garrity is in nine counts.

Alleged Anarchist Arrested

Fall River, Mass., Nov. 24.—Charged with being an anarchist, Raphael Marinelli, a clerk in a local department store, was arrested by federal officers and taken to Boston. Marinelli has been delivering occasional addresses and it is claimed that some of his remarks have been of an incendiary nature. He is an Italian and is 22 years of age.

CONVINCING FACTS.

There is no use denying the fact that Johnson Bros., are surely giving genuine bargains in food values. It will be hard indeed to find a store that is giving such excellent quality at such low prices.

Everything the best that money can buy, is their standard; and their customers know from past dealings that that is absolutely true. Now with our discount system, it is still more of an inducement to trade with us, and you will be surprised to find how fast your discount checks will count up.

We are displaying every day a choice assortment of Cut Meats, with the prices marked in plain figures, so that every one can see what they are paying for or we will cut it to your order, whichever you prefer.

We are pleased that so many of our customers have helped us to make this system a success, for it means a whole lot to them as well as to us. We do not think that any one objects to carrying home a purchase especially when they are paid to do so, which we are doing, with our discount check system.

We are receiving new seasonable goods every day, and it will be to your interest to visit our store and do business with us.

Beef, Lamb and Fresh Pork are all lower and we have a choice lot of Fresh Killed Chicken and Fowl constantly on hand, direct from William A. Drake of Braintree.

A tempting line of New Canned Goods, packed expressly for us.

An excellent stock of New Cereals, Buckwheat, Pan Cake Flour, and all the leading brands of Bread and Pastry Flour.

All kinds of Bottled Goods, Jellies, Jams, Olives and Pickles.

Fresh Hot House Lettuce, Choice Celery, Radishes, Cucumbers, and Fruits of all kinds.

Remember, that every day is BARGAIN day at Johnson Bros., so keep in the road, for all roads lead to our store.

And, remember that we give you 5 per cent discount on all cash purchases, if you take the purchase home, or 2 per cent discount when you ask us to deliver it.

Yours for Quality,

La France
SHOE for WOMEN

You naturally want a shoe that is not only a source of the highest admiration when you see it in the store and try it on, but one that you can wear a long time and still be proud of.

La France shoes fulfill this requirement as no other shoes can. They fit comfortably and look well because they are glove-like in construction—that is to say, the inside of the shoes is so made as to present no rough edges or ridges to hurt the feet and make the outside of the shoes irregular and unattractive.

This is a very important point and one which, combined with the beautiful materials and dainty, shapely lines found in this shoe, produce a result of which any woman in the land may be proud. ¶Won't you come in and see for yourself the first time you have a chance?

If the very top notch of comfort is any object to you, ask to see the La France Flexible Welt shoe—a shoe with a leather sole so elastic that it yields instantly to pressure, giving a really remarkable degree of elasticity and comfort to the foot.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

"Tea's ready, good people, if you're ready for it," announced Mrs. Trowbridge's gentle voice at the door.

Mr. Trowbridge and Mr. Brett got up and I did, too disappointed that we weren't to have it out of doors, but still, I reminded myself, the sitting room would be nice and cool. But I found that we were being led through to the dining room.

There was the long table laid out again, with a regular sit down meal—cream cheese and cake and blackberries and a big plate of honey, some curious kind of smoked meat cut very thin and the potatoes which I'd smelled frying.

"What an odd tea!" I thought. But the oddest part was that after all there wasn't any tea.

It wasn't much past 6 when we finished, and soon Mr. Brett asked me how I would like to walk over to Mrs. Randal's and see my friend Miss Woodburn, since she couldn't come to me. The place was less than a mile away by short cuts which he knew, and he would take me there.

The shadows were beginning to grow long and thin when we started, though the sun was still bright, so I carried a sunshade, and went hatless, American fashion.

To avoid going out in the road we took field paths and skirted along the edge of meadows where grain was tall and golden or white as a summer snowstorm. There were no proper stiles, as with us, so whenever we came to one of the rough fences which divided one field from another I had to mount on the first or second bar and let Mr. Brett lift me over.

He is so strong that he did it as if I were a bundle of down, instead of a tall girl, and I had much the same exhilarating sensation I used to have as a wee thing when I rode wildly on Mohunsleigh's foot. I was glad when we came to the fences, and that there were a good many of them. But I wasn't at all glad when Mr. Brett jumped me over into a grass meadow, where there was a whole drove of ferocious looking black and white cattle.

"Couldn't we go some other way around?" I asked, longing to get behind him, but ashamed for him to see what an idiot I am about cows, and perhaps make him lose his good opinion of me as a reasonably brave girl.

"I'm afraid not, unless we turn back," said he. "But you needn't mind them. Remember you're with an old 'cow puncher.'"

"Oh, were you one, too?" I asked trying to seem at ease.

"Too?"

"I was thinking of a friend of my cousin Mohunsleigh's, whom he was always talking about, a Mr. Harborough, who lives in San Francisco. Mohunsleigh knew him abroad somewhere. He used to be a 'cow puncher'—whatever that is—in Texas, I believe, though now he's a millionaire. Did you ever hear of him?"

"Yes," said Mr. Brett in rather a dry way.

"I was so disappointed not to meet him."

(As we walked on, I kept my eyes on the horrible animals who were grazing at some distance.)

"Why?" he asked the question almost sharply.

"Because my cousin says he's such a glorious person."

"Well gilded, anyhow."

"Oh, I don't mean on that account. I'm rather blase of millionaires lately. But from Mohunsleigh's accounts he must be—well, the sort of a man we like."

"We?"

"Girls. Brave and adventurous, and reckless, and that sort of thing."

"I'm afraid his millions are more of an attraction to most girls."

"Why, you're as bad as he!" I exclaimed.

"In what way?"

"Unjust, and—almost morbid. I wouldn't have thought you would be like that, though perhaps one can't blame him so much if he's had bad experiences. I am sorry for him. It must be miserable to fancy always that people care for you for your money."

"I'm sorry for him too. At least, I used to be—whenever I thought of him."

"Aren't you now?"

"No. I believe he's a changed man. He's found that there are exceptions to the gloomy rule he'd laid down for humanity."

"Oh, then he's happier."

"So far as I understand the case, he isn't exactly happy yet. He isn't out of the woods. In fact, he's in the thickest part. But he sees blue sky and the sun shining overhead."

"What do you mean?"

"A fellow who knows him very well told me that Harborough had fallen in love with a beautiful girl who was so unworldly that she might be induced to marry for love—if she cared."

"Then why isn't he happy?"

"Because he doesn't know whether she can ever care for him—except as a friend. He's sure she likes him pretty well, but there's nothing in that. I'm mighty ignorant about such things myself, but they say if a girl doesn't mind showing that she's your friend and values you in a way it's a sign she's a thousand miles off from falling in love with you. What's your opinion on the subject, as you seem to be rather interested in Harborough?"

"My goodness, Mr. Brett, there's a cow looking at us. Oh, what shall we do? It's the worst cow of all. It's putting its head down now. It doesn't like us. Oh, what an appalling beast I believe it must be a bull."

"It's a very young one," said he calmly. "Now, don't be frightened. This is going to be nothing at all."

"Are you sure?"

"Can't you trust me?"

"Yes. I know you won't let me be hurt. But you"—

"Don't worry. Perhaps we shall have a little fun. Just wait."

The cows were delighted. Evidently they regarded the horrid, thick necked brute as their champion. They didn't follow him toward us, but lifted their heads and stared complacently, as much as to say: "Isn't he a splendid fellow? Now he's going to give them what they deserve."

The rest happened so quickly it was all in a jumble. With a smile, Mr. Brett reached out and took my sunshade, which I'd closed. Just as the bull came at us he opened it in the creature's face. The bull swerved a few inches, surprised, and the next thing I knew the sunshade was tossed away, Mr. Brett had seized the animal by his horns and was vaulting on his back with a laugh. "Run to the nearest fence," said he.

He did it as easily as if it were play, and so it seemed to be for him. The bull tore about, ramping and raving, while I obediently flew for the fence and scrambled over without ceremony. There I turned, panting, frightened, yet laughing in spite of myself. Mr. Brett's hat had fallen off, and his short hair was ruffled across his forehead. Riding the black and white bull, hanging on by legs as well as arms, he looked like a runaway schoolboy reveling in a mischievous lark. His eyes sparkled, and his white teeth shone.

The bull was sure he could throw his rider at first, but finding he couldn't was very much surprised. His wild gallop subsided to a trot, and, embracing his great neck, Mr. Brett bent far down to one side to snatch up my sunshade, which lay on the grass, open and undamaged. A few moments later he had steered the bull in some curious way with his feet, so that the beast came loping stupidly near the fence. Then Mr. Brett jumped off and vaulted over.

"That was a good bit of sport," said he. "It reminds me of old times, when we chaps used to ride steers for a wager. I'm a little out of practice now, but I hope you were amused."

"I was much too terrified," I said, thankful that he was on the right side of the fence at last.

"Then I apologize for the exhibition. The silly brute didn't know he was our bull, you see, but I reckon he'll remember now and act accordingly."

ROCKEFELLER REJECTS GLORY

Says Flagler and Dodd Were Originators of the Oil Trust

ARDUOUS DAY ON THE STAND

Witness' Memory Not Always Clear on Details of Liquidation Period—Railroad Men Were Stockholders In Oil Corporation—Lawyers Opposed to Standard Company See Plans For Immunity Bath

New York, Nov. 24.—Credit for the creation of the Standard Oil trust, which counsel for the federal government insist still exists as the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, was given by John D. Rockefeller, in testifying in the federal suit to dissolve the Standard, to two men—Henry M. Flagler and Samuel C. T. Todd. To these two authors of the oil combine Rockefeller gave full credit, saying that he was sure it was not himself, because he did not possess the ability for so progressive an act.

Mr. Rockefeller spent an arduous day on the stand under constant questioning by Frank B. Kellogg, the government counsel. Kellogg, who, with other government investigators, has been endeavoring for over a year to obtain the missing stock transfer books of the Standard Oil trust, sought, through Rockefeller, to trace these books, and Rockefeller promised to do what he could to find them.

Mr. Rockefeller's examination yesterday carried him through the period of the Standard Oil trust and the years of its subsequent liquidation, which lasted from 1892 to 1899. Rockefeller's memory was not always clear on the details of the trust liquidation period, and he told counsel that he could not recall many of the incidents of that time.

During the day Kellogg learned from Rockefeller that early in the history of the Standard the presidents of two railroad companies and several railroad directors were stockholders in the oil combination.

When subpoenas were served a few days ago on John D. Rockefeller, William Rockefeller and John D. Archbold, the lawyers who are prosecuting the government's case against the Standard Oil company of New Jersey wondered what the real significance of that move was. Now they know.

The significance, so far as John D Rockefeller was concerned, was explained on Friday, for on that day, during the cross-examination of Rockefeller by Kellogg, the immunity idea was suggested by John G. Milburn of counsel for the Standard Oil company.

Since then the lawyers who are opposed to the Standard have come to the conclusion that William Rockefeller and John D. Archbold were served with subpoenas so as to open the way for immunity for them. Lawyers who have taken an interest in the case say it is likely that Kellogg will not depart from the method of cross-examination he adopted on Friday, when he led Rockefeller over new ground, which had been carefully avoided in his direct examination. They think that Kellogg knew very well what questions would be brought to issue should he depart from the beaten track of usual cross-examination. They say he was prepared for the objection that Milburn made when the new territory was reached and Milburn announced that Rockefeller was no longer a witness for the defense, but was a witness for the government.

The Standard Oil company lawyers will not discuss the immunity phase of the case. The only expression made was that by Milburn, when he was asked if his turning Rockefeller over to the government was not a direct effort to save him from criminal prosecution by the immunity bath. "You have hit the nail on the head," said Milburn. "That is right. We have done that."

From other sources it is learned that Rockefeller was called to the witness stand for no other reason than to pave the way for an immunity fight. Those who are closely identified with the case say it is likely that Archbold, who will follow Rockefeller to the witness stand, will take up the history of Standard Oil where Rockefeller left off and carry it from 1879 down to date. William Rockefeller, who is expected to follow Archbold on the stand, may help out on some of the recent history.

After adjournment last night Rockefeller told an inquiring audience of reporters that there were better things in the world than making money, and since 1891 he had been gradually retiring from business. He added: "There is more important work than making money and there is much for me to do. I belong to the brotherhood of man."

A list of all candidates to be voted for at the City election next Tuesday is printed in today's Ledger by the City Clerk. A voter in Wards One, Two, Three and Five to vote the complete ticket must make his cross twelve times. In Wards Four and Six, thirteen crosses will be necessary, as these two wards vote for a member of the School Committee from the ward.

But two names appear on the ballot for Mayor, namely William T. Shea and Eugene R. Stone. There are six candidates for Councilmen at large, five Republicans and one Democrat. Five are to be elected. There are also two names for School Committee at large for three years, one to be elected.

Ward One has four candidates for Councilmen, three Republican and one Democrat; Ward Two, seven names, three Republican, three Democrat and one Republican Independent; Ward Three, three Republican and two Democrat; Ward Four, three Republican and three Democrat, one of the Republican candidates also bears the word "Citizen." In Ward Five the Republicans will have a walkover as there are no Democratic candidates. In Ward Six there are three Republican and one Democrat. One of the Republicans also has the Democratic endorsement.

NEW CITY EDITOR.

After several years' service in the office of the Quincy Daily Ledger Frank F. Prescott, on Nov. 14th, resigned his position as City Editor to go into business for himself. His place is to be filled by Arthur R. Boyden, who will assume the duties this week. Mr. Boyden comes of a newspaper family and although quite a young man has had considerable practical experience in all kinds of newspaper work having been editor-in-chief on a Maine daily and also owner of a paper. He is interested in civic improvements and city affairs and as soon as possible will become a citizen of the town. His people are well known in Massachusetts especially in and about Worcester ,his great-grandfather Judge Elijah Paine of Ashfield being a prominent man in his time as were his sons three of them being ministers of note.

Mr. Boyden wishes to identify himself with Quincy and get acquainted socially and in a business way. He would be glad to receive visitors in the editorial rooms at any time where they will receive a cordial greeting.

A soloist from the New England Conservatory of Music has been engaged for the morning services at Memorial Congregational church for the winter season.

A man whose name could not be learned had an attack of epilepsy this morning on Washington street, Quincy, Point. He was attended by Dr. Bushnell and taken to his home on Quincy avenue.

A hearing for those interested in the petition of the Fore River Company for an extension of time for maintaining private freight tracks across a certain highway in Quincy and Braintree, will be given by the Board of Railroad Commissioners at the office of the Board, on Wednesday, Nov. 25, at 10.30 A. M.

At recess morning and afternoon at the Quincy school the primary teachers join the children in their play and conduct the ir sports. This is an excellent plan for both teacher and student as it gives the former much needed exercise and helps the latter to play rationally and intelligently during their short period of recess.

The funeral of Thomas Leahy was held this morning from his late home 485 South street. A high mass of requiem was celebrated at St. John's church at 9 o'clock by Rev. John J. Coan. The Gregorian chant was sung by the regular choir, with Mary McConarty at the organ. A large number of friends attended the mass. The burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, West Quincy.

INSUFFICIENT EVIDENCE.

Two Hebrew peddlers were arrested by Officer Hinchon at Brewers corner Monday for peddling without a license. There was not sufficient evidence under the law however to convict them and the cases were dismissed in court this morning.

YOU ARE AMBITIOUS AND POSSESS AT least an average amount of tact and perseverance. Therefore, we want you and will pay you $75 a month for taking only four orders a day. You can earn a big income. We furnish all supplies free. Write today to MANAGER, P. O. Box 1150, New York City. Nov. 24-6t.

GOOD DEFINITION.

One of the city ministers in his sermon of Sunday defined christianity as follows:—"By christianity I mean a life that interprets God in terms of love. God is love and, 'If ye have love one to another, all men shall know that ye are my disciples.' If you have love one for another, you are the embodiment of God in human personality; you are extending the incarnation of Jesus Christ."

THE WAY OUT OF

is so plain and sure, and within such easy reach, that all who suffer from upset stomach, sluggish bowels, torpid liver, weak kidneys, or impure blood, may quickly find the way out to health, vigor and strength.

Beecham's Pills

are the one and safe guide out of the slough of acute indigestion, nervous dyspepsia, constipation, bile troubles, sick headaches, impoverished blood, sleeplessness and melancholy.

For over fifty years, to men and women in every part of the world, Beecham's Pills have extended

The Helping Hand to Health

In boxes with full directions, 10c. and 25c.

Norfolk County And Vicinity

An excellent minstrel show was given last night by the FOXBORO state hospital employes. The performance was largely attended and was a success in every way.

The firemen of HINGHAM had quite a fight last night with a fire in the business section of the town. The loss is estimated at $1,000.

The BROOKLINE Historical societies will meet Wednesday evening in the G. A. R. room of the town hall. George S. Mann will read a paper on "Morris."

An adjourned meeting for the purpose of organizing an anti-tuberculosis association in Quincy will be held in Colonial hall tonight. All interested are invited to attend.

A union Thanksgiving service will be held in the NEEDHAM M. E. church on Wednesday evening. The Rev. Joseph A. Puffer of the First Parish will preach.

FELL FROM TEAM.

Jess Sherburne while under the influence of liquor fell from his stone team on Hancock street Monday afternoon and received a bad cut on the head. He was near Merrymount park when he fell. A passing team brought Sherburne to City Square where Officer Murray took him in charge.

His injuries were dressed at the police station and he was released after he had sobered off.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

BLOCKADED

Every Household in Quincy Should Know How to Resist it.

The back aches because the kidneys are blockaded.
Help the kidneys with their work.
The back will ache no more.
Lots of proof that Doan's Kidney Pills do this.
It's the best proof, for it comes from Quincy.
Mrs. Andrew Gibb, living at 322 Washington St., Quincy, Mass. says: "My husband suffered a great deal from Kidney trouble. He had severe pains in the small of his back and had but little strength or energy to do his work. Hearing Doan's Kidney Pills highly spoken of, he procured a box at the Cox Drug Store and began taking them as directed. He was surprised and gratified at the quick relief he obtained from the first and when he had taken the contents of two boxes he was cured. Doan's Kidney Pills will always have our hightest recommendation."
For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

MASSACHUSETTS TODAY.

In connection with the biographical sketch of Governor Curtis Guild, the Massachusetts Magazine reproduces the following fine eulogium to the State of Masachusetts by the Governor:

If you seek the monuments to the Bay State's enterprise do not look behind you, look around you. European authorities admit that France alone compares with Masachusetts in the excellence of her State highways. Buda-Pesth was the first city in the world to use a subway for the relief of street traffic. Boston was the second and New York followed. The tunnel under Boston harbor is the first submarine tunnel ever built in the United States for the rapid transit of street passengers. Only the great dam of the Nile at Assouan exceeds; no other dam yet built equals in extent the huge Metropolitan Water Works dam near Clinton. Yet every one of these great public works has been constructed far within the estimated cost. Not one contractor engaged in their construction has been asked for a cent by the political party in control of this Commonwealth; not one man who has used pick or shovel has had his politics controlled or questioned.

"Such is Massachusetts. As she was first at Lexington and Concord, so has she been at El Caney and Santiago. As she voiced the National protest against the slavery of the black man in the cotton field, so she voices the National protest against the slavery of the white child in the cotton factory. As Massachusetts' ideals incarnated in the schools of Horace Mann spread universal education through the country, so now do Massachusetts' ideals through an organization born in Boston seek to spread universal peace throughout the world.

"Such is the home we open to you; such is Massachusetts. She seeks no eulogy. She needs no apology."

With the article there is also published two exceptionally fine portraits of the Governor, and one of Mrs. Guild.

Today's Court.

Giovanni Attelio was fined $10 for carrying fire arms in the Metropolitan park reservation at Milton.

Patrick Crowley was fined $10 for drunkenness at Weymouth.

David Abrams of Quincy was arraigned for neglecting to support his family. The case was continued and in the meantime Abrams is to contribute $4 per week for the support of his family.

—The new building of the International Trust Company, located at Milk Arch and Devonshire streets, Boston, is without doubt one of the finest and best appointed bank buildings in New England. The building is of Bedford limestone backed by solid masonery laid in cement, and is in the Roman Renaissance style. There are 120 offices in the building and there is one large office perfectly adapted for hearings and meetings of all kinds. One of the features of the new building is the ladies' department. In this department special tellers and bookkeepers, reception rooms, telephones and every convenience for the transaction of business have been provided. In the basement of the building are located the safe deposit and storage vaults. Here the latest known devices have been adopted, rendering the vaults secure against burglars, fires, etc.

QUINCY ELKS ARE HOSTS

Grand Officers Given Rousing Reception by Local Lodge

The meeting of Quincy lodge of Elks Tuesday evening was a rouser. It was the occasion of the annual official visitation of D. D. G. E. R. of Massachusetts southeast, William H. Crone accompanied by Charles F. McCue P. E. R. of Cambridge lodge, acting Grand Esquire. They were also accompanied by a full suite.

In the suite were: P. G. Leading Knight Charles A. Kelley of Boston 10 as acting Grand Leading Knight; P. G. Loyal Knight, Edward McLaughlin of Boston 10 as acting Grand Loyal Knight; Grand Leading Knight, Charles P. Hurley of Boston 10 as Grand Lecturing Knight; Richard G. Stoeher of Boston 10 as Grand Secretary; Stephen J. Moran of Boston 10 as Grand Treasurer; Phillip J. Rowe of Boston 10 as Grand Tyler; Thomas McCormick of Boston 10 as Grand Chaplin; Charles H. Hanlin of Boston 10 as Grand Inner Guard; John J. Fallon of Winthrop 1078, James H. Lundergan of Cambridge 839, and Simon C. Reed of Boston 10 as Grand Trustees.

The degree was exemplified upon three candidates in a manner that called for many words of commendation from the grand officers.

Several addresses followed the work of the evening after which an adjournment was made to the club house where a banquet was served the menu including salads of all kinds, escolloped oysters, coffee, cake and ices.

A special electric car took the grand officers to Boston at midnight.

WHAT PLAYGROUNDS MEAN.

We learned at the Playground Congress in New York that the ninety cities that had playgrounds a year before, had been increased to 185, and that 118 other cities were friendly and wanted playgrounds immediately. It means that, as a people, we are beginning at last to realize that the children are to have a fair show, a chance to know what real freedom means, something that they have not had before. We are beginning to find means to lift from their shoulders the burdens of the past. As we have learned these things we have produced juvenile courts, and probation officers and playgrounds. Play in a boy is like steam, and super-heated steam at that. You can sit on the saftey valve of a steam boiler, but it is a risky experiment. You must give a boy a chance to blow off his steam. —Jacob A. Riis.

CASTRO'S FIRST VISIT ABROAD

Necessary to Have a Surgical Operation Performed

THREE DOCTORS GO WITH HIM

Efforts Were Made to Have German Specialist to Make Trip to Caracas, But They Were Unsuccessful --President's Departure May Furnish Opportunity For Settlement of Long Standing Disputes

Caracas, Nov. 25.—President Castro sailed yesterday from La Guaira on the steamer Guadeloup for Bordeaux to undergo an operation by a skilled specialist of Berlin. Efforts which were made recently to have Dr. Israel of Berlin come to Caracas failed. As an operation was imperative and Castro's attending physicians were unwilling to take the responsibility, the president decided to go abroad.

The operation will be performed immediately on Castro's arrival at Bordeaux, where Israel will be in waiting. Should the operation be successful the president will visit Paris, where he will rest for a few days only, as he wishes to return to Caracas at as early a date as possible. Three of the leading Venezuelan physicians will accompany the president, and several members of his immediate family.

The greatest excitement prevails in Caracas, and political intriguing already has commenced. It is thought that the president's departure may open the road for the settlement of the Holland, American and French disputes. Vincente Gomez, the vice president, will assume the presidency.

President Castro is suffering from an internal abscess in the region of the kidneys and his attending physicians long ago advised him that the only possible relief was in an operation by a German specialist. At that time there did not appear to be any imminent danger and Castro decided to postpone the trip to Europe as long as possible. Every effort was made to bring the specialist to Caracas, but recently a cablegram was received, announcing that the specialist selected, Israel, would be unable to make the trip.

When it was announced a few days ago that the president had finally determined upon proceeding to Europe, Caracas was all excitement. That he would only take this step as a last resort was known to everybody, and his most intimate friends were disposed to doubt his avowed intention. Castro dreads the sea and has suffered severely from seasickness even on short water trips. He has never been out of Venezuela, and it is now felt that extraordinary pressure must have been brought to bear upon him in order to have him consent to the voyage.

Especially iynteresting is Castro's departure because of the embarrassing effect it is likely to have on Holland's plans to force Venezuela into revoking the trans-shipment decree, which Castro has refused to do peacefully. If Holland should send out a confidential agent, as suggested by Castro in his last answer to Holland's demands, that functionary may find no Castro with whom to deal.

Mob Lynches Three Brothers

Union City, Tenn., Nov. 25.—Tiptonville witnessed the "legalized" lynching of three negroes who were arrested there yesterday for murdering Special Deputy Sheriff Richard Burrus and wounding John Hall, a deputy sheriff. To give execution of the negroes a semblance of legality, a "trial" was hurriedly arranged, with the understanding that the men would be condemned to death as soon as the trial was over. The negroes taken from the courtroom and lynched were Marshall, Edward and James Stineback. These brothers created a disturbance at a religious meeting near Tiptonville. When Burrus and Hall attempted to arrest them the negroes shot the officers.

Stellwagen's Important Task

Washington, Nov. 25.—With the announcement by Chairman Hitchcock of the Republican national committee of the appointment of Edward J. Stellwagen of this city as chairman of the inaugural committee, the first step was taken in the work of preparing for the inauguration of Taft and Sherman on March 4 next. Stellwagen accepted the commission, and will enter at once upon the duties of his office, which carries no emoluments, but involves a great deal of hard work and responsibility.

Changed Opinion on Merger

Boston, Nov. 25.—The executive council of the Massachusetts State Board of Trade yesterday reconsidered its recent stand unfavorable to the merger of steam and electric railways incorporated under the Massachusetts laws, yielding to the strong feeling shown in the Berkshires favorable to the merger of the New York New Haven and Hartford railroad and trolley lines in that section.

Pole Hunter Sues For Libel

Paris, Nov. 25.—Walter Wellman has filed a libel suit for $100,000 and rectification against the sporting review, La Vie Au Grand Air, because of the publication of an article characterizing Wellman's expedition to the North Pole as "an American bluff, designed for personal profit and carried out under the cover of impossible scientific conditions."

EACH CONFIDENT OF VICTORY

Hayes and Dorando Meet In Madison Square Garden Tonight

New York, Nov. 25.—Followers of track athletics will have their inning here tonight, when they will see Dorando, the Italian runner who so nearly won the Marathon race in London, run against Johnny Hayes, the American winner of the race. Hayes and Dorando—whose right name, by the way, is Dorando Pietri—will meet in Madison Square Garden and will run the Marathon distance, 26 miles and 385 yards.

JOHN J. HAYES.

The Italian runner is confident that he will take the measure of the fleet footed American this time. He is handicapped by the fact that all of his running heretofore has been done on the road, while Hayes is familiar with circular tracks such as that in the Garden, which measures ten laps to a mile. Hayes' supporters say they cannot see the Italian at any stage of the game. "Johnny will outrun him and will last much better than the Italian," said the American champion's manager.

Harry Pollok, who is looking after Dorando's interests in this country, declares that he will do better here than he did in London. In confirmation of his remarks he pointed to Dorando's excellent record since the London race.

STARTLING CHARGE AGAINST JENKINS

More Than Bank's Capitalization Unlawfully Taken

New York, Nov. 25.—District Attorney Clarke startled an interested crowd before Judge Kelly in the supreme court, Brooklyn, when, in closing his opening charge against John G. Jenkins, president of the now defunct Jenkins Trust company, who is charged with the larceny of $50,000, he stated that he would produce proof to show that Jenkins took unlawfully from the bank altogether $557,000, or $57,000 more than the actual capitalization of the bank itself. Clarke said that this money was entered in the books as loans to clerks in the bank, who, however, knew nothing whatever of the loans.

The specific charge on which Jenkins is being tried is that of grand larceny, in that he turned over to Frank and J. G. Jenkins, Jr., a brokerage concern to which he belonged, the sum of $50,000 on a demand note two days before the trust company went under.

Aleged Smuggler of Chinese

Chicago, Nov. 25.—J. F. Yanner, a Pullman car conductor employed on the Illinois Central railroad, was arrested by government secret service officials on a charge of assisting in the smuggling of Chinese into the United States from Mexico near El Paso, Tex. He was held in bonds of $3000. Government officials assert that railroad employes have aided many Chinese to enter the United States from Mexico by secreting them in Pullman cars.

Uncle Joe In Washington

Washington, Nov. 25.—Declaring that there will be an honest revision of the tariff and that there is no present need of "fretting" about the selection of a speaker for the house, Speaker Cannon has arrived here from his home in Illinois for the approaching special session of congress. He added that he believed that the people would get the sort of tariff revision that they voted for.

Four Killed In Tornado

Little Rock, Nov. 25.—Latest reports from western Arkansas show that, although first reports of the number killed in Monday's tornado were exaggerated, the property damage will be quite heavy. Reports so far give names of but four known to be dead and about fifteen injured.

Killed by Poison In Pie

Evanston, Wyo., Nov. 25.—Mrs. Michael Marialaky, wife of a ranchman killed herself and two children and attempted to murder three other children with pie poisoned with strychnine. The act is believed to be the result of domestic unhappiness.

No Clemency For Brasch

Albany, Nov. 25.—Governor Hughes denied the application for a stay of execution in the case of William S. Brasch of Rochester, and the execution will take place at Auburn prison this week.

Danderine

EVERYBODY CAN HAVE BEAUTIFUL HAIR NOW, and they don't have to wait weeks and months for results either. You will notice marked improvement after the very first application.

Danderine is quickly and thoroughly absorbed by the scalp and the hair soon shows the effects of its wonderfully exhilarating and life-producing qualities. It is pleasant and easy to use—simply apply it to the scalp and hair once a day until the hair begins to grow, then two or three times a week till desired results are obtained.

Grows Hair and we can PROVE IT!

A lady from California writes in substance as follows:
I have been using your wonderful hair tonic for several months and at last I am now blessed with a wonderful suit of hair that measures over 48 inches in length; the braid is over 8 inches around.

Another from New Jersey:
After using sixth bottle I am happy to say that I have as nice a head of hair as anyone in New Jersey.

This Great Hair-Growing Remedy can now be had at all druggists in three sizes, 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

NORTH POLE HIS GOAL

WAS SPLENDIDLY EQUIPPED.

Intrepid Arctic Explorer, With Few Eskimos, Started on Last 560 Mile Dash In March—Plan Was Hastily Formed at the End of a Hunting Trip.

Ere this the long sought north pole may have been discovered. Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the arctic explorer, may be the finder. Anthony Fiala believes Dr. Cook is close to the pole if not actually there.

Dr. Cook's wife and two children live in Brooklyn. The last heard of him was March 17 last, when he was on the polar ice north of Cape Thomas Hubbard, 560 miles from the pole. He was on the eve of making a dash for it, accompanied by a few Eskimos, with dogs, sleds and supplies. Mrs. Cook is confident her husband will overcome all obstacles and return safe. It will be impossible to hear from him again before next summer.

When Dr. Cook started a year ago last spring for a polar hunting trip with John R. Bradley, a wealthy New Yorker, he had no intention of trying to grab the north pole. They went in a 110 ton Gloucester fishing schooner, renamed the John R. Bradley, with Dr. Cook in command.

When the hunting trip ended in August, 1907, it was expected that Dr. Cook would come back on the schooner, but at Annortok, on the northwestern coast of Greenland, he decided to remain and make a dash for the pole, says the New York Evening World. Rudolph Franke, a member of the crew, volunteered to stay at Annortok and watch the supplies. He recently returned to New York with a letter from Dr. Cook, dated March 17, the polar sea, north of Cape Hubbard. In it Dr. Cook said: "I am taking a straight course for the pole. I hope to succeed. At any rate, I will make a desperate attempt."

Franke, speaking of their experiences in the far north, said in part:

"On the night of Aug. 26, 1907, the John R. Bradley discharged the stores and provisions, also the outfit, at Annortok, and the schooner left us on Aug. 27 at noon, bound for New York.

"Early in September our winter quarters were in first class condition, and we began to lay in a stock of meat for the winter.

"We used the whole month for hunting. Before the long night set in Dr. Cook made a sledge trip to the Big Humboldt glacier and returned to winter quarters at the beginning of the long arctic night. It was at this time very cold, 30 or 40 degrees below zero. The ice was not always firm, being broken up and then closed together, and traveling was dangerous, especially in the morning and at evening.

"Dr. Cook was nearly drowned and escaped with his life in an encounter with polar bears. The grease in the guns was so hard that he could not use them, and they put knives on long sticks to defend their lives against the bears.

"One time when Dr. Cook was away from camp on a trip I prepared dog food for the spring campaign. We found a way to prepare dog food that will give Dr. Cook an immense advantage over all other explorers.

"In the middle of November our furs were nearly gone. Then came the holidays of Christmas and New Year, but we did not have much time to devote to them.

"Jan. 10 Dr. Cook sent me over to Flagler bay with three Eskimos to hunt for musk ox and to look after the people who we supposed had been left there from a shipwreck, but we found nobody. The thermometer registered 73 below zero.

"The last weeks we were together there was a lot to do, and, everything being completed, we started on Feb. 26 for the far north. I remember it was early noon when we left our quarters and camped the first night in three snow houses on the ice floe in Kane basin. The next day, after 140 days of darkness, we again saw the sun and reached Cape Sabine late in the evening. Here we were storm bound the next day. The last day's march brought us to Rice strait, ten miles northwest of Greely's memorable winter quarters of 1883-4. The next march brought us in Flagler bay, and Dr. Cook sent me back to Annortok March 3 with the first division after placing provisions at the head of Flagler bay to guard our winter quarters.

"I believe that everything is O. K. with Dr. Cook, but of course something must be done next year for his relief."

Members of the Peary club and the Explorers' club have for some weeks been discussing the advisability of fitting out an expedition to hunt for Dr. Cook. No relief measures can be taken, however, before next spring.

New Way to Make Hair Curl.

Quince seed tea is one of the newest recipes for making the hair curl. It is made by putting a tablespoonful of quince seed into a pint of water and boiling it. The clear tea then is drained off. Use this to moisten the hair before putting it into curlers.

A men's league for woman suffrage has been formed in Holland, and the Lutheran church in that country has given women a vote in all church affairs.

THE DEVILFISH.

How These Monsters Are Caught In the Gulf of Mexico.

There is no more thrilling sport than harpooning the devilfish, the giant ray or manta, which has its home in the gulf of Mexico. Some of these fish, which are very grewsome to behold, measure from twelve to eighteen feet and weigh more than 1,500 pounds. It requires tremendous skill to harpoon them and infinite tact to land them once they are struck. It is not unusual for the fish to run for three hours or more, and they can tow a ten ton sloop.

The fish is wily and will often go to the bottom to rest, to prevent which he has to be kept in a constant state of panic by hauling the tow in close to him. At a moment of weakening another harpoon and a rifle shot will dispatch him.

During a recent run it was three hours before the cable could be fastened to the boat's windlass in order to pull the devilfish under the bow, where another lily iron was secured in him, and then followed a rush of extraordinary impetuosity. Following this method and only after there were three harpoons in his back and a shark hoop attached to one flipper was it felt that he was secure. Half an hour later his struggles were finally stilled by a lucky rifle shot in the head.

As night came on the sharks began to come in and long after dark could be heard fighting over the stranded carcass.—Illustrated London News.

MOST EXCLUSIVE CLUB.

English Joy That There Is One Door Riches Won't Unlock.

The Royal Yacht squadron is probably the most exclusive club in existence, says the London Gentlewoman, and, wonderful to relate in this plutocratic age, money is quite powerless to unlock the charmed portals of the castle.

One or two millionaires with splendid yachts have tried in vain to pass the ordeal of the periodical ballot, while men of no fortune or only just enough to defray the upkeep of a small yacht have been elected without an idea of a black ball.

The only apparent qualification is that the candidate must possess a yacht of his own, but there are other qualifications much more difficult of attainment by the man of money, and it is just here that the question of blackballing comes in, it must be owned, rather refreshingly.

For really one had almost said that there is no social "holy of holies" into which he who is rich cannot penetrate until one recalls the pleasant circle of gentlemen who go to make up the Royal Yacht squadron. There is, one remembers gratefully, just one institution left to which the mystic words "I am rich" do not have the effect of an "open sesame."

The Deep Breathing Cure.

A boy who was consumptive and was rapidly going along the road to the grave was taken in hand by one who understood deep breathing and the importance of proper mastication of food, etc. He was made to understand precisely why deep breathing was of such vital importance, and he took a lively interest in his own cure. He was fourteen years old. In a very few weeks the change was remarkable. He began to get firm flesh on his poor little limbs, his chest developed well and a healthy color came into his cheeks. His eyes, which were always covered with sties, became perfectly free from them, and in three months or less there was no sign of consumption in him. I may say he was only treated once a week for half an hour.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Truly Rustic Bridge.

A rustic bridge at Beach Haven, Ga., contains fifty-six kinds of wood and vines grown on the fifty acres of Beach Haven park. Following is a list of the woods and vines: Short leaf pine, long leaf pine, post oak, white oak, Spanish oak, water oak, red oak, poplar, sweet gum, black gum, red haw, black haw, red bud, prickly ash, chinquapin, wild plum, persimmon, cedar, wild sloe, wahoo, sumac, red elm, pig hickory, scalybark hickory, hock or sugar berry, willow, china, black alder, crab apple, wild mulberry, wild cherry, dogwood, sourwood, winter whortleberry, black locust, sassafras, cottonwood, buckeye, laurel, beech, holly, ash, ironwood, birch, magnolia, sycamore, walnut, sweet bay, evergreen, spruce; vines—grape, muscadine, bellflower, rattan, bamboo.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Poisonous Nettles of the Tropics.

In tropical regions there are nettles far more powerful than that of our own country.

The one called Urtica stimulans, which is found in Java, and that called Laportea crenulata, found in Hindustan, when bruised emit an effluvium which poisonously affects the eyes and mouth and if handled produce convulsions and serious swelling and pain in the arms, which may last for three or four weeks and in some cases cause death.—London Telegraph.

The Girl of the Period.

RAILROAD STOCK INVESTMENTS

Where Rockefeller Turns His Tremendous Earnings From Oil

CONSIST CHIEFLY IN BONDS

Testimony Given After Objection Had Been Entered Because of Fear of Disturbing Men In Stock Exchange --Archbold Tells of Trying to Beat Competitors--Oil King Dodges a Process Server With Subpoena

New York, Nov. 25.—Closing his testimony in the federal suit to dissolve the Standard Oil company, John D. Rockefeller threw some unexpected light on the long popular question of to what channels of investment he turns his tremendous earnings from oil. The answer was "railroads."

Mr. Rockefeller was loath to state the names of the railroads in which his investments were made, but did so after entering his objection. He declared that his holdings in railroads consisted chiefly in bonds and that, with the exception of a few roads in which he held only small amounts of stock, he preferred the bonds as a form of investment. Rockefeller's appearance yesterday will likely be his last in the proceedings. He appeared greatly delighted that his long ordeal was over and hurriedly left the room when counsel excused him.

Mr. Rockefeller said that he did not think that he should be made to tell the form of his investments, declaring that "the gentlemen over there in the Stock Exchange might not think it very wise."

After some legal contention by counsel, Rockefeller said he held stock in the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, the New York Central, the Pennsylvania, the Western Maryland, the Missouri Pacific, the Texas Pacific and the Colorado Southern. He said he owned no shares in either the Union or the Southern Pacific. Rockefeller said he opposed the keeping of millions of dollars of surplus by the Standard.

John D. Archbold, vice president of the Standard, gave information, under the direction of the company's counsel, regarding the early production of crude oil and the development of the pipe line system. Archbold will likely be on the witness stand for several days. He gave his answers in a short, brisk manner, and seemed possessed of infinite details of the Standard's business from its inception to the present time.

His clear, blue eyes twinkled when he told of the industrial fights, saying that he kept careful watch on his competitor and then "tried to beat him." Fairly short of stature, Archbold's well knit figure was of compelling animation as he sat in the witness chair. He turned from side to side as if to watch each individual spectator in the room, and every line of his smooth-shaven face showed that he was keenly alive to every development of the proceedings. He was dressed in a plain business suit and wore a black bow necktie. Archbold is bald and his head is fringed with iron-grey hair.

There was a lively scene in the corridor of the customs house as Rockefeller was leaving the building late yesterday. A process server tried to thrust a subpoena into the hands of the Standard Oil head, but a law clerk accompanying Rockefeller saw his purpose and before the subpoena could be served he pushed Rockefeller into an elevator. The elevator shot downward, carrying Rockefeller out of the man's reach. The process server hurried to the street, but Rockefeller disappeared. The man would not say whether the suit in which he wished to subpoena Rockefeller was a civil action or one connected with the present case.

Murder Verdict Against Boys

Vineland, N. J., Nov. 25.—A coroner's jury returned a verdict finding that William Read came to his death at the hands of Walter Zeller, his grandson; Cline Wheeler and Herbert Grigg, each of whom is 19 years old. All three youths are under arrest and they have made confessions that the motive for the crime was robbery. It was believed that Read had in his possession a large amount of money, but the youths said they only secured $15.

Graft Charges Resented

Ottawa, Nov. 25.—The government commissioners who are constructing the National Trans-Continental railway across Canada have retained an English solicitor and are going to press libel actions against the London Times and a number of other English papers for printing articles charging graft in connection with the construction of the Canadian government railway.

Kaiser's Statements Ridiculed

Tokio, Nov. 25.—The recently published interview with Emperor William is the most absorbing topic of the day here. Officials as well as the newspapers believe that the emperor has been correctly quoted, but the newspapers ridicule his statements. One paper publishes a picture of the German emperor having his tongue amputated.

Scarlet Fever Closes Schools

Nantucket, Mass., Nov. 25.—Owing to the discovery of a number of cases of scarlet fever among school children, the school board has ordered the schools of the island closed.

NEW ENGLAND ARTERIES

Use of Highways and Fisheries Economy Discussed by Governors

Boston, Nov. 25.—Two interesting and what will probably prove valuable sessions, one devoted to the protection and promotion of the supplies of sea food, and the other to highways and their use, closed the first New England conference, called by the governors of the six states, to discuss uniform laws and to obtain suggestions toward conserving the resources of this section of the country.

Francis H. Herrick, special investigator on the lobster for the United States bureau of fisheries, read an interesting paper on the preservation and propogation of that shellfish, which he called the king of the crustaceans, while George W. Field, chairman of the Massachusetts fish and game commission, discussed lower forms of shellfish, the clam, quahog and oyster.

Chairman Parker of the Massachusetts highway commission read a paper on the construction of highways. James H. MacDonald, commissioner of highways of Connecticut, spoke at length on trunk lines of highways in New England, and Nahum J. Bachelder of New Hampshire discussed automobiles and their regulation.

The session ended with an interesting discussion of the various papers, and a vote of thanks and appreciation to Governor Guild of Massachusetts.

All the papers read and suggestions made at the three sessions will be referred respectively to the state chiefs of departments covering forestry, shellfish and highways, with instructions to meet, consider and report to the incoming governors before Jan. 1 their findings in regard to uniform laws for all New England.

RULING AGAINST RUSSIAN CLAIMS

Cross-Examination of Pouren Is Suddenly Dropped

New York, Nov. 25.—The cross-examination of Jan Pouren, the Russian exile who is fighting against extradition from this country, came to an abrupt termination after having been begun at the hearing before Commissioner Hitchcock. After the commissioner had sustained objection to many questions, counsel for the Russian government offered to prove, they said, that Pouren entered this country by means of perjury and fraud and, therefore, had no right to its asylum. Again the ruling was against the Russian government side. Then they declined to proceed further with the cross-examination.

The case was adjourned pending the receipt of a document from Russia which the defense wish to introduce as their last point as evidence, claiming it will show that the czar's government had proclaimed Pouren a revolutionist and had offered a reward for his capture as such, and not a criminal.

Carnegie Declines Invitation

New York, Nov. 25.—Andrew Carnegie apparently will not appear at the hearing in Washington by the ways and means committee on the iron and steel schedules of the tariff. He has replied by mail to the committee's invitation to go to Washington and give them the benefit of his new tariff views, but refuses to disclose the nature of his reply. It is believed, however, that Carnegie has declined the invitation.

Schirrman Gets Life Sentence

Danbury, Conn., Nov. 25.—The jury in the case of Edward Schirrman, who has been on trial here for the murder of Ida Potter, with whom he had been living, but who had left him, brought in a verdict of murder in the second degree and Schirrman was sentenced to state prison for life. The defense put forth at his trial was that of insanity.

A FEUD AND ITS FINISH.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

Amelia Vernet sat out on the sand spit waiting for the turn of the tide. She had become absorbed in her sketching, and time had passed unnoticed until the curling swish of water told her that the sand spit had become a temporary island.

It was midday now, and she could not hope to reach the mainland before 5 o'clock—unless she waded. Amelia looked down at her pretty tan shoes and then turned and peered over the sand dunes toward the town.

A narrow channel of choppy water cut off escape for the present. Out in the bay a few sails flashed in the sunlight, but none was within hailing distance.

Amelia picked up her pencil and returned to her sketch book. "Aunt Tom will be worried," she thought, "if I don't return to luncheon, and yet—she will have the satisfaction of knowing that her predictions have been fulfilled—at last the tide has caught me on the sand spit!"

A shadow fell across the open book. Amelia lifted a startled face to meet the astonished glance of a tall young man.

"I—I beg your pardon," he stammered, lifting his white canvas hat. "I thought I had the island to myself."

"I wish you had," said Amelia plaintively; "the turn of the tide is responsible for my presence here."

"Mine too. I became interested in this confounded book, and I was dozing comfortably when the water crept around my ankles and woke me up." He thumped viciously upon the offending volume and cast it from him. "I suppose there is no escape until 3 or 4 o'clock."

"None," sighed Amelia, "and nothing to eat!"

"Wait; we'll see about that." The stranger disappeared behind the dune, and Melia saw him making haste toward the narrow inlet.

"How shocked Aunt Tom would be if she could see me talking to a perfect stranger, but—I am quite sure he is a gentleman, and he must be staying at one of the plantations near by. His face is familiar, and yet"—

He came around the dune and sat down on the sand beside her. "I hope you will share my luncheon," he said courteously. "A thoughtful aunt prepared it for me against possible starvation between an 8 o'clock breakfast and a 12:30 luncheon." He opened the good sized basket which he had brought and removed a snowy fringed napkin.

"You're awfully kind," murmured Amelia hungrily. "I hope I'm not robbing you."

"Not in the least. We are castaways and must make the best of the food we have saved," he said gayly.

"There should be a cask of water and some tinned things."

"Here are a flask of lemonade and a cup, chicken salad sandwiches, poundcake and grapes—a very ladylike repast!"

The young man spread a napkin in Amelia's lap and helped her generously. "You were sketching?" he ventured, glancing down at her drawing materials.

"Yes, a little—the marsh and the sloping hill beyond, with its masses of cedar and pine. Would you like to see it?" asked Amelia frankly.

"Yes," he replied, taking the book and opening at the page she indicated. In one corner she had inscribed her signature in bold black characters, "Amelia Vernet." He glanced at the name, and his eyes shot a peculiar look at the girl.

Amelia was looking at his strong brown fingers clasping the sketch book. Very capable, fine muscled digits they were too.

"Your sketch is good," he said sincerely, putting the book aside.

When the last crumb of poundcake had disappeared Amelia sighed contentedly. "That was the most delicious meal I ever ate," she said gratefully.

"Aunt Tom is a famous cook," he replied carelessly as he returned the napkins to the basket.

"Aunt Tom!" repeated Amelia. She seemed to stiffen under his look of mild surprise.

"Why not? A man may have an Aunt Thomasina, may he not?" Amelia flushed at the mischievous look in his gray eyes.

"Of course," she said, with reserve. "Only, you see, I have an Aunt Thomasina too."

"Not an Aunt Tom Forrest, I'll be bound," said her companion.

"No, but an Aunt Tom Vernet," announced Amelia haughtily.

"Oh, by Jove! A great-aunt?"

"Yes."

"So's mine. Then I went to school with you! You remember Donald Forrest?" he asked eagerly.

Amelia arose to her feet and shook the sand from her white skirt. She looked very young and lovely standing there in the brilliant October sunshine with the blue sky reflected in her eyes. She also looked very cruel and quite like a lady in a tragedy when she looked down at him.

"I believe I remember you," she said coldly. "I also remember the family feud. No Vernet ever speaks to a Forrest—willingly. But I have partaken of your lunch, sir, and I thank you for your courtesy. You will excuse me if I return to my sketching."

Forrest jumped to his feet. The red blood mounted to his dark forehead, and the angry light in his eyes seemed to leap like little flickering flames.

"It is a small matter, madam. A Forrest is courteous to friend or enemy. I will not intrude upon you longer." He picked up his lunch basket and, with a low bow, disappeared as suddenly as he had come.

Amelia sat down again, feeling very small and mean. It was quite evident that the heir of the house of Forrest would have ignored the feud if she, the last save one of the Vernets, had chosen to overlook the antipathy that had lasted for sixty long years.

But Amelia Vernet was Virginian to the core, and, although she never really knew the cause of the estrangement between the two families, she had loyally nursed the tradition.

And here was a young man, last of the Forrests, as Amelia was last of the Vernets, and they must carry on the feud. Amelia sighed involuntarily, for she had liked the young man who had been away so long and who must have recently returned.

There came a loud roar of thunder and a sudden darkening of the sun. Amelia looked timorously around at the threatening clouds.

There was a vivid flash of lightning. Amelia turned and fled toward the inlet. A boat was putting off from the mainland, and Forrest was watching it. He turned at the sound of Amelia's flying steps.

"I have signaled a boatman, Miss Vernet," he said politely; "he will put you ashore wherever you wish. If you do not object, I will accompany you. I do not relish the drenching that is coming."

Amelia blushed hotly. "Of course I do not object," she said, with embarrassment.

The drenching came before they reached the mainland. Amelia cowered in the bottom of the boat, while Forrest removed his coat and, in spite of her protests, threw it over her to shut out the lightning and rain.

At the landing an ancient servitor was seeking Miss Vernet, and he hurried his young mistress into the phaeton before she could properly thank Donald Forrest.

"Fo' de lan', Miss Melia, you' Aunt Tommy is nigh 'bout 'stracted," mumbled Uncle Aaron peevishly as he gathered up the reins.

A week later Amelia stood in the brown October garden among some late poppies. She looked pensively over the stone wall to where the bay sparkled and dimpled in the sunlight. There was a quick step beside her, and she looked up into Donald Forrest's smiling face.

"My Aunt Thomasina is calling upon your Aunt Thomasina," he said, removing his hat; "they sent me into the garden to find you and tell you the feud is off."

Amelia stared.

"I don't understand," she stammered.

"I looked up the cause of the feud and find that our great-grandfathers quarreled because each wanted to name his new daughter Thomasina. It was a distinctive name, and each craved its possession. I have argued with my aunt night and day—result, the two Thomasinas are drinking tea together. We cannot be so prejudiced as to"— He held out his hand.

"I'm so glad," said Amelia honestly as she placed her hand in his.

Trees and Landowners In England.

By the general laws of England oak, ash and elm are "timber" if not younger than twenty years or so old that a good post cannot be cut from them. What constitutes "timber" varies slightly according to locality, but when a tree is proved to be "timber" a person who has only a life interest in the land it grows upon cannot cut it down unless it be on an estate cultivated solely for the production of salable "timber" or unless he has a special agreement giving him power to do so. A mere life tenant may not even cut down trees which are not "timber," but which would at the age of twenty years attain that dignity. Botanists differ as to the poisonous nature of yew trees. There are many instances both of their poisonous and their harmless effect when browsed by horses and cattle, but the partially dried clippings of yew are certainly most dangerous. If a yew tree overhangs a neighbor's land and his horses eat the yew without trespassing, the owner of the tree is liable to pay for any injury the horses may sustain. On the other hand, if the horses or cattle cannot browse on the tree without putting their heads over the fence the owner of the horses must bear the loss, for his animals have trespassed.—London Answers.

When Victoria Laughed.

One day during Queen Victoria's reign three children were walking along the road between Windsor and Stoke Poges. They heard the sound of carriage wheels. It was the queen's carriage, and she was in it.

The oldest child, a little boy, had been reading stories of eastern life and fairy tales. He knew what was due a queen and cried to the others:

"Get down flat in the dust before the carriage, and we'll all call out together, 'Oh, queen, live forever!'"

Down went the three little bodies flat in the dust, much to the astonishment of the coachman, who reined up sharply.

The queen leaned forward and asked: "What in the world is the matter, children? Are you frightened?"

Three voices came out of the dust in a smothered treble:

"Yes, O queen!"

Then there was a pause, and one reproachful voice said, "There, we forgot the 'live forever' part."

The queen understood at once and laughed aloud, as her coachman afterward said, "more heartily than she had laughed for years."—London Queen.

Although the conference of New England Governors has been heralded as the opening of a new era of unity and of better understanding between the people of the New England states, it rests largely with the citizens of the various states interested whether anything really permanent is accomplished.

The Governors can merely suggest certain policies tending to the unification of various laws and to the conservation and development of our natural resources; but unless the people give their consent, and cooperate with the executives in furthering these policies nothing permanent or beneficial will be gained.

EDITORIAL COMMENTS.

One person out of every seven of the inhabitants of the United States is injured annually according to the statistics of accident underwriters and during the last three years the annual average of accidents in New York on the surface, elevated and subway traction systems has been 34,000 persons. A goodly percentage of the total number of accidents in the country at large is due to the operations of the railroads.

Edwin B. Quakenbush, an underwriter, has gathered statistics, which show that while there are 107,000 persons seriously injured and 10,046 killed annually on the railroads of this country, the loss of life due to steam railroads in England, Germany and France is about 100 each year. This disparity is ascribed variously to the hours of the employes on the foreign roads, to the limited schedules under which trains are operated, and, of course, to the limited mileage of track. Perhaps a more impressive picturing of the accidents on American railroads is shown by the statement that one person is injured for every one and three-fourths miles of track, and one is killed for every 20 1-2 miles.

This is a subject of most serious import and calls for a most rigid investigation in order that the proper methods may be taken whereby these accidents in a large degree can be prevented.—Gloucester Times.

The list of contributors to the Republican campaign fund is interesting reading, of course. Some people will read it carefully to discover whether or not there is a taint of oil, about it. Some readers will value it as a glimpse of the inside of politics which has heretofore been denied the public. The majority will read it out of curiosity. Comparatively few will give a second thought to the question why it should require the expenditure of a million and a half dollars by one party and nearly three-quarters of a million by another to enable the people to vote intelligently on the issues of a national election.—Boston Herald.

If J. Montefiore Meyers had been given a little more time he would evidntly have cornered everything in Pittsburg except the Carnegie hero medals. The spectacle showing David Belasco praising J. Montefiore to the skies for offering to build and back for him the finest theatre in the world should have been caught by the kinetograph. But the Pittsburg millionaires seem to be relieved to know that the "agent of Baron Rothschild" has been caught by the police. Is Pittsburg the only easy mark? Not atall. We are sure the Back Bay has not forgotten the stay of several bogus noblemen.—Boston Journal.

It ought to be possible for the Legislature to study this question, note the tendency of the day towards a more centralized form of government, and then prepare a charter that shall be applicable to most of the cities of the state, and which they should be impelled to work under. * * If the present rate of charter revision continues there will be no two cities in the state working under the same conditions. This will form an interesting basis for comparison of methods, but there will be features in other directions which will more than offset this seeming advantage.— Newburyport News.

AN IMPORTANT FEATURE.

According to Mrs. Mary L. Wade of Atlantic who addressed the Quincy Women's club on Tuesday afternoon on Food Values, the No-License league is neglecting an important feature in their campaign for she said "bad food often drives husbands to drink." That is a problem for them to solve. Make good cooks of all the wives and daughters and saloons would disappear.

NEW SOCIETY ORGANIZED

Quincy Citizens Unite in War Against Great White Plague

An adjourned meeting of those interested in the formation of an anti-tuberculosis society in Quincy was held Tuesday evening in Colonial hall. There were many more present then was expected and they were very enthusiastic over the new society and were earnest in their endeavors to have it started at once.

temporary chairman of the meeting and Dr. F. Ramon Burke, secretary. The minutes of the last meeting, held at Dr. Gordon's office, were read, also the constitution that had been drawn up. From the constitution it was seen that the society was to be known as the Quincy Anti-Tuberculosis association and that it was open to all Quincy people who contributed to the funds of the society.

The object of the society is the relief, prevention and control of tuberculosis in the city of Quincy. On a motion of Thomas B. Pollard it was voted to organize a society and accept the constitution as presented. The election of permanent officers was the next business and the ballot, which had been drawn up by a committee for that purpose, was accepted without a change.

President—John F. Welsh, M. D.

Vice Presidents—Henry C. Hallowell, M. D., John A. Gordon, M. D.

Secretary—Walter L. Sargent, M. D.

Treasurer—Mrs. F. S. Davis

Board of Managers—Hon. William T. Shea, Nathaniel S. Hunting, M. D., Frank E. Parlin, Rev. E. N. Hardy, Mrs. Francis Abele, W. J. Middleton, M. D., Thomas B. Pollard, Mrs. Thomas A. Addison, Daniel B. Reardon, M. D., Rev. N. J. Sproul, Mrs. R. McLennan, John T. Reynolds, M. D., Robert J. Teasdale, Miss Mabel Gragg, Elmon R. Johnson, M. D., Wendell H. Hull, Mrs. Eugene H. Sprague, Frederick J. Peirce, M. D., Ralph W. Hobbs, Mrs. D. A. Bruce.

The new president, Dr. Welch, then proceeded to give a brief outline of the work that the association should cover. He said he thought the city officials should take an interest in the society, keep in touch with what it was doing and give all the aid possible. Dr. Welch advised some kind of a dispensary at once, where those afflicted with tuberculosis might come and be examined and treated.

Another thing deemed advisable by the president was the founding of an outdoor camp. The work to be done at present is to get out and work among the people and show the public that the society is meant for business, thus increasing the membership and also the funds in the treasury.

Mayor William T. Shea then arose and said that although he had several engagements, he wished to be present at the meeting as he was very much interested in the association. He promised his moral and financial support, and said he would do all in his power to further the interests of the society.

An invitation was extended by Dr. E. N. Hardy of the Bethany church, to have a representative of the association speak at the Union Thanksgiving service on Thursday morning. Dr. Welch was elected as a delegate.

The meeting then developed into a discussion of ways and means for best accomplishing the objects of the society, Dr. F. R. Burke, Eugene H. Sprague, and W. W. Whitcher offering several valuable suggestions. The meeting was adjourned at 9.45 for an indefinite period.

Case was Continued

William St. Pierre was given a hearing this morning before Judge Avery in the district court on a warrant charging him with burning property to defraud an insurance company. The bicycle store of St. Pierre was burned at midnight Nov. 5.

When the department arrived on the scene they found the fire to be in a lot of old hay in a blind stairway in the rear of the building. There was a strong odor of kerosene and the fire looked very suspicious.

An investigation was made as a result of which St. Pierre was arrested.

A large number of witnesses were heard at the conclusion of which the case was continued until next Thursday, Dec. 3, at which time the court indicated that St. Pierre would be held for the grand jury.

There was a large attendance and the address of Mr. Lee was very much enjoyed.

THANKSGIVING.

Before another issue the families of our great nation will as far as possible collect in their homes, and observe the day our forefathers selected for considering the blessings of health and prosperity granted them another year. It was a wise institution considered by them and has been endorsed by the loyal people each succeeding year. It was formerly a New England custom and was a religious appointment. The church and the state were a unit. Its officials must have been members of the state church, before elected to any civil responsibility. The citizens were taxed alike for both the civil and religious support of the community. Thus the day was a recognition of the divine care and support in their forest home.

The church still recognizes the beautiful pious custom and a representation still follows the spiritual elements of the appointment. The family also claims a sacred interest and fellowship in the observance. The flavor of the festive board reaches out in every direction, and creates a desire to reach home in the morning and spend the day among the old memories which cluster around the old homestead, and reminds them of pleasant years and youthful anticipations. If the return creates a religious emotion, and also strengthens the cords of family relations, it's a wise appointment, and a blessing to churches, homes and a great government, which needs all those ties and practices, which are the boons coming down to each surviving generation, to be cherished and blended into life, creating an hereditary link in the lives of the past, present and future of our nation.

CONCERT AT CITY HOME.

The Philanthropic committee of the Quincy Women's club entertained the inmates of the City Home on Monday evening, giving the following program which was greatly enjoyed:

[A Wednesday Feature.]

For their next meeting the Wollaston Alliance will hold a sewing meeting on Dec. 2d.

A fine musicale has been prepared for the meeting of the Philergians in Cochato hall, Braintree on December first. The dramatic and musicale afternoons of this club always attract large audiences.

The next meeting of the Junior Friday club will be with Miss Edith Randall of Spear street instead of Miss Etta M. Prescott, who will take Miss Randall's date later in the season.

An executive board meeting of the Quincy Women's club will be held on Thursday morning Dec. 3d at the club house.

Hospital Aid association is preparing for the annual meeting on Dec. 31st and has appointed the following ladies on the nominating committee: Mrs. Joseph A. Dasha, of the Point, Miss Eliza C. Sheahan of South Quincy; Mrs. Joseph Vogel of South Quincy; Mrs. Walter E. Simmons of Wollaston and Mrs. Theodore Parker of Atlantic. The chairman of the committee will be from Quincy Centre.

Mrs. George G. Saville entertains the Friday club, next week, Dec. 4th at her home on Saville avenue. Industries of Venice will be discussed under the guidance of Mrs. Emery L. Crane and Mrs. J. M. Nowland.

A beautiful day brought out a large meeting of the Quincy Alliance in First church chapel on Monday afternoon.

Nov. 19th the Shakespeare society of Atlantic met with Mrs. William F. Cummings and read and discussed the third act of Antony and Cleopatra. It was an interesting and pleasant meeting. Next week Thursday the society will meet with Mrs. Lyndon Gurney of Walker street.

A special meeting of the club will be held next Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock under the auspices of the Arts and Crafts committee assisted by the Art and Literature committees. Miss Louise P. Merritt will speak on "Florida from Behind an Easel," and there will be good music. A most interesting meeting is promised and all members should try and attend.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

Large gatherings seem to be the rule this season at the meetings of the Quincy Women's club and home afternoon on Tuesday proved an attractive feature. A new raised platform has been added to the club room since the last meeting, large enough to accommodate the officers and piano, making it easier for club members to hear and see.

Mrs. George W. Morton president, conducted the short business session after which a twenty-minute talk was given by Mrs. Emma Locke of Somerville on "First Aid to the injured." She pointed out the benefit a little of the right kind of knowledge was in an accident when perhaps it took some time to get a skilled physician. The person who knew what to do and did it promptly was a blessing. It is something that women should know especially mothers of large families. Mrs. Locke hoped a class in first aid would be formed in Quincy.

The chairman of the program committee Miss Edith Randall then introduced Mrs. Mary L. Wade, a club woman, lecturer and authority on domestic matters. Her subject was "Food Values; Marketing and Cooking." She gave a most interesting talk receiving close attention. Speaking of food values she said that food played an important part in the welfare of a community. A child improperly fed was bound to live improperly and often led up to crime. People need water plenty of pure cold water not with meals but between times. A glass of cold water often acted as a tonic. Ice water was bad. Hot water had a soothing effect. It was an art to boil water bringing it just to the point and not continuing to boil. Tea, coffee, and vegetables were too often spoiled by over boiling. Fat was needful, wholesome meat fats, butter, olive oil, and milk important food articles.

Knew of one family who used olive oil in their baked beans instead of pork. Nuts and cheese had much food value but were better as a part of the meal than at the end of the meal. Housekeepers should use care to provide variety, not have too much starch at a meal, such as potatoes, macaroni and bread but introduce green salads, etc. Eating in pleasant company was an aid to digestion. A healthy animal was a happy animal which was equally true of children. Sugar is a heat producer and was better for a child than most deserts but was injurious between meals. Home made candy was pure and children should be encouraged to make it instead of buying. Cereals should be well cooked and chewed as they contain starch. Too much eating is bad. Poorly cooked food often caused husbands to take to drinking. Make household affairs a pleasure instead of drudgery.

In buying learn to depend on yourself instead of the butcher. A course in buying is as essential as knowing how to cook. Inexpensive cuts of meat were nutritious if one knew how to buy and to cook. Get the standard articles of the grocer, not the substitutes which he says is just as good. Proper nutrition forms character and the careful and right feeding of the body conduces to right living, right thinking and help to a happy life.

Mrs. Morton closed the meeting by extending invitations to club members from the Anti-tuberculosis association to meet in the evening at Colonial hall to help form an organization and another from the Child Nurture club of Wollaston to attend the meeting at the house of Mrs. H. W. Pinkham Grand View avenue.

CLUB NOTES.

A recent writer in the Boston Record has touched upon a vital point in club meetings as follows:

"A woman from the West, who as the guest of her sister, a Boston woman, had attended one of the meetings of the latter's club, interested me very much a day or so ago with her comments on the programme.

"Did you not find the meeting very interesting?" her sister asked her, but the Western woman qualified her reply. "Well," she said, "I can see how it might have been of great interest to the members, but I do not understand how you could have expected the strangers present to become so very enthusiastic about the projects the club is undertaking."

"Why, it was our regular business meeting and we considered the reports of our committees very good indeed," said the sister, "especially those of the committees on tuberculosis and civil service reform."

The visitor said nothing more at the time but later to me she voiced the opinion that the reports, to be of interest to people not familiar with the details of a movement were too technical and too full of statistics.

"For instance," she explained, "how much do you suppose the listeners at a public club meeting care how many postage stamps have been used by the club during the past year or how many letters the corresponding secretary has written?

"It is only an instance of how much importance we women seem to pay to comparatively unimportant details. When a club meeting is supposed to last only about an hour and a half, why should the reading of such reports take up so large a part of the time? The object of the meeting of many of the important women's clubs is to enlist in the many good causes that are being undertaken, more helpers, and I think that women may learn a good deal in this regard from the men's clubs organized for philanthropic purposes.

"To many strangers who have attended some of the meetings of the Massachusetts women's clubs, it must have seemed something like being asked to attend a big dinner party and then being told how much every article of food cost."

Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker, the ex-president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, has long been urging the club women to confine their reports that are to be read at meeting as far as possible to the vital part of whatever work the club is undertaking."

PROVED A POET.

A Youthful Experience of John Greenleaf Whittier.

John Greenleaf Whittier used to declare that at a very early age he knew himself to be a real poet and would often relate, writes Mrs. Abby J. Woodman in her "Reminiscences of Whittier's Life at Oak Knoll," an amusing experience when he was a student at the Haverhill academy. Mrs. Woodman gives it in Mr. Whittier's own words:

There is but little doubt that at the age of twenty I felt myself to be a real poet, somewhat unknown to fame, but sufficiently acknowledged as such by the committee directing the dedication of the new academy for them to invite me to read an original poem on that occasion.

Robert Dinsmore, an old Scotch farmer in Windham and a writer of rhyme and doggerel verse, was also invited to do the same. The honor of leading the procession which marched through the streets of Haverhill to the new academy was given to the two poets.

I often laugh when I recall the scene to memory. The hale old Scotchman, short and plethoric, his uncertain step and bearing slightly exhilarated by a generous draft of old Scotch whisky before we started, was somewhat of a contrast to me, a rather tall and slender Quaker lad in Quaker hat and coat and half frightened out of my wits by the honor heaped upon me.

However, we delivered our poems all right, and I am thinking that must have been the time when I was dubbed "the Quaker poet."

—Not many years ago the smallest coin in use on the Pacific coast was a nickel. Last year 23,000,000 pennies were used and more were in demand. The little copper cent is a useful commodity east or west.

WANTS NEW STEAMER.

Editor Daily Ledger:

Kindly permit me through your columns to say a few words in regard to the order recently brought before the council for a new steamer to replace the present on at Central Fire Station.

Evidently the writers heretofore are not versed very well on the requirments of our fire department. We need a new steamer. The present one is some twenty years in service and it seems there should not be much kicking over the purchase of a new one. Previous writers say it does not in their opinion pay for itself, that she was not used at car barn fire, and that they would like to write about large fires etc. Now in regard to paying for herself; why without her your insurance for one thing would increase, and certain people would lose all their property that otherwise the steamer has through its work saved. As regard car barn fire for benefit of writer I would say that steamers are not generally used on one story buildings especially where there is an abundance of water, though should the buildings that now stand on that old site get agoing in good shape you would see her very much in evidence, and another with her would not be out of place. We are very fortunate in not having had a sweeping fire to contend with and I hope the previous writer will never have the opportunity to write of one in this city. Recently we had a fire where the first water from hydrant after going through 100 feet of hose would not reach second story window and the steamer had to get to work and save $2500 worth of property. You can not get water on a fire unless you force it there and if you draw many lines off your hydrants your pressure very soon goes down and where are you then if you have got a good sized fire to contend with?

The nearest outside help is about 5 miles away and what a pretty sight it would be to see the whole business section going and your steamer giving out. You may expect a fire of that kind any time and I hope that unless a writer can give better reasons than I have read, that he will abstain from writing on fire department matters.

Our Council members are no doubt capable of determining whether we will have a new steamer or not and it seemed to me in justice to the people to state a few facts regarding the value of a steamer in our fire department. The council is a great many times condemned for passing orders whereas if the public were informed of facts they would more often appreciate the acts of city council. I am surprised that the business men of our city do not take more interest in city affairs and say something once in a while even though for a starter it is no more than to advocate something for the betterment of our city.

Edmund G. Hayden.

NOTED AUTHOR PRESENT.

The regular meeting of the Men's club of the Wollaston Congregational church was held Tuesday evening. A roast beef supper was served at 6.30 which was pronounced excellent.

The speaker of the evening was James B. Connelly, who at the invitation of President Roosevelt accompanied the fleet on its trip around the Horn to gather material for a book to be published on "The Life of American Seamen."

This trip was the theme of Mr Connelly's talk which was very interesting and gave an insight of the life of the sailors on one of Uncle Sam's fighting vessels.

—I am exceedingly thankful for the prosperity of my neighbors, and for the prosperity of the country at large; that the public conscience has awakened from its deep sleep; that sectional feeling has been dissipated, and that the people of all portions of the country are trying to know one another more familiarly; that all my thoughts are cheerful, and that all my dreams are peaceful; that benevolence is tending to more practical results, and that charity is more widespread; in short, for almost everything that happens, for I know that the remote result will be the uplifting of the spirits of men. I am somewhat old-fashioned, and I am thankful even for that, unimportant as it is.—The late Joel Chandler Harris.

—The union service at Bethany church tomorrow morning should attract a large and representative audience of Quincy people. The citizens of Quincy should always foster and support any movement for good citizenship. Besides the fine program already published, Mayor Shea will deliver a Thanksgiving proclamation and Dr. J. H. Welch, president of the Quincy Anti-Tuberculosis association will give a brief outline of the purpose of the association.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Dore us, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

III—Lady Betty gets her first impression of America. On the dock she is rescued from reporters by the steerage hero, who tells her he is Jim Brett, employed at the Manhattan club, New York. In Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid New York home Betty meets Lieutenant Parker brother of the hostess, who is to take them to visit West Point.

IV—Vivace, a beautiful and expensive dog, is sent to Betty. Mrs. Ess Kay does not know who the donor is, and Betty does not tell her that it is Brett. Lieutenant Parker, whom Betty does not like, makes love to her.

V—Lady Betty has a good time at West Point despite Parker's proposal, which she rejects.

VI—In a walk in Central park Sally tells Betty her love story (she had been seperated years before from the poor man she loved by her family, the man becoming a monk) and advises Betty to marry only when she is sure of her love. They meet Brett.

VII—Betty is introduced to Mrs. Harvey Richmount Taylour, a typical young society woman.

VIII—At Newport Betty falls in love with Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid "cottage," the Moorings. Parker continues his attentions. Mrs. Ess Kay is chagrined on learning that Mrs. Van der Windt, Newport's leader, has planned to "cut" her and her acquaintance, Mrs. Pitchley. Mrs. Ess Kay relies on Lady Betty's presence to maintain her social prestige. She plans an entertainment to introduce Betty.

X—Mrs. Ess Kay plans a fancy dress ball, the features of which are to be Aladdin's cave and the Maze. An invitation is sent to Mohunsleigh's friend, Jameson B. Harborough, a new San Francisco millioniare. Betty is to appear as a frost sprite.

XI—At the ball Parker proposes again. Betty is rescued from him by Brett, who hints that he is there as a reporter. She declares her faith in his future.

XII—Harborough fails to appear at the wedding of Cora Pitchley and Mohunsleigh, to which he has been invited. Everybody at Newport is anxious to meet him. Sally, having quarreled with Mrs. Ess Kay, is visiting a friend in Chicago and has asked Betty to go to Chicago if anything at Newport displeases her. Parker again proposes to Betty and is refused again, whereupon Mrs. Ess Kay tells Betty that her mother, the duchess, plans to have her either engaged to Parker or stay in America until her sister is engaged.

XIII and XIV—Betty runs away from Mrs. Ess Kay, going to New York on her way to Miss Woodburn in Chicago. She appeals to Brett for aid in getting to Chicago. He tells her he is going there also and offers to travel with her.

XV—In Chicago Betty misses Sally, who has gone to Ohio to visit a sick relative. She has nowhere to go before hearing from England. Brett shows her the sights of Chicago after offering to take her to board with some relatives of his own near Sally.

XVI—Betty finds refuge in a pleasant old fashioned Ohio farm homestead with Brett's cousin, Fanny Trowbridge, and her husband, Hezekiah, with whom two girls, Patty and Ide, are staying.

XVII—Betty and Brett discuss Mohunsleigh's friend Harborough. Brett declares Harborough's attraction for the girls lies in his millions rather than in his adventurous career and his courage. Betty becomes indignant, but her anger is dispelled when Brett rescues her from a bull. Sally declares it was her cousin's planning to secure Betty for Parker that drove her from Newport.

After that nothing else happened to upset us on the way to Sally.

The place where she is staying isn't a farm, but quite a small cottage in a lovely garden, walled in with oaks and maples, and Mrs. Randal sells seeds and cuttings.

A young girl came down to the door when we rang, and asked us to "please sit down on the piazza;" she would call Miss Woodburn. Then we had a few minutes to wait, and Sally appeared.

I was glad to see her! And when she held me tight and kissed me I had to wink back some silly tears. It was so good to feel that she cared about me, and would sympathize in everything, for I knew she would.

After Mr. Brett had said "how do you do," and a few polite words, he added that he would just stroll over to the Green Dairy farm across the way. He knew the farmer there, and would like to have a chat with him. We settled that he was to come back for me in an hour, and then Sally and I were left alone together.

She made me begin at the beginning and tell all my adventures, cause as well as effect, before she would give me any of her news, or even her opinions on the situation as far as it concerned me.

It made quite a long story, and Sally was a beautiful listener, as only sympathetic and unselfish people can be.

"There wasn't anything else for me to do, was there?" I asked when she knew everything exactly as it had happened.

He looked like a runaway schoolboy.

She complimented me on my "pluck," like the dear creature she is, and said she hadn't it in her heart to be sorry, as things had turned out, that I had had such a chase to find her.

"To tell the truth, it was your affairs that drove me to Chicago," she went on. "I don't mind your knowing now, dear. We can talk freely about things I couldn't discuss with you before. Of course, I always knew Katherine wanted you for Potter, and that they'd both do anything to get you. It began with her trying to keep other men away from you even on the ship. Do you remember? Nobody could get near you but Tom Doremus, and he wouldn't if Kath hadn't been afraid of Mrs. Van der Windt. It was just the same in Newport, whenever she could fix it so. I couldn't exactly warn you; it wouldn't have been nice. They are my cousins, and I was Kath's guest—though I shouldn't have been for long, if I hadn't wanted to watch over you. But you know I did drop hints sometimes, didn't I? It wasn't my business if you'd fallen in love with Potter, but though he isn't a bad fellow, he's not good enough or strong enough for you, Betty, and I should have been mighty sick at heart if he had got you."

"I never felt he wanted me, really," I said, "although he was always proposing."

"Oh, yes, he did want you. Perhaps he wasn't truly in love at first, though he always admired you, deah. There was an actress that he was crazy about last winter—a nice girl, too, and he would have married her if it hadn't been for Katherine, who was wild over it, said such a misalliance in the family would ruin her as well as him, and contrived to break it off somehow Potter never cared for any one else so much. The girl seemed to understand his temper exactly, and though he was heart and soul for winning you, after the race was begun, I shouldn't wonder a bit—now he's lost you—if that affair didn't come on again some day. He might do worse."

"I wish the girl joy of him," said I. "But how was it you went away from Newport?"

"Oh, I told Kath what I thought of her for trying to trap you. It was that and nothing else. And she didn't like it. She almost asked me to go, and though I knew it was to get me out of the way, I had to do it."

"Mr. Brett has been a saint to me," said I.

Sally smiled her three-cornered smile.

"I think from what you tell me of some of the things you've said to him, and some of the things which have happened, that he has been a saint—more of a saint than you know."

"You mean I've tried his temper?" I asked anxiously.

"Not exactly his temper. But never mind."

Going home Mr. Brett and I walked along the road until we'd passed the cow meadow. Then we took to the short cuts again. A lovely blue darkness was just touched with the faint radiance of a new moon, as if the lid of a box had snapped shut on the sun, and the moment the light was gone the fields lit up with thousands and thousands of tiny, pulsing, flitting sparks.

"What is it?" I asked, astonished.

"Fireflies," said he. "Did you never see any before?"

"Never. How wonderful. They are the most exquisite, magical little things!"

"Then I'm glad you're seeing them for the first time with me," he said.

When we got home the stars were pricking out in the sky, and Patty and Ide were down by the gate, counting them. It seems if you can count seven stars for seven nights, then the first man who touches your hand afterward you're bound to marry. I counted my first seven, and I do hope it won't rain for a week.

Chapter 18

THE day after I came to Valley farm was one of the longest days of my life. Not that it wasn't pleasant, for it was. But when you get up before 6 and finish breakfast at 7 it does give you a good many hours to do what you like with.

I wasn't allowed to help Mrs. Trowbridge and the girls with their work. Mr. Brett went off directly after breakfast with Mr. Trowbridge and the two mysterious young men to get in hay or do something useful and farmy, so I sat in the maple grove with Vivace (who is a great favorite in the household) and wrote down all my experiences since Chicago. We had an enormous dinner at 12, which made me feel very odd, as I'm not used to it. But when we were called to "tea" I knew better than I did yesterday what to expect.

I've written home, of course. I wrote the day after I arrived. At first I felt I ought to cable, but if I did they might send at once, and on second thoughts I decided it wasn't necessary to go to the expense. So I just wrote to mother to say I couldn't stand it with Mrs. Ess Kay on account of her brother and I'd left suddenly to join Sally Woodburn in the country, where I was boarding quite close to her. I wrote to Mrs. Ess Kay, too, and said the same thing, asking her to kindly send on my boxes.

She sent the boxes by what they call "express," but didn't answer my letter, which rather astonished me, as I had thought she would scold and had dreaded it. But when I told Sally she wasn't as much surprised as I was. She knew already everything that happened after I ran away from the Moorings and told me all about it, which interested me a great deal. Mrs. Ess Kay had written her some things, and Mrs. Pitchley (whose maid is an intimate friend of Mrs. Ess Kay's Louise) had supplied all the missing details.

It seems that the day after the pink ball Mrs. Ess Kay had one of her headaches—and no wonder. Feeling very ill, she didn't take much interest in me and took it for granted when Louise said I wasn't out of my room that I wanted to sleep till luncheon.

Potter had been so furious that he thought to punish me for my sins by sulking. Mrs. Ess Kay did not appear at luncheon, and Potter went out somewhere. But when I didn't show myself or even ring, the servants began to think it odd and spoke to Louise. She knocked at my door, and when after rapping several times there was no answer she opened it to find the room empty, the bed smooth, my boxes packed and all Mrs. Ess Kay's presents to me spread out on a sofa.

By that time it was after 2, and, if only they had known, I was leaving the Waldorf-Astoria to take the train for Chicago with Mr. Brett.

Mrs. Ess Kay was so nervous with her headache and the reaction after all her work in getting up the great affair that when she was told I was nowhere to be found she had hysterics and slapped Louise.

Potter was sent for to the Casino and came home in a rage. They talked things over and made up their minds that I had either caught a ship sailing for home or else had gone to Chicago to join Sally. If it hadn't been that they were afraid of a scandal coming out in some horrid society paper they would have applied to the police for help, but as it was they didn't dare, and Potter said he could manage everything himself.

A ship really had sailed that day, so, as well as telegraphing to Sally, Potter went to the offices, then to the docks, and made all sorts of inquiries. From what he heard about some people who had engaged berths at the last minute he couldn't be quite sure I wasn't one of them, having gone under an assumed name. To add to the trouble, no answer came from Sally. Mrs. Hale, according to instructions, had opened the telegram and, knowing something of the story from Sally, wasn't anxious to relieve Mrs. Ess Kay's mind about me in too much of a hurry. Instead of having the message wired again she inclosed it in an envelope and sent it on to Sally by post, so there was another delay, and they knew nothing for certain until a letter from Sally and one from me arrived at about the same time.

Sally's opinion was and is that Mrs. Ess Kay has something up her sleeve; that she won't write to me because she wants to show how hurt and scandalized she is by my ungracious conduct, but that she has some idea for getting even with me sooner or later. If she hadn't that to keep her up Sally thinks she couldn't have resisted answering my letter with a tirade. Fortunately she can't claw me away from the Trowbridges and make me marry Potter—even if he would have me now after all my badness—otherwise she would perhaps have tried to act at once. And she can't have me put in prison on bread and water and solitary confinement, as no doubt she would like to do. Still, I don't feel quite easy in my mind about her silence, lest Sally may be right about some disagreeable plan she's hatching.

I've found out everything about all the members of the family at Valley farm now, and I've got acquainted with most of the neighbors. They call them neighbors if they live anywhere within twelve or fifteen miles.

Mr. Trowbridge, although a farmer who works in his own fields, is an "honorable." I was surprised when I heard that, as I didn't suppose people had titles in America. But he's a senator or something in his own state which is very important, so he is called "honorable" officially and on letters, as one is at home if that's all one can scrape up by way of a courtesy title.

Can Live on Candy

Chocolate Creams and Peanuts Would Keep You Alive, says Prof. Olsen.

Professor JOHN C. OLSEN, Ph. D., United States Food and Drug Inspection Chemist, in his lecture on "Pure Foods and their Preparation," among other things said: "It was shown that two-thirds of a pound of peanuts and two-thirds of a pound of chocolate creams contain sufficient nourishment to feed an adult twenty-four hours. A diet of this kind would not be expensive compared with the cost of other foods."

OUR HOSPITAL

(Legal Title: City Hospital of Quincy)
INCORPORATED 1889

The Trustees of the City Hospital of Quincy earnestly appeal for donations and bequests for the Endowment fund. This now amounts to over $60,000 but a fund of at least $100,000 is urgently needed.

Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000) will endow a Free Bed to which such name may be given as the Donor may desire, but any sum for this noble institution which stands ready to serve us all in the hour of need will be most gratefully received.

The Secretary, TIMOTHY REED, Adams St Quincy, or the Treasurer, RICHARD D. CHASE Savings Bank Building, Quincy, will be very glad to confer with any one or to answer any inquiries.

THE
Young Men's Christian Association
OF QUINCY, MASS.
(Legal Title - Incorporated 1892.)

The Directors of the YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION of Quincy, with a firm faith in the great value of the work which is being done for the young men and boys of our city, make their appeal for donations and bequests toward paying the mortgage indebtedness on the new Association Building. When the building is free from debt it will serve as an Endowment, as there is a goodly income from the dormitories.

Should the Donor prefer, such sum as might be given could be used as an Endowment for an educational class or classes, the Boys Department, or as a special fund in other ways, and could be designated with the name of the Donor.

The Treasurer, WILLIAM F. CUMMINGS, 7 Clive Street, Quincy, or the General Secretary, ERNEST G. GAY, will be happy to answer inquiries.

BONI WANTS HIS CHILDREN

Says De Sagan Is Not Fit Person to Have Charge of Them

Paris, Nov. 25.—Count Boni de Castellane, former husband of the Princess Helie de Sagan, who was Miss Anna Gould of New York, renewed in court today his efforts to regain possession of his three sons, parted from him by judicial order when his wife obtained a divorce from him.

In his petition Count de Castellane avers that Price de Sagan, who is his cousin, is not a fit person to have charge of the young boys. He declares that they are in great peril of physical and moral deterioration while in daily contact with the present husband of his former wife despite her presence. He asks that the custody of the boys be awarded to himself.

The boys about whom the legal fight is being waged are Boniface de Castellane, born in 1897; George de Castellane, born in 1898, and Jay de Castellane, born in 1902. As heirs to what is left of their mother's share of the Jay Gould millions they will be very rich.

In court today an attorney was present to observe the course of the proceedings for George J. Gould of New York, brother of the Princess de Sagan and head of the Gould family.

MAGNESS SERVING HIS SENTENCE

Romance of President's Yacht Ends on Prison Ship

Portsmouth, N. H., Nov. 25.—C. L. Magness, husband of the daughter of the late United States Senator Gorman of Maryland, who was recently convicted on a charge of deserting from the navy, arrived here last night and was sent on board the prison ship Topeka to serve a year's sentence.

Magness is a native of Baltimore and joined the navy in 1905 as a first-class musician. He played a clarinet. While serving aboard the president's dispatch boat Dolphin he became acquainted with Miss Ada Gorman.

The next thing was a sensational surprise to society. They were married and he deserted from the navy. While on his wedding tour a young woman in Baltimore, employed in a laundry, to whom he had been engaged, gave information to the navy department of where she thought he could be found, and also of his marriage to Miss Gorman.

He was finally arrested, in September, at Louisville, as he was entering an apartment house with his wife. Over $18,000 in government bonds were found on his person, besides valuable jewelry. When the detectives delivered him to League Island navy yard, in October, they found a bundle of money amounting to $6000. At the court martial proceedings it was brought out that he married under the name of Magness, but was known in the navy as Hartlove.

He is 23 years of age, and previous to entering the navy was employed in Baltimore, where he made bed springs and mattresses.

Receivers to Sell Mill Property

Bennington, Vt., Nov. 25.—The receivers of the North Pownal Manufacturing company of North Pownal have been authorized by the United States circuit court to sell the mills, tenements and all the property of the corporation at public auction in this town on Dec. 2. The company produces cotton goods and was involved in the failure of the Arnold Print works of North Adams, Mass. The Arnold Print works, Williamstown cotton mills and the Beaver and Eclipse mills of North Adams will be sold at public auction at Pittsfield next Tuesday.

Paupers' Health Jeopardized

Manchester, N. H., Nov. 25.—The health of 421 inmates of the county farm at Grasmere is endangered by the condition of the thirty head of cattle at the institution, six of which were destroyed yesterday after it had been definitely decided that they were suffering from tuberculosis. According to a report made by a veterinarian of this city, all but four of the thirty cows are either suffering from tuberculosis or show strong symptoms of the disease.

A Wolf In Sheep's Clothing

Chicago, Nov. 25.—Robert E. Palmer, who was president of the City Letter Carriers' association of Illinois and superintendent of a Sunday school at Joliet, admitted in the federal court here that he had been pilfering money from letters intrusted to him during the last seventeen years. He pleaded guilty and despite pleas for leniency entered by prominent friends he was sentenced to serve three and one-half years in the house of correction.

Two Municipal Elections

Dover, N. H., Nov. 25.—At the city election here George J. Foster (Rep.) was elected mayor by a plurality of 487 over Pinkham (Dem). This will be the second time Foster has occupied the mayor's chair.

Franklin, N. H., Nov. 25.—Enos K. Sawyer (Dem.) was elected mayor at the municipal election here, defeating his Republican opponent, Kelley, by a plurality of 77.

MESSAGE FROM HIS FIRST WIFE

Edward Vanderbilt Received It Through Spirit Named "Trixie"

HIS BELIEF IS NOT CHANGED

Denounces Inquiry to Determine His Mental Fitness to Conduct His Business as Sacriligious--Doctrines of Spiritualism Unfolded to Him by His Second Wife, Who, His Daughter Declares, Deceived Him

New York, Nov. 25.—Expressing the same firm belief in spiritualism that characterized his testimony at a previ ous hearing, Edward Ward Vanderbilt, husband of May P. S. Vanderbilt, the medium, took the stand in his own defense in the inquiry that has been instituted by his daughter, Minerva Vanderbilt, to determine his mental fitness to care for his property and conduct his business.

The inquiry is before a sheriff's jury and a commission appointed by the supreme court in Brooklyn. Miss Vanderbilt claims that her father displayed his mental unfitness by his marriage to a woman who, she alleges, deceived him by "fake" spiritualistic manifestations.

At the very beginning of his testimony Vanderbilt manifested a bitterness toward the attorney representing his daughter in the suit. The witness termed the proceedings an outrage and said that he had practically been driven out of business and had his property tied up as a consequence of the inquiry. Then, pointing a finger at his daughter's lawyer, he said:

"I want to say that this is the most sacrilegious thing I ever heard of. You ought to be ashamed of yourself, sir. Because you are a Jew and I am a spiritualist, you seek to ridicule my belief to which I have a perfect right under the constitution. My religion is as sacred to me as yours is to you, and if you have no regard for my feelings in this matter."

Mr. Vanderbilt told of the spirits he had received messages from through his second wife, Mrs. May P. S. Vanderbilt. He mentioned "Bright Eyes," "Chanderlolt" and "Fidelis" as the more prominent of the group of spirits he had heard from, and then gave the name of an entirely new spirit—one that has not figured in the testimony heretofore. The name of this spirit was "Trixie."

"Trixie," he said, "antedated the other spirits of his acquaintance and brought him a message from his first wife saying that she hoped he was in good health, and that he was getting along well in his widowhood."

In explaining his belief in Spiritualism he said: "I thoroughly believe we are all one in spirit, the only thing that separates us being the body. Mrs. Vanderbilt unfolded to me the doctrines of our religious belief. We were married on June 1, 1907. She is now in New England, but I cannot say just where. She has been absent on her present tour since July 7 last. She was compelled to travel, for I had no money to give her, and she consented to go to work and give me money to assist me. If it were not for the fact that my property is locked up, she would be with me now."

The inquiry was adjourned after the testimony of Vanderbilt had been heard.

Simon Started Revolution

Washington, Nov. 25.—J. N. Leger, haitian minister, received a long cablegram from the president of Hayti, who charges as the direct cause of the revolution the fact that General Simon threatened the life of the administrator of the interior, whereupon Simon was dismissed from the government service. It is stated that the government troops are clearing down upon Simon, who is reported to be isolated.

Roberts' Speech Interests Germans

Berlin, Nov. 25.—The speech delivered in the British house of lords by Field Marshal Roberts, in which the speaker, hinting at the possible German invasion of England, said that a million men were needed on shore to protect England from such a contingency, has aroused considerable interest here. Complete reserve, however, is maintained in official quarters.

Suspicious of American Cattle

London, Nov. 25.—The board of agriculture has ordered the slaughter, without delay, of the cattle on board the four steamers that have arrived in England since the board issued its order prohibiting the importation of cattle from New York and Pennsylvania. The animals aboard these vessels were found to be free of the disease, but no chances are being taken.

Shipping Blocked by Fog

New York, Nov. 25.—Withheld from sailing or leaving this port by a dense blanket of blinding fog, a score or more of ocean liners are anchored in the lower bay and outside of Sandy Hook. The fog is one of the densest on record. River traffic is practically at a standstill.

Michigan Cattle Quarantined

Detroit, Nov. 25.—After a conference with Secretary of Agriculture Wilson and Dr. Melvin of the bureau of animal industry with state officials, a quarantine was ordered against Michigan cattle similar to the one enforced in Pennsylvania and New York.

COMPENSATION.

You have to pay for what you get.
A gift comes to you free,
But if you've nothing to return
You do not get it. See?
A stolen kiss seems cheap enough
Snatched from a lady friend,
But often you will find it more
Expensive in the end.

It seems an easy way to get
The little bunch of bliss,
It's so much trouble to inquire
If you may have a kiss.
And so by stealth you pick the prize
Like cherries from a tree,
And, not content with one, you try
To make it two or three.

And then you go upon your way
As happy as a lark
And plan another theft next day
As soon as it is dark.
A basket of the choicest fruits,
Of peaches red and plums,
For nothing—isn't it a dream?
But wait till pay day comes.

The tickets for the matinee
You have to bring around,
The choicest candy in the store
At eighty cents per pound,
And if she up and marries you
Then, chastened, mild and meek,
You pony up without a word
Your pay check once a week.

Pointed.

"You don't appreciate me."

"No. Do you know any one who does?"

"Yes."

"Don't you think it would show better judgment for you to seek that society then?"

Felt the Shock.

"Stunning costume she is wearing."

"Indeed, I don't notice that any one is stunned by it."

"Oh, yes, her husband is when the bills come in!"

Of Course.

"I have found my ideal man."

"What are you going to do with him?"

"Oh, tame him and make a man of him."

Caught.

They sat at ease by shoreless seas
And sang of love together;
They sang of joy without alloy,
Of shamrock and of heather.

They sang of life all freed from strife
Beside the shining waters,
Of Scotland's sons, the fearless ones,
Of Erin's smiling daughters.

A Scotchman he to some degree
And she an Irish Biddy,
His finish near to you is clear,
For Biddy was a widdy.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

You never can tell by the blush of a peach whether it is bitter or not.

No married man ever keeps a secret in easy reach.

A man thinks a woman likes to scold, but that is only a salve to his conscience.

When some men think, their brains seem to creak so that it just gives you the headache to hear them.

Running for president is such warm work that probably no one of the candidates will trouble much about cold feet.

A really smart woman conceals the fact with a great deal of care.

Girls never believe that young widows are really as lonely and needful of sympathy as their weeds make them appear.

Sometimes the young lady's ice cream appetite is like the young man's creditors—hard to satisfy.

THE CONQUEST OF MR. IDEAL.

[Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.]

I had courted Millicent for two years or more without success. I hadn't proposed, for whenever I'd get spooney she'd tell me just what kind of a man her ideal was—no more like me than a landau is like a donkey cart. Her lover must be intellectual, profound, whereas I am stupid and scatter brained. But one thing I am, and I know it—I'm a dead game sport. At tennis, football, horses or yachts I can beat Mr. Ideal every time.

One afternoon I called on Millicent with my new four cylinder auto. If Millicent was always worshiping this imaginary puffed up being of ideas, she didn't mind a sixty mile an hour jog in an auto. Sometimes I used to think she was holding the duffer up to bother me, for I didn't see where her own lofty sentiments came in.

Anyway she ran upstairs and in five minutes was down again in a long gray silk duster and her hat tied down with no end of veiling. I was waiting for her in the hall, but she was in such a hurry that she brushed right past me and out on to the stoop. There by the curb was my automobile glistening for all it was worth. She stood looking at it for a moment wrapped in admiration; then we both went down to the curb.

"What a beautiful shade of red!" she exclaimed, jumping into the machine.

"Glad you admire it," I replied.

We jogged along at a town pace till we reached the open road; then I let her out a trifle. She was a lightweight two seated vehicle and with all her power on a match for a hurricane. We soon put a matter of twenty miles between us and the town and came to a big stretch of open country all on a dead level. I wanted to get on another road to my right and, knowing that I'd have to go around Robin Hood's barn to do it, made up my mind to take to the fields. The ground seemed perfectly smooth, and there were but few fences, some of them down. I asked Millicent if she would like a ride of that kind, and she said she would. So, swerving to the right between two telegraph poles, we took to the open.

Of course we didn't attempt any rapid gait, and, considering our springs and big tires, we didn't find it uncomfortable wheeling. There were here and there a house and scattered herds of cattle. We'd gone a couple of miles when we came to a rail fence directly in our way. I got out to let down the rails. I was getting the last rail out of the way when, glancing at a herd of cattle grazing near, I saw a powerful bull break from among them and trot toward us. I glanced at my red auto shining in the afternoon sun and took in the situation. The bull would go for the machine, break up the tonneau, and Millicent would be at his mercy.

In two seconds I was in my seat and had the power turned on. I gave a quick look back and saw the bull coming on a gallop. Passing through the opening I had made, I hastened my pace, and had we been on a road we could have laughed at the bull. But we weren't, and as luck would have it we struck the roughest piece of ground to be met in four counties. The best I could do was about six miles an hour, and the bull could beat that easily.

"I'll keep my eye on the ground ahead while you watch the bull," I said to Millicent, "and tell me if he gains."

"He's gaining every moment," she cried. "Go faster."

The way became smoother, and I put on more power, but it was a question whether it was preferable to be knocked to pieces by the jolting or gored by the bull. Millicent evidently preferred the former, for she begged me to increase the speed. At the same time I received a solace in our danger. Millicent in her terror put her arm around my neck. She didn't know what she was doing, but it felt nice all the same.

While I was enjoying it I saw ahead the remains of a swamp. There was no water in it, but plenty of mud. I glanced to the right and the left, only to see that it was a long way round. I plunged into the bog, and when I did so I knew it was all up with us. The bull came on, and pretty soon one could hear the thud of his hoofs directly behind us. Millicent clung to me, and I clung to the wheel. We had nearly crossed the bog when I noticed before us on the other side a rail fence. I put on as much speed as I dared, and on reaching the fence, telling Millicent to crouch, I undertook to drive through it. At the moment the bull caught the machine on his horns, we felt the tonneau rise, and it and we and flying fence rails came down in a scattered heap.

I saw Millicent rising on her knees, the bull charging toward her. Picking up a fence rail, I put myself in his way, poised the rail and took him with the end of it square on the forehead. Stunned by the blow, he stopped, looked at me in a dazed fashion, turned tail and trotted away.

I felt proud of myself. Yes, I admit it. I realized that I'd done something worth doing. I'd saved Millicent's life. I stood the fence rail on end, grasped in one hand, put my other arm akimbo, crossed my right leg over my left and said:

"Now fetch on your Mr. Ideal."

But Millicent made no reply. She fainted.

I took her in my arms. A farmer came running toward us, and—Mr. Ideal has gone up.

ANDREW C. EWING.

OUR EARLY STATESMEN.

Monroe's Expansion Views and Madison's Population Guess.

Some of our early statesmen were not expansionists. Washington was opposed to assuming the ownership of the Mississippi river, and James Monroe when a member of the Virginia convention in 1788 argued against the adoption of the federal constitution for geographical reasons. "Consider," he said, "the territory lying between the Atlantic ocean and the Mississippi. Its extent far exceeds that of the German empire. It is larger than any territory that ever was under any one free government. It is too extensive to be governed but by a despotic monarchy." And this from the man who thirty years later was elected president of the United States extended far beyond the Mississippi and who became the author of the "Monroe doctrine."

A year after the adoption of the constitution James Madison thought he was making a bold guess when he estimated that the population of the country might, "in some years," double in number and reach 6,000,000. He lived to see far beyond that. Yet it is true that for a number of years the population was largely confined to the original thirteen colonies. In 1789, when the constitution was adopted, New York city had 33,000 inhabitants. In 1817 it had 115,000, Philadelphia 112,000, Baltimore 55,000, Boston 40,000, Providence 10,000, Hartford 8,000, Pittsburg 7,000, Cincinnati 7,000 and St. Louis 3,500. Chicago was but a fort, and Indianapolis was an unbroken wilderness. The country was not crowded yet.—Exchange.

CONSOLATION.

The Musician Reminded the Poet of the Case of Guarnerius.

The musician with a compassionate smile watched the poet trimming the fringe from his cuff.

"After all," he said, "your verse may live when Marie Corelli, Winston Churchill and Hall Caine himself are forgotten. Remember the case of Guarnerius."

"Who was he?" the poet asked.

"A pauper and a violin maker. Guarnerius in the seventeenth century made violins that everybody thought too thick; hence they brought only $2 apiece. Musicians would buy them and have them pared down.

"Guarnerius insisted that they were not too thick. When he heard of one of his instruments being pared down he flew into a frightful rage. He had a grouch against the world because it wouldn't agree with him about violin making. He died a pauper because the world would have none of his violins.

"A Guarnerius is now and then to be picked up. Usually it is a pared instrument, and its value is not very high. But find an unpared Guarnerius and you can get anything you like for it. It is one of the world's few perfect violins.

"But Guarnerius died a pauper. The Hall Caines and Winston Churchills of the violin world of his day refused with sneers to drink with him. He, too, trimmed his cuffs."—Los Angeles Times.

Fascination of an Old Bookstore.

"There seems to be a fascination about an old bookstore that some persons find it difficult to overcome," observed the proprietor of one of those establishments. "While we have a large number of good patrons, there are some who delight to come in and just pore over old volumes. I have seen men stand in this store and practically read a book through in an afternoon. They seem to forget their surroundings for the time being, and when they emerge from their abstraction they are apt to observe that they 'have just been looking over the books' and ask for some volume that they are quite sure is out of print. Yes, sir, the old bookstore is a free library in a way, but it is an interesting business and fairly profitable."—Philadelphia Record.

Fake Remnants.

A country storekeeper, a pair of long, bright shears in hand, calmly cut a roll of silk into remnants.

"Women," he explained to his city cousin, "are remnant mad. There are women who never buy except at remnant sales. Such women will pass by goods in the piece at a quarter a yard and snap up the same goods in remnant lengths at 30 cents.

"So great is the demand for remnants that it is impossible to keep up the legitimate supply."

The country storekeeper winked.

"Hence," he said, "my present occupation."—Los Angeles Times.

Silenced.

"Wasn't that young Mr. Tiff who left the house as I came in?" asked the judge of his eldest daughter.

"Yes, papa."

"Did I not issue an injunction against his coming here any more?"

"Yes, papa, but he appealed to a higher court, and mamma reversed your decision."

Run Down.

Tom—Of course the bride looks lovely, as brides always do. Nell—Yes, but the bridegroom doesn't look altogether fit; seems rather run down. Tom—Run down? Oh, yes, caught after a long chase!—Philadelphia Press.

Woes of the Amateur.

Wifey—I wonder why the grass doesn't come up? Hubby—I'm sure I can't tell. You don't suppose you planted the seeds upside down, do you?—London Tit-Bits.

THE WEATHER.

Local forecast for Quincy and vicinity:—

General cloudy Wednesday with occasional rain. Thursday unsettled without rain. Colder, moderate southerly winds, increasing and becoming easterly.

The temperature at noon today was 53 degrees. A year ago 45 degrees.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS TODAY.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

Schools closed today for the Thanksgiving holiday. They will reopen next Monday.

The weather this morning did not look very promising for a pleasant day. It may clear, however, for Thanksgiving although unsettled weather is promised.

As the Loyal Ladies of Clan McGregor hold their annual Masquerade ball in Quincy Music Hall this evening Mr. Baker's dancing school will not meet until the following Wednesday evening.

The usual interesting football game of Thanksgiving day will be between the All-Stars and the Atlantics, both local aggregations. The former team is composed mostly of High school players of this year's eleven, who will naturally play a fast game. The Atlantic team is made up of former High school stars and some present stars. Moody and Comins, the famous tackles of the crack 1906 eleven are expected to be in the line-up.

OPEN LETTER TO HIS HONOR.

Dear Mr. Mayor:

I am informed that on Saturday next you are to speak at Houghs Neck and again ask the voters to support you on Tuesday next, either as a Democratic or Citizens' candidate.

No doubt it would be of interest to your audience to know why you did not expend more money out of the regular appropriation either in repairing or removing the dust off Sea street. You will no doubt recall the statement made by you a year ago when you said you believed the regular appropriation should be "distributed proportionately in all parts of Quincy." Of course you are not expected to say much about the extra $800 borrowed money which you used. This is outside the regular appropriation.

Another interesting topic would be why, as chief executive you have not enforced the order of the Board of Health of Aug. 11? Was it because of economy? Would you have required a special appropriation or a further increase in the tax levy? Or was it because you feared the loss of a few votes?

Very respectfully,
Andrew A. Meyer,
17 Sea Avenue,
Houghs Neck.

GRANITE CITY CLUB.

Escalloped oysters, hot rolls, coffee and cider are on the menu for the the lunch at the wekly whist tournament at the rooms of the Granite City club tonight. Two handsome turks will ornament the mantle in the card room. Clarence Fouche will preside at the piano in the parlor, which is a sufficient guarantee of good music. The members and their friends are therefore assured of a pleasant evening.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it falls to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Routine Business Transacted

A regular meeting of the school committee was held Tuesday evening. The members present were Bushnell, Curtis, Hunting, Miller, Newcomb, O'Hara and Owens.

The resignations of Miss Elizabeth Hiscock, master's assistant of the John Hancock school and Miss Louise G. Bates, supervisor of drawing in the elementary schools were received and accepted.

Miss Daisy F. Burnell was transferred from the Coddington school and promoted to master's assistant at the John Hancock.

Miss Alice E. Webb was elected as teacher at the Coddington school.

Walter L. Graves was elected as teacher at the High school.

The secretary was authorized to advertise for bids for supplying the schools with fuel.

The chairman was authorized to ask the City Council to transfer the receipts from tuition etc., to the appropriation for schools and to make such transfers in the department appropriations as may be necessary.

The chairman appointed Messrs. Owens, Newcomb and Duggan a special committee to write the annual report.

The financial statement was reported as follows:

	Appropriation.	Expended.	Balance.
Salaries	$106,930	$95,032.60	$10,898.40
Janitors	9,050	8,295.70	754.30
Books, Supplies,	10,000	9,889.43	110.57
Fuel	6,750.00	6,268.52	481.48
Transportation	1,250.00	1,034.00	216.00
Rents	360	330.00	30.00
Evening Schools	1,500	1,009.80	490.20
Totals	$135,840	$122,849.05	$12,990.95

Note. $250 was transferred from the appropriation for Fuel to the appropriation for Transportation, November 16, 1908.

ITALIAN ART AT LIBRARY.

Art lovers will be pleased to know that there is now an exhibit in the Public Library of over 100 pictures on the Development of art in Italy. This includes reproductions of paintings of the periods from 1260 to 1534, and is especially appropriate at this season of the year because of the number of Madonnas which it contains. It is also timely for the two Friday Clubs who are studying Italy this winter. A second exhibit on Italian art follows this one on Dec. 15, so that the members of both clubs should be sure to see both sets of photographs.

A large map of New England about 3 x 5 feet published by Scarborough Co. has just been purchased by the Library and may be had for consultation by any one interested upon application at the desk. This map is of special up-to-date value, as it shows all railroads, steam and electric, towns, cities post offices and stations, with distances between stations in English statute miles.

Strange Race of Ancient Britons.

Among the races of humankind which away back of history's records passed like clouds over various parts of the earth one of the most puzzling to ethnologists is that of the early bronze age men who dwelt in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, and are supposed to have constructed the special forms of stone circles whose remains are now found there. These men differed significantly, says J. Gray, from all the prehistoric racial types previously determined in Britain. They were remarkably broad headed, and their average stature was only five feet three inches, as shown by skeletons. The British neolithic race was markedly long headed, and the bronze age race, which built the round tumuli, was also long headed and tall.

Man and Woman.

Father Vaughan of London, preaching on marriage, remarked that a woman said to him: "When you have seen one man you have seen them all in their moods and tenses. They are all alike." His reply was: "It may be so, but woman is like an irregular French verb, and unless a man studies her in all her peculiar moods and tenses he will misconstrue and misinterpret her, much to his disadvantage."

An Overdressed Drama.

It is only in the last fifty years that the true purpose of the theater, the decent interpretation of the drama, has been utterly obscured. Today carpenters, costumers and wigmakers throw the humble playwright into the shade.—National Review.

ATTRACTIVE TRIFLES.

Artistic Gifts That Take Little Time to Make.

The mission photograph frame is carried out in heavy green linen crash. The colors used in embroidering the conventional design are the dark shades of green and the bronze browns.

Pretty opera bags are always a welcome gift, and half a yard of handsome ribbon will make up into a most desirable receptacle for glasses.

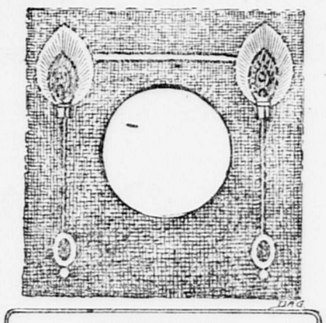

Candle shades covered with pale pink baby ribbon in little crinkly loops are attractive and as presents would please most housewives.

Perfumed coat and skirt hangers are popular, and so are the ribbon cases that contain the glass tube hatpin holder.

Really beautiful utility cases that can be hung upon a wall or rolled for traveling are made from ribbon. To make such an article get half a yard of ribbon that is six inches in width. Turn down an inch wide hem at the top and along the bottom gather and sew on a thin piece of silk the same size. This is then divided into pockets and the upper edge shirred. Runners the length of the case, dividing it into sections, should then be put on the inside.

Through these articles of the toilet such as a shoe horn, button hook, manicure implements, etc., and a sewing outfit with pockets for needles, spools of thread and silk, scissors and all such necessaries are put. A little pincushion is set firmly at one end. The pockets receive bolts of baby ribbon, buttons and all the trifles that go to furnish a workbasket.

Cardboard boxes neatly covered with ribbon and furnished with three spools of baby ribbon in dainty colorings are a gift within the skill of the amateur seamstress. A loop should be added

MATERIALS REQUIRED.
One small linen doily.
Filo embroidery silks.
Sheet of cotton wadding.
Ten cents' worth of sachet powder.
Three yards of baby ribbon

MISSION PHOTOGRAPH FRAME.

inside the cover to hold a couple of bodkins and a pair of tiny scissors.

A ribbon covered glove case is equally simple of construction. It should be interlined with perfumed cotton and fitted with a soft silk lining. A pretty finish is to turn back one corner, holding down with a bow of ribbon.

Another acceptable present that can be made by the artistic girl is a set of name cards, hand painted. These are sure to give pleasure if given to a woman who entertains largely.

Those in the form of floral wreaths cut out, so they slip on over the edge of the tumbler are new; also dainty figures of women copied from some old painting and provided with pasteboard backs so they stand. These figures can carry big muffs as reticules that can be lifted and show a blank space for the name underneath, thus making them available later for framing when pasted to a flat surface and surrounded by a gilt mat.

College Flags.

College flags are quite simple to make for Christmas gifts, but require care and much precision in putting the letters on as well as in cutting them.

A good plan is to cut the letters from stiff cardboard and trace around them on the felt, afterward cutting with a sharp knife.

In mounting on the felt background paste them on with a very thin coating of photograph paste and couch around all edges with many strands of silk caught down at regular intervals with a single strand of the same color.

Couching means to hold the heavy cord or many strands of silk along the edge of the thing to be outlined and stitching across it and through the material with the single thread in the needle.

Handkerchief Case.

A handkerchief case is a pretty gift that can be made from ribbon by first cutting two pieces of cardboard into heart shapes. These hearts are covered on both sides and form the bottom and the cover, respectively.

The broad flowered ribbon used is gathered on both edges, one of which is sewed to the heart at the bottom. Then a lining of plain soft silk is set in, and the edge of the ribbon is connected to the upper edge of the lining. A ruching of narrow ribbon trims the cover and a bow acts as a hinge. A loop answers the purpose of a lid lifter.

The Republican Candidate for MAYOR
A SUCCESSFUL BUSINESS MAN.

Nov. 27-28-30

WILLIAM M. CHASE, President Republican City Committee, 192 Davis Street, Wollaston.

TO THE VOTERS OF QUINCY: November, 27, 1908.

The undersigned, Citizens of Quincy, irrespective of party and vitally interested in our City's welfare, respectfully call to your attention the desirability of re-electing HON. WILLIAM T. SHEA, Mayor.

Mayor Shea, in selecting the administrative heads of the City Government, displayed a spirit of non-partisanship, which should meet with the approval of all citizens, who believe that partisan politics in municipal affairs should be sub-ordinated to the good of the public service.

His administration of the business of the City, has been most conscientious and efficient.

The re-election of Mayor Shea will mean the continuance for another year of the present prudent, economical and business-like method of transacting the affairs of the City, and will enable him to further advance, if not carry to completion, the many important matters in charge of the present City Government, which ought to be carried through by the men familiar with the work.

We believe the best interest of the City will be served by retaining Mayor Shea in office for another term, and therefore, most earnestly urge his re-election.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Dore us, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

III—Lady Betty gets her first impression of America. On the dock she is rescued from reporters by the steerage hero, who tells her he is Jim Brett, employed at the Manhattan club, New York. In Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid New York home Betty meets Lieutenant Parker brother of the hostess, who is to take them to visit West Point.

IV—Vivace, a beautiful and expensive dog, is sent to Betty. Mrs. Ess Kay does not know who the donor is, and Betty does not tell her that it is Brett. Lieutenant Parker, whom Betty does not like, makes love to her.

V—Lady Betty has a good time at West Point despite Parker's proposal, which she rejects.

VI—In a walk in Central park Sally tells Betty her love story (she had been seperated years before from the poor man she loved by her family, the man becoming a monk) and advises Betty to marry only when she is sure of her love. They meet Brett.

VII—Betty is introduced to Mrs. Harvey Richmount Taylour, a typical young society woman.

VIII—At Newport Betty falls in love with Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid "cottage," the Moorings. Parker continues his attentions. Mrs. Ess Kay is chagrined on learning that Mrs. Van der Windt, Newport's leader, has planned to "cut" her and her acquaintance, Mrs. Pitchley. Mrs. Ess Kay relies on Lady Betty's presence to maintain her social prestige. She plans an entertainment to introduce Betty.

X—Mrs. Ess Kay plans a fancy dress ball, the features of which are to be Aladdin's cave and the Maze. An invitation is sent to Mohunsleigh's friend, Jameson B. Harborough, a new San Francisco millioniare. Betty is to appear as a frost sprite.

XI—At the ball Parker proposes again. Betty is rescued from him by Brett, who hints that he is there as a reporter. She declares her faith in his future.

XII—Harborough fails to appear at the wedding of Cora Pitchley and Mohunsleigh, to which he has been invited. Everybody at Newport is anxious to meet him. Sally, having quarreled with Mrs. Ess Kay, is visiting a friend in Chicago and has asked Betty to go to Chicago if anything at Newport displeases her. Parker again proposes to Betty and is refused again, whereupon Mrs. Ess Kay tells Betty that her mother, the duchess, plans to have her either engaged to Parker or stay in America until her sister is engaged.

XIII and XIV—Betty runs away from Mrs. Ess Kay, going to New York on her way to Miss Woodburn in Chicago. She appeals to Brett for aid in getting to Chicago. He tells her he is going there also and offers to travel with her.

XV—In Chicago Betty misses Sally, who has gone to Ohio to visit a sick relative. She has nowhere to go before hearing from England. Brett shows her the sights of Chicago after offering to take her to board with some relatives of his own near Sally.

XVI—Betty finds refuge in a pleasant old fashioned Ohio farm homestead with Brett's cousin, Fanny Trowbridge, and her husband, Hezekiah, with whom two girls, Patty and Ide, are staying.

XVII—Betty and Brett discuss Mohunsleigh's friend Harborough. Brett declares Harborough's attraction for the girls lies in his millions rather than in his adventurous career and his courage. Betty becomes indignant, but her anger is dispelled when Brett rescues her from a bull. Sally declares it was her cousin's planning to secure Betty for Parker that drove her from Newport.

XVIII—The Ohio country folk please Betty very much. Whit Walker, a country store-keeper, who loves Patty, fears that the girl is in love with Brett. He asks Betty's aid, and the young Englishwoman becomes very jealous of Patty and miserable.

The two young men who come in to eat with us, but are never seen about the house at any other time, are "farm hands," though they are not treated at all like servants, and Mr. Trowbridge lends them the newest books and magazines (of which he has quantities) to read in the evening.

It is very strange about Patty and Ide. Though Patty is so quiet, almost meek in her ways, and dresses so plainly and is quite contented to work in the hot kitchen, cooking and washing dishes, it turns out that she is a very rich girl, or will be. She is an orphan, and her grandfather, although a farmer, has more than a million dollars (which sounds tremendous, but wouldn't be as impressive, I suppose, if one did it in pounds), and when he dies, as he must before long, as he is very old, Patty will have all his money.

Young people get on his nerves, so Patty lives with the Trowbridges, who are friends of his, and helps Mrs. Trowbridge with her work.

Ide really is a sort of servant, but she would go away instantly if anybody called her that, and she is so afraid some one may think she is inferior to the others in the house because she is paid wages for her work that she does her hair elaborately, wears smarter dresses than the rest and puts herself rather forward with strangers so as to impress them. She wouldn't even like to be called a "help," but says that she "obliges" Mrs. Trowbridge, and she wouldn't stop long enough to draw another breath if she were not treated better if anything than Patty.

After "tea" we drove to the Emporium at Hermann's Corners. The Emporium is always open till half past 9, and there was going to be an "ice cream festival" there that night. I didn't know what an ice cream festival meant, but Mr. Trowbridge said I should see for myself, and it would probably be different from anything I had yet experienced. Mr. Trowbridge and Mr. Brett and I all drove in the buggy. It was rather a squeeze in one seat, but it was fun, and we were very merry.

The rest all squashed into a big wagon and sat on the hay. I would have gone in that way, too, but Mr. Trowbridge wanted me to try his horse, and we could hear the others laughing every minute as they came jolting on behind us.

It was about seven miles to Hermann's Corners, and after a lovely drive through charming, peaceful country we arrived just as it was beginning to be dusk.

I couldn't have imagined such a place as the Emporium, and when I was in the thick of it I said to myself that it would be worth one's while coming over to the States just to visit it, if nothing else. If I had to choose between I believe I'd rather see it than Niagara falls, for one knows Niagara falls from biographs and things, and nothing short of actually seeing could give one the slightest idea of Mr. Whit Walker and his Emporium.

My first impression of the Emporium was a huge, rambling wooden building rather like a vast barn with a dozen smaller barns tacked on to it and windows let in. It is painted pea green and has a rough veranda running partly around it—a high veranda with no steps, or, if any, at such long intervals that you must search for them. But as there's no pavement we just scrambled out of the buggy and cart on to the veranda, and there we were landed among the most extraordinary collection of things I ever dreamed of. The stock in the Emporium having overflowed from the inside on to the veranda, we stumbled about among boxes of eggs, sewing machines, crates of dishes, garden tools, brooms, rocking chairs, perambulators, boots, "canned" fruit, children's toys, luggage, green vegetables, ice cream freezers, bales of calico, men's suits, piled up books, clotheslines and a thousand other "goods."

Just as we threaded our way through the groups of young men, who looked at us a good deal, people were lighting the gas in the Emporium. It was incandescent and blazed up suddenly with a fierce light as if it were a volcano having an eruption. All the women inside (there was quite a crowd of them, bareheaded or in perfectly fascinating frilled sunbonnets) shrieked and then giggled. A man who was surrounded by girls said something we couldn't hear which made everybody laugh, and Mr. Trowbridge exclaimed:

"That's Whit, sure, holding court. Couldn't be anybody else."

"And I guess that's the honorable," said the voice we had heard—such a nice voice; it was enough to make you laugh with pleasure just to hear it—and the head we could see towering over the sunbonnets began to move toward us. The girls edged away good naturedly, and there was a man almost as fine looking as Mr. Brett smiling at us and holding out his big hand.

Everything was big about him—his voice, his brown throat, his shoulders and his good white smile, shining with kindness and two rows of perfect teeth; his nature, too, as you could see by his beaming, humorous gray eyes and the generous dimple in his square chin.

"Whit, this is the little English lady ship I've told you about who's staying over at our house," said Mr. Trowbridge. So we were introduced, and the great Whit shook my hand with a vigorous magnetism which made me feel I would like to clap and give him three cheers.

He is the sort of man I should try to make president of the United States if I were an American, and I'm sure he would get lots of votes from his part of the country if he were nominated.

"I'm real pleased to meet you," said he, "and I'm honored to have you visit my store. Say, I guess some of our American leading ladies will have to get a hustle on if they want to save themselves now you're over here. I didn't know they made 'em like that on your side. I tell you what it is honorable, I won't have much use for some of our fellows if they let her go back, eh? Now, ma'am, you just tell me what handle I'm to put to your name, but I think I'll call you princess."

"Then I'll call you prince."

Accompanied by Mr. Walker and Patty, whom he chose as the companion of our explorations, we went upstairs and downstairs and left no corner of the Emporium unvisited.

"Aren't you afraid to leave so many things outside on the veranda?" I asked. "Suppose they should be stolen?"

The great man only laughed, but a lanky customer who overheard drawled out:

"What, steal from Whit Walker of Hermann's Corners! Waal, I guess the skunk mean enough to do that would get himself lynched by every decent chap in this darned county."

"I've got one friend, you see, princess," chuckled my king of the Emporium.

"You've got two," said I.

"Well, now, that's mighty pretty of you. Say, do you mean it, honor bright?"

"Honor bright," I repeated.

"Then I wonder if I might ask a little favor of you?"

"Of course. What is it?"

"I'll tell you before we part. But come on down now, girls. I want you should both choose a present to take home."

By this time the "ice cream festival" was beginning. It was held in a vacant lot behind the Emporium, and a canvas awning had been put up over two or three dozen bare tables on the grass. Several employees of the "store," extra hands perhaps, were kept frantically busy ladling out from huge freezers into earthenware saucers big slabs of frozen custard. All the gallant young beaux of the neighborhood "treated" the girls they wished to favor and spent 10 cents a saucer for the "ice cream," with a big sugared "cooky" thrown in. The great Whit himself invited me to sit down with him. So Mr. Brett, who had been coming up to ask Patty and me both perhaps, whisked Patty away, leaving me to Mr. Walker.

"Now I'll tell you that favor I want," said he. "I hope you won't think I'm presuming too much on a short acquaintance, but it's a mighty important thing for me. It's about that little gal over there."

"Patty?" I asked.

He nodded.

"Nobody else. There ain't anybody else, so far as I'm concerned, meaning no disrespect to you, princess. My old friend the honorable says she just worships you and would lie down and let you walk over her if you wanted."

"I didn't know," I said.

"Well, it's gospel truth, I guess, and I don't blame her. If you"—

"She has been sweet to me," I interrupted.

"It's just like that pretty, quiet little thing," said Mr. Walker. "I wish she'd be that sweet to me. I want her mighty bad to have me, princess, but she's read novels, I guess, and anyhow, she doesn't think I'm romantic enough. I was always kind of afraid there was somebody else. Now, I shouldn't wonder if it ain't that good looking young cousin of the Trowbridges. Couldn't you find out for me, as she thinks such a lot of you? And if she hasn't got her heart too much set on anybody else, could you try to use your influence for me?"

"You can depend on me to do my best," I said. But I didn't feel amused and full of fun any more as I looked over at Patty and Mr. Brett. If she admires him—and how could she help it?—there's no reason why he shouldn't admire her when one comes to think of it. She is pretty and sweet, a perfect little lady and an heiress.

Chapter 19

I FELT when I got up this morning that I was in a dreadfully embarrassing and uncomfortable position about Patty and my promise to Mr. Walker. If I kept it and tried to use my influence with her it might be that I would be working against Mr. Brett. It would be hateful to do that, as we are such friends, but I was afraid there must be something rather catty in my nature (though I never thought so before) because I could not approve of a marriage between him and Patty. My private opinion was that Patty wasn't at all the sort of girl to make him happy, but I didn't dare to depend too much on the wisdom of my opinion lest it should be biased by prejudice. It is so hard when you have a friend who has been all yours to see that some other girl may be more congenial to him than you are and that the best thing for him would be to fall in love with her.

Mr. Brett has known Patty for a long time, and, though he hasn't been here often, he has made flying visits sometimes, I know, and even Patty and Ide both call him "Jim," never Mr. Brett. I reminded myself as I thought it all over that probably one reason why he wanted to stay with his cousins now was to see Patty again, not in the least because of his friendship with me, which is quite a recent thing compared to his acquaintance with Patty. I was so jealous of Patty, because she could perhaps take away my best friend and have him for her lover, that all her pretty ways and looks quite annoyed me, and I felt I could have slapped her.

Such feelings made me hate myself, for it is so unpleasant finding out suddenly that you are a brute. Yet I would not indulge my wicked heart by telling Patty that she ought to marry Mr. Walker. I could scarcely eat any breakfast or dinner, and early in the afternoon I crept out of doors, very miserable. I felt that Vivace was the only being on earth who really cared for me, and even he was more interested at the time in a rabbit hole he had found than in my society. He wouldn't come away from it when I called, so I bundled him under my arm and walked off with him to the sugar camp, where I could be alone and think things over without having people say I looked pale and ask whether the ice cream festival at Hermann's Corners had given me a headache.

I sat there in the deep green shade of the maples on the log where Mr. Brett and I had talked the first day I came to the Valley farm. All the disagreeable things that ever happened to me since I was a child took this opportunity to stir in their graves and come to life again. Then they sat down in front of me in a dreary semi-circle, staring me in the face until I couldn't stand it any longer and began to cry. Vivace was very much surprised and jumped up, with his paws in my lap, as if he were saying, "What is the matter?" This was a comfort, and I put my head down on his, with my arms around his neck, and cried more.

If you once let yourself go like that, you can't stop. Hearing your own little chokes and gasps makes you pity yourself so much that your heart nearly breaks. I was sobbing out loud presently, which made Vivace whine, and I had almost begun to enjoy my utter forlornness and the distinction of being the most miserable person in the whole world when a distracted voice exclaimed:

"Why, Lady Betty, Lady Betty, for heaven's sake what's happened?"

I looked up, all teary and flushed, and there was Mr. Brett staring at me

"My precious one—my darling!" he stammered.

with horrified eyes and his face as desperate as if he had found me struck by lightning or gored by the black and white bull.

I was so ashamed and confused that I couldn't speak, but just sat there gazing up helplessly at him, with tears running down my cheeks and my lips trembling. The most awful look came into his eyes, and he went as pale as I was red.

"My precious one—my darling!" he stammered, and, dropping down on one knee by the big log, he put his arms around me.

"Oh!" I said. And then my head was nestling down into his neck, and instead of being wretched I was perfectly happy.

"Who has dared to make you cry?" he asked, holding me close.

"You," I answered.

"I?"

"I thought you were only being kind to me because—because you're an American and it's your duty to a foreigner."

He laughed at that—an excited, happy laugh, with a queer break in it.

"I've been half out of my mind with love for you ever since the first day I saw you looking down at me in the steerage. Am I quite out of it now, or can it be true that you care for me—just a little, little bit?"

MYSTERY OF FAURE'S DEATH

Efforts to Force Exposure of Scandal In Connection With It

MME. STEINHEIL ARRESTED

Confesses That She Knows Who Was Responsible For the Murder of Her Husband and Mme Japy--Facts Regarding Tragedies Said to Have Been Stifled That National Scandal Might Be Avoided

Paris, Nov. 27.—The arrest of Mme. Steinheil last night, following her confession yesterday that for months since the murder of her painter husband and Mme. Japy, who were found strangled in the home of the artist on May 31, her attempt to find the assassin and the innumerable fantastic clues furnished the police and the newspapers were only a desperate farce to conceal the real author of the crime, whom she knew, affords Paris the biggest sensation it has had for years.

The excitement produced from time to time by the Humbert, Dreyfus and Syveton affairs pales into insignificance by comparison, and the revelations pointing to the possible exposure of a national scandal promise to attract world-wide attention.

Unprecedented scenes were witnessed at the palace of justice yesterday, while the woman was under examination, guards being required to restrain the crowds from entering. On the boulevards men fought for special editions of newspapers having in them accounts of the case, while in the lobbies of parliament the Nationalists created a hubbub by threatening to call the government to account unless orders were given immediately to probe the scandal to the bottom.

Minister of Justice Briand is reported already to have begun a secret inquiry into the case to determine the truth of the allegation printed here that M. Leydett, the examining magistrate, entertained relations with Mme. Steinheil which induced him to stifle the affair.

The insinuations behind this charge, which involve the remarkable life history of Mme. Steinheil, have been on everybody's lips for months, and they explain the immense popular curiosity with regard to the crime.

Political opponents of the government, like Henri Rochefort, have been trying to make political capital of the affair by seeking to force an exposure of the scandal connected with the mysterious death of Felix Faure, president of the republic, in 1899. Although hushed up at the time, it was common knowledge of those behind the scenes that Mme. Steinheil was with Faure at the Elysee palace when Faure died. Some of the Parisian newspapers do not hesitate to print what they term the story of the liason.

Immediately after Faure's death M. Steinheil, who had been complacent at the friendship existing between Faure and his wife and who had accepted the Legion of Honor at the hands of President Faure, is said to have begun proceedings for divorce, but through the intervention of his family this suit was withdrawn a fortnight afterwards.

According to gossip, compromising papers of some political importance were surrendered, but Rochefort has repeatedly charged that others remained in the possession of Steinheil at the time of his murder.

After Faure's death Mme. Steinheil, who admits that she detested her husband, formed other alliances, some of them with men of political influence. She has confessed that at the time of the murder of her husband and Mme. Japy she had a lover. This man is believed to be a rich nobleman.

The police, being convinced that Alexandre Wolff was not connected with the tragedy, released him last night. It is stated that Mme. Steinheil is definitely charged with complicity in the murder of her husband and Mme. Japy.

The anti-Semitic Libre Parole openly charges Mme. Steinheil with having poisoned President Faure. The newspaper continues by charging that Chief of Detectives Hemard and Magistrate Leydett knew that the arrest of Mme. Steinheil inevitably would lead to the raking up of the scandalous mystery of Faure's death, which with difficulty had been stifled for ten years, and accordingly did their best to hush up the present inquiry. The newspaper concludes by saying that Faure was poisoned because he was opposed to revision in the Dreyfus case.

Put Bullet Into His Head

Northampton, Mass., Nov. 27.—With a revolver clutched in his right hand and a bullet wound in his temple, the body of Frank Dugal, 59 years old, a farmer, who mysteriously disappeared from his home at Hatfield early Wednesday morning, was found in a patch of woods near his house last evening. Dugal had beenn despondent over domestic and business troubles.

Generally fair weather will prevail in southern New England; rain or snow in northern portion.

MURDER NOT MENTIONED

Jury Finds That Ray Lamphere Is Guilty of Arson

Laporte, Ind., Nov. 27.—The jury in the case of Ray Lamphere, charged with arson and the murder of Mrs. Belle Gunness and her children, last evening announced its agreement that the prisoner was guilty of arson. The murder charge was not mentioned in the verdict. The jury had had the case under consideration for twenty-four hours. Within five minutes after the verdict was reported, Judge Richter sentenced the defendant to the state penitentiary for an indeterminate term of from two to twenty-one years. Lamphere was taken to Michigan City today to begin his sentence.

When Judge Ritcher asked the jury if a verdict had been reached, Foreman Hill passed a piece of paper to Richter who read: "We, the jury, find the defendant guilty of arson and that he is 38 years old."

Following the withdrawal of the jury, Richter instructed Lamphere to stand up. The prisoner's face looked haggard and his eyes were down-cast. Then, while the church bells were ringing their summons to Thanksgiving services, Richter asked him if he had any reason to state why sentence should be pronounced. He replied slowly, but distinctly, "I have none."

Judge Richter then sentenced Lamphere to the state prison in Michigan City for an indeterminate term of from two to twenty-one years, fined him $5000 and disfranchised him for five years.

Attorney Worden, for the defense, says that a motion for a new trial will be made and, should it be refused, an appeal to the Indiana supreme court will follow. Worden declares the verdict to be ridiculous. "If he was guilty at all," said the attorney, "he was guilty of murder. He should have been acquitted."

The motion for a new trial will be based on the court's instruction telling the jurors they could find Lamphere guilty of arson under the indictment.

HARVARD WARRIOR IS APPLAUDED

Roosevelt Gives Ver Wiebe the Credit of Yale's Defeat

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 27.—Ernest Ver Wiebe's wonderful work as fullback on Harvard's football eleven, which defeated Yale last Saturday, has been recognized by President Roosevelt, who has written a personal letter to Ver Wiebe, congratulating him. The letter follows:

"Like every other good Harvard man I have the heartiest feeling of gratitude to the entire team who won the great victory of Saturday last. But I feel an especial self gratitude towards you. You were our star ground gainer. It was through you more than anyone else that the ball was put in a position to enable Kennard to do the work which he did so admirably, and to kick the goal from the field.

"For the good of the team your individual good was sacrificed, and through this sacrifice and through the admirable work you had already done and through Kennard's kick a victory was won. However, it was a first rate example of the interest of an individual being subordinated to the good of the team—there cannot be any better lesson for our national life than to teach that the good of the individual must be subordinated for the good of our people.

"Now, I have the heartiest admiration for Kennard's feat. Kick the goal and he did a service that no one else could have done, and too much praise cannot be given him; but you are entitled to every whit as much, and every man I have met here feels just the way I do.

"I wish I could thank personally every man on the eleven, from Burr down, and Haughton and Graves and everybody who has done anything for the eleven, including substitutes and the second eleven."

Would-Be Slayer a Suicide

Boston, Nov. 27.—Medical Examiner Magrath announces that James Melvin, who was found dead in his cell in jail here, was a victim of poison, self-administered. Melvin quarreled with his brother-in-law, Paul F. Grover, and shot him three times last Tuesday, but did not fatally injure him. Magrath states that Melvin had an unknown poison secreted under the sweatband of his hat.

Turk Defeats Tom Jenkins

New York, June 27.—Yusiff Mahmout, a Turk, defeated Tom Jenkins, former champion wrestler of America, in a catch-as-catch-can contest last night, the best two out of three. Mahmout won in straight bouts. Jenkins admitted after his defeat that Mahmout was the best man he had ever been pitted against. Mahmout is much heavier than Jenkins.

A SCIENTIFIC RUBE.

Knew More Than the Expert When It Came to Local Conditions.

"We were sitting around the stove in the bar of the little hotel in a Maine town," writes an electrical salesman in the Electrical Review, "when the electric lights flickered and went out.

"From the darkness came a solemn voice that said:

"'Electric lights all out, b'gosh, and yet it ain't blowin' hard, either. Somethin's happened to the dynamo, maybe.'

"I had been selling electrical supplies to the little lighting companies for several months, but I had never heard this particular idea expressed before.

"I laughed long and loud and was all the more amused when no one joined me.

"After they had lighted a big kerosene lamp I proceeded to explain to the crowd that incandescent lamps can't be blown out by the wind. When I had finished the old Rube who had commented on the light said:

"'Look here, young man, if you knew a little somethin' about local conditions and about your own business you'd know that the wires in this township are hung up slack on the poles in some places and that they get to slatting in a good stiff breeze. When they do there's a short circuit that puts the line out of business.'"

BALLOONING.

It Is a Safe and Simple Sport, but Not a Cheap One.

The only peril in a balloon ascension in such good weather as careful aeronauts choose for a voyage is in alighting, and in a well ordered expedition, where all the passengers keep cool and cling to the car, there is no danger at all.

Even if the wind is blowing hard the strong, elastic, woven willow basket takes up the danger part of the shock. One of these baskets ought to yield up its passengers unhurt from a landing in a wind blowing fifty miles an hour.

Ballooning under moderately favorable circumstances is a safe and simple sport. It is not, comparatively speaking, a cheap amusement. An ascent, including the cost of gas, expense of a pilot and transportation of passengers and balloon home, costs in this country from $35 to $75 a passenger. It is less in France. From Paris you can make an ascension for about a hundred francs.

The fare home is a very variable expense. Nothing is more uncertain than the spot where you will land. Of course it is easy to descend whenever you like. You may limit your flight to a couple of hours.—Albert White Vorse in Success Magazine.

A Sea Story.

"Of all my sea experiences," said the captain, "this was the strangest."

The ladies at the handsome captain's table said "Hush!" to one another and turned to the ruddy mariner with listening smiles.

"We were carrying," he said, "a lot of troop horses. A dreadful storm overtook us, and for two days we wallowed in the trough of a heavy sea. Finally it was decided that, to lighten the ship, the horses must go overboard.

"They went overboard in the morning. As soon as they saw that they were abandoned they turned and began to swim bravely after us. Bravely, desperately, they swam. They followed us for miles and miles. I can still see them, a long line, their necks arched, pushing heroically through the heavy sea.

"They sank, poor brutes, one by one."

The captain smiled sadly.

"And I still seem to have," he said, "all those deaths on my conscience."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Allegheny Mountains.

Not more than five of our presidents down to Lincoln's time ever crossed the Allegheny mountains, and four of these were western men who had to cross the mountains to reach Washington—Presidents Jackson, Polk, General W. H. Harrison and Taylor. President Monroe crossed the mountains on his return trip from west to east in 1817. Van Buren came west in 1842, two years after the expiration of his presidential term, and saw the mountains then for the first time. It was on this trip that he got upset and dumped in the mud near Plainfield, Hendricks county.—Exchange.

The Original Almack's.

The original Almack's club in London, afterward known as Willis' rooms, had a curious origin. It began as a tavern, started by Lord Bute's butler, McCall, who proposed to give it his own name, McCall's, but judicious friends warned him that the tremendous unpopularity of Scots in London at that time, for which McCall's master was largely responsible, would spell ruin to an establishment so called. "Very well," said McCall, "I will call it Almack's." The present Almack's club is a more fashionable organization which chose to adopt the old name.

Literal Thirst For Work.

The lawyer who made a bluff at a big practice turned hastily to part from his companions.

"I am sorry, but I must go," he said hurriedly. "I have a case at home which I must absorb to the last detail."

"I guess," said one of the party, "it's a case of beer."—Baltimore American.

A FOREWORD.

In view of recent changes in our editorial department we think it advisable to take this opportunity of announcing to the public the future policy of the Ledger.

First: The paper will be run in the future, as in the past, as a strictly independent newspaper, treating all political subjects fairly and without prejudice. Giving all parties equal consideration, but catering to none.

Second: The make-up of the paper will be changed giving it a more attractive outward appearance.

Third: We shall from time to time run special articles in which various subjects will be treated by special writers.

As in the past we shall cover the local field thoroughly giving our readers all the local news in a clean and truthful manner.

To do these things in the way we aim to do them requires the support and co-operation of the public, therefore we shall be glad to receive any sugestions, which if made will be given serious consideration, and if practicable adopted.

Our motto is "The best is none too good," and we intend to give to Quincy and the surrounding towns a clean, up-to-date and newsy sheet, non sectarian and non partizan.

BUSINESS INCORPORATED.

After many years of newspaper business under the firm name of Green & Prescott and later as George W. Prescott & Son it has been decided by the heirs of the late owner, George W. Prescott, to perpetuate his name and change the firm name again. With this end in view the business has been incorporated under the laws of Massachusetts as the George W. Prescott Publishing Company, with Mrs. Prescott as president, Dr. John F. Welch, vice president and Miss Annie L. Prescott secretary and treasurer. The change of name will go into effect as soon as a few business details can be arranged probably about the first of December.

The official program of the New York city celebration of the 100th anniversary of Lincoln's birth is lacking in any features which bid fair to make the event memorable. The path of the obvious has been followed too much. The Boston committee charged with responsibility of arranging a celebration should outline a worthier and more distinctive commemoration of the coming into the world of the greatest of Americans. Some things need to be done promptly, if the right participants are to be secured. Others can be left to wise reflection.—Boston Herald.

Enthusiasm greeted the speech at the New England governors' conference by State Forester Ayer of New Hampshire, urging that pressure be brought to bear on congress relative to the White Mountain national forest bill, which was passed last year by the senate and then blocked in the house by Speaker Cannon. That enthusiasm was logical, in such a gathering, and it was expected. The impressive fact is, that it reflected truly the sentiment not only of the state from which Mr. Ayer comes, but of all New England. There is to be a hearing at Washington Dec. 9 on this matter. That is a near date, and if any work is to be done to make New England's voice effective at that hearing it must be done promptly. At the close of the last session the prophecies for the bill's fate at the coming session were pessimistic. It was pointed out that there will be no disposition to pass bills carrying with them $5,000,000 appropriations. A point to be urged, in this situation, is that the withholding of an appropriation for the preservation of what is left of the White Mountains and the Southern Appalachians is not a wasteful outlay of money—not a gift, but a legitimate and necessary investment. —Boston Advertiser.

DUFFY—CARR.

Officer John P. Duffy and Miss Ellen J. Carr, one of the popular young ladies of Neponset, were united in marriage Wednesday at Neponset, the ceremony being performed by Rev. John J. Crane.

A reception was held in the evening at their new home on Hunt street. The reception was largely attended, many of his fellow officers being present.

Mr. and Mrs. Duffy received many handsome presents, among which was a handsome chair upholstered in leather, a gift from the police department.

FOOTBALL AND OTHER SPORTS

All Stars Defeat Atlantics While E. Harding Wins Annual Road Race

The annual Thanksgiving day game played at Merrymount Park was between the All-Stars and the Atlantics. Both teams were composed of present and past High school players and the rivalry was keen though friendly. The game was close, the All-Stars winning by a score of 6-0.

It was an even thing in the first half neither side being able to cross the other's goal line. In the second half, however, the condition and teamwork of the All-Stars began to show. They rushed the ball to the 5 yard line and then on a cross-tackle play Lakin went through the right side of the line for a touchdown. "Venus" Carlson kicked the goal.

The All-Star team was practically the High school team of the past season, and the Atlantic team was composed of all former High school players, with the exception of Clapp and Hendry of this year's team. These two played best for Atlantic, while Gore, Curtis and "Starr" Bates played well for the All-Stars. The summary:

ROYALS—DUBLIN STARS.

The Dublin Stars of Quincy journeyed to Braintree yesterday to play their old rivals the Royals. The game went to the Royals by a 15-0 score, the local team never having a chance. For the winners, Drinkwater, Dennehy and Delorey played well, while Fallon, P. Avery and Saunders did well for the losers. Saunders had two teeth knocked out but gamely stayed in the contest. COATES—FORE RIVERS.

The Fore River Soccer football team journeyed to Pawtucket on Thanksgiving day and tried conclusion with the J. & P. Coats team of the Rhode Island city. The local team failed to stop their losing streak, being defeated 1-0.

The game was played in a drizzling rain and this caused the ball to be heavy and the field dead. The game on this account was slow and uninteresting. Sunderland, Healy and Haddon played well for Coats, while McGregor and Temple excelled for Fore River.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

The 3d annual five mile road race under the auspices of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. was run off on Thanksgiving morning and was considered a greater success than the successful runs of former years. Ten men started in the race this being nearly the whole number entered. Charles Campbell, the Tech flyer, who was expected to run, failed to appear.

The race started at 10 o'clock from the Y. M. C. A. building on Washington street and the course was to the Wollaston depot thence to the East Milton depot and back through West Quincy, Brewer's corner and Granite street to the building. The race was closely contested from start to finish and showed that there are some very good distance runners in this city.

Of the 10 starters six finished, while four came back in the automobile of Frank Burgess, who followed the runners over the entire course. Mr. Burgess has shown great interest in thse runs, having had his car out for the use of the boys in the big Providence-Boston relay race of two weeks ago. The following came back in the automobile: P. K. Griffin, Boyd Trask, L. Littlefield and Hunter.

The race was won by Ernest Harding, and he was followed closely by "Sam" Melville. It was an exciting finish, Sam leading till he struck Emanuel's store, where he was forced to slow up. At the time he was in the lead by 20 yards and his sickness gave Harding his chance. He took it and passed Sam jumping into first place at Maple place and winning by a few yards. E. V. Wickie was third and Louis Hirschy fourth, while J. M. Wilson and E. C. Wheeler finished fifth and sixth respectively.

Frank Burgess presented the prizes, four in all, cups for the first and second men, a statue of Mozart for the third and a picture; "The Daughter of the Regiment," for the fourth.

It is regretted that only Y. M. C. A. boys ran in this race. It shows that interest in cross-country running is not very keen in Quincy. The race was open to all registered amateurs of Quincy and there should have been 30 or 40 starters. However there were only 10 and these were all Y. M. C. A. runners. This is a pretty poor showing for the athletes of Quincy outside the Y. M. C. A.

After the race yesterday various other sports were indulged in during the day.

The Junior Road race resulted in a victory for George Jennings. Geo. Brown 2d, Sturgis Hunt, 3d. The course was to the Wollaston depot and return.

Pool tables and bowling alleys were kept busy during the day.

Prizes were offered for the highest string bowled also for the best 3-string average. Both were captured by Richard Jones with a score of 116 and an average of 100.

Saturday morning Nov. 28th at 9 o'clock there will be a big meeting for all boys in Quincy fourteen and under in Y. M. C. A. hall. Every boy between these ages is invited. Seventy pictures and the story of "The Shuttered Window" will be the program. Good singing. Come and be an early bird.

The Basket Ball game at 4 P. M., was fast but not close. The score:

Whist Night at Granite City Club

The members of the Granite City club and their friends had a jolly time Wednesday evening. It was the regular whist night and at 8.30 eight tables were busy contesting for the best scores.

Just about that time Clarence Fouche took his place at the piano and for the next two hours the rooms resounded with music. Clarence played all the popular airs during which several of the members with musical voices gathered about and the rooms resounded with music.

The twenty-five hands of whist were completed at 10.30, when Henry Furnald served a lunch of escalloped oysters, hot rolls, coffee and nuts.

The best scoers of the evening were secured by W. M. Wellington and Frank S. Patch.

A summary of the month gives the honors to W. W. Ewell with 62.7 per cent. W. W. Mitchell was second with 54.8 per cent. The honors for the smallest total for the month is a shake up between W. H. Rideout and C. C. Hearn. Both these gentlemen secured 37.7 per cent. for the month. They will be required to do some stunt to see who shall have that five ride ticket to Boston.

Brief Locals Of a Busy City

Miss Nellie Barnes of Washington street is entertaining her friend, Miss Grace Richards of Jamaica Plain.

Max Pinkham of Warren avenue has come home from Brown university to spend the holidays.

The sixth grade of the Adams school has closed a most successful foot ball season winning five out of eight games and a tie game.

Rev. E. W. Hunt and Mrs. Hunt, and their daughters Gladys and Ernestine of Grand View avenue are moving to Boston next week.

In spite of the inclement weather, about thirty couples attended the dancing party of the Wollaston Young People's Social society in Wollaston hall on Wednesday evening.

Remember tomorrow is the open- of W. T. Arnold's great reduction sale of Art Goods. The goods are the finest ever shown in this city. Don't miss it, get your Christmas goods now.

Rev. Maurice H. Turk and Mrs. Turk of Natick were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Morgan of Standish avenue on Thanksgiving day as has been their custom for twelve years.

LIES ABOUT THE FEET.

A Shoe Clerk's Comments on His Customers' Peculiarities.

"I don't see why people always lie about their feet," said the shoe clerk as his customer departed after giving him a bad half hour. "I don't mean on the size of their foot, for it's only natural to wish to have, or, rather, to make other people think you have, small feet. But why a great, burly man with his feet nubby with bunions should insist that his shoes never trouble him and that he never has any trouble in getting a fit is beyond me. Why, if I put an ordinary shoe on such a man he would cuss with pain, and he knows it. He knows also that I have to hunt around until I find some freak shoe that will fit his misshapen old foot, but all the time he declares that he never has bunions or corns like most people. Women who seem to be sensible enough in all other ways come in here and declare that they do not know what a corn is, when they wince with pain every time I touch their little toe. When they are forced to declare that the shoe hurts in one spot or another they insist it is because their feet have a shape peculiarly their own. Sometimes they will admit they have a 'little calloused place,' but a corn, oh, dear, no! Sometimes in a thin, lightweight shoe I can fairly see the corns bunching out under the leather, but I have to say diplomatically that the fit is 'not good,' or that the customer has a 'peculiarly sensitive foot,' or some other nonsense, if I want to keep their trade."—New York Press.

PUMPKIN PIE.

Praise For This Culinary Triumph and Gastronomic Delight.

American literature is replete with the praise of pie, and Harriet Beecher Stowe says, "The pie is an English institution, which, planted in American soil, forthwith ran rampant and burst forth into an untold variety of genera and species." The average American echoes, "Let it run." He has the same desire that possessed Simple Simon of Mother Goose fame when he met the pie man. But Mother Goose flourished before the pie reached the acme of its glory. The most famous pie of which she wrote was a meat pie, for she said:

Four and twenty blackbirds baked in a pie.
When the pie was opened the birds began to sing.
Wasn't that a dainty dish to set before a king?

A pie containing live blackbirds sounds like a fairy tale, but it is not, as a Venetian publisher of a cookbook printed in 1569 gave a recipe for making pies "that the birds may be alive in them and fly out when it is cut up." The gay revelers who sat down before such a dish may have thought that the very pinnacle of culinary art had been obtained, but the pumpkin affords gastronomic delights to every American citizen beside which blackbird pies, ortolan pies, lombard pies or battalia pies are and of right ought to be back numbers.—Washington Star.

AT BRIDE'S HOME.

A very pretty Thanksgiving wedding, was that of Miss Dorothy Payson Young, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Keen Young of Atlantic and Mr. Wendell Albert Harvey of Braintree. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride on Prospect street Atlantic at 5 o'clock and was witnessed by a large number of the friends of the bridal party from Somerville, Waltham, Wollaston and Braintree.

Rev. W. O. Ayer of the Braintree Baptist church officiated, the double ring ceremony being used, father of the bride giving her in marriage.

Miss Edith M. Chapman of Wollaston presided at the piano and played Wagner's wedding march as the bridal party entered the room where the ceremony took place. First came the officiating clergyman, the groom and the best man Mr. Arthur W. Drollett folowed by the bride leaning upon the arm of her father.

The bride looked charming in a dark green travelling suit with hand embroidered white satin waist. A reception followed the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey being assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Keen Young and Mrs. Nellie Harvey Fenderson mother of the groom.

During the reception refreshments were served by Miss Marjorie Young a sister of the bride, Miss Cora M. Harvey a sister of the groom, Miss Florence F. Douglas of Somerville and Miss Emily C. Ecles of Atlantic.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey left after the reception for a brief wedding trip returning from which they will reside at 56 Sherbrooke avenue, Braintree, where they will be at home after January 1.

The bride is one of the most popular young ladies of Atlantic and the groom is well known in Christian Endeavor circles having been the President of the Norfolk County Christian Endeavor Union for the past three years.

GIVEN TO LIBRARY.

Mrs. Louise Chandler Moulton, the well-known author, who died on Aug. 10, gave her library to the Boston Public Library, and a catalogue of it will be prepared, although no condition is imposed that the collection shall be kept intact. While strong in poetry and comprising many miscellaneous works, its principal value lies in the large number of "association copies," as they are called. These are books presented either to Mrs. Moulton or to Philip Bourke Marstin, who gave his library to Mrs. Moulton, by their authors, generally bearing presentation inscriptions in the author's autograph. There are many first editions, although no rarities of surpassing value have been found. Most, if not all, of the books relating to women will be placed in the "Galatea Collection" of the Library, and where there are duplicates the Moulton presentation copy will be substituted for the one already on the shelves.

The gift to the library was secured, it is understood, largely through the efforts of Professor Arlo Bates of the Institute of Technology. Miss Lillian Whiting, who was an intimate friend of Mrs. Moulton, will wrote her biography, and the books should afford her much valuable assistance in her task. In addition to the usual presentations many bear original unpublished verses on the fly leaves, especially those of James Whitcomb Riley who has in every instance appended either a sentiment or a verse. The Marston books are generally presentation copies or first editions of noted authors with whom the owner was associated.

—Automobile accidents, such as the one at North Attleboro Sunday evening, when a touring car smashed into a carriage at a dark place and two persons were probably fatally wounded, are by no means to be wondered at when drivers of such machines persist in driving them in the night at 30 or 40 miles an hour over much traveled roads and trust to their search-lights and quickness to avoid mishaps. The engineer of a locomotive knows that running his train at night is a mere gamble against accidents: how much worse it must be to run an engine at a high speed in a public highway.—Waltham Press-Tribune.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and trying the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

OPPOSED TO UNION.

It was noted a few days ago from the Atlantic correspondent that several prominent church goers of that section had suggested that there ought to be a union of the Congregational and Methodist churches. The conclusion advanced was that it would bring about a more prosperous state of regious zeal in a small community like Atlantic. Whether this conclusion comes from the correspondent or from the prominent church goers it does not state. Perhaps it is shared by both.

It would seem that both are not satisfied with the present state of church affairs and are likewise interested that conditions may be made better. But what warrant is there that the union would bing about a more prosperous state of religious zeal. The statement that Atlantic is a small community is almost absurd. Within the territory covered by the two churches there are almost five thousand people. The public school is overflowing with children. Houses are going up every week and at the present rate of building, between five or ten years, Atlantic will be as compact as any portion of Quincy.

Two Protestant churches in the midst of such a large portion of Protestant population at the present time are not too many to afford a church home if such was desired by one-half of the present population. It will be readily admitted that the churches are not doing what ought to be done or have not the state of religious zeal needed to cope with this problem. To unite would be no guarantee of religious zeal, but only a somewhat larger congregation for some pastor to watch over and instruct and the church would be perhaps less burdened in managing financial affairs. But it would leave only one church instead of two to reach two or three thousand people and bring the children up in the Sunday school. This would mean that the Christian forces would be less qualified to advance their cause and religious zeal would be lacking more than under the present situation.

It is not fewer churches that is needed in Atlantic to generate religious zeal, but a determination to rise and do the larger work which they are called upon to do in this community.

If a reasonable number of the citizens of Atlantic were doing definite christian work, more churches would be needed instead of less. If every child and every adult were in the Sunday school that belong there, four churches like the two present ones could not accommodate them. But under the present condition nothing remains for the two churches to do but work, to advance with definiteness to do constructive work for God and his cause in a place where so few seem to know either God or his cause. And one can feel assured that no other two denominations are better qualified to maintain churches and do this work than the Congregationlists and the Methodists.

Let us talk union and urge union, but not the kind that would mean shirking duty to make church work easier, but let us urge that higher union, the union of purpose, whereby two churches can labor in the same field and blend their efforts together for one common cause just as two men working separately may build upon the same edifice or two groups of workmen may labor on the same contract, but each do separate and distinct work. The Congregationalists are situated to reach people that the Methodists cannot reach. Methodists are situated to reach people the Congregationalist cannot reach. Yet no one should say proudly, "I am a Congregational" or "I am a Methodist" any more than they should have said of old, "I am of Paul" and "I am of Appollos." The churches do not exist to outdo each other or to proselyte from each other, but to grip each other with a kindly grasp in the union of brotherly love and then go out to bring some man, woman or child into their church or Sunday school services who attend no-where and who have yet to learn the joy and peace and blessedness of living the gospel of Christ in social service. When this is done religious zeal will take care of itself and there will be an abundance of it.

A FALSEHOOD NAILED.

The Ananias club of Wollaston is circulating the falsehood that Mayor Shea if reeleceted would not reappoint the present efficient Commissioner of Public Works, Mr. Bainbridge. Mayor Shea was interviewed and declared most emphatically that he intended to retain Mr. Bainbridge if reelected, adding that it would be a public calamity if Mr. Bainbridge were not allowed to complete some of the very important matters which he had in hand. ANOTHER BROADSIDE.

To the Editor of the Quincy Ledger.

Dear Sir: In order to tone down the word "Democrat" to those who do not like the sound on general principles, our genial Mayor is running as Citizens' Candidate. Of course to some people it sounds as if a real Citizens' disinterested movement was on, and the qualifications rested only in the Shea administration, but not so. In order to be a Citizens' candidate all that is necessary is to obtain the legal number of votes required. That means not a regular nominee but an "independent"; just what Mr. Shea deplored in Mr. Wilson, he, Mr. Shea is doing himself.

The Captain of the Shea Democratic-Citizens' ship plying between City Square and Houghs Neck was last Monday night proclaiming the edict of the Master voice. "If you don't want to vote for him as a Democrat, vote for him on the Citizens' ticket." We have 157 registered voters at Houghs Neck and 156 for Shea." The poor Captain; they have "jollied" him so that he realy believes it.

As for Mr. Shea's qualifications, what has he done to entitle him to the support of the 156 votes? Is it because his administration has materially boomed the valuations and tax rate? Is it because his administration "threw down" the Houghs Neck Steamboat Company's license? a common carrier, second to none in Quincy doing a legitimate business? Or is it because he failed to enforce the Board of Health order to suppress the motor boat nuisance? Are the gentlemen who respected the order of the Board of Health more friendly to him for not making others comply with its requirments?

Is it because Mr. Stone as a member of the City Government gave his best efforts, supported the order for the equipment of the Houghs Neck hose house and did many other things for the interests of the whole city, and is not running as a "Citizens' candidate to catch stray votes.

History proves that as a rule the best efforts of our Mayors have been put forth on the first year. High tax rate, unsatisfactory and evasive replies to citizens who call at City Hall on business matters are not conducive to Mr. Shea's re-election. The bitterest feeling is incurred against those who dare mention above a whisper anything about the tax rate. Mr. Shea's lieutenants are frightened for fear of his defeat.

Yes, I voted for his Honor last year. I will not do so this year. I never wanted or asked any favors of Mr. Shea, and am not looking for any public office.

My experience with Mr. Shea on the motor boat question appears in the Quincy Advertiser today. Be sure and read it.

These communications are inserted, paid for and signed by me,

UNION SERVICE AT WOLLASTON.

The union service at the Wollaston Baptist church Thanksgiving afternoon was very largely attended. Mrs. Chandler W. Smith presided at the organ and the singing was under the direction of Amos D. Albee. The organ was augmented by Theodore Carey as violinist, Charles Sayward, cello, and Mr. Critchley, cornetist.

The speaker of the meeting was Rev. Dr. Alexander Mann, rector of Trinity church, Boston. On the platform were Rev. A. Edwin Clattenberg, Rev. William J. Heath and Rev. Edward A. Chase.

Dr. Mann said we had much to be thankful for in business and in politics and he impressed upon his hearers that truth, honesty and sincerity was the only way to conduct business and politics.

CIVIC SPIRIT THE THEME

Several Notable Addresses Made At Union Service Bethany Church

Civic spirit in the home, in the school, the social organizations and in the church was the theme at the union service at the Bethany church Thanksgiving morning. The stormy weather prevented as large an attendance as expected yet for all that there was a good numbr present and the meeting was one of the best ever held in the city.

The meeting opened with the singing of "Nearer My God to Thee" by the congregation and the reading of the scriptures by Rev. Ellery Channing Butler of the First church. This was followed by a solo "Fear not ye O Israel" by Albert L. Hayden and prayer by Rev. R. R. Kendall formerly of North Weymouth.

Rev. Dr. Edwin N. Hardy, pastor of the church, who presided then introduced Mayor William T. Shea, as a man pledged for the better condition and righteousness, a man who stands for a square deal and for the best interest of the city. Mayor Shea read the proclamation of Gov. Guild. He then said that it was eminently fitting to meet for such an occasion as this, to give thanks for the blessings that have been bestowed upon us during the past year. Dr. Hardy was to be congratulated for calling a meeting of this kind to discuss questions of citizenship. It was well that the church should take a deep interest in uplifting the citizens. It is something too much attention can not be given to.

Dr. John F. Welch president of the Anti-Tuberculosis society was then introduced. Dr. Welch said that every encouragement should be given Dr. Hardy for calling this meeting. There was so much to say on the subject of tuberculosis that he was afraid of taking more than his time. We have had much of benefit from good air. It is this that destroyes the active agents of tuberculosis. Many perhaps have but little conception of what a germ is. It is an infinitesimal, microscopical object. A matter of scientific investigation. Air contains that which combats the disease. We are always possessed with a large number of germs but our conditions are so good that it is impossible for them to develop, unless we are run down in health. It is because of poor health that these germs develop. No state has done more to combat this great white plague than has Massachusetts. There were many cases doubtless that were not known and this association is simply to join the ranks of those who are fighting the disease in Quincy.

Under the new law Quincy is obliged to take care of tuberculosis patients. Our object then should be to reduce the expense of the city in this way and to save lives by showing people the necessity of following certain lines that will cure, or at least arrest the disease. We want to teach people how to take care of themselves to prevent propagation of that germ by proper sanitary conditions. This is what we hope to do in Quincy, to bring about a general improvement in sanitary conditions.

Rev. Mr. Butler than said that one of the chief things we had to be thankful for was that the Doctor had given us this lecture on the great white plague that is robbing us of our best and dearest. Let us all then give generously to the offering to be taken up for the benefit of the new society.

Rev. Edward Anderson was the first to speak on the first theme of the meeting, "The Home." He said the whole system of living has been so changed that we seem to be living in another era. In olden times the church, family and state were mixed. The church was everything for the people. For what was right before God. People felt the rigid life must be taught to the children. What came of it? Real true and strong men and women. When the time came, at the breaking out of the war it showed what kind of people came from that old training. Many in the war were those that nad been taught these things in the home and family. They did not salute the flag in school then There was very little demonstration other than love of country. Our sense of love of country makes us good citizens. Mr. Anderson then spoke of the outcome of the war and what it had done for the South. It was all because of the out put of the home, the parental teaching.

Edward Southworth told what the school was doing for the civic spirt. People in general he said did not realize the vast responsibility placed upon teachers. From all sects and nationalities we are expected to turn out good citizens. Some come from old New England, others who have had no kind words or home training. From homes where they are taught to steal. We try to teach them to be good citizens, to obey the rules, to respect others and self reliance. To be truthful and honest. We teach them to sing the "Star Spangled Banner" the "Red, White and Blue," and those patriotic songs that take hold of their hearts and make them loyal to their country. One of the most important things is to teach girls how to cook and to sew, so that they can help themselves and teach their mothers many of whom are unable to do these things. The result is that they come to school looking more neatly clad. Everything that truly tends to make the home better is done in the schools.

Henry M. Faxon spoke for the Social Organizations making a plea for the playgrounds for children. There was an awakening of spirit in this playground question. The need and value of these was great. We have many open places in Quincy but they need proper equipment. Let us do our part in this great movement. The hope of the future is the children, the best asset of the country.

Rev. A. M. Thompson of the United Presbyterian church spoke for the church. The christian church, he said, was the most powerful influence for the remedy of evils and the uplifting of that which is good, noble and God like. The churches today have come down from their high pedestal and are doing more than offering to the hungry man, the tract, instead of the loaf. As an illustration he told what had been done in Canada, by the united efforts of the churches of all denominations, to bring about a better observance of the Sabbath. In the brief time allowed him he could not tell all that the church was doing for good citizenship. Without the churches here we should have the open saloon, social impurity, political graft and the like, such as we now have no conception of. The church is one of the greatest forces of mankind reaching out to the poor and downtrodden. Reaching out to save man for his soul, man as God made him, and it is not satisfied until it does it.

This closed the speaking and the meeting ended with the singing of "America" by the congregation and benediction by Rev. Mr. Thompson.

Masque Ball Huge Success

The eleventh annual masquerade ball of the Loyal Ladies of Clan McGregor, No. 1, was held in Music hall on Thanksgiving eve. The usual large attendance was present and there were very few who did not appear in costume. There was a promenade concert from 8-9 and at 9 the march began.

The music was furnished by Thompson's orchestra and to its strains about 150 couples marched around the hall, all masqued, so that it was impossible to tell one from another. The costumes were very unique, many diffrent countries and modes of life being represented.

The march was very skillfuly executed and as the masqued dancers came down the hall sixteen abreast they received great applause from the large audience that viewed the march from the balcony. The march broke up into a Cicilian circle and then the dancing proceeded in full blast.

On the third dance, a quadrille, the masques were taken off, and everyone joined in to make the ball a social success. That they succeeded very well was evidenced by the fact that, at 3 o'clock when the orchestra played "Home Sweet Home" there was no abatement in the enthusiasm an dthe crowd was still there.

The hall was prettily decorated with the flags of all nations and potted plants about the hall and on the stage gave the whole a pleasing and welcome effect. From eleven to one refreshments were served in the banquet hall, prepared by the ladies themselves.

The floor was in charge of Jennie S. Norrie assisted by Margaret E. McIntosh and the following aids: Elizabeth Black, Sarah Summers, Jennie Grassick, Rettie W. Norrie, Isabella S. Mitchell, Katie Black.

The committee of arrangements consisted of the following: Mrs. Mary McNeil, president; Mrs. Margaret McDonald, vice president; Mrs. Jennie Mitchell, secretary; Mrs. Jennie Steinbrenner, treasurer; Mrs. Lizzie McIntosh, Miss Elsie Martin, Mrs. Annie Mutch, Mrs. Lillie Duncan.

DECLINE CALL.

It is announced that Rev. Arthur Ketcham has declined the call to become rector of Christ Church in Quincy. Mr. Ketcham is now located in New York City, being assistant rector to Dr. Crocker of the Epiphany Church of that city, where he went from St. Mary's Sailor's Haven in East Boston.

While at East Boston, Mr. Ketcham had wonderful success in his work among the sailors of Noddle island. In this man Quincy has missed a brilliant and earnest worker, a man who would have done great work among the people of this city.

Mr. Ketcham declined the call to come here because he desires to enter into institutional church work, and Quincy does not offer the opportunities that he wants. It is the desire of Mr. Ketcham to spend his time and money among the poor and the helpless. Of course in Quincy there are not enough of this class to warrant a man coming here for that purpose alone.

Hence Mr. Ketcham declined to become rector and the Quincy church lost an excellent chance to have a brilliant leader. However there are several desirable men in view and in two or three weeks a permanent man will probably be appointed.

VACANCY FILLED.

Miss Louise G. Bates, supervisor of drawing in the elementary schools, whose resignation has been accepted, will remain with the schools until the beginning of the January term. The position thus made vacant has been filled by the school committee by the unanimous election of Miss Florence I. Bulfinch.

SHIPS COLLIDE IN DENSE FOG

Prow of Big Ocean Freighter Cuts Into Panama Steamer

QUICKLY GOES TO THE BOTTOM

Engineer and Three Passengers Lose Their Lives--Woman Clings to Vessel, Despite Desperate Efforts to Remove Her, and She Is Eugulfed With Ill-Fated Craft--Liner Does Speedy Rescue Work

New York, Nov. 27.—In a thick fog off Sandy Hook, the stout steel freighter Georgic of the White Star line rammed and sunk the lightly laden Panama line steamer Finance, outward bound with eighty-five passengers. The Finance went down within ten minutes after the collision, carrying to death three passengers and one of the crew. The rest of the passengers, who included nineteen women and fourteen children, as well as others of the crew, were rescued by boats from the Georgic. The freighter was not damaged.

William H. Todd, third assistant engineer, jumped overboard and was lost. When a roll of the passengers of the Finance was called it was found that Miss Irene Campbell of Panama, Charles H. Schweilier, a policeman of Panama, and Henry Muller, a railroad conductor of Panama, had disappeared.

The disaster occurred in the main ship channel, off Sandy Hook, as both vessels were groping through a fog that has hung over local waters for three days. The Finance had crept out of her berth last Monday, bound for Colon, but down outside of New York's gateway, she ran into a blanket of fog, which compelled her to anchor. Yesterday it was thought that the fog was lifting and the Finance weighed anchor, and she was picking her way cautiously down the Swash channel when Captain Mowbray, who was on the bridge, heard the whistle of an approaching liner.

The Finance was immediately ordered astern and was slowly backing when the Georgic, in-bound from Liverpool, loomed out of the fog and a moment later crashed into the port side and just abaft the beam of the Finance.

The prow of the freighter penetrated the side of the Finance, leaving a ragged hole ten feet wide. The Panama steamer heeled far over to the starboard while men and women, many of whom had been awakened from sleep, were thrown from their berths. Hastily covering themselves with bedclothing and making little attempt to dress, they rushed in a panic to the main deck, which was fast falling to the surface of the water.

Many Without Life Preservers

Many of the passengers jumped overboard before they could be restrained by the crew of the injured steamer, many not stopping even to provide themselves with life preservers. That more were not lost was due to the discipline of the crew of the Finance and the prompt and intelligent work of the sailors from the Georgic.

Immediately after the accident the freighter backed off and anchored, her commander, Captain Clark, in the meantime having ordered the lifeboats lowered. The boats of the Finance were also cut away as quickly as possible, though with difficulty because of the heavy list of the sinking vessel. Attention was first given to those who had jumped overboard, a score or more of whom were picked up.

Meantime the Finance was settling steadily. To add to the confusion there was an explosion of an ammonia tank in the forward hold of the Finance and the fumes drove the engineers and firemen to the decks. William Todd, the third assistant engineer, was partially overcome and, staggering to the rail, threw himself overboard. He was not seen again.

Probably half of the passengers, with the crew, stood by the ship, awaiting rescue, and these were gotten off with remarkable expedition. When it was believed that all had left the vessel and the water had reached the rail, Miss Campbell was discovered holding tenaciously to a post of the rail. Appeals to her to throw herself into the water or allow herself to be taken into a small boat failed. Then two sailors clambered onto the half-submerged deck and seized the terror-stricken woman. Her natural strength seemed magnified by madness, and neither reason nor force could break her hold. The men abandoned her only in time to save themselves, the vessel sinking under their feet as they climbed into a lifeboat. With a despairing cry, the woman disappeared.

Captain Mowbray refused to leave the scene and, after the Georgic had steamed away, Mowbray and several of the crew remained in a lifeboat near the sunken ship. Only her masts, stacks and part of the superstructure of the Finance remained above the surface.

Captain Clark of the Georgic states that he was feeling his way slowly into port and, hearing a whistle on his port bow, tried to veer off and thought he would clear the Panama steamer, which, unfortunately, began to go astern, with the result that the two steamers collided. The Finance had over 700 bags of mail aboard. Four elephants in the Georgic's hold were undisturbed by the collision.

LECONTE NOT EXECUTED

Haytien General Believed to Have Outwitted the Revolutionists

Port Au Prince, Nov. 27.—A dispatch from official sources announces that General Leconte, minister of the interior, who, it was reported, had been killed in the south by revolutionists, was not executed, but succeeded in making good his escape in a rowboat with a number of officers under his command, and that the rowboat reached Petit Goave, on the north shore of the southwestern peninsula. Confirmation of the news contained in this dispatch has not yet been received.

The government continues to send troops against the revolutionists. It is reported that requests have been made to the British and Danish consuls that they adopt effective measures to prevent Haytien refugees in Kingston and St. Thomas leaving for Hayti to join the revolutionists.

Rebels' Ranks Augmented

Paris, Nov. 27.—A special dispatch from Port Au Prince says that two other revolutionary leaders have taken the field, General Firmin, the leader of the revolt of 1902, at Gonaives, and General Fouchard at Jeremie. The dispatch says that the government regards the situation as critical. It reports also that the gunboat Nord Alexis has gone ashore off Aquin, making the blockade of Aux Cayes impossible.

A British Suggestion

London, Nov. 27.—The Daily Mail, in an editorial on the Haytien revolution, says: It would be an immense gain for civilization were the United States to intervene and remind the negro that peoples unable to profit by independence or use it rightly must submit to the control of stronger and wiser races. The Haytien population deserves to be saved from its murderous politicians.

CAPITAL IS NOT YET ABOLISHED

Ambassador Reid Optimistic Concerning Our Future

London, Nov. 27.—Three hundred Americans and a number of distinguished Englishmen attended a Thanksgiving dinner by the American society at the Hotel Cecil last night.

Ambassador Reid made the principal speech. He contrasted last year's business depression in the United States, the gloom of which, he said, hung over London as well as New York, with the conditions of today.

"Business has resumed its healthful activity," said the ambassador. "Work again is abundant. Already the chief danger is the old familiar one that our enthusiasts may soon be wanting once more to get up too much steam."

Mr. Reid then predicted that the next four years would rival the last four. "Capital isn't going to be abolished just yet," said the ambassador. "Corporations and trusts are not going to be wiped off the face of the continent if they obey the laws. Free labor will continue to reap the richest harvests it can command anywhere."

The ambassador referred to the good relations that exist between the United States and all the powers. The United States is the only power, Reid declared, that could profit by a war, saying "Brother Jonathan, though peaceful, is uncommonly commercial."

Over a Hundred Lives Lost

Valetta, Island of Malta, Nov. 27.—A disaster in which more than 100 persons lost their lives occurred at the entrance to this port within sight of the whole population of the city, who were powerless to give aid. Steamer Sardinia, from Liverpool for Alexandria, with a crew of forty-four Englishmen, seventeen English passengers and nearly 200 Arab pilgrims aboard, caught fire and within a few minutes was a roaring furnace.

The Tariff on Metals

Washington, Nov. 27.—From testimony offered before the ways and means committee of the house it is declared to be evident that some reduction, possibly 10 to 20 percent, will be made in the duties on iron, steel and metal products when the new tariff bill is framed. No schedule of the tariff has been so difficult of interpretation by the appraisers as that covering metals and their manufactures.

Grassie a Champion Runner

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 27.—W. S. Grassie of Cambridge won the annual New England ten-mile cross country championship from a field of thirty-four competitors. Joseph E. Ballard of Providence was second, forty yards behind Grassie, with A. R. Welton of Lawrence, a Marathon runner, third. The race was run in a drizzling rain and over a slippery course. Grassie's time was 57:28.

Pennsy's Great Football Record

Philadelphia, Nov. 27.—Pennsylvania defeated Cornell in the annual football game on Franklin field by a score of 17 to 4, thus closing the season without a single defeat. Her followers are claiming equal rank with Harvard. It was Cornell's only defeat of the year and she fought hard to prevent it.

Disaster on Russian Submarine

Vladivistok, Nov. 27.—An explosion here on board the Russian submarine Kasatka, during maneuvers, resulted in the killing of one sailor and serious injuries to two others.

CONVINCING FACTS.

There is no use denying the fact that Johnson Bros., are surely giving genuine bargains in food values. It will be hard indeed to find a store that is giving such excellent quality at such low prices.

TESTS AT SALTON SEA

Weather Bureau's Work In Reclaiming Arid Lands.

TWO LINES OF RESEARCH.

Professor F. H. Bigelow's Plans For an Evaporation Plant to Be Built at Roosevelt, Ariz., For Scientific Observations—Snowfalls to Be Studied.

Professor and Mrs. F. H. Bigelow recently arrived at Phenix, Ariz., from Los Angeles. Professor Bigelow is professor of meteorology in the weather bureau service, with which he has been connected for seventeen or eighteen years, and is in charge of the division of cimatology. He is engaged now in two lines of research, in both of which this valley has a material interest, for the information he gathers and the facts he hopes to establish are directly connnected with the work of reclamation of arid lands and the conservation of resources.

One of the things above referred to is the snowfall on the higher mountain ranges of the watersheds and the other is the study of the subject of evaporation, says the Phenix Arizona Republican. In respect of the former the difficulties to overcome are climatic rather than scientific, the point being that where the heavy snowfalls occur in the high mountains there are few human habitations and few persons whose services can be secured to make observations unless they be employed specifically for that purpose. That would be quite expensive beside the fact that very few people would care to spend their winters under such circumstances even when they were well paid for it. The importance of securing this information is apparent, for these snows are the chief source of water supply for the great watersheds, and it is highly important to know what quantity of moisture is originally available on the watersheds.

With that information there can then be considered the runoff and all those questions that have a bearing on the main object, which is to keep as much water on the shed as possible until the season when it is needed. Then by authoritative data by which the water in a certain locality can be closely estimated the scientific men can more readily determine the quantity and usefulness of the available water supply and can also note more accurately the success of experiments to increase the conservation by controlling the runoff. Professor Bigelow went to Phenix particularly to confer with Engineer Hill concerning the placing of what is termed an evaporation plant at or near Roosevelt for observations and measurements of the evaporation.

The subject of evaporation is a comparatively new line of work. That is, it has been given less scientific attention than many other meteorological matters, and conditions are so different in different regions that common popular information on the subject is of but small value in a scientific way. It is known in a general way that it is much greater in the west than in the east, where there is more cool weather as well as heavier precipitation; also it is known in a general way that in many places the amount of water evaporated in a given length of time is two or three times as great as the amount used for irrigation. For instance, Lake Tahoe supplies the Truckee-Carson project with water, the project being in one of the driest spots in the world, yet a year's irrigation from Lake Tahoe only utilizes about sixteen inches of water, while the evaporation amounts to thirty inches.

One of the most interesting projects under the direction of Professor Bigelow is that of the experiments at the Salton sea, which will be very comprehensive. A temporary camp was maintained there last summer for a couple of months, but the real work of experimenting has not yet been undertaken. The weather bureau is not in the slightest concerned as to the fate of the Salton sea other than the curiosity common to all. It does not care a rap about its effect on the climate there or in the southwest only in so far as a knowledge of the results reveal scientific facts concerning evaporation. It is only the scientific principles that the bureau seeks to possess itself of. So far as the climatic effect of the sea is concerned, the bureau has demonstrated beyond a doubt, says Professor Bigelow, that it is practically nil. The influence of the rising vapor and the cooling of the wind as it crosses the sea can be noted for a few hundred feet only, as it has been by travelers on the trains that skirt its edge, but 1,000 feet inland from the shore there is not the slightest evidence of any effect.

When the sea began to fill the government date farm at Mecca seemed to be in danger, and another was immediately established at Indio. Close observations were kept at Mecca, where the water came to within a half mile of the farm. There was not only the fear that it might be submerged, but the fear that the climate might be so changed as to interfere with the culture of dates, which require a very dry air. It was found that the year following the filling of the Salton basin was the driest one ever experienced at Mecca since the orchard was planted. The opinion concerning the immaterial effect of the sea is based not on this alone, but on observations at Indio, at Mammoth Tank and at Brawley, stations along the Southern Pacific at differing intervals of distance from the sea. Another little experiment was made the past season by Professor Bigelow. He ran long parallel evaporation pans from the sea inland for 1,500 feet and found the evaporation was faster nearer the sea than it was at the other end. The phenomena of evaporation is subtle, and its laws are little understood, all of which makes the proposed experiments at Salton sea most desirable, as the opportunities offered are unusually inviting.

Concerning the change of climate Professor Bigelow says the people speak very thoughtlessly or without stopping to inform themselves of easily acquired facts. Though Salton sea is quite a large body of water, containing about 440 square miles, the total of its liquid contents is small compared to the annual precipitation over the area which many people contend is affected by the sea, a mere drop in the bucket as it were, compared to the amount of water that falls annually between Phenix and the California desert.

Speaking of the proposed experiments at Salton, Professor Bigelow said he did not care to go into great details yet, but in a general way he outlined the plant. The permanent camp will be established where the railroad crosses an arm of the sea. A long pier will be built out into the sea for the reason that the experiments are to be continued for five or six years, and as the sea is drying up at the rate of six feet a year the observation towers must be placed in what is now deep water. One tower will be placed where the water is twenty-five feet deep, another at the depth of forty feet and another at the depth of fifty-five feet. As they will be perhaps forty feet above the water line, with evaporation bases placed every ten feet, the taller one will necessarily be a hundred feet above the bottom of the sea and all will have to be built heavily and set firmly to defy the wind and waves, both of which are sometimes very strong. Observations will be taken every four hours both day and night. This plant and the experiments to be made with it will be quite an expense, but the weather bureau service believes it will be well worth the money.

CRETE'S STROKE FOR LIBERTY

Island's Return to Her Own People Quite Right, Says Greek Editor.

In the office of the little Greek newspaper at 95 Washington street, New York, the announcement of the Cretan repudiation of the Turkish suzerainty and the declaration of subjection to Greece awakened dreams of the greatness of the Athenian republic in its palmiest days, and in his mind's eye the editor looked forward to the Pan-Hellenic nation. His wrath against the Bulgarians and his Grecian distrust of treaties awoke him.

"We hate the Bulgarians for what they have done," he said to a reporter of the New York Post. "They have tried to make Macedonia theirs and to turn her against Greece, to whom she belongs. Bulgaria has broken the treaty of Berlin the second time. She has taken over Eastern Roumelia, and now she declares her independence. Bulgaria has her hands on Macedonia, but she will never get her desires. Greece and the Macedonians themselves will see to that.

"Treaties cannot settle the fate of nations unless the nations make those treaties according to their own minds. Treaties cannot stop the growth of national feeling, and there is no use of trying to make one that is permanent. Protection from larger powers is the only thing that treaties can rightly deal with in the southern Europe situation, and that of Berlin has failed, for you see Austria seizing Turkish territory.

"That Crete should declare herself subject to Greece is altogether right. Of her 300,000 population more than 270,000 are Grecian, and the parliament has voted for the union many times. It is the intervention of the powers that has prevented it so long. But the powers cannot choke patriotism and liberty, and Crete and Greece will be one."

LONG BALLOON FLIGHT.

Los Angeles Aeronaut and His Wife Would Fly Across the Continent.

Mr. and Mrs. Dick Ferris, Los Angeles balloon enthusiasts, will shortly undertake a most unique aerial trip, a race across the continent. Mr. Ferris plans to have a number of balloons start from Los Angeles in the latter part of October and sail as far eastward as possible. His beautiful wife has agreed to accompany him in one of the balloons. It is expected that no fewer than a dozen amateur aeronauts will embark on this journey.

The United States, with which Lieutenant Lahm won the James Gordon Bennett cup, is now owned by Dick Ferris. The America, which finished second in the St. Louis international races, will also enter the competition.

Starting from Los Angeles, it is planned to sail across Arizona, New Mexico and into Texas, thence northeast toward the great lakes or toward the great basin in Salt Lake and thence north or continued northeast.

Noah's Ark Expedition.

A Noah's ark expedition sailed recently from the Tyne to colonize the uninhabited Kerguelen Land, in the Indian ocean. The vessel, the Jeanne d'Arc, with sixty Norwegians, carried a large number of wooden huts, sheep, pigs, poultry, ponies and other animals intended for breeding purposes. On the voyage out a call will be made at Durban to take on board some thirty negro laborers. The chief object of the expedition is whale and sea elephant hunting, and a lease granting full fishing rights for two years has been obtained from the French government.

WAGNER WINS BY 56 SECONDS

Close Finish In International Automobile Road Race

HEMERY COMES IN SECOND

Tire on Nazarro's Car Bursts While Leading For Home Stretch and He Drops to Third Position--New Record Set by Victor, the Result Being In Doubt Until Official Time Was Announced

Savannah, Ga., Nov. 27.—The strength of six score horses, crashing and roaring in the cylinders of a Fiat car, through changing fog and sunshine over 402 miles of oiled roadway by Louis Wagner, won the most spectacular, the longest and the fastest international automobile race ever held in this country.

Fate played a game of hide and seek with the three men who fought with skill and daring for an advantage of seconds at the finish of the more than six hours of driving through stifling fumes of burning oil, into storms of sand and gravel thrown up by the flying wheels of the car ahead at risk of life and limb for the honor of a cup and a purse of gold.

The three drivers who clung together from the very start were shuffled about like so many cards. For a time there was a fourth figure in the leading column, but when little more than a minute separated the first from the last of the quartet, a caprice of fortune sent one pitching from the road. Out of the mass of wreckage Fritz Erle, who had been driving the German Benz No. 19, was taken with a broken nose and a broken jaw. Still the struggle continued, and it was not until the last minute of the final tap that the tide of victory turned to Wagner.

Nazarro, the Italian driver, held tenaciously a slight lead during the last 100 miles, and then hesitated at the supply pits to change a weakening tire and lost. The treacherous rubber tubing burst as he was about to enter the home stretch and the three-minute delay put the grand prix winner of last year and his Fiat No. 6 back from first to third position. Hemery, in a German Benz No. 8, a favorite of the followers of automobile racing, took second honors.

It was not until the official time was announced that it was known that Wagner had won by the slender margin of fifty-six seconds. Hemery was the first to finish the sixteen laps of the race and enthusiastic thousands had hailed him as a winner without the aid of the six minutes' grace which Wagner held, Hemery having been sent away at the start at 9:52 and Wagner not getting the word to go until 9:58.

The minutes of waiting after Hemery had driven the big Benz car over the finish line seemed like hours to the adherents of the missing car and like fractional seconds to the men who had already made the journey but had not yet won. It was just as the fifth of the flying minutes was ticking itself away that the blast of bugles and the waving of watchmen's red flags set up the roar of "he's coming!" from the most wildly excited throng of spectators ever gathered at a racing course. Eyes were strained toward the elbow of the stretch, not a half a mile away, around which the coming car would flash into view. At last it came and it was red.

"Wagner, Wagner, Wagner!" cried the crowd and pitching down the straightaway with the steadiness of a locomotive on highly polished rails, the red car tore for the fateful line. But the cheers of the crowd suddenly changed to an oppressive hush as the narrowness of the time margin was realized and it was not until the judges signalled to the anxious little camp of Italian workmen in the supply pits that it was definitely known who had won.

Wagner drove a remarkably steady race. He stopped several times and once seemed to be in serious trouble right in front of the grand stand. It was this delay that took Wagner out of the lead in the twelfth lap of the race and gave it to Nazarro, who lost it later. The fact that a car of his own team won the race, however, was but little comfort to Nazarro. An Italian himself, he wanted to win in an Italian car. Wagner is a Frenchman. In 1906 Wagner won the Vanderbilt cup in a French car, and his driving then over the Long Island course was a replica of the steady nerve and skill which he displayed so brilliantly yesterday.

Wagner set a new record for road racing in this country. George Robertson, in the Vanderbilt cup race of 278 miles last month, set the mark at 64.3 miles an hour. Yesterday, for the longer distance of 402 miles, Wagner raised it to 65.5. He averaged 23 minutes to each one of the sixteen laps of 25.13 miles. His fastest lap was made in 21.50, but the lap honors of the day went to De Palma, in the Fiat No. 18, who twice made the circuit in 21.36 or an average of about 70 miles an hour.

Getting Upper Hand of Smallpox

Hinsdale, N. H., Nov. 27.—The smallpox epidemic in this section is thought to be under control. The schools, public library and churches will be kept closed and all public meetings forbidden until danger is past. The situation is more favorable at Brattleboro, Vt.

DORANDO WINS BIG RACE

Leads Hayes Practically All the Way In Marathon Run

New York, Nov. 27.—Pietro Dorando of Capri, Italy, defeated John J. Hayes of this city in a Marathon race at Madison Square garden. The distance was 26 miles 385 yards, the same as the Olympian Marathon, which Hayes won at London last summer. Dorando at that time fell from exhaustion and was helped across the line, but was disqualified.

PIETRO DORANDO.

However, he proved to be Hayes' master here, for he held the lead practically from start to finish, winning finally by about sixty yards. Hayes was in the lead five times during the race, but only for a few seconds each time. Dorando's time was 2:44:20 2-5, and Hayes' 2:45:05 1-5.

Ten thousand persons watched the contest and although partisan feeling ran high nothing more than good-natured raillery was the outcome.

Victory Pleases Italians

Rome, Nov. 27.—The victory of Dorando over Hayes in New York in the rerunning of the Olympic Marathon race was received with great enthusiasm by the Italian press and public. At Capri, Dorando's birthplace, a demonstration in his honor was held.

MUST RESPECT CIVIL AUTHORITIES

Religion Should Not Enter Into Question, Says Gibbons

Baltimore, Nov. 27.—In the course of an address delivered at St. Benedict's school here, Cardinal Gibbons said:

"The church teaches that the civil authorities must be respected, no matter what the nationality or religion of the incumbent in office. I received a letter today from a man asking me whether he ought to respect Mr. Taft, the president-elect, because he was informed that Mr. Taft was not a believer in our Lord. I was amazed and can scarcely believe that the man was a true Catholic.

"You must have no less respect for those at the head of your government than you have for the pope in his department. There is a great evil in this land that forebodes revolution or a partial upheaval of society. The only way to avoid a catastrophe is to teach our young men to respect the authorities placed over them."

Miners' Contention Upheld

Fort Smith, Ark., Nov. 27.—A committee of arbitration, to which was referred a dispute which has tied up the mines of the Western Coal and Mining company at Denning for eight months, yesterday upheld a contention of the miners that the workings were very dangerous and recommended the employment of "shot-firers" when the men were out of the mines. The operators accepted the report of this committee and the miners will return to work Monday.

Lighted Match to Find Gas Leak

Paterson, N. J., Nov. 27.—A leaky gas main resulted in the death by asphyxiation of two persons here and the serious injury of three others, who lighted a match while searching for the leak, thus causing an explosion. Three children were also overcome by the fumes and may die. The dead are Peter Cunningham and his wife. The three who may die are children of Mrs. Mary Kelley and the injured are Albert Eyer, George Parker and John Werker.

Death of Old Sea Fighter

Philadelphia, Nov. 27.—Rear Admiral Alexander W. Russell of the United States navy, retired, died at his home here, aged 84 years. Death was due to heart failure. He first served in the navy on the sloop-of-war Saratoga. From 1842 to 1844 he was captain's clerk under Commodore Perry and served with the Texas Rangers in the Mexican war. During the Civil war he had command of the powder and shell division in twenty-seven engagements.

Ketchel Regains Championship

San Francisco, Nov. 27.—Stanley Ketchel of Michigan regained the middleweight championship of the world by knocking out Billy Papke of Illinois in the eleventh round. Ketchel had the better of the contest from start to finish. He knocked Papke down in the eleventh with a terrific left hook to the jaw and when Papke got on his feet Ketchel finished him with a succession of rights and lefts to the jaw and body.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Courage is more often the direct result of a three square meal habit than of anything else.

When a man takes to mixing his drinks it is a sign that he is going to have trouble explaining to his wife.

Regret is swiftly followed by reparation—when the latter is the more profitable.

The world owes every man a living and is a most cheerful and optimistic debtor.

The more painful to you a duty is the more promptly and cheerfully you will get it pointed out to you by loving friends.

If there is a mean thing to be said, don't worry; it will find a glib sayer without help from you.

Maybe if you didn't feel yourself such a reformer your own reformation would be more probable.

Nothing puts some critics so at sea as to have you agree with them.

You can lead a horse to water, but you can't be sure that the stock will pay dividends.

The Sane Campaign.

Yes, Mabel,
This
Is a campaign.
You've heard
Of them before—
About
The awful
Cutting up
And how
They rage and roar.
Well,
Are you waiting
For the noise
And the procession
Grand?
We hate
To disappoint you, but
This is
A different brand.
We do not call
Each other Names
As in
The good old day.
The children
Of one party with
The other's children
Play,
And we Admit
The candidate
Upon the other side
May not
A monster be,
Composed
Of ignorance and pride.
The rough house moods
Once
On a time
Perhaps were not Despised,
But now
We fondly think
That we Are nearly Civilized.

Frequent Cause.

"What made him rock the boat?"

"To tell the truth he was drunk."

"Oh, just a case of rock and rye."

Up to Date.

Footprints on the sands of time
Now are sadly out of date.
Wing prints in the upper air
Take the ribbon while you wait.

Quite Clear.

"I have a great deal of trouble about money."

"Yes; I have some with it too."

"Oh, I don't have any with it."

"No?"

"No; mine is when I am entirely without it."

Nothing Common.

"I hear Miss Jane is sick."

"Yes; she is feeling badly."

"What is the matter with her—grip?"

"Oh, no; nothing common like that. Since her folks got money they are importing all of their diseases from Europe."

Certainly.

"Why do women go in so strongly for reforming men?"

"Why?"

"Yes."

"Because it is the safest torment that they can hand out."

AN AMUSING CUSTOM.

Spaniards Trick Themselves Into Wanting a Glass of Water.

Writing of experiences with Spanish hospitality, Ellen Maury Slayden in the Century says:

The cafes were always crowded to suffocation, and yet we lingered past the small hours, the men smoking dozens of cigarettes and the women dipping bits of wafer into chocolate as leisurely as if they had the night instead of the day before them. A favorite drink was a thin almond milk which looked like something for the complexion and which, after tasting, I would have much preferred applying externally. There was a refreshing absence of the highball and cocktail element, and no one ever seemed to take too much to drink.

It is always amusing to see these most temperate people tricking themselves into wanting a glass of water. They recommend certain dishes and enjoy their eternal chocolate chiefly because "it makes one so thirsty." Visiting a country house once, we were invited into the dining room and I hoped for tea. The table was elaborately spread. We were seated and each helped to a delicious conserved peach and tenderly urged to eat it to make us want some water. When we had eaten the peach and drunk the water the ceremony was complete.

SENIORITY IN CONGRESS.

Experience Carries Influence—Old Members Relied on For Work.

A man's standing in congress is gained by seniority. His influence there comes from length of service, provided, of course, that it is the right kind of service.

New men, no matter how ambitious and zealous, have very little influence. They do not and cannot begin their work where their predecessors left off. Speechmaking does not bring them influence. Work brings it—committee work.

Members rank in their committees by seniority. Besides, new members do not get and cannot get in the usual course of things appointments to the more important committees. These appointments go to the tried men, who by length of service coupled with ability are chosen in the house for the vacant places.

Some constituencies know this and act accordingly. Some constituencies ignore the fact and gain nothing by ignoring it. In fact, they lose weight in the councils of congress by frequently changing their representatives simply to gratify the ambitions of local politicians.—Boston Herald.

A Story About Rodin.

The Cri de Paris tells a most amusing story if true about Rodin and some unnamed rich American woman who had selected him to make a statue of herself, full length and so far as possible a portrait. She had posed ten times in antique costume when Rodin told her that he did not need her any more and that he would finish the work at his leisure. When the American came again she found to her amazement that the head of the statue bore no resemblance whatever to her. She complained bitterly that no one would even recognize her. "It is true," said the great sculptor dreamily. "Your head did not inspire me at all. At first I thought I would not put any head on the statue, as I have been accustomed to do of late, but after I had thought it over carefully in order not to offend you I put in place of your face that of Mme. de R. She had ordered hers of me, but never paid for it. At any rate, you will gain much by this change!"

The Earth's Visibility.

As we look up through the transparent atmosphere on a clear night and see the moon beaming brilliantly down upon us we may think, "What a wonderful sight the continents and oceans of the earth would present if we could view them from the moon!" But, according to the conclusions of the director of the astrophysical observatory of the Smithsonian institution, a man on the moon would catch but fleeting glimpses of the outlines of our continents. "The true radiating surface of the earth as a planet," says the scientist, "is chiefly the water vapor at an elevation of 4,000 meters (13,000 feet) or more above the sea level." In consequence the man in the moon would see the features of the earth dimly outlined in the glare of light reflected from the atmosphere. —Youth's Companion.

Camels and Campbells.

An Irishman and a Scotchman were discussing the horrors of living in a prohibition state, when the Irishman remarked:

"Sure, an' ye might get used to it after awhile. Ye know they say a camel can go eight days without drinkin'."

"Hoot, mon!" retorted the other. "It's little ye know about the Campbells when ye say that. There is na one o' them could go eight hours wi'out a drap o' somethin'!"

Which ended the discussion.—New York Times.

Golfthalmia.

Golfthalmia is a poisonous and insidious bacterium which, in my dreams, under the powerful lens of my heated imagination, assumes the shape of something between a niblick, a golfer's oath and a caddie's smile—my caddie's. A strange, unsightly, grewsome, twisted, creeping, muttering thing.—Throne and Country.

The difference between a man's handshake and the wag of a dog's tail is that the wag is always sincere.—Marion (Ga.) Patriot.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

A meeting in the interest of Eugene R. Stone for Mayor was held at Wollaston Wednesday evening. Mr. Stone addressed the gathering and a rallying committee of fifty was formed.

John Finn of West Quincy, the well known local base ball player who is now a student at St. Anselm's college, Manchester, N. H., is spending the Thanksgiving recess with his parents.

The officers the National Foresters Court 750 Quincy, were guests last week at the dance given by Cambridge Court 654. They included Mrs. Helen Flaherty, Miss Mary Costello, Miss Agnes Collagan, Miss Mary Gilraine, Miss Selia Ogley.

Many friends deeply sympathize with Mrs. Winfield S. Tolman who was Miss Helen Hennigar of Safford street, Wollaston, in the loss of her husband who met such a tragic death on Wednesday at the Electric Light plant in Uxbridge, Mass. where he was assistant engineer.

GOOD BILL AT SCENIC.

The bill arranged by Manager Claroweth for the patrons of the Scenic for the week end is up to the usual high standard of Scenic programs.

On Thanksgiving day there was a continuous performance from 1 to 10 P. M. and it is estimated that about 2,000 people witnessed the show. This shows the popualrity of this playhouse and gives evidence of the excellent talent now performing at the Scenic.

The same bill will be presented tonight and at the Saturday afternoon and evening performances. Tonight eight bags of flour will be given away to those who have the lucky numbers.

Tomorrow afternoon the football and doll will be given away to that boy and girl who got the lucky checks given out last Saturday.

Silol Safford, the "By Gosh" rube, in his first trip to Chicago, is the leading feature of the vaudeville program.

FORE RIVER NOTES.

In order to deliver the first Army Tugboat on time, it will be necessary to have the trial trip on or before December 7, which leaves less than two weeks to prepare for trial. The delivery of each successive boat is but ten days later than the preceding one. These boats must be delivered on time and special efforts will be made to secure the delivery of all material and to have the work done in time for the trial trip of the first boat on the date set.

The works were closed Thanksgiving day only such repair work as was necessary being done. Work was resumed as usual this morning.

The shipyard voters of Ward Two will hold a rally Monday evening in the old hose house at Quincy Point. The rally will not be conducted on party lines as the committee in charge is composed of members of both the Republican and Democratic parties. A few candidates, will be introduced and Harry Marr, foreman shipwright on submarines, will give an interesting talk on municipal politics. As the capacity of the hall is not as large as might be wished for, and as a large number have signified their intention of being present, admission will be limited to voters only.

☞Free concert Saturday evening at LaCroix's, corner Hancock and School streets. Dick Hussey, the popular boy mezzo-soprano in L. O'Connor's popular hit, "When I am far away from you."

A FEROCIOUS EARL.

Alexander of Buchan, Known as the "Wolf of Badenoch."

During the restoration of Dunkeld cathedral the workmen unearthed the remains of Bishop Sinclair, one of those who assisted in the building of the cathedral, and of the notorious Alexander, earl of Buchan, whose ferocity won for him the significant title of the "wolf of Badenoch." A memorial marks the spot where the "wolf" was buried, and it has often been a subject of remark by visitors that a man who plundered churches and in various ways showed his hatred of the clergy should have been laid to rest side by side with bishops and other high ecclesiastics.

Alexander, earl of Buchan, was a younger son of Robert II. of Scotland. During the closing years of the latter's reign the chief powers in the state were delegated to his sons, the earls of Fife and Buchan, and after the accession of Robert III., an amiable but weak prince, this unfortunate delegation was allowed to be continued. The Earl of Buchan ruled over the northern part of Scotland with an authority little less than regal. He has been described as scarcely better than a savage—cruel, ferocious and relentless. Among his exploits was the destruction of the magnificent cathedral of Elgin. He carried off the chalices and vestments, polluted the shrines with blood and finally set fire to the noble edifice, the houses of the canons and the town itself. He also laid waste a large part of the country.—Pall Mall Gazette.

LEGAL VERBIAGE.

A Kick From a Layman Against Its Solemn Senselessness.

"As fond as I am of reading," said a merchant, "I never peruse a legal document without feeling irritable over my inability to grasp the real meaning of such a paper at a glance. Like many other persons not engaged in the legal profession, I sometimes have to read contracts and other agreements drawn up by lawyers, and I often wonder why in this age of common sense the 'whereases,' 'aforesaids' and 'parties of the first part' are not relegated to oblivion. The technical verbiage employed is a relic of the age when that which was mysterious and could not be understood was esteemed to be beyond the comprehension of the common herd. The use of uncommon English in purely business circles would not be endured. Why, then, should the transfer of a piece of property be a process so labyrinthian and so mysterious that a man of sound sense cannot fathom it? It has been estimated that the clipping of the letter 'u' from such words as humour, labour and the like has added to the world each year what is equivalent to the productive capacity of 500 ablebodied men. What would we not gain if from every legal paper and from every legal suit there should be removed that vast mass of superfluity, that antique verbiage, that bulk of repetition and solemn senselessness that now inwraps them as the shell inwraps the clam?"—Chicago Inter Ocean.

He Knew His Business.

An open moving van, piled high with furniture, was proceeding slowly up Third avenue in the Harlem section. The driver, whose face denoted contentment and an inclination to doze, sat cross kneed, holding the reins loosely The driver had arranged a comfortable support for his back. This was nothing less than a framed oil painting about 3 by 4 feet in size, uncovered, and with the painting unprotected from the coatless, warm weathered shoulder blades. A citizen hailed him from the curb.

"Hey! Don't ruin that picture leaning against it that way!"

"Ah, g'wan!" said the driver. "Dis ain't de first time I drove furniture. I know me business."

And the van passed on.—New York Globe.

Her Version of It.

She was a wee scrap of a thing just three years old, but with a soul of a heroine shining out of her great brown eyes. It was her first visit to the zoo, and the babel of queer noises and rows of strange big beasts might well have daunted her baby heart. But she scorned to seem afraid. Only when they approached the towering form of the elephant did she draw back.

"I'm not goin' too close, papa," she whispered; "I might scare him!"—Woman's Home Companion.

"Seeing" Plants.

Professor Darwin is right. Plants can see—some plants. Take corn and rye, for instance. With proper treatment these plants sometimes see double, and frequently they see things that aren't there.—New York Telegraph.

End of Mankind.

"Now, boys," queried the teacher of the juvenile class, "can any of you tell me the final end of all mankind?"

"Yes, ma'am, I can," promptly answered the boy at the foot—"the letter 'd.'"—Exchange.

His Hearing to Come.

Old Lady (reading newspaper)—I declare! The poor fellow arrested yesterday is deaf. Listener—How do you know? Old Lady—Why, it says here that he is expected to have his hearin' next week.

Big Difference.

"Pa, what's the difference between the drama and melodrama?"

"The seats, my son. You will never find any empty ones at the melodrama."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Plot and Counterplot.

[Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.]

Jim Pickering and Marcia Kyle were as popular a duo as ever graced a city social set. When they became engaged the girls all said "How lovely!" and the men said "A pair of bricks." It was to be expected that they would be married in fine style and would receive a multitude of presents. They decided, however, to confine their invitations to their intimate friends and make an old fashioned jollification of it. Even this narrow limit took in some two hundred people, but there were plans among those invited to have a rare time. It was proposed by one group to kidnap the bride and groom and take them far out of their way on their wedding trip. Another group planned to give them what is called in the country a charivari—that is, to collect under their windows and serenade them with all kinds of discordant music. Another feature was to follow them tooting horns.

But the groom and bride were also busy planning. How should they escape all these traps set for them and turn the laugh on the would be trappers? Many plans were discussed, but laid aside as impracticable. One was to procure an automobile with an experienced chauffeur to distance their pursuers. Another was to hide somewhere in the house till the guests, weary of hunting for them, would give up the attempt to find them. No confidence was placed in being able to lose their pursuers on the road, and, as to hiding in a house with 200 eager searchers to turn it inside out, such a scheme was manifestly impossible.

There was one avenue of escape, which they did not hit upon till the last moment, though it was the simplest and most practicable of all. Fortunately for them they thought of it in time to put it into practice.

"The guests were met, the feast was set." Two hundred young men and women—there was not an old person among them except from the immediate families of the bride and groom—witnessed the ceremony, many of them on tiptoe of excitement, to put in practice some plan by which to turn the wedding night into a carnival. Then there were the usual kisses for the bride and groom from members of their respective families, after which the boys and girls passed before them, offering their congratulations. After this came the drinking of the health of the bride in the supper room and lastly the usual disappearance upstairs of the newly married couple to don traveling suits preparatory to being driven to the station.

The hour was 10 o'clock at night. The groom's dressing room was on the top floor of the house, the bride's on the next floor below. When the bride was ready she mounted to the floor above, where the groom awaited her. Together they ran up a ladderway to the scuttle, pushed it aside and stood on the roof. The house was in a block of houses of nearly equal height. Pickering jumped down over the coping and handed down his bride, and together they ran over half a dozen roofs, vainly trying to find an open scuttle, till they reached the seventh house away.

Now, there had been frequent robberies of late in that part of the city, and people were on the lookout for thieves. Hearing footsteps on his roof, an occupant of one of the houses the couple passed over telephoned for the police, and in less than three minutes a patrol wagon full of cops drove up to the front door in question. Being informed that robbers were on the roof who would doubtless seek an egress through one of the houses, the block was surrounded. A policeman went into each of the houses and upstairs to receive the thieves when they should come through the scuttle. The consequence was that when the wedded pair stepped down on to the top floor of the house they entered, intending to explain matters to the occupants and then secure their indulgence and co-operation, they walked into the arms of a policeman.

A policeman is a matter of fact individual, utterly devoid of humor, sympathy or any of the attributes required on this occasion. Pickering explained. He told the cop what a fine joke they were playing—all to no purpose. They were informed that they could tell their story to the sergeant at the desk at the station. There was but one alternative—to request to be taken back to the house from which they had escaped. Pickering suggested this course to his bride.

"What! Go back there to be laughed at! Never!"

"We'll have to pass our bridal night in a cell."

"I'll pass it in a fiery furnace rather than face that crowd in charge of a policeman."

The terror of it was in riding to the station in the open patrol wagon. They got there without being recognized. Pickering told his story to the sergeant and was informed that he must not only be identified as a respectable person, but prove that he had just been married. The bride kept her pluck till they were about to be marched to separate cells, then gave in.

Fortunately an inspector came into the office at this time, and he agreed that if Pickering would bring a single witness from the house where the wedding party was assembled to corroborate his story he would let the pair go. Pickering telephoned for his wife's father, who slipped away to the station, and in five minutes after his arrival the now really happy pair were driving like mad for a train.

THOSE BUSY TRAVELERS.

In olden times we used to get
From friends who went away
A lengthy letter telling what
They did from day to day,
But now when they are on a trip
In token of regard
They send us just a sentence on
A picture postal card.

Mixed with our morning mail we get
A splendid view of Spain,
The photograph of some old friend
Snapped as he took the train;
The shadow of a mountain peak,
The outlines of the mint
Or some advice or merry jest
In bold, suggestive print.

The figure of a pretty girl
Upon a burro's back,
A tunnel or a mountain gorge
Crossed by a railroad track,
The freak production of a head
Upon a body small,
A field of cotton bursting wide
Or just a waterfall.

A panorama of the earth
From Texas to Japan,
A sort of moving picture show
That we may idly scan,
With just a scanty written line
As up and down they flit;
No letters in the pack unless
They want us to remit.

Explicit.

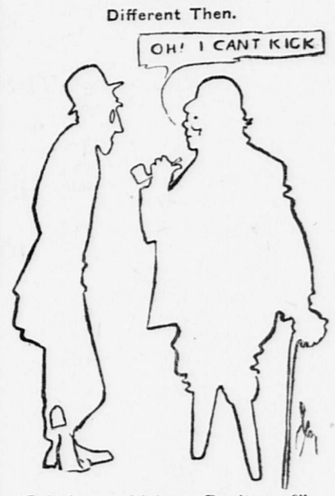

"Those gunfdrops are fine. Are they very expensive?"

"No, not so very."

"How many do you get for a quarter?"

"Oh, about a quarter's worth."

Different Then.

"I do hate a kicker. Don't you?"

"You bet—unless he is getting something for me."

Sign of Progress.

"Do you think the world is going forward or backward?"

"Forward, forward, by all means. Haven't you noticed that the tailors have refused to revert to the peg top trousers?"

Near Marvel.

"He is an accomplished musician."

"I didn't know it."

"He can play a hand organ."

"Indeed!"

Fond of It.

"Is she much given to reflection?"

"Oh, much; she always uses a triple."

"Triple what?"

"Mirror."

Hope.

We're looking forward to the day
When war shall be no more.
That frightful monster of the past
Whose reign good men deplore,
And after we have conquered that
And made the warrior tame
Perhaps we'll get around to see
About the football game.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Many a woman's good health and spirits are due to the good humor of her husband.

Homely and comforting things don't cost much money. That is why they have both qualities.

When conditions are bad it is apt to take more than an amateur to make good.

The woman who entertains an unexpected guest without apologizing is as rare as the guest that doesn't apologize.

It is a good thing to look on the darker side occasionally to rest your eyes from the glare.

A clean bill of health is the best recommendation for any situation and the best guarantee of retaining it.

The people who can do better than we are nice to think about, but none of us is dying for their society.

Probably the only way to satisfactorily solve the hired girl problem is to invent kitchenless homes.

Probably the prize fool will soon quit rocking boats and speeding automobiles and go to shunting airships.

It is well to understand a subject before you talk about it, in which case you probably won't want to talk.

The Quincy Daily Ledger

Published in the City of Presidents

Vol. 20. No. 279 QUINCY, MASS., SATURDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 28 1908. PRICE TWO CENTS.

TO THE VOTERS OF QUINCY: November, 27, 1908.

The undersigned, Citizens of Quincy, irrespective of party and vitally interested in our City's welfare, respectfully call to your attention the desirability of re-electing HON. WILLIAM T. SHEA Mayor.

Mayor Shea, in selecting the administrative heads of the City Government, displayed a spirit of non-partisanship, which should meet with the approval of all citizens, who believe that partisan politics in municipal affairs should be subordinate to the good of the public service.

His administration of the business of the City, has been most conscientious and efficient.

The re-election of Mayor Shea will mean the continuance for another year of the present prudent, economical and business-like method of transacting the affairs of the City, and will enable him to further advance, if not carry to completion, the many important matters in charge of the present City Government, which ought to be carried through by the men familiar with the work.

We believe the best interest of the City will be served by retaining Mayor Shea in office for another term, and therefore, most earnestly urge his re-election.

HITCHCOCK IN TAFT CABINET

First Actual Selection of President-Elect Is Announced

TO BE POSTMASTER GENERAL

Service Will Be of Great Value to Taft Administration Because of His Knowledge of Personnel of Republican Party--Thoroughly Acquainted With Postal Affairs--Woodruff at Hot Springs

Hot Springs, Va., Nov. 28.—Frank H. Hitchcock has been offered and has accepted the position of postmaster general in the Taft cabinet that is to be.

The official announcement of this, the first cabinet selection of President-elect Taft, doubtless will not be made until Taft has completed his cabinet, when it will be announced en bloc. Because of this view of the situation no expression regarding the selection of Hitchcock was obtainable for publication from either Taft or the Republican national chairman.

There are many reasons, it is pointed out, why it is expedient that Hitchcock's status should be fixed, at least so far as the principals are concerned, and a complete understanding is known to exist between them. As chairman of the Republican national committee Hitchcock became more familiar than any other person with the political phase of questions likely to arise at the beginning of the Taft administraton, and the knowledge he gained of the personnel of the party will be of great service to Taft throughout his administration.

Besdes these reasons the national chairman admittedly possesses a comprehensive, as well as a technical knowledge, of postal affairs, gained by a protracted experience as first assistant and acting postmaster general.

Mr. Hitchcock, accompanied by Charles H. Boynton of New York, left here for Washington, where tonight he will be the guest of honor at a dinner to be given him by the executive and advisory committees of the national committee. He then will visit headquarters in New York. It is altogether probable that from this time on Hitchcock will be frequently in conference with Taft.

Timothy L. Woodruff of New York, chairman of the New York Republican state committee, and Representative Parsons, president of the New York county committee, expect to confer with Taft today. Woodruff says he expects to discuss the senatorial situation in his state, as well as a number of other matters of political importance growing out of the recent campaign. As to his own aspirations in connection with the senatorship, Woodruff says he has made no public announcement and has nothing to say for publication at present. He has heard a rumor that he had come down here to withdraw, he says, but he declares there is absolutely no foundation for such a statement, particularly as he has never declared himself a candidate.

Kentucky Troops Breaking Camp

Hopkinsville, Ky., Nov. 28.—The withdrawal of troops from the "night rider region of western Kentucky has begun. The first camp abandoned was at Hickman, where a family of negroes were murdered recently. Soldiers yesterday afternoon left Trigg county and those at Princeton, Gracey, Cobb, Dawson and various other places will break camp today. Guards will be left at Murray and Eddyville, where conditions are still feared as critical.

Vanderbilt Testimony All In

New York, Nov. 28.—The last testimony has been taken in the case of Edward W. Vanderbilt, whose daughter, Minerva, seeks to have him adjudged incompetent to conduct his business, her chief contention being that he indicated his alleged incompetence when he married May P. Scannell, the spiritualistic medium. The jury will be charged probably on Monday and a verdict is expected early in the week.

The Attitude of Bulgaria

Sofia, Nov. 28.—What the attitude of Bulgaria will be in the event of hostilities between Austria-Hungary and Turkey is a question that is beginning to claim attention here. It has revived speculation concerning the existence of some sort of Austro-Bulgarian convention. A cabinet minister says that Bulgaria's hands are absolutely free to act in whatever manner she may consider advantageous.

Thinks Mme. Steinheil Honorable

Paris, Nov. 28.—Count Darlon, whose name has been mentioned with that of Mme. Steinheil and at whose house in Paris Mme. Steinheil stayed for a few weeks after the murder of her husband, declares that she is an honest and honorable woman. The count says, however, he is convinced that Mme. Steinheil is no longer possessed of her mental faculties.

Critically Hurt at Football

Hingham, Mass., Nov. 28.—Sergeant Dowdle of the Eighty-third coast artillery, stationed at Fort Revere, who was carried off a football field Thursday with injuries in the neck, is reported to be in a critical condition. His body from the neck downward is paralyzed as the result of his injury.

LIVE STOCK EXPOSITION

Record List of Entries at Great Show Which Opens at Chicago Today

Chicago, Nov. 28.—Beginning today and lasting two weeks, the International Live Stock exposition held here will be the greatest event of the sort in the world's history, according to competent stockmen. From all parts of the United States and Canada and from Europe breeders of fine stock have sent their best specimens here to compete for valuable prizes. All the standard breeds of cattle, sheep, swine and horses are represented, and in addition there are exhibits of dressed meat, stock feeds, dairy and wool shearing apparatus, etc.

The list of entries is the largest ever known in the annual expositions of the sort. All records have been broken in the nominations in the horse and cattle divisions. Nominations in the various divisions are as follows: Cattle, 1239; sheep, 905; horses, 765; swine, 258; total, 3167.

Although the stockmen assembled here for the exposition are delighted with the large number of entries, they expressed much disappointment over the determination of the federal agriculture department to prohibit the exhibit of cattle from Pennsylvania and New York, owing to the prevalence of the foot and mouth disease in those states.

"PAPER" BLOCKADE NOT RECOGNIZED

Haiti Must Not Hold Up Merchandise From America

Washington, Nov. 28.—Haiti's "paper blockade of the ports of Aquin and Jeremie, which the government admits its inability to make effectve by force of arms, will not be recognized by the state department. This is in accordance with the traditional policy of the American government.

Notices to this effect have been sent to American Minister Furniss, at Port au Prince. Furniss cabled that he had been notified that the ports declared blockaded had also been declared closed to commerce. The Haitian authorities also notified the local steamship agents that merchandise for them must be landed at the capital. Acquiesence in this, the minister said, would seriously affect American firms which have sold to houses shipping through Aquin and Jeremie the greater part of the merchandise for those ports coming from the United States. At neither place, says Furniss, has the government force enough to maintain a blockade.

Other features of the minister's advices are that the government of Haiti acknowledges the revolutionists have Jeremie and that the secretary of the interior is a prisoner in their hands. A German vessel has arrived from New York with a cargo for Jeremie.

According to Haitian law it requires an act of congress to open ports and it is not within the executive prerogative to close them.

Carnegie's Birthday Celebration

New York, Nov. 28.—The telegraphic code word "73," meaning "best regards," ticked scores of times last night over the special wires to the banquet room at the Hotel Manhattan, where the Old Time Telegraphers of New York entertained Andrew Carnegie on his 73rd birthday. At the table with him were Thomas A. Edison, the inventor, a former operator, and five of the first nine operators regularly employed by the United States government in the Civil war.

Troops on Guard at Keasbey

Perth Amboy, N. J., Nov. 28.—Troops are still on guard at Keasbey, where the strike of the 700 employes of the National Fire-proofing company led to rioting and caused the shooting of six strikers by deputy sheriffs before the militia had been ordered out by Governor Fort. The company announces an increased rate of wages and will open a number of its clay-working plants today for such men as care to work.

Mrs. Heinze Loses $12,000 Necklace

New York, Nov. 28.—Otto C. Heinze, the broker, reported to the police of the "Tenderloin" station last night that his wife lost a $12,000 necklace of pearls on Thanksgiving night. Heinze and his wife attended the theatre on that evening and dined at a Broadway hotel with friends. While at the table Mrs. Heinze discovered the loss of the necklace.

Wants Share of Father's Fortune

Chicago, Nov. 28.—Leslie D. Carter, son of the late capitalist and financier, Leslie Carter, and of Mrs. Leslie Carter Payne, has filed suit to break his father's will. This instrument left the estate to the testator's brothers and sisters, ignoring the son because of his allegiance to his mother after her separation from Carter.

Squad For Extra Police Duty

Portland, Me., Nov. 28.—Twenty-five men left here for Rumford to do police duty and prevent any possible trouble when men are brought into the town to take the places of the 800 strikers in the mill of the Oxford Paper company. The company has announced that these workmen will be secured at once.

CONVINCING FACTS.

There is no use denying the fact that Johnson Bros., are surely giving genuine bargains in food values. It will be hard indeed to find a store that is giving such excellent quality at such low prices.

Everything the best that money can buy, is their standard; and their customers know from past dealings that that is absolutely true. Now with our discount system, it is still more of an inducement to trade with us, and you will be surprised to find how fast your discount checks will count up.

We are displaying every day a choice assortment of Cut Meats, with the prices marked in plain figures, so that every one can see what they are paying for or we will cut it to your order, whichever you prefer.

We are pleased that so many of our customers have helped us to make this system a success, for it means a whole lot to them as well as to us. We do not think that any one objects to carrying home a purchase especially when they are paid to do so, which we are doing, with our discount check system.

We are receiving new seasonable goods every day, and it will be to your interest to visit our store and do business with us.

Beef, Lamb and Fresh Pork are all lower and we have a choice lot of Fresh Killed Chicken and Fowl constantly on hand, direct from William A. Drake of Braintree.

A tempting line of New Canned Goods, packed expressly for us.

An excellent stock of New Cereals, Buckwheat, Pan Cake Flour, and all the leading brands of Bread and Pastry Flour.

All kinds of Bottled Goods, Jellies, Jams, Olives and Pickles.

Fresh Hot House Lettuce, Choice Celery, Radishes, Cucumbers, and Fruits of all kinds.

Remember, that every day is BARGAIN day at Johnson Bros., so keep in the road, for all roads lead to our store.

And, remember that we give you 5 per cent discount on all cash purchases, if you take the purchase home, or 2 per cent discount when you ask us to deliver it.

Yours for Quality,

AMUSEMENTS.

Hollis Street Theatre.

Monday, November 30, Henry B. Harris will bring to the Hollis Street theatre, Charles Klein's latest play, "The Third Degree." Any announcement of a new play by the author of "The Lion and the Mouse," should attract more than ordinary attention of the theatre-goers of this city, who are acquainted with the stirring situations which composed this dramatic sensation. From the very first line in the play, the interest in "The Third Degree" is aroused and never permitted to sag until after the final curtain. Seldom in the history of theatricals has a play been written which embodies so many desirable features. The tensity of the situations begins with the discovery by the police of the body of Robert Underwood in his art store and the arrest of Howard Jeffries, Jr., who is found on the premises sleeping off a drunken stupor. Until the final scene in the play in a powerful dramatic climax where evidence is adduced which clearly proves the boy innocent of the crime, is there a let-up in the rapid action of the drama. The production is staged in a most handsome manner, and is complete in every detail. Unquestionably "The Third Degree" should meet with the same favored reception as did its predecessor, "The Lion and the Mouse."

Keith's Theatre.

For an all round bill with every act a feature, it would be difficult to surpass that announced for Keith's theatre the week of November 30th, and there are other acts yet to be announced. One of the principals will be Rock and Fulton ,those acquisitions from the legitimate stage, who came into vaudeville with an elaborate dancing act, in which Mr. Rock introduced the hypnotic dance which has become one of the biggest novelties in recent years. Mr. Rock and Miss Fulton have just returned from Europe where they repeated their American success. Also on this bill are Marcel's Living Art Studies, unquestionably the most remarkable series of tableaux, representing famous pictures ,statues and base reliefs that has ever been given to the public. The Six Musical Cuttys are known as the strongest musical team on the stage. Agnes Scott and Horace Wright are always welcome in that daintest and prettiest of all singing sketches, entitled "The Wall Between." Belle Blanche is also on the bill with her imitations. Sam J. Curtis will be seen in a comedy sketch. There are also Robert's Animals, Ryan and White ,the singing and dancing team, Marcello and others to be announced.

Boston Theatre.

One of the most remarkable successes will be presented at the Boston theatre the week of November 30th, in "A Message from Mars." This play, although written by an American, Richard Ganthony, had its first production in England, where it ran for over five hundred nights, with Charles Hawtrey in the leading part. Mr. Hawtrey came to this country and repeated this tremendous success, playing in Boston at the old Boston Museum. The story shows the universal selfishness as portrayed in Horace Parker, a wealthy well born and well bred Englishman. In his sleep a terrible vision appears before him. It is a Martian who has been sent to earth for a small punishment, and is forbidden to return to Mars until he has made unselfish, the most selfish man in the world. He has found Parker, whom he takes in hand in the most amusing manner. Parker is finally reformed. The play is one that could not be well told in the compass of a small article, but it is one that must be seen to thoroughly enjoy it.

Park Theatre.

The Park theatre has come into its own again, and musical comedy of the clean, fragrant an dsatisfactory kind will hold sway there for many weeks. At this house Charles Frohman's musical play, "Miss Hook of Holland," which ran nearly all last season in New York City, is the medium for introducing Frank Daniels, the funniest and most widely known of all the American laugh provokers. The title of the play has been changed by dropping the "Miss" and it is now called "Hook of Holland," but the quaint and pleasing book and the delightful songs remain unchanged. Of all the charming and dainty musical shows which Charles Frohman has given the public since he entered the field of theatrical management—none has made a stronger bid for popularity than "Miss Hook of Holland." It is at once a quaint and beautiful appeal to the eye through its fascinating Dutch scenes and it woes the ear in the most caressing manner by means of over twenty light, bright and breezy songs, every one of which can be listened to with pleasure, and all of which leave an exquisite impression. Frank Daniels, has compelled more people to laugh by the numerous humorous creations in comic opera for many years than any other comedian. There is no use in trying to analyze his art. You simply laugh at him in spite of yourself and feel all the better for it.

Castle Square Theatre.

"The House of a Thousand Candles" will have its first performance in Boston at the Castle Square Theatre next week. This famous novel by Meredith Nicholson has been made into an intensely interesting mystery-play by George Middleton, and it comes to Boston only a few months after its original production in New York, where E. M. Holland and other well known actors aroused no little sensation through their interpretation of its exciting scenes and their realization of its life-like characters. In fact, "The House of a Thousand Candles" may be called a detective story on the stage, and it will offer across the footlights the same sort of entertainment that we are all glad to get when we are seated book in hand in a quiet nook awaiting the unraveling of the mystery and the detection of the criminal. In fact, the play is filled with mysterious and exciting episodes, and there is not a moment in it when the audience is not kept on the qui vive of expectant interest in awaiting its happy and satisfactory outcome.

Orpheum Theatre.

Four individual star acts are only part of the features on the Orpheum theatre bill for next week. Direct from their record breaking run in London come the Zancigs, "Two Souls with but a single thought" in their marvellous demonstrations of thought transmission which have puzzled investigators of five continents. So clever are they that a reward of one hundred dollars is offered to any person whose name Mr. Zancig fails to transmit correctly. For her debut in Boston comes the famous Italian protean actress, Mlle. Fatima Miris who is called the "Female Fregoli." She presents plays with eight to twelve characters and plays the roles herself. She makes on an average sixty-seven changes of costume during her act. "A Night in Egypt" with Alice Raymond and her players, one of the prettiest of musical spectacles is brought here for the first time, also the Four Stagpooles the greatest acrobats in Australia. Sweden is represented by the Holman Brothers experts on the horizontal bar. Dainty Grace Hazard in "Five Feet of Comic Opera" is retained for a second week.

Help the kidneys with their work.
The back will ache no more.
Lots of proof that Doan's Kidney Pills do this.
It's the best proof, for it comes from Quincy.

Mrs. Andrew Gibb, living at 322 Washington St., Quincy, Mass. says: "My husband suffered a great deal from Kidney trouble. He had severe pains in the small of his back and had but little strength or energy to do his work. Hearing Doan's Kidney Pills highly spoken of, he procured a box at the Cox Drug Store and began taking them as directed. He was surprised and gratified at the quick relief he obtained from the first and when he had taken the contents of two boxes he was cured. Doan's Kidney Pills will always have our hightest recommendation."

LAND COURT.

To Abbie L. Studley, Joseph W. Whiting, Elizabeth Williams, Henry M. Faxon, Frank A. Page, Peter Williams and Emma E. Whiting of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk, and said Commonwealth; Mary F. Hayward of Braintree, in said County of Norfolk; William H. Faxon of Buffalo, in the State of New York; the heirs, devisees or legal representatives of Daniel Baxter, late of said Quincy, deceased; and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Richard D. Chase, Administrator of estate of James B. Whiting, late of said Quincy, deceased, to register and confirm his title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situate in said Quincy, bounded and described as follows: Northerly on Quincy Avenue, easterly by land of Elizabeth Williams and land of Mary F. Hayward, southerly by land of Mary F. Hayward, and westerly by land of Peter Williams and land of the heirs of Job Faxon.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition, and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the fourteenth day of December A. D., 1908, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Witness, Leonard A. Jones, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twentieth day of November in the year nineteen hundred and eight.

DELIBERATELY PLANNED DEATH

Eleanor Cowper, Playwright and Actress, Tries Suicide

FIRED SHOT UNDER A PILLOW

People In Hotel Heard No Explosion, the Tragedy Being Revealed by Letters Written to Four Persons--Prompt Response of One Prolongs Talented Woman's Life--She Furnishes a Biographical Sketch

New York, Nov. 28.—Using a pillow to muffle the report of her revolver, Mrs. Eleanor M. Cowper, a talented playwright and actress, shot herself in the head in her apartments at the St. Regis hotel. The explosion of the cartridge was not heard, but Mrs. Cowper was rendered unconscious and was slowly dying when found.

Before making the attempt at self-destruction, Mrs. Cowper wrote a number of letters—one to her lawyer, another to the coroner, a third to an undertaker, and a fourth to John Hood, a friend, who lived near the St. Regis. In the letters she apprised these four persons of her intention to commit suicide.

About the moment Mrs. Cowper pulled the trigger of the revolver the letter addressed to John Hood was delivered. Hood glanced through the first few lines, grabbed his coat and hat and ran with all speed to the St. Regis hotel. He was breathless when he told the clerk of the letter he had received. The clerk got a pass key and hurried to the room of Mrs. Cowper, accompanied by Hood and a maid employed in the hotel. They found Mrs. Cowper lying in bed with the pillow still over her head and the revolver clutched in her hand. The bedclothing was stained crimson.

Three physicians were quickly summoned and the police were notified. Mrs. Cowper would have died within an hour or so if the letter to Hood had not been delivered sooner, apparently, than she intended.

Mrs. Cowper made careful preparations to end her life. Besides writing a letter to her lawyer, H. B. Royce of Middletown, N. Y., to take charge of her body, she ordered an undertaker to prepare her body for burial, and she painstakingly wrote a brief autobiography. Her hand had not trembled in the least in writing any of these letters, as is evidenced by the good penmanship.

The biographical sketch says that she was born in England, and that she came to this country at the age of three months. Her maiden name was Eleanor Merron. Her stage career began in Boston in a production called "Youth." Mrs. Katherine C. Gould appeared in the play also. Mrs. Cowper gives a list of the various productions she appeared in. She was under the management of Charles Frohman and later Daniel Frohman. She played with Julia Marlowe in Shakespearian roles and then went with Fanny Davenport, who took a deep interest in her.

Mrs. Cowper wrote four plays which were produced on Broadway. They were "Dairy Farm," "In Love," "A Broadway Favorite," and "A Last Rehearsal."

Mrs. Cowper does not give the date of her marriage, referring briefly to the fact that her husband, Archibald Cowper, was an actor, and that he died three years ago. Practically her only home life, she wrote, was when she lived on the farm of James H. Wallick, at Middletown, N. Y. Wallick, who was 66 years old, collaborated with her in a number of plays. Last April Wallick committed suicide, which seems to have made a deep impression on Mrs. Cowper. He shot himself in the right temple. Mrs. Cowper tried to kill herself in the same manner.

Lawyer Royce, on receiving the letter from Mrs. Cowper that she intended to kill herself, arrived at the hotel to find the police in charge of the dying woman. Royce said that Mrs. Cowper's autobiography was correct. In the letter Mrs. Cowper wrote to Royce she asked him to notify her parents in New Hampshire of her death and to take charge of the body. She asked that her body be cremated.

In her letter to the coroner Mrs. Cowper said that she regretted having to "bring the hotel into disrepute" by killing herself there, but added that she was compelled to do so because no place was provided in which to commit suicide. She also said that she intended to kill herself on Thanksgiving day, but delayed the act one day so as not to disturb her friends.

Late last night Mrs. Cowper was taken to the Presbyterian hospital, where an operation was performed as a last resort to save her life. The bullet in her head was extracted. She is thought to be dying.

Millionaire Says Blackmail

New York, Nov. 28.—A remarkable charge was made in Harlem police court against Herbert Auerbach, a millionaire real estate speculator and banker, by Carrie Remley, who described herself as an actress. The woman accused Auerbach of choking and beating her into insensibility and robbing her of $8 in cash and a locket and chain valued at $22. Auerbach says he is the victim of an attempt at blackmail. Auerbach is recorded as a widower, 43 years of age.

UNIFORMS IN EVIDENCE

Distinguished Gathering at Army and Navy Gridiron Contest

Philadelphia, Nov. 28.—Wherever one looks into the crowd that jams the seats around Franklin field today one sees a uniform, either of the army or of the navy. From every corner of the earth in which Old Glory flies over a naval station or an army post the men who wear the blue have assembled here to see the West Point and Annapolis football elevens give battle to each other. All grades of the two services are represented, from ensign to rear admiral in the one and from second deutenant to major general in the other. The gold laced officers of hgh rank share the attention of the vast crowd with the canvas clad pigskin chasers, but they are themselves too absorbed in the game to notice the attention they are getting.

It is the last big football game of the year that is being played here this afternoon and the culmination of the season for the two teams. For it Annapolis and West Point have reserved their best men and their secret plays. Each team has behind it this year a most creditable record and is keyed up to the highest pitch in the endeavor to wind up the year with victory over its dearest rival.

As the players of the two elevens trot out on the field the chief topic of discussion among the spectators is the wonderful defense which Annapolis is said to have perfected against the expected strong attack of the West Point team. The greatest care has been taken at Annapolis to keep the recent practice secret. The army, on the other hand, will rely today on the attack that enabled it to tear holes through the Villanova eleven last Saturday, rolling up a score of 25 points to 0. It is hard, however, to figure any comfort for West Point out of a comparison of the West Point-Villanova score with the score of 30 to 6 made at Annapolis two weeks ago against Villanova.

The army has tied Princeton, 0 to 0, and has held Yale to a 6 to 0 score. The navy's record is possibly even better, as it tied Harvard, the score being 6 to 6. Despite this comparison of scores the betting has favored West Point.

NEWPORT NAVAL CONFERENCE

Officers Cannot Discuss It Without President's Permission

Washington, Nov. 28.—That there shall be no further public discussion by naval officers concerning the Newport conference without permission of the president is the purport of an order issued by Secretary Metcalf, by direction of the president.

On Oct. 30 the department issued an order permitting officers to discuss the work of this conference except so far as it applied to changes to be made on ships to be authorized in the future. The president has now concluded that public discussion of alleged defects of battleships will not serve any good purpose. The order says:

"It is directed that under no circumstances is any officer to discuss before the public, or to give any information, directly or indirectly, concerning the Newport conference, or to discuss any question of naval policy without submitting what he wishes to say to the secretary of the navy, or through the secretary of the navy to the President of the United States, and officers will be held to strict accountability in this respect."

Would Have Position Abolished

Boston, Nov. 28.—A recommendation that the present position of superintendent of supplies be abolished and that the law be amended so as to authorize the creation of a general supply department for the city under an expert buyer is made in a report submitted by the finance commission to Mayor Hibbard. The commission states that the present superintendent of supplies is incompetent and demands his discharge, declaring that certain contracts were made without advertising.

HON WILLIAM T. SHEA,
QUINCY, MASS.

DEAR SIR:

I HAVE WATCHED YOU AS CAREFULLY AS I COULD AND I BELIEVE YOU HAVE KEPT YOUR PROMISES AND HAVE GIVEN OUR CITY A GOOD CLEAN ADMINISTRATION, WHERE WE HAVE GOT MORE VALUE FOR OUR MONEY ON OUR STREETS THAN FOR THE PAST TEN YEARS. I HAVE DRIVEN OVER MANY OF THE STREETS THAT HAVE BEEN BUILT AND CAN SAY THEY ARE SPLENDID, FOR INSTANCE, SUMNER AND COMMON STREETS. I AM TOLD BY A MEMBER OF THE FINANCE COMMITTEE OF THE CITY COUNCIL THAT THE COST WAS A LITTLE OVER HALF WHAT SIMILAR WORK HAS COST.

I HAVE ALSO EXAMINED THE NEW CODDINGTON SCHOOL BUILDING MANY TIMES DURING ITS CONSTRUCTION AND HAVE NO HESITATION IN SAYING THAT IT IS THE BEST BUILT SCHOOL BUILDING OF ALL OUR NEW SCHOOL BUILDINGS. THE GRADE CROSSING QUESTION HAS BEEN CARRIED ON IN A CONSERVATIVE MANNER AND FOR THE BEST INTEREST OF THE CITY.

NOW SIR, I DID NOT VOTE FOR YOU LAST YEAR, BUT FULLY INTENDED TO UNTIL THE LAST FEW DAYS OF THE CAMPAIGN WHEN I WAS ASSURED THAT CERTAIN CHANGES WOULD BE MADE, AND AS YOU WERE THEN AN UNTRIED QUANTITY I CHANGED MY MIND. WHILE I HAVE NOTHING BUT GOOD FEELING FOR MR. STONE, BUT WHEN A MAN HAS LABORED NIGHT AND DAY TO GIVE A GOOD HONEST ADMINISTRATION AND HAS SUCCEEDED I CANNOT FIND IT IN MY HEART TO TURN HIM OUT AFTER ONE YEAR, JUST WHEN HE HAS LEARNED THE ROPES AND THE CITY HAS ALL TO GAIN IN THE SECOND YEAR BY YOUR EXPERIENCE OF THE FIRST. I SAY, "TO THE WIND WITH PARTY POLITICS IN CITY AFFAIRS," AND LET US VOTE FOR THE BEST MAN AND ONE WHOM WE HAVE TRIED. PERHAPS MR. STONE MIGHT DEVELOP TO AS GOOD A MAYOR, BUT AGAIN HE MIGHT NOT AND I CAN'T THINK OUR BUSINESS MEN AND THE TAX PAYERS WILL APPROVE THE RISK.

I AM VERY SORRY, BUT IT LOOKS AS THOUGH I WOULD BE COMPELLED TO LEAVE FOR CALIFORNIA BEFORE ELECTION DAY. YOU AND I HAVE KNOWN EACH OTHER FOR OVER THIRTY YEARS YOU IN ONE PARTY AND I IN THE OTHER, BUT I HAVE NOTHING BUT ADMIRATION FOR YOUR CONDUCT ALL THAT TIME AND SINCE YOU HAVE BEEN AT THE HEAD OF THE CITY GOVERNMENT YOU HAVE BEEN A CREDIT TO THE CITY AND AN HONOR TO YOURSELF. YOU HAVE A BATTLE AHEAD, BUT WHEN I THINK OF THE THOUSANDS OF DEMOCRATS WHO VOTED FOR GOV. HUGHES BECAUSE HE HAD GIVEN AN HONEST AND FEARLESS ADMINISTRATION, I CANNOT THINK OF OUR REPUBLICANS DOING LESS THAN TO SUPORT YOU FOR ANOTHER YEAR AND ALLOW YOU TO CARRY OUT YOUR POLICIES TO CARRY THE GRADE CROSSING QUESTION TO A SUCCESSFUL ISSUE, WHERE A CHANGE AT THIS TIME WOULD MEAN DELAY AND GOING ALL OVER THE GROUND AGAIN.

SOME UNTHINKING PEOPLE BLAME YOU FOR THE HIGH TAX RATE FOR THIS YEAR, BUT WHAT THE MAYOR HAS TO DO WITH THE TAX RATE IS NOT QUITE CLEAR TO ME. PAST CITY COUNCILS AND MAYORS HAVE LOADED US DOWN WITH THE PUBLIC DEBT UNTIL WE MUST RAISE SOME $80,000 TO PAY INTEREST ALONE, WHICH MUST BE PAID OR THE CITY WILL GO BROKE. THERE IS ALSO A CONSTANT DEMAND FOR EVERY THING THAT BOSTON HAS WITHOUT A THOUGHT OF WHERE THE MONEY IS COMING FROM, SO I FAIL TO SEE HOW THE HEAVY TAX RATE CAN BE LAID AT YOUR DOOR. IT IS MUCH FURTHER BACK.

I HOPE YOU WILL EXCUSE THIS LONG LETTER, BUT I CAN NOT GO AWAY WITHOUT TELLING YOU HOW I FELT AND IF I HAD A HUNDRED VOTES YOU SHOULD HAVE THEM AS A PARTIAL REWARD FOR YOUR PAINSTAKING ADMINISTRATION THE PAST YEAR AND ALL I CAN SAY IS TO STAND FOR THE RIGHT AND TAKE NO BACKWARD STEP.

YOURS VERY RESPECTULLY,
J. L. MILLER.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Dore us, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

III—Lady Betty gets her first impression of America. On the dock she is rescued from reporters by the steerage hero, who tells her he is Jim Brett, employed at the Manhattan club, New York. In Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid New York home Betty meets Lieutenant Parker brother of the hostess, who is to take them to visit West Point.

IV—Vivace, a beautiful and expensive dog, is sent to Betty. Mrs. Ess Kay does not know who the donor is, and Betty does not tell her that it is Brett. Lieutenant Parker, whom Betty does not like, makes love to her.

V—Lady Betty has a good time at West Point despite Parker's proposal, which she rejects.

VI—In a walk in Central park Sally tells Betty her love story (she had been seperated years before from the poor man she loved by her family, the man becoming a monk) and advises Betty to marry only when she is sure of her love. They meet Brett.

VII—Betty is introduced to Mrs. Harvey Richmount Taylour, a typical young society woman.

VIII—At Newport Betty falls in love with Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid "cottage," the Moorings. Parker continues his attentions. Mrs. Ess Kay is chagrined on learning that Mrs. Van der Windt, Newport's leader, has planned to "cut" her and her acquaintance, Mrs. Pitchley. Mrs. Ess Kay relies on Lady Betty's presence to maintain her social prestige. She plans an entertainment to introduce Betty.

X—Mrs. Ess Kay plans a fancy dress ball, the features of which are to be Aladdin's cave and the Maze. An invitation is sent to Mohunsleigh's friend, Jameson B. Harborough, a new San Francisco millioniare. Betty is to appear as a frost sprite.

XI—At the ball Parker proposes again. Betty is rescued from him by Brett, who hints that he is there as a reporter. She declares her faith in his future.

XII—Harborough fails to appear at the wedding of Cora Pitchley and Mohunsleigh, to which he has been invited. Everybody at Newport is anxious to meet him. Sally, having quarreled with Mrs. Ess Kay, is visiting a friend in Chicago and has asked Betty to go to Chicago if anything at Newport displeases her. Parker again proposes to Betty and is refused again, whereupon Mrs. Ess Kay tells Betty that her mother, the duchess, plans to have her either engaged to Parker or stay in America until her sister is engaged.

XIII and XIV—Betty runs away from Mrs. Ess Kay, going to New York on her way to Miss Woodburn in Chicago. She appeals to Brett for aid in getting to Chicago. He tells her he is going there also and offers to travel with her.

XV—In Chicago Betty misses Sally, who has gone to Ohio to visit a sick relative. She has nowhere to go before hearing from England. Brett shows her the sights of Chicago after offering to take her to board with some relatives of his own near Sally.

XVI—Betty fiinds refuge in a pleasant old fashioned Ohio farm homestead with Brett's cousin, Fanny Trowbridge, and her husband, Hezekiah, with whom two girls, Patty and Ide, are staying.

XVII—Betty and Brett discuss Mohunsleigh's friend Harborough. Brett declares Harborough's attraction for the girls lies in his millions rather than in his adventurous career and his courage. Betty becomes indignant, but her anger is dispelled when Brett rescues her from a bull. Sally declares it was her cousin's planning to secure Betty for Parker that drove her from Newport.

XVIII—The Ohio country folk please Betty very much. Whit Walker, a country store-keeper, who loves Patty, fears that the girl is in love with Brett. He asks Betty's aid, and the young Englishwoman becomes very jealous of Patty and miserable.

XIX—Brett and Betty come to an understanding, confessing their love, and are happy.

XX—The last.

"I care for you dreadfully," said I. "Why, this isn't friendship, is it? It's being in love."

"I should think it was—with me," he said. "It's all of me—heart, soul and body—drowning in love."

"Don't drown," I whispered to him. "I can't spare you."

After that we didn't say a word, but I hadn't supposed it was possible for any human creature to feel so seraphically happy as I did. I don't know how long a time passed before we even spoke, but it seemed only a minute—a minute stolen straight out of heaven. And he was so handsome and dear that I would have kept that minute forever if I could, for it was impossible to believe that another could be so perfect.

But by and by it did merge into sister minutes just as good, and we began to talk and tell each other things.

He told me again how he'd loved me from the very first instant, and I told him that after the day on the dock, if not before, I'd never quite had him out of my thoughts for a moment.

"There has always been a sort of undertone of you," I went on, "no matter what else I was thinking of, just as, Sally says, when you are near the sea you hear it through every other sound."

He liked having me say that, and his eyes are too glorious when he likes things that I say.

"I loved you so much," he answered, "that I felt my love must have some power over your heart. It couldn't go for nothing. I knew I wasn't worthy of you, but the love was, for no man in your own world could offer you a greater one. That's my justification for asking you to put your hand in mine. But am I asking too much? Are you sure you won't regret anything you may have to give up?"

"There's nothing I wouldn't give up to be with you always," I assured him. "But I don't see that I shall have to give up much that I really care for. We shall be poor, of course, but I shan't mind that a bit with you. We can live in a sweet little cottage somewhere, can't we? Or if you have to be in a town we shall have a wee, wee flat, and it will be such fun looking after it, just like having a doll's house, only a hundred times better. I've never been rich, you know. It's always been rather a struggle, and ever so many of my dresses have been made out of mother's or Victoria's. I shall learn to cook and sew."

"If I were so poor as all that, darling, I shouldn't be asking you to marry me," said Jim. "I'm better off than you think, for, as I told you, I've been doing fairly well lately, and I guess if one of us two ever has to cook it will be I. We might have to do that sometimes, but it will only be if we're camping somewhere."

"I do hope so. It would be glorious!" I exclaimed.

"We can have the cottage or the flat all right, or maybe even both if things go on as well as they're going now," he said, "and there's nothing on God's earth I won't do to make you happy. Heavens! I should think so, after what you're doing for me—trusting me without knowing any more of me than you've seen in these few weeks"—

"I'd have trusted you to the world's end after the day you jumped overboard and saved the little boy. Besides, you were you, and I'd have trusted you just the same if you hadn't."

"Bless you, my angel. But think of the marriages you might have made."

"I couldn't have made more than one; at least I hope not," said I flippantly. "I could never have married any one but you, so I should have had to be an old maid if you hadn't asked me, and think how awful that would have been. You don't regret asking me, do you?"

"Regret? Well—it doesn't bear talking of. I suppose I ought to be able to say that I'd meant to keep my love to myself, and it only sprang out on an ungovernable impulse. But it wouldn't be true if I did. I always meant to ask you from the very first—though I had little enough hope, even up to today, that it would be anything more than friendship on your part. But, oh, how hard I did mean to try for you. My one virtue was to wait until you had seen enough of other men—men of a different sort—for you to be sure you didn't prefer one of them. And when accident had put you very near me I did manage not to lose my head and speak while you were, in a way, under my protection, for that would have been brutal. But heaven knows—and Miss Woodburn knows—that I came mighty near it once or twice. I'm thankful I didn't. Now you know the best and worse of the other sort of man and the best and worst of me. You see the kind of people whose blood runs in my veins, and still you are ready to say that my people shall be your people. I'm not afraid of anything that can happen now."

"You needn't be," I said, slipping my other hand into his, for he had one of them already. "Mother may be vexed with me for going against her wishes, but she will have to forgive me, or even if she doesn't I shall have you."

"I think she will forgive you, darling," said Jim. "I will make her forgive you."

The rest of the day was perfectly divine, and it is almost as delightful to live it over again, as I am doing now in writing the story of it, after we have said good night.

We forgot all about going back to the house until some one came out and rang the bell for tea in the field where we couldn't help hearing. Then we told the cousins our news, and they were immensely pleased. They seemed to think that Jim and I were made for each other, and Mrs. Trowbridge said she had seen that it was coming all along.

After tea we walked over to call on Sally, and she was just as glad as I thought she would be.

"You are going to marry one of the finest fellows on earth, I believe," said she, "and I congratulate you as well as him."

I do love Sally!

Chapter 20

IT was a very different waking up the next day. My first thought was, "Can it be really true or is it only a dream that I'm engaged to Jim?" And I almost cried for joy when I was quite sure it was true.

We both wrote letters to my mother and so did Sally. I didn't see theirs, but I could guess what they said, and I could trust Sally to praise Jim. Still, all the praises in the world wouldn't reconcile mother to what I was going to do.

Jim had promised Mr. Trowbridge to pronounce judgment on a horse which he thought of buying, and the man who wanted to sell the creature brought it to the farm about 11 o'clock. Sally had come to tell about the letter she had just posted to mother, and Jim was in the sitting room writing his. I think he had forgotten about the horse until Mr. Trowbridge appeared, looking rather excited.

"Say, Jim," he exclaimed, "Jake Jacobsen's here with the horse. He's round by the barn now, and you might as well have a look at it; but it's an awful brute, and I ain't going to take it at any price."

"What's the matter with the horse?" asked Jim, sealing up his letter and looking interested.

"It's mad crazy, that's all, but it's enough for me. I thought there must be something wrong for Jake to be offering it at the price he did."

"I'll come," said Jim, getting up.

I jumped up too.

"Oh, please don't have anything to do with such a vicious creature," I begged. "You might be killed."

Jim laughed. "The horse isn't sired that could kill me, I reckon. I know them too well. Why, little girl, I was brought up among horses. You can trust me not to run too big risks now I've got something to make life worth living."

Stan has often told me that men hate girls to fuss over them, so I bit my lip and didn't tease any more, but I was far from happy. I didn't like the look in his eyes.

"May Sally and I go and see the horse with you?" I meekly asked.

"I'll ride him up to the house if I find he's worth your seeing," Jim said. "But you mustn't worry if we don't come this way for awhile. I may have to work with him a bit before he's ready to show himself off to ladies."

With that he got his hat and went out with Mr. Trowbridge, who was waiting with a twinkle in his eyes.

Already Jim and Mr. Trowbridge had disappeared, but as we were choosing the coolest place for our chairs we saw a dusty, nondescript old vehicle rattling up the maple avenue and just about to turn into the narrow road which leads round the side of the house.

"Visitors," said I. "I didn't know Mrs. Trowbridge was expecting"—Then I broke off, with a little gasp.

"Oh, Sally, it's"—

"The duke and Katherine!" she gurgled.

All my blood raced up to my head as if I were going to have a sunstroke.

Mrs. Trowbridge and the girls were busy in the kitchen making peach jam, so when the wretched old chaise drew up close to the veranda Sally and I were alone to receive it.

If my sense of humor hadn't been trampled upon by various emotions which were all jumping about at the same time, I should have had hard work not to laugh when Stan and Mrs. Ess Kay scrambled out from under the lumbering old hood, which was like a great coal scuttle turned over their heads. Their hair was gray with dust, their faces purple with heat, and evidently they were both in towering tempers.

Stan looked at me the way he did once when I was small and spoiled his favorite cricket bat by digging up worms with it—as if he could have shaken me well and boxed my ears and would if I weren't a girl. As for Mrs. Ess Kay, she smiled, but her smile meant worse things than Stan's frown.

"Hello, dear boy!" I chirped nervously. "How do you do, Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox?"

Sally murmured something, too, and Stan had the grace to claw off his hat, showing how damp his poor hair was on his crimson forehead, but he didn't even pretend to smile.

"A nice dance you've led us!" said he. "By Jove, I wouldn't have thought it of you, Betty!"

"Maybe you don't understand yet," said I. "Wait till I've explained, and I'm sure you won't be cross, because you always were a dear."

"It's no good wheedling," he grumbled. "I'm not going to wait for anything. We've come to take you home, and the quicker you pack up and get ready the better."

"What do you mean by home?" I inquired.

"To Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox's house in New York, where she says she'll be good enough to put us up till the next decent ship sails for England."

"I'm not going back to Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox's," said I. "She knows why it's impossible."

"Rot," said Stan. "She's jolly kind to have you after the way you've acted. Anybody'd think you were eight instead of eighteen. You deserve to be put on bread and water for making me come 3,000 miles to fetch you home."

"I didn't ask you to come," said I, "and you needn't have bothered. Is Vic engaged yet?"

"Yes, she is; the day before I started. What's that got to do with it?"

"A good deal, according to her," I replied. "I'm engaged too."

"The dickens you are!" exclaimed Stan, getting redder than ever, while Mrs. Ess Kay gave a little start and glared at Sally.

My blood was up now, and I didn't care what I said. The sooner Stan knew everything just as it was the better.

"Yes, the dickens I am," I echoed defiantly, "and I don't intend to be treated like a naughty child by any one. I've done nothing wrong or underhand. We've only been engaged since yesterday, though we both fell in love at first sight on shipboard, and we've written to mother and you this very morning."

"Engaged to a man you met on shipboard!" repeated Stan, looking flabbergasted and turning from me to Mrs. Ess Kay.

"A nice dance you've led us!" said he.

"Tom Doremus!" she gasped. "Yet no, that's impossible. He's in Newport. But there was no one else. I was particularly careful."

"I am engaged to marry Mr. James Brett," I said. "He is"—

"There was no such man on the ship," she broke in sharply.

Then suddenly she almost jumped.

"Good gracious!" she exclaimed. "Oh, duke, this is too awful. I remember there was a person in the steerage. But this is madness. It can't be"—

"He did cross in the steerage," I said. "What of it? He is the best and handsomest man I ever saw, and there's no finer gentleman than he. You can ask Sally if there is, for she knows him."

"And thoroughly approves of him," Sally finished, taking my hand. "Duke, I assure you Betty is to be congratulated. I understand that the duchess was not averse to her marrying an American, and the one she has chosen is of the very best type."

"I beg your pardon, Miss Woodburn, but hang the type," said Stan, who never did get on with Sally. "It's absolutely impossible that my sister should marry such a person, and you ought to have known better than to encourage her. This is a hundred times worse than I thought when I flung up the best shoot of the season to come and fetch you, Betty. You and I were always by way of being pals, but I agree with the mater now. You've behaved disgracefully, and as for the man, whoever he is"—

"Here he comes to speak for himself," cut in Sally, squeezing my hand hard.

There was a sound in the distance—voices shouting, but not the voice I loved. We all looked, and a black horse with a man on his back sprang into sight, like a rocket gone wrong. It was Jim, looking more beautiful than any picture of a man ever painted, his face transported with the joy of battle and triumph and that fiend in horse shape under him doing all he knew to kill.

It was a terrible and yet a splendid thing to see, that struggle. I hadn't known how I adored Jim and how I admired him till I saw him with that smile on his face, sitting the black devil as if he were one with him in spite of the brute's murderous plunges.

The two shot past the house like a streak of lightning, then wheeled back again, the horse clearing a ditch and a five barred fence from one meadow into another, but he didn't jump in spite of Jim; rather was it in spite of himself. Then there was a series of mad buck jumpings, leaps into the air and downward plunges. The beast sat on his haunches and then reared up with a great bound, to waltz on his hind legs and paw the air, snorting. But still Jim smiled and kept his seat without the least apparent effort.

"Jove! That fellow can ride!" muttered Stan, taken out of himself by his man's admiration for a man.

"It's Jim Brett—my Jim Brett!" I cried. "What do you think of him now?"

But it didn't occur to Stan to answer. I don't suppose he even heard. He was far too deeply absorbed in the passing drama, and in a minute more Jim and the black horse were out of sight again.

But I was not at all afraid for him now. I was only proud and sure—as sure as I was of life—that he would conquer.

Nobody spoke. Mr. Trowbridge and Mr. Jacobsen, the disagreeable cowbell man, who owned the horse, ran by as fast as they could go, too excited to glance at the house. Mrs. Trowbridge and the girls had come from the kitchen and were hanging over the nearest fence. Patty was whimpering a little, so I guessed all in a flash that she had cared for Jim.

We stood still in our places and watched. I could hear my heart beat, and it had not time to calm down before Jim came riding back on the black horse—a changed black horse, all winning airs and graces, to cover shamed penitence now.

The creature pirouetted up the side road, and Jim stopped him at the veranda, patting the throbbing black neck. "Well, I believe I'll buy him myself," he said, smiling to me, and then he saw Mrs. Ess Kay and my brother.

"By Jove, Harborough!" said Stan. "It is you, isn't it? Surely it isn't your double?"

"Harborough it is," said Jim, while I listened, dumb with wonder. "How are you, duke? I was rather expecting you might turn up, but I cabled to you last night to Boodles' and wrote you this morning on the chance you hadn't started."

"Well, I'm blowed," remarked Stan, most inelegantly. "Are you Brett or is Brett you, or is he somebody else?"

"My name is James Brett Harborough. Perhaps you didn't know or had forgotten," said Jim, and then, jumping off the horse and throwing the lines to Mr. Jacobsen, who had just trotted anxiously up, he came to me.

"Will you forgive me?" he asked.

"I don't know yet what it's all about," I said dully.

"Miss Woodburn knows and Mohunsleigh knows. You see, he and I were old pals, so I told him I was in love with his cousin and was going to try hard to win her in my own way. You remember Mohunsleigh's friend Harborough. You said the other day you were sorry for him, and—you wished him joy of his love affair."

"Oh, is that the reason you pretended to be only Jim Brett?"

"I am Jim Brett. But now you understand, will you forgive me?"

"I don't understand yet, except that you must have been afraid I might care more for your money than for you if I knew. Oh, how could you think such a thing of me? But about the steerage"—

"That was beforehand. It had nothing to do with you, though everything that was to come came from it. I was abroad for a couple of years and a friend I knocked against in Paris last June bet me $1.000 that in spite of all my queer experiences I wouldn't have the pluck to rough it in the steerage of a big ocean liner. I took the bet and won it. If it hadn't been for seeing you I should have gone west almost at once after landing in New York, but I had seen you, so I stayed. Luckily for me I'd met Miss Woodburn often in San Francisco and once here. She recognized me in my steerage get up and was the only one who did, but her tact kept her from spoiling sport. She guessed there must be a game on and said not a word to any one. She wouldn't, even if I hadn't managed to send her a note, which I did. I had a conversation with her on board, too, the day before getting in and—we talked about you. Even then I felt sure you couldn't be the sort of girl to care about money, but"—

"It was partly my fault, Betty," Sally broke in when he paused. "To be quite, quite frank, I knew that the duchess had fallen in with some ideas of Katherine's, and I couldn't tell how far your bringing up mightn't have influenced your nature, so I encouraged Mr. Harborough to test you by keeping up the story that he was a poor young fellow named Jim Brett. It handicapped him and kept him away from you, but you were interested in him to start with, and I did my best to keep up the romance. I thought he wouldn't lose by it in the end, and he hasn't. There was the morning in the park; I managed that, and I got Katherine to send him an invitation to her big party. He was playing a waiting game, because he wanted you to care in spite of every drawback, or else he wouldn't want you to care at all, and then, before he was ready for any coup, fate stepped in and did the rest."

"In the best way it could have been done, I think," said Jim. "Now, little girl, do you understand, and have you forgiven me?"

"I'd like to think you could have trusted me from the very first, without playing at all," I answered. "Still—it is romantic, isn't it? And, besides, even if I were very angry, I—I'm afraid I'd forgive you anything after seeing you ride that horse."

"I'm hanged if I couldn't, too," said Stan. And, laughing, the two shook hands.

"What about the duchess?" asked Sally.

"Oh, when I tell her that Betty's engaged to marry a chap I've met and liked in town—a thorough sportsman, too—it will be all right," said Stan.

I was glad he didn't refer to Jim's money, even though that is the thing which will appeal most to mother. As for me, I am almost sorry he isn't poor, if there's room in my heart to be sorry about anything. But I don't believe there is. It's such a beautiful world, and I shall have two homes in it now; one on each side of the water.

MADE IT A LIFE STUDY

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt Found the Cause and Cure of Piles.

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, the celebrated specialist of Lincoln, Neb., proved after years of study, that the cause of piles is internal—bad circulation. Then he perfected Hem-Roid ,an internal remedy, and in 1000 different cases it cured 98 per cent. By Dr. Leonhardt's order, Hem-Roid is sold under an iron-clad guarantee. If it fails, the money is paid back.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—The story is told in the first person by Lady Betty Bulkeley, the pretty young sister of the Duke of Stanforth. She is to visit America in care of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox (Mrs. Ess Kay,) a leader of American society, and the latter's cousin, Miss Sally Woodburn, in order that her elder sister Victoria's prospective fiance, Sir Gilbert Mantell, may not be attracted by her.

II—On board ship Betty is attracted by a young American steerage passenger, who saves a child from drowning. Mrs. Ess Kay, who is very "exclusive," objects to Betty's interest in the young man. Betty also meets Tom Dore us, cousin of Mrs. Vander Windt, of New York society.

III—Lady Betty gets her first impression of America. On the dock she is rescued from reporters by the steerage hero, who tells her he is Jim Brett, employed at the Manhattan club, New York. In Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid New York home Betty meets Lieutenant Parker brother of the hostess, who is to take them to visit West Point.

IV—Vivace, a beautiful and expensive dog, is sent to Betty. Mrs. Ess Kay does not know who the donor is, and Betty does not tell her that it is Brett. Lieutenant Parker, whom Betty does not like, makes love to her.

V—Lady Betty has a good time at West Point despite Parker's proposal, which she rejects.

VI—In a walk in Central park Sally tells Betty her love story (she had been seperated years before from the poor man she loved by her family, the man becoming a monk) and advises Betty to marry only when she is sure of her love. They meet Brett.

VII—Betty is introduced to Mrs. Harvey Richmount Taylour, a typical young society woman.

VIII—At Newport Betty falls in love with Mrs. Ess Kay's splendid "cottage," the Moorings. Parker continues his attentions. Mrs. Ess Kay is chagrined on learning that Mrs. Van der Windt, Newport's leader, has planned to "cut" her and her acquaintance, Mrs. Pitchley. Mrs. Ess Kay relies on Lady Betty's presence to maintain her social prestige. She plans an entertainment to introduce Betty.

X—Mrs. Ess Kay plans a fancy dress ball, the features of which are to be Aladdin's cave and the Maze. An invitation is sent to Mohunsleigh's friend, Jameson B. Harborough, a new San Francisco millioniare. Betty is to appear as a frost sprite.

XI—At the ball Parker proposes again. Betty is rescued from him by Brett, who hints that he is there as a reporter. She declares her faith in his future.

XII—Harborough fails to appear at the wedding of Cora Pitchley and Mohunsleigh, to which he has been invited. Everybody at Newport is anxious to meet him. Sally, having quarreled with Mrs. Ess Kay, is visiting a friend in Chicago and has asked Betty to go to Chicago if anything at Newport displeases her. Parker again proposes to Betty and is refused again, whereupon Mrs. Ess Kay tells Betty that her mother, the duchess, plans to have her either engaged to Parker or stay in America until her sister is engaged.

XIII and XIV—Betty runs away from Mrs. Ess Kay, going to New York on her way to Miss Woodburn in Chicago. She appeals to Brett for aid in getting to Chicago. He tells her he is going there also and offers to travel with her.

XV—In Chicago Betty misses Sally, who has gone to Ohio to visit a sick relative. She has nowhere to go before hearing from England. Brett shows her the sights of Chicago after offering to take her to board with some relatives of his own near Sally.

XVI—Betty fiinds refuge in a pleasant old fashioned Ohio farm homestead with Brett's cousin, Fanny Trowbridge, and her husband, Hezekiah, with whom two girls, Patty and Ide, are staying.

XVII—Betty and Brett discuss Mohunsleigh's friend Harborough. Brett declares Harborough's attraction for the girls lies in his millions rather than in his adventurous career and his courage. Betty becomes indignant, but her anger is dispelled when Brett rescues her from a bull. Sally declares it was her cousin's planning to secure Betty for Parker that drove her from Newport.

XVIII—The Ohio country folk please Betty very much. Whit Walker, a country store-keeper, who loves Patty, fears that the girl is in love with Brett. He asks Betty's aid, and the young Englishwoman becomes very jealous of Patty and miserable.

XIX—Brett and Betty come to an understanding, confessing their love, and are happy.

XX—The last.

"I care for you dreadfully," said I. "Why, this isn't friendship, is it? It's being in love."

"I should think it was—with me," he said. "It's all of me—heart, soul and body—drowning in love."

"Don't drown," I whispered to him. "I can't spare you."

After that we didn't say a word, but I hadn't supposed it was possible for any human creature to feel so seraphically happy as I did. I don't know how long a time passed before we even spoke, but it seemed only a minute—a minute stolen straight out of heaven. And he was so handsome and dear that I would have kept that minute forever if I could, for it was impossible to believe that another could be so perfect.

But by and by it did merge into sister minutes just as good, and we began to talk and tell each other things.

He told me again how he'd loved me from the very first instant, and I told him that after the day on the dock, if not before, I'd never quite had him out of my thoughts for a moment.

"There has always been a sort of undertone of you," I went on, "no matter what else I was thinking of, just as, Sally says, when you are near the sea you hear it through every other sound."

He liked having me say that, and his eyes are too glorious when he likes things that I say.

"I loved you so much," he answered, "that I felt my love must have some power over your heart. It couldn't go for nothing. I knew I wasn't worthy of you, but the love was, for no man in your own world could offer you a greater one. That's my justification for asking you to put your hand in mine. But am I asking too much? Are you sure you won't regret anything you may have to give up?"

"There's nothing I wouldn't give up to be with you always," I assured him. "But I don't see that I shall have to give up much that I really care for. We shall be poor, of course, but I shan't mind that a bit with you. We can live in a sweet little cottage somewhere, can't we? Or if you have to be in a town we shall have a wee, wee flat, and it will be such fun looking after it, just like having a doll's house, only a hundred times better. I've never been rich, you know. It's always been rather a struggle, and ever so many of my dresses have been made out of mother's or Victoria's. I shall learn to cook and sew."

"If I were so poor as all that, darling, I shouldn't be asking you to marry me," said Jim. "I'm better off than you think, for, as I told you, I've been doing fairly well lately, and I guess if one of us two ever has to cook it will be I. We might have to do that sometimes, but it will only be if we're camping somewhere."

"I do hope so. It would be glorious!" I exclaimed.

"We can have the cottage or the flat all right, or maybe even both if things go on as well as they're going now," he said, "and there's nothing on God's earth I won't do to make you happy. Heavens! I should think so, after what you're doing for me—trusting me without knowing any more of me than you've seen in these few weeks"—

"I'd have trusted you to the world's end after the day you jumped overboard and saved the little boy. Besides, you were you, and I'd have trusted you just the same if you hadn't."

"Bless you, my angel. But think of the marriages you might have made."

"I couldn't have made more than one; at least I hope not," said I flippantly. "I could never have married any one but you, so I should have had to be an old maid if you hadn't asked me, and think how awful that would have been. You don't regret asking me, do you?"

"Regret? Well—it doesn't bear talking of. I suppose I ought to be able to say that I'd meant to keep my love to myself, and it only sprang out on an ungovernable impulse. But it wouldn't be true if I did. I always meant to ask you from the very first—though I had little enough hope, even up to today, that it would be anything more than friendship on your part. But, oh, how hard I did mean to try for you. My one virtue was to wait until you had seen enough of other men—men of a different sort—for you to be sure you didn't prefer one of them. And when accident had put you very near me I did manage not to lose my head and speak while you were, in a way, under my protection, for that would have been brutal. But heaven knows—and Miss Woodburn knows—that I came mighty near it once or twice. I'm thankful I didn't. Now you know the best and worse of the other sort of man and the best and worst of me. You see the kind of people whose blood runs in my veins, and still you are ready to say that my people shall be your people. I'm not afraid of anything that can happen now."

"You needn't be," I said, slipping my other hand into his, for he had one of them already. "Mother may be vexed with me for going against her wishes, but she will have to forgive me, or even if she doesn't I shall have you."

"I think she will forgive you, darling," said Jim. "I will make her forgive you."

The rest of the day was perfectly divine, and it is almost as delightful to live it over again, as I am doing now in writing the story of it, after we have said good night.

We forgot all about going back to the house until some one came out and rang the bell for tea in the field where we couldn't help hearing. Then we told the cousins our news, and they were immensely pleased. They seemed to think that Jim and I were made for each other, and Mrs. Trowbridge said she had seen that it was coming all along.

After tea we walked over to call on Sally, and she was just as glad as I thought she would be.

"You are going to marry one of the finest fellows on earth, I believe," said she, "and I congratulate you as well as him."

I do love Sally!

Chapter 20

IT was a very different waking up the next day. My first thought was, "Can it be really true or is it only a dream that I'm engaged to Jim?" And I almost cried for joy when I was quite sure it was true.

We both wrote letters to my mother and so did Sally. I didn't see theirs, but I could guess what they said, and I could trust Sally to praise Jim. Still, all the praises in the world wouldn't reconcile mother to what I was going to do.

Jim had promised Mr. Trowbridge to pronounce judgment on a horse which he thought of buying, and the man who wanted to sell the creature brought it to the farm about 11 o'clock. Sally had come to tell about the letter she had just posted to mother, and Jim was in the sitting room writing his. I think he had forgotten about the horse until Mr. Trowbridge appeared, looking rather excited.

"Say, Jim," he exclaimed, "Jake Jacobsen's here with the horse. He's round by the barn now, and you might as well have a look at it; but it's an awful brute, and I ain't going to take it at any price."

"What's the matter with the horse?" asked Jim, sealing up his letter and looking interested.

"It's mad crazy, that's all, but it's enough for me. I thought there must be something wrong for Jake to be offering it at the price he did."

"I'll come," said Jim, getting up.

I jumped up too.

"Oh, please don't have anything to do with such a vicious creature," I begged. "You might be killed."

Jim laughed. "The horse isn't sired that could kill me, I reckon. I know them too well. Why, little girl, I was brought up among horses. You can trust me not to run too big risks now I've got something to make life worth living."

Stan has often told me that men hate girls to fuss over them, so I bit my lip and didn't tease any more, but I was far from happy. I didn't like the look in his eyes.

"May Sally and I go and see the horse with you?" I meekly asked.

"I'll ride him up to the house if I find he's worth your seeing," Jim said. "But you mustn't worry if we don't come this way for awhile. I may have to work with him a bit before he's ready to show himself off to ladies."

With that he got his hat and went out with Mr. Trowbridge, who was waiting with a twinkle in his eyes.

Already Jim and Mr. Trowbridge had disappeared, but as we were choosing the coolest place for our chairs we saw a dusty, nondescript old vehicle rattling up the maple avenue and just about to turn into the narrow road which leads round the side of the house.

"Visitors," said I. "I didn't know Mrs. Trowbridge was expecting"—Then I broke off, with a little gasp.

"Oh, Sally, it's"—

"The duke and Katherine!" she gurgled.

All my blood raced up to my head as if I were going to have a sunstroke.

Mrs. Trowbridge and the girls were busy in the kitchen making peach jam, so when the wretched old chaise drew up close to the veranda Sally and I were alone to receive it.

If my sense of humor hadn't been trampled upon by various emotions which were all jumping about at the same time, I should have had hard work not to laugh when Stan and Mrs. Ess Kay scrambled out from under the lumbering old hood, which was like a great coal scuttle turned over their heads. Their hair was gray with dust, their faces purple with heat, and evidently they were both in towering tempers.

Stan looked at me the way he did once when I was small and spoiled his favorite cricket bat by digging up worms with it—as if he could have shaken me well and boxed my ears and would if I weren't a girl. As for Mrs. Ess Kay, she smiled, but her smile meant worse things than Stan's frown.

"Hello, dear boy!" I chirped nervously. "How do you do, Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox?"

Sally murmured something, too, and Stan had the grace to claw off his hat, showing how damp his poor hair was on his crimson forehead, but he didn't even pretend to smile.

"A nice dance you've led us!" said he. "By Jove, I wouldn't have thought it of you, Betty!"

"Maybe you don't understand yet," said I. "Wait till I've explained, and I'm sure you won't be cross, because you always were a dear."

"It's no good wheedling," he grumbled. "I'm not going to wait for anything. We've come to take you home, and the quicker you pack up and get ready the better."

"What do you mean by home?" I inquired.

"To Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox's house in New York, where she says she'll be good enough to put us up till the next decent ship sails for England."

"I'm not going back to Mrs. Stuyvesant-Knox's," said I. "She knows why it's impossible."

"Rot," said Stan. "She's jolly kind to have you after the way you've acted. Anybody'd think you were eight instead of eighteen. You deserve to be put on bread and water for making me come 3,000 miles to fetch you home."

"I didn't ask you to come," said I, "and you needn't have bothered. Is Vic engaged yet?"

"Yes, she is; the day before I started. What's that got to do with it?"

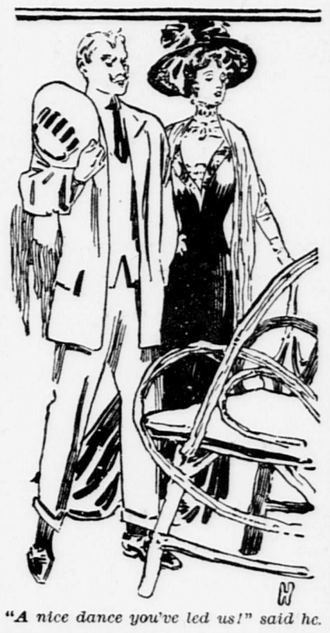

"A good deal, according to her," I replied. "I'm engaged too."

"The dickens you are!" exclaimed Stan, getting redder than ever, while Mrs. Ess Kay gave a little start and glared at Sally.

My blood was up now, and I didn't care what I said. The sooner Stan knew everything just as it was the better.

"Yes, the dickens I am," I echoed defiantly, "and I don't intend to be treated like a naughty child by any one. I've done nothing wrong or underhand. We've only been engaged since yesterday, though we both fell in love at first sight on shipboard, and we've written to mother and you this very morning."

"Engaged to a man you met on shipboard!" repeated Stan, looking flabbergasted and turning from me to Mrs. Ess Kay.

"A nice dance you've led us!" said he.

"Tom Doremus!" she gasped. "Yet no, that's impossible. He's in Newport. But there was no one else. I was particularly careful."

"I am engaged to marry Mr. James Brett," I said. "He is"—

"There was no such man on the ship," she broke in sharply.

Then suddenly she almost jumped.

"Good gracious!" she exclaimed. "Oh, duke, this is too awful. I remember there was a person in the steerage. But this is madness. It can't be"—

"He did cross in the steerage," I said. "What of it? He is the best and handsomest man I ever saw, and there's no finer gentleman than he. You can ask Sally if there is, for she knows him."

"And thoroughly approves of him," Sally finished, taking my hand. "Duke, I assure you Betty is to be congratulated. I understand that the duchess was not averse to her marrying an American, and the one she has chosen is of the very best type."

"I beg your pardon, Miss Woodburn, but hang the type," said Stan, who never did get on with Sally. "It's absolutely impossible that my sister should marry such a person, and you ought to have known better than to encourage her. This is a hundred times worse than I thought when I flung up the best shoot of the season to come and fetch you, Betty. You and I were always by way of being pals, but I agree with the mater now. You've behaved disgracefully, and as for the man, whoever he is"—

"Here he comes to speak for himself," cut in Sally, squeezing my hand hard.

There was a sound in the distance—voices shouting, but not the voice I loved. We all looked, and a black horse with a man on his back sprang into sight, like a rocket gone wrong. It was Jim, looking more beautiful than any picture of a man ever painted, his face transported with the joy of battle and triumph and that fiend in horse shape under him doing all he knew to kill.

It was a terrible and yet a splendid thing to see, that struggle. I hadn't known how I adored Jim and how I admired him till I saw him with that smile on his face, sitting the black devil as if he were one with him in spite of the brute's murderous plunges.

The two shot past the house like a streak of lightning, then wheeled back again, the horse clearing a ditch and a five barred fence from one meadow into another, but he didn't jump in spite of Jim; rather was it in spite of himself. Then there was a series of mad buck jumpings, leaps into the air and downward plunges. The beast sat on his haunches and then reared up with a great bound, to waltz on his hind legs and paw the air, snorting. But still Jim smiled and kept his seat without the least apparent effort.

"Jove! That fellow can ride!" muttered Stan, taken out of himself by his man's admiration for a man.

"It's Jim Brett—my Jim Brett!" I cried. "What do you think of him now?"

But it didn't occur to Stan to answer. I don't suppose he even heard. He was far too deeply absorbed in the passing drama, and in a minute more Jim and the black horse were out of sight again.

But I was not at all afraid for him now. I was only proud and sure—as sure as I was of life—that he would conquer.

Nobody spoke. Mr. Trowbridge and Mr. Jacobsen, the disagreeable cowbell man, who owned the horse, ran by as fast as they could go, too excited to glance at the house. Mrs. Trowbridge and the girls had come from the kitchen and were hanging over the nearest fence. Patty was whimpering a little, so I guessed all in a flash that she had cared for Jim.

We stood still in our places and watched. I could hear my heart beat, and it had not time to calm down before Jim came riding back on the black horse—a changed black horse, all winning airs and graces, to cover shamed penitence now.

The creature pirouetted up the side road, and Jim stopped him at the veranda, patting the throbbing black neck. "Well, I believe I'll buy him myself," he said, smiling to me, and then he saw Mrs. Ess Kay and my brother.

"By Jove, Harborough!" said Stan. "It is you, isn't it? Surely it isn't your double?"

"Harborough it is," said Jim, while I listened, dumb with wonder. "How are you, duke? I was rather expecting you might turn up, but I cabled to you last night to Boodles' and wrote you this morning on the chance you hadn't started."

"Well, I'm blowed," remarked Stan, most inelegantly. "Are you Brett or is Brett you, or is he somebody else?"

"My name is James Brett Harborough. Perhaps you didn't know or had forgotten," said Jim, and then, jumping off the horse and throwing the lines to Mr. Jacobsen, who had just trotted anxiously up, he came to me.

"Will you forgive me?" he asked.

"I don't know yet what it's all about," I said dully.

"Miss Woodburn knows and Mohunsleigh knows. You see, he and I were old pals, so I told him I was in love with his cousin and was going to try hard to win her in my own way. You remember Mohunsleigh's friend Harborough. You said the other day you were sorry for him, and—you wished him joy of his love affair."

"Oh, is that the reason you pretended to be only Jim Brett?"

"I am Jim Brett. But now you understand, will you forgive me?"

"I don't understand yet, except that you must have been afraid I might care more for your money than for you if I knew. Oh, how could you think such a thing of me? But about the steerage"—

"That was beforehand. It had nothing to do with you, though everything that was to come came from it. I was abroad for a couple of years and a friend I knocked against in Paris last June bet me $1,000 that in spite of all my queer experiences I wouldn't have the pluck to rough it in the steerage of a big ocean liner. "In the best way it could have been done, I think," said Jim. "Now, little girl, do you understand, and have you forgiven me?"

"I'd like to think you could have trusted me from the very first, without playing at all," I answered. "Still—it is romantic, isn't it? And, besides, even if I were very angry, I—I'm afraid I'd forgive you anything after seeing you ride that horse."

"I'm hanged if I couldn't, too," said Stan. And, laughing, the two shook hands.

"What about the duchess?" asked Sally.

"Oh, when I tell her that Betty's engaged to marry a chap I've met and liked in town—a thorough sportsman, too—it will be all right," said Stan.

I was glad he didn't refer to Jim's money, even though that is the thing which will appeal most to mother. As for me, I am almost sorry he isn't poor, if there's room in my heart to be sorry about anything. But I don't believe there is. It's such a beautiful world, and I shall have two homes in it now; one on each side of the water.

MADE IT A LIFE STUDY

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt Found the Cause and Cure of Piles.

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, the celebrated specialist of Lincoln, Neb., proved after years of study, that the cause of piles is internal—bad circulation. Then he perfected Hem-Roid ,an internal remedy, and in 1000 different cases it cured 98 per cent. By Dr. Leonhardt's order, Hem-Roid is sold under an iron-clad guarantee. If it fails, the money is paid back.

FAR-REACHING DECLARATION

United States and Japan Agree as to Policy In the Pacific

FIVE ARTICLES IN COMPACT

Free and Peaceful Development of Commerce and Mutual Disclaimer of Aggressive Design--Independence and Integrity of China to Be Supported--Mutual Understanding In Case Status Quo Is Threatened

Washington, Nov. 28.—Despite official reticence, information from reliable sources has been obtained of an agreement of far-reaching importance between the United States and Japan, covering the policy of the two countries in the Pacific.

The agreement is based upon the idea of encouraging and defending free and peaceful commercial developments in the Pacific. It contains not only a mutual guarantee to respect each other's territorial possession there, but defines the attitude of the two countries towards China, binding each to defend by every peaceful means China's independence and integrity, and to give equal commercial opportunity in the Chinese empire to all nations.

But more important still, the agreement, in the event of complications threatening the status quo, binds the United States and Japan to consult each other with a view of acting together.

The agreement has been drawn up in the form of a declaration and consists of five articles, of which the following is an accurate and faithful description:

The first article gives expresson to the wish of the two governments to encourage the free and peaceful development of their commerce in the Pacific.

The second article is a mutual disclaimer of an aggressive design, and contains also a definition of the policy of each government, both as directed to the maintenance of the existing status quo in the Pacific and the defense of the principle of equal opportunity for commerce and industry in China.

The third article contains a statement of the consequent "firm" reciprocal resolution of each government, each to respect the territorial possession in the Pacific of the other.

In the fourth article the United States and Japan express their determination "in the common interest of all the powers" in China to support "by all peaceful means at their disposal" the independence and integrity of China and the principle of equal commercial and industrial opportunity for all nations in the empire.

The fifth article mutually pledges the two governments, in the case of "the occurrence of any event threatening the status quo, as above described, or the principle of equal opportunity, as above defined," to communicate with each other for the purpose of arriving at a mutual understanding with regard to the measures they may consider it useful to take.

Killed Mother and Brother

New York, Nov. 28.—With aim so deadly that all five shots he fired took effect, William Kallebrun shot and killed his brother, Leo, and then his old mother, Mrs. Victoria Kallebrun. The mother was killed while trying to escape from the room in which the shooting occurred. The tragedy took place in the apartments of Mrs. Kallebrun. Kallebrun tried to get money from Leo and the shooting resulted from Leo's refusal to give any money. Kallebrun was locked up.

Business Boom Continues

New York, Nov. 28.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says that although the holiday and unseasonable weather handicapped business this week, further substantial progress was made toward normal commercial activity, especially in respect to the number of wage-earners employed in the leading industries. Mills that have been closed for over a year are reopening, and many plants that were on part time or force are now in full operation.

Eliot's Services Appreciated

Boston, Nov. 28.—The fellows of Harvard university have prepared a testimonial to President Eliot on the occasion of his resignation from the presidency of the university. The testimonial dwells upon the firmness with which Eliot carried out well defined ideas for the development of the college, stating that he has secured the confidence of the public in himself and in the university.

Preparing For Emergencies

Washington, Nov. 28.—Directions have been cabled Admiral Harber, commanding the Pacific fleet at Manila, to send two of his vessels to the Yangtse river country, China. It is deemed wise to have available American naval representation in the event of any serious trouble in which American interests might be jeopardized.

Wreckers Expect to Raise Yankee

Newport, R. I., Nov. 28.—The wreckers at work on the cruiser Yankee, stranded on Hen and Chickens shoals, expect to float her Dec. 7, should weather conditions prove favorable. Heavy seas are breaking over the bow of the Yankee.

NAVY SHORT OF COLLIERS

Serious Handicap In the Event of Foreign Complications

Washington, Nov. 28.—Had foreign complications arisen, or had a combination been effected between foreign shipowners, our fleet might have had to remain lying helpless in some foreign port, is the observation made by Rear Admiral Cowles, chief of the equipment bureau of the navy, in his annual report, in discussing the lack of colliers necessary to supply the battleship fleet with coal on its cruise around the world.

The total number of American vessels which might have been obtained by purchase or otherwise would not have been capable of carrying a sufficient amount of coal to supply the fleet on its voyage, and it was necessary to charter foreign vessels for this purpose. He recommends that immediate steps be taken to supply an adequate number of colliers for the navy. There should at least be one for every two units, with sufficient capacity for supplying four vessels. A total of 836,389 tons of coal, costing, including transportation, $5,168,824, was purchased during the fiscal year 1908, 771,928 of this amount being purchased within the limits of the United States.

Admiral Cowles' report says that during the past year marked progress has been made in wireless telegraphy and its value in the scheme of national defense is becoming more and more apparent.

TRAPPED BY STOLEN PHONOGRAPH

Maine Youth Held on Charge of Robbing the Mails

Bangor, Me., Nov. 28.—Howard Goding, aged 16, son of Henry F. Goding, a merchant of Millinocket, was brought to Bangor by Deputy United States Marshal Hasty and locked up in jail to awaiting a hearing on the charge of robbing the United States mails.

One day recently, while the mail wagon was passing through the streets of Millinocket, a pouch containing several registered letters and other matter disappeared, and careful investigation failed to disclose its whereabouts. The case remained a mystery until Thursday, when young Goding was arrested for robbing a store. Among the plunder taken from the store was a phonograph and some records, one of the latter being a new one, which had not been sold in Millinocket.

Deputy Sheriff Gates, who investigated the case, heard this record being played in Goding's home and thereupon arrested the boy. Young Goding is said to have confessed that he not only robbed several stores, but that, with a companion, whose name was not given, he stole the mail pouch.

Injunction Against Shoe Workers

Boston, Nov. 28.—In the supreme court Judge Loring issued a temporary injunction restraining officers and members of the Shoe Workers' union of Chelsea from interfering with the business of Walton & Logan, shoe manufacturers. The scope of the injunction is in effect that the defendants must not maintain pickets about the facory in Chelsea or intimidate employes of the plaintiff corporation. The trouble arose from a strike.

Hundred Lives Lost In Storm

Manila, Nov. 28.—The coasting steamer Ponting, carrying a large number of laborers from Narvacan to the rice fields in Pangasinan province, struck a rock and sank during a storm. It is estimated that a hundred of the passengers and crew of the Ponting were drowned. Steamer Vigcaya rescued fifty-five. It is not known whether any Americans or Europeans were aboard the wrecked steamer.

Lords Reject Licensing Bill

London, Nov. 28.—The house of lords created an interesting political situation by rejecting the licensing bill by a vote of 272 to 96. The Liberals are likely to make this action a rallying cry in their campagn for the curtailment of the power of the house of lords, claiming that the peers have defeated the will of the people.

Only Staggered by Bolt In Brain

West New York, N. J., Nov. 28.—An iron bolt weighing two pounds fell from a driving shaft around which several men were at work, and, landing endways, buried itself two inches in the skull of Patrick Smith, who was only staggered by the blow and remained conscious while a fellow-workman dislodged the bolt.

Confesses to Setting Eight Fires

Rochester, Nov. 28.—Eight fires have been set in the past month by Norman Gagner, 20 years old, arrested by detectives after he had given the firemen three busy hours. The young man made a complete confession and will have a hearing on Dec. 4.

Shortage In Postoffice Accounts

Wabash, Ind., Nov. 28.—Claude Stitt, deputy postmaster, has disappeared, and an investigation of his accounts has been made by postoffice inspectors. The officials announce that there is a shortage of $2622. Stitt was under a bond of $2500.

Anxiety Over Army Transport

Washington, Nov. 28.—Considerable alarm is felt at the war department over the fact that the army transport Dix, en route from Seattle to Manila with a cargo of 200 horses and 250 mules, is six days overdue.

MAGAZINE NOTES.

Being the Christmas number, the December Suburban Life naturally is replete with articles relating to the holidays. One of the most entertaining is a personal reminiscence by Clara Morris, the famous actress, entitled "My Best-Remembered Christmas."

O. P. Beckely writes on "Christmas Evergreens from the South," and T. D. Hatfield tells "The Truth about the Christmas Rose."

The love letters of George Sand and Alfred de Musset disclosing the secret history of this dramatic and hitherto unexplained literary love affair are given to America through the Metropolitan Magazine. The first instalment appears in the Christmas number. "The Real Panama and its People" by Eleanor Yorke Bell, gives the reader the results of a careful study of Panama and its inhabitants and the conditions under which our men are working. "The Christmas Hunting" by Charles Livingston Bull, is a delightful recrudescence of the mediaeval atmosphere strikingly illustrated in color. There are also a number of exceptionally good short stories in this issue.

The December Lippincott's provides just the sort of entertainment to put you in good humor. The complete novel is a humorous mystery story entitled "Seven Days" by Mary Robert Rinehart. Mrs. Rinehart has chosen for the theme of her latest story the mishaps and adventures of a number of society folk—and a few others—who suddenly find themselves quarantined, owing to the illness of a servant, in a house where the society folk have gone to dine. All sorts of weird happenings take place during their imprisonment. Among the notable offerings other than fiction are a witty and amusing paper on "Irish Courtship," by the famous Irish humorist, Seumas MacManus; and a beautiful miracle play in blank verse, by Charles L. O'Donnell.

The Engineering Magazine for December, a special Efficiency and Economy number, opens with a discussion by Walter M. McFarland of the basic cause of increased efficiency. Mr. MacFarland believes that in industrial organization increased efficiency of the human element, vastly the most important factor, is to be obtained principally through the stimulative effect of a system of individual reward.

Among the many important illustrated features of this special number are H. W. Perry's description of recent motor vehicles for heavy duty, for special uses, and for public service.

One of the most unique magazines to be found on the newstands today is the Wide World, which gives absorbingly interesting stories "from all the corners of the earth." The December number is filled with startling adventures, amusing episodes, and fascinating accounts of the customs and doing of different countries.

The Christmas number of the Strand Magazine is brimful of interesting reading. Hall Caine's new story, "The White Christ," which commences in this number is, according to a statement made by the author, "a protest against that part of western civilization, the lust of wealth and empire, which is crushing out religion, morality and truth." Its title, "The White Christ," is derived from an Arabic tradition that in "the time of the end" a Redeemer will come to unite all the religions of the world into one religion and all the peoples of the world into one people. The scene of Mr. Caine's new romance is laid in Egypt.

What would you do if you was a national Santa Claus?

This question was asked of several prominent people by the editors of the Delineator. The replies received are published in the December number of the Delineator and make interesting reading. Clara Morris writes, had I the power to bestow upon the nation a gift, the Christmas sun should rise upon the majestic, menacing beauty of a new fleet of warships, all stately in their fighting coats of sullen gray—the war-paint of the sea—attended by a cloud of colliers; a great new fleet of warships for the Atlantic coast, to properly balance its glorious twin on the Pacific coast. Governor Glenn of North Carolina would give the nation a strong national temperance law. Rev. Anna Shaw would bestow equal suffrage to both sexes.

There are various other special features in the magazine, as well as several clever stories.

"The Christmas Double Number" has always been the important event of the year with the great Illustrated Londan weeklies, and this year they have broken the record of all past performances in their editorial, artistic and mechanical excellence.

For the Scientific reader the Technical World for December, contains articles on various technical and scientific subjects. Among the contributors are to be found the names of Rene' Bache, J. W. Preston, Littell McClung and several others.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

The Charitable Ten's Circle of King's Daughters will meet Monday afternoon at two o'clock with Mrs. F. S. Davis of Elm street.

Meetings of the Young People's Religious unions in Quincy and Wollaston will be omitted on Sunday evening that members may attend the meeting of the Boston Federation at Dedham.

An important meeting of the Citizens' Association is to be held Monday evening at eight o'clock in the rooms of the Granite Manufacturers' Association. The meeting is called for the purpose of finding out whether there is a general demand for a new charter for Quincy or a revision of the present one.

Ladies are requested to attend an all day sewing meeting at the Wollaston Baptist church Tuesday at 9.30 A. M. to prepare a barrel for the Bethel. Clothing of all kinds is solicited, but as many children are being kept out of school because of insufficient clothing, garments suitable for them will be especially welcome. Kindly send to church Friday evening, or send a postal to Mrs. J. B. Given, 50 Hamilton street and it will be called for.

ELMENDORF ON SWITZERLAND.

The delightful element of contrast enters largely into the makeup of the series of illustrated lectures that Dwight L. Elmendorf is presenting at Tremont Temple on Friday evenings and Saturday afternoons. Last week we had "Holland"—flat peaceful, pastoral. Next Friday evening and Saturday afternoon, December 4 and 5, we are to see and hear about "Switzerland"—rugged, mountainous, and thunderous with the crash of avalanches. We will view the dangers attendant upon mountain-climbing and will see the exquisite colors with which the sun paints the mountaintops at early dawn. Before us will be spread the beautiful panorama of Swiss lakes with picturesque towns clustering along their shores; and the "everlasting hills" will be brought before our vision in startling reality. This is one of Mr. Elmendorf's favorite lectures, and upon the lantern slides with which it is illustrated he has expended all his wonderful skill as colorist and artist.

☞The old Wollaston band is about to be reorganized under their former leader Harry Sprague and locate in Quincy. They have given excellent satisfaction at the Blue Hills reservation the past two summers and also with South Shore Commandery K. With Mirth And Music

The one social event of the year that calls out a large number of the elete of Quincy and vicinity is the annual dancing party, known as the Quincy Assembly. This year's party was held Friday evening at Music hall and was fully as great a social success as affairs of other years.

This year's party seemed to draw more of the younger set than usual and a general air of sociability was noticeable and very pleasant to look upon. Many fetching creations of the dressmakers art were worn by the ladies all forming a very pretty picture.

Mullaly played, and the music was entrancing, and almost irresistable to those who had elected to watch the gay scene from the balcony.

In the receiving line were Mrs. George W. Morton, president of the Quincy Women's club, Mrs. W. Ward Whicher and Mrs. C. Theodore Hardwick.

The patronesses were Mrs. Clarence L. Arnold, Mrs. William H. Binnian, Mrs. Paul R. Blackmur, Mrs. Walter E. Burke, Mrs. Ralph W. Burnet, Mrs. William I. Dewson, Mrs. Richard C. Drinker, Mrs. Henry M. Faxon, Mrs. William P. Ferguson, Mrs. George D. Follett, Mrs. Henry R. Holden, Mrs. Charles L. Homer, Mrs. E. E. Jameson, Mrs. Henry L. Kincaide, Miss Georgiana C. OUR HOSPITAL

(Legal Title: City Hospital of Quincy.)

INCORPORATED 1889

The Trustees of the City Hospital of Quincy earnestly appeal for donations and bequests for the Endowment fund. This now amounts to over $60,000 but a fund of at least $100,000 is urgently needed.

Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000) will endow a Free Bed to which such name may be given as the Donor may desire, but any sum for this noble institution which stands ready to serve us all in the hour of need will be most gratefully received.

The Secretary, TIMOTHY REED, Adams St., Quincy, or the Treasurer, RICHARD D. CHASE, Savings Bank Building, Quincy, will be very glad to confer with any one or to answer any inquiries.

THE Young Men's Christian Association OF QUINCY, MASS.

(Legal Title—Incorporated 1892.)

The Directors of the YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION of Quincy, with a firm faith in the great value of the work which is being done for the young men and boys of our city, make their appeal for donations and bequests toward paying the mortgage indebtedness on the new Association Building. When the building is free from debt it will serve as an Endowment, as there is a goodly income from the dormitories.

Should the Donor prefer, such sum as might be given could be used as an Endowment for an educational class or classes, the Boys Department, or as a special fund in other ways, and could be designated with the name of the Donor.

The Treasurer, WILLIAM F. CUMMINGS, 7 Clive Street, Quincy, or the General Secretary, ERNEST G. GAY, will be happy to answer inquiries.

The Quincy Daily Ledger

Published in the City of Presidents

Vol. 20. No. 280 QUINCY, MASS., MONDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 30, 1908. PRICE TWO CENTS.

TO THE VOTERS OF QUINCY:

November, 27, 1908.

The undersigned, Citizens of Quincy, irrespective of party and vitally interested in our City's welfare, respectfully call to your attention the desirability of re-electing HON. WILLIAM T. SHEA Mayor.

Mayor Shea, in selecting the administrative heads of the City Government, displayed a spirit of non-partisanship, which should meet with the approval of all citizens, who believe that partisan politics in municipal affairs should be subordinate to the good of the public service.

His administration of the business of the City, has been most conscientious and efficient.

The re-election of Mayor Shea will mean the continuance for another year of the present prudent, economical and business-like method of transacting the affairs of the City, and will enable him to further advance, if not carry to completion, the many important matters in charge of the present City Government, which ought to be carried through by the men familiar with the work.

We believe the best interest of the City will be served by retaining Mayor Shea in office for another term, and therefore, most earnestly urge his re-election.

SCHOOLS DIES IN HOSPITAL

West Quincy Man Succumbs to Injuries Received in Accident

News of the railroad accident in South Boston, Saturday evening, was received in Quincy about 7 o'clock and there was considerable excitement, especially at West Quincy when it was learned that the car that was telescoped was attached to the 6.16 Granite branch train. It was at once realized that there must have been a number of West Quincy people on the train and there were many anxious moments for the relatives and friends of those known to have been on the train.

Crowds gathered at the depot and impatiently awaited the arrival of trains that would either bring home their friends or at least bring some news of them. But little real authentic news could be gathered however other than George Schools of Centre street assistant conductor on the train had been seriously injured. Word was received at the police station early in the evening that Susan Halloran a daughter of night station officer John Halloran was on the train and had been injured and taken to the City Hospital. Officer Halloran immediately secured leave of absence and hurried in town to the bedside of his daughter.

Later word was received that her injuries consisted of contusions and injuries to her limbs and that she would probably be able to be removed to her home Sunday.

Official returns of the injured show that there were several from West Quincy on the train who while more or less bruised were able to return to their homes later in the evening.

The list of Quincy people as far as could be learned were Alfred Dalouist of Squantum, Susan Halloran of 10 Wilson street Atlantic, Early Martin of 26 Rustic place West Quincy, leg injured; George Schools assistant conductor serious if not fatal injuries to the legs and body; Nils J. Nelson, 34 Hall place broken nose; Emeline O'Brien, Furnace Brook Parkway, slightly injured; John Owens 17 Quarry street extension bruised and shaken up; F. P. Stearns and Thomas Farrell, Willard street; J. A. Kelley, Filbert street.

F. P. Stearns in speaking of the smash said: "I was on the second last car. The shock hurled me over a seat into a woman's lap, who was with a party of four. A shrieking grinding noise was all I could hear at first and then almost before I could regain my feet I heard the cries of the injured. Everybody in the cars rushed for the doors, some fighting to get out first. I know several must have been hurt in this rush, particularly one woman who fell down. I helped her up. She could hardly walk and we took her to the station. I then helped to carry the injured to the bridge above where we put them into the ambulances and wagons"

John F. Kelley said "I was on the forward car of the train. The windows were smashed and the glass flew about but I did not see anyone in that car who was seriously hurt."

Nils Nelson and John Owens two West Quincy boys whose ages are 15 and 17 years had a thrilling experience. They were seated in the rear car that was telescoped. Nelson when seen Sunday had his arm in a sling and a bandage about his head and there was a red spot on his forehead.

He said "I was seated along with John Owens, who lives near me, Jack was sitting on the outside and we were talking. Jack looked out of the window and said "We're on the wrong track Nil," I laughed at him and leaned over to see. Then I don't remember anything except landing on the ground feeling my head cut. The two of us went out of the window so quick we didn't know what had struck us. The glass got stuck in my head and Jack was all cut up too. I was dazed and did not realize what had happened. Some one took me to the hospital where the doctors bound up my arm and head and then I started for home to tell my parents."

Owens story differs but little from that of his chum Nelson. He said "The first I knew what had happened was a roar. I half realized what was coming and grabbed for the window sill while Nelson grabbed my arm. Then everything caved in about us and I felt myself going down and down. I lost consciousness and when I came to I found my chum Nelson lying beside me on the opposite railroad track. We had gone through the window together and were injured by our heavy fall on the railroad tracks. My nose was cut and I am bruised about the head and arm."

Martin J. Martin the father of Early Martin speaking for his son said Earl is now in bed where he will remain for several days as the shock to his nervous system was a severe one. "We were seated about midway of the last car. When the shock came it threw both of us forward violently and Early who sat next to the isle was thrown to the floor. He seemed to be in great pain and groaned as I picked him up. Soon after we got onto the depot platform a clergyman advised me to send the boy to the hospital but as he seemed to have no serious injury I thought best to take him home. A physician bandaged his hip and told me to keep him in bed a few days. I was fortunate in escaping uninjured but the experience is one that I do not care to go through with again."

George Schools the assistant conductor who was so badly injured, died in the hospital at 10 o'clock this morning. He was well known in West Quincy where he has resided for several years. He lived on Centre street his family consisting of a wife and four children. He has been employed on the road for twenty years. Eight years ago he was promoted to assistant conductor and four years ago to conductor. He was the rear conductor on the 6.16 train and had started in from the rear door to make his ticket collection when the acicdent happened. He was therefore very near the rear door.

Mr. Schools met with a severe injury to his hand several weeks ago and had been on a three weeks vacation returning to work last Monday. He had been urged to remain off duty until after Thanksgiving but said that he felt that he should return to work.

Miss Halloran, daughter of Officer Halloran is employed in the office of the Boston Dye Works and was on her way home to Atlantic. She is one of Atlantic's most popular young ladies and was one of the choir of the Sacred Heart church. It was expected that she would be able to return home Sunday but she will have to remain in the hospital some days. She was thrown bodily through a window. Her injuries consist of a broken collar bone, injuries to her hip, cuts and bruises.

Besides Conductor Schools the only one to lose his life in the accident was William H. Buchanan, aged 45, a rear brakeman on the forward train, whose legs were cut off and who died on the way to a hospital.

The direct cause of the accident has not yet been disclosed, but it was caused primarily by the shifting over to the Midland division the trains which ordinarily pass over the Plymouth division, necessitated by a slight freight wreck which had tied up traffic on the Plymouth division.

The collision was between the trains which left the South station within six minutes of each other. The first was a six-car local of the Plymouth division, bound for Braintree, which stopped at the South Boston station, a two-minute run from the South Terminal. The second train was a four-car Midland division train, bound for Readville, which makes no stop at South Boston. A wide curve and a high bridge which overhangs the South Boston station shuts off any view of the station until trains approach the platform.

As the Braintree train was leaving the station, the Readville train came rushing out from beneath the bridge and crashed into the rear of the first train. The locomotive plowed its way half through the passenger coach, carrying away the end of the car, grinding every bit of woodwork into splinters and hurling the passengers and debris into the forward half of the coach.

A STRANGE LAKE.

Sulphur Island's Acid Waters Will Eat Up Boats.

A strange lake exists in the center of Sulphur island, off New Zealand. It is fifty acres in extent, about twelve feet in depth and fifteen feet above the level of the sea.

The most remarkable characteristic of this lake is that the water contains vast quantities of hydrochloric and sulphuric acids hissing and bubbling at a temperature of 110 degrees F.

The dark green colored water looks particularly uninviting. Dense clouds of sulphuric fumes constantly roll off this boiling caldron, and care has to be exercised in approaching this lake to avoid the risk of suffocation. On the opposite side of the lake may be seen the tremendous blowholes, which when in full blast present an awe inspiring sight.

The roar of the steam as it rushes forth into the air is deafening, and often huge bowlders and stones are hurled out to a height of several hundred feet by the various internal forces of nature.

A boat can be launched on the lake and if proper care be observed the very edges of the blowholes may be safely explored.

Some idea of the strength of the acid saturated water of this lake may be gathered from the fact that a boat almost dropped to pieces after all the passengers had been landed, as the rivets had corroded under the influence of the acids.

Islands In New York City.

"I was showing an Englishman our city a week or two ago," said a New Yorker, "and was surprised to hear him express astonishment at the number of islands within our municipal boundaries. 'Is this entire island a part of New York city?' he asked as I took him on several trolley rides over on Staten Island. 'And all these islands, too, are they New York city?' he inquired another day as he went up the East river. His remarks put me to thinking, and I've discovered that not one of the really great cities of the world has so many islands within its boundaries as New York. Staten Island in itself would make a good sized city. Some of the other islands, of course, are hardly more than specks, but they belong to New York city just the same."

The Darkest Hour.

The proverb which tells us that "the darkest hour is that before dawn" is inaccurate, for light increases in the morning as gradually as it decreases in the evening. The saying should be "the coldest hour," etc., which is perfectly true and is owing to causes connected with the deposit of dew. Hoarfrosts, too, usually take place just before daylight and are an additional cause of the peculiar chilliness of this time.—London Scraps.

Mme. Steinheil's Bad Record

Paris, Nov. 30.—All the new light thrown on the murder of Adolphe Steinheil and Mme. Japy, which occurred at the home of the artist, only goes to strengthen the conviction that Mme. Steinheil either strangled them alone after administering a narcotic or poison, subsequently binding herself to her bed, or had an accomplice in the person of a professional criminal. It is now learned that Mme. Steinheil was receiving the visits of another rich lover besides Maurice Borderel, and that she promised each of them that she would marry him in event of her becoming widowed or divorced.

Army Defeats Navy at Football

Philadelphia, Nov. 30.—The army vanquished the navy at football by the small score and narrow margin of 6 to 4—a touchdown and goal against a goal from the field. Thirty thousand persons saw the husky cadets conquer the sturdy midshipmen in a contest that never lagged. That the navy boys were surprised at the unexpected strength of their opponents is putting it mildly, as they had entered the game practically sure of victory.

Rustin Tragedy Recalled

Omaha, Nov. 30.—The trial of Charles E. Davis for the murder of Dr. Frederick T. Rustin, ten weeks ago, was called in the district court today. The prosecution is in charge of State Attorney English. Mrs. Abbie Rice, who, it is alleged, entered into an agreement of murder and suicide with Dr. Rustin, and, failing, avowed that Rustin hired Davis to slay him, will be the state's chief witness.

Paralytic Burned to Death

Salem, Mass., Nov. 30.—When the police and firemen responded to an alarm for a blaze at the house No. 9 Pond street, they found Mrs. Clementine McCausland, a paralytic, 73 years old, lying on the floor of the kitchen, frightfully burned. She was sent to a hospital, but died before reaching there. The cause of the fire is not known. The damage to the house by the fire was slight.

A good chance frequently wears such a mask that it takes a gambler to even give a guess at it.

The bright side to a politician shines like a dollar and makes a noise like a bank roll.

Fools never listen to wise men lest their originality become less patent and glittering.

It is a good thing to work, but the majority of us like it better not to be obliged to connect up with every good thing.

Flattery is the chief lubricator of the machinery of the social whirl.

It is really a good thing that boastfulness gives its creator pleasure. It should serve some turn.

Getting Along.

How painlessly a fellow glides
From poverty to riches.
To holding down a leather chair
From toil and digging ditches!
And he can hardly realize
That once when he was shorter
He didn't buy what he desired
Because it cost a quarter.

Communing with a fat cigar,
His pedals on the table,
To think that he was once in need
Seems almost like a fable.
He wonders, if he wanted coin
When he was poor and thrifty,
Just why he didn't write a check
For twenty-five or fifty.

He looks about him and he sees
Men short of food and raiment,
Without a diamond stud because
They cannot make first payment.
He thinks that they could beat the game
If they were only gritty,
Forgetting how he struggled on
E'er luck on him took pity.

'Tis easy to forget the past
And down the road go spinning
All in a handsome touring car
When riches has an inning.
Although not many months away
From poverty's embraces,
He feels superior to those Who sit in lowly places.

BASKET BALL AT MILTON.

Under the captainship of William Flynn, it is expected that Milton High will send out a fast basket ball team this season. The veterans are Flynn as forward, Cross and Dow as backs and the substitutes, Hall and McIllraith. The new candidates are Stuart, Reid, Whittemore, Bishop, O'Connell, Quigly and Clark. Games have been arranged with the Canton and Quincy High school teams and Bridgewater Normal.

SPEAKS IN HOME WARD.

A large crowd gathered Friday night at Ward Two to greet Mr. Stone when he arrived after speaking at Houghs Neck. The voters in Mr. Stone's home ward are working enthusiastically for his election and they predict a handsome vote for him in that part of the city.

—The full philosophy of the fight against tuberculosis concentrates in one word, cleanliness, explains the Washington Star. This means cleanliness in all the relations and acts of the individual. It is physical morality which the anti-tuberculosis workers are preaching, and in the degree that they persuade the people to adopt their point of view they are making for not merely a healthier but a better world. The most profitable field for their efforts is the public school, where the children are is a state of evolution toward maturity of mind and body.

OLD TIME PRICES.

Glimpse of the Days When Living Was Cheap In England.

Old time hotel rates in England were low. For instance, in the days of Queen Elizabeth the charge at the George inn for a feather bed per night was a penny. Dinner cost sixpence (12 cents) and offered choice of "beef, mutton or pigge or fish." In Stuart times each room owned a name instead of a number, chiefly those of inn signs, such as the Cross Keys room, the Bell chamber, the Adam and Eve room, and so forth.

Formerly the custom in important cities during festival times was to limit the price of food and lodging by statute. In Canterbury during the celebration of the bicentenary of Becket's translation (1372) the price of bread was fixed at two loaves for a penny (2 cents), a fairly high figure considering the comparative value of money then and now, and wine brought 16 cents a gallon.

A century or so later the scale of prices in Edinburgh all the year round was equally moderate, sheep being sold at prices ranging from 12 cents to 20 cents, according to quality, "best hens" at 1 cent each and Rochelle wine at 1 cent a pint. Any vender departing from these prices ran the risk of forfeiture of his goods.—Chicago News.

QUEER CRABS.

The Ingenious Manner In Which They Disguise Themselves.

Some species of crabs disguise themselves in an ingenious manner. They deliberately bite up seaweeds and plant them on their backs, very soon establishing a growth which harmonizes perfectly with the surroundings and deceives many an enemy. Should the weeds grow too vigorously the crab industriously prunes them with his claws and every now and then scrapes the whole lot off and starts a fresh garden on his roof, so to speak.

The sponge crab behaves in a similar manner, nipping off little bits of living sponge and sticking them on his back, where they grow vigorously. The same end is served as in the other case. It is very amusing to keep crabs of one or other of these kinds in an aquarium and deprive them of the usual means of concealment.

They get very nervous and agitated and try to cover themselves with bits of paper or anything else that may be provided. One such captive is said to have had a little greatcoat made for him, which he put on in a hurry as soon as it was handed to him.—London Sphere.

Queer Talismans In Malta.

There are still to be found in Malta a number of small stones shaped and colored like the eyes, tongues and other parts of serpents. The superstitious among the Maltese connect these with the tradition that St. Paul when shipwrecked was cast on their island, and it was there that while lighting a bundle of sticks for a fire a viper fastened on the apostle's hand. St. Paul calmly shook the reptile off into the flames, and no harm followed. The natives wear these stones as talismans, in which character they suppose them serviceable in warding off dangers from snake bites and poisons. They are found in St. Paul's cave, imbedded in clay, and are set in rings and bracelets and when found to be in the shape of a tongue or liver or heart are hung around the neck. They are also taken internally, dissolved in wine, which method is attended, according to some people, by more immediate results.

The Salt In the Sea.

A scientist has calculated, after extensive tests of the density and saltness of the ocean in all parts of the world, that there is the equivalent of 8,051,342 cubic geographical miles of common salt in all the known seas. This is more than five times the mass of the mountains in the entire Alpine range.

The Resemblance.

Finding Is Keeping.

By MARTHA M'CULLOCH-WILLIAMS.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

Lisabeth climbed into the runabout and sent Meg down the road at a clipping pace. There was a certain likeness betwixt the girl and the mare. Both showed blood; both were handsome in unusual fashion. Lisabeth was a Spanish blond, and her face was vivid as an autumn flower. Thus Meg's copper red coat and flaxen mane and tail brought her beautifully into the picture.

"I don't see why mammy and the colonel never will pull together," Lisabeth complained to Meg when they were safe in the big road. Meg was her only confidant, her nearest comrade.

"If only they ever did agree I might give up to them," Lisabeth went on plaintively. "Since they won't I have to stand up for my own way. They'd hate each other forever if they thought I was partial."

The big road swept in a long curve halfway round the plantation. Lisabeth caught glimpses of the white house, with tall red chimneys, nestling among the trees, all along throughout the first mile.

Several times she smiled at the house; once she shook her fist, saying, with a frown: "Oh, you look good, but you're just the same as a prison! I can't do anything I want to do, because I'm going some day to be mistress of Willow Wand. But that isn't the very worst—I must marry somebody fit to be master there—if ever they find such a paragon. I won't do it! I won't! I won't! I'll run away with a drummer man or even a gypsy—if I like him."

Lisabeth was nineteen, vital to her finger tips, an only child and, truth to say, rather badly spoiled.

"They fight so, Meg," Lisabeth ran on, more than ever plaintive—"my mammy and the colonel. He gets up first. By breakfast time he has thought of a brand new reason why I ought to marry that Kinross thing." (Type can never express the curl here of Lisabeth's lips.) "And he fires it at mammy as she gives him his coffee—and spoils her appetite always—and makes her cry sometimes. But she gets even. Long before dinner's ready she's ready with something good and better in Hump Dillard. Oh, Lord! Fancy living with a body named Hump! I hear myself saying, 'Humpy, dear,' or 'My Humpy sugar lump!' I have my opinion of folks who would go and name a boy child Humphreys—don't care if the name has been in the family forty thousand years."

She fell silent a little while. The road ran on down Leet's hill, which was more than half a mass of clay bedded round bowlders. One could drive over it safe enough if only one knew how; also if one's horse were clear footed and true pulling.

Evidently a passenger had essayed coming up it who lacked all those things. Halfway down the hill upon a small gravelly bench there was an overturned buggy with a man half sitting, half lying beside it, casting rueful glances alternately at the vehicle and the horse, whose head barely showed above the depths of a roadside gully.

The horse whickered appealingly to Meg, who answered with the least faint whinny. Lisabeth stopped opposite the stranger, leaned a little toward him, saying in her father's most judicial tone: "Um! Can't you pick yourself up after your spill?"

"Certainly I can. I'm doing this all for a lark, of course!" the stranger retorted, pointing to his forehead, bleeding from a long gash, then on to a foot lying helpless in front of him. A smallish brass bound trunk a little beyond explained his plight. In the spill it had somehow fallen upon his ankle, breaking a bone. It was a sample trunk, Lisabeth decided instantly. Therefore the stranger was a drummer.

It served him right for trying to go cross country without a driver and with only a single horse, but that was no more than a fleeting thought. She was giggling so inside as she thought what the colonel would say to him.

The colonel hated the whole race of drummers, albeit he admitted they had their uses. Notwithstanding he would not refuse succor to this special drummer. Lisabeth chuckled inly as she got out and approached him, saying: "I'm real sorry you're hurt. At first I thought you were only"—

"Drunk," the stranger supplemented as she passed, coloring deeply. She nodded. "But I'll spare you apologies. Instead I'm going to take you home with me," she said.

"Sure I'll go?" the stranger asked. Lisabeth gave him a severe glance as she answered: "You needn't unless you want to. Just tell me who you are, who you travel for and where you're going, and I can send word to them right away. The Higleys down yonder," pointing down the hill, "have two telephones."

"Thank you, but I'd rather go with you. My name is Maclise. As for the rest, it doesn't matter," the stranger said, trying to rise and falling back, white to the lips. Lisabeth caught his arm, saying severely:

"Be still, you, while I halloo up Babe and Billy—the Higley boys, you know—to make a bee saddle and tote you to my runabout and take care of your plunder."

"I see," Maclise said, his eyes dancing in spite of his pain. "Don't you think you'd better let me go home with them? I always did like to ride on a bee saddle."

"But you never tried it with a game leg—at least I reckon not," Lisabeth retorted. "Anyway, you can't go to Ma Higley's. I found you in the road, and finding is keeping."

"Clearly there's no more to be said," Maclise answered, shutting his teeth on a groan.

He had only a simple fracture, the doctor said, but somehow he made a very slow recovery. The colonel had sworn over him for exactly half an hour—silently, of course. Humanity and hospitality both forbade anything else. Then he had fallen victim to the charm of a personality singularly frank and winning. As for mammy, she had succumbed instantly.

Lisabeth was not permitted to do more than say "Good morning" through the door so long as Maclise kept his room, but when he came down to sit on the piazza or hobble up and down the garden she followed him like a fascinated child.

He had such tales to tell her. Evidently he had been all over the world. He was thirty, not handsome, but well made and supremely well bred in spite of his vocation. The Mertons each and several deplored the vocation tacitly.

He had not fretted in the least over his accident. Instead, after sending off a couple of brief letters, he had said: "Now everything is fixed. I have only to enjoy myself getting well." All his solicitude had been for the brass bound trunk. He had beside it a suit case cramful of proper clothes. Moreover, his wallet was so fat, his fees and tips so generous, it was clear he had no anxiety about money.

In his first fortnight at Willow Wand all the family had confided to him their plans and grievances. Set speech was hardly necessary. He had sensed so much before it came. After seeing the Kinross thing and the long descended Hump Dillard his judgment veered shamelessly to Lisabeth's side.

"But you need a man of your own to fight for," he explained to her judicially, "somebody—anybody almost—to oppose to these two. You insist that you can do better than take either. You've got to show mammy and the colonel, even if they don't come from Missouri. Don't you know anybody you could idealize into a hero?"

Lisabeth shook her head, murmuring: "I don't know him, but I know of him. It's so aggravating he won't come home. I wonder if you ever met him—M-M-Murray. He's been globe trotting ever since he left college. I made up my mind to marry him—nobody else—two years ago, when I went all over his house, not because it's so fine, but for the name—Goodheart. I love that. And I'm sure I'd love him too. But how can I when he keeps away all the time?"

"It might be harder still if you saw him. No, I've never met him, but I've heard a lot about him—not much to his good," Maclise said, scowling oddly. "If he's the only rival you can scare up I see nothing for it but to propose myself. You found me, you know, and said finding was keeping."

"And I meant it—right then," Lisabeth said joyously. "Even if you are a drummer I believe it will be great fun to go along with you. I might even drum for things myself."

"That's a bargain," Maclise said, holding her tight, but not kissing her. "I'm afraid, though, you won't stick to it when you know I'm a rank, rank impostor—not a bit of a drummer. You don't even know my right name."

"I don't care—I know you," Lisabeth cried, clinging closer. Then he kissed her twice, saying, with the least shake in his voice: "Thank God! Sweetheart, I never before was so proud of myself. But the name is a pretty decent one. I'm asking you formally to be Mrs. Marmaduke Maclise Murray. I was going home with my family papers in that trunk when it lamed me and gave me something very much more precious. Now, what do you think mammy and the colonel will say?"

"It doesn't matter. I say 'Yes,'" Lisabeth whispered. "Still, I believe they won't make much fuss about it."

Vocation and Avocation.

The word "vocation" is derived from the Latin voco, I call; vocatus, calling. "Avocation" is derived from avoco, I call away or divert; avocatus, calling away or diverting. A man's calling or vocation is that for which he has prepared himself, for which he is fitted or for which he has received a call, as we say especially in regard to a religious vocation. But when a man is called away—avocatus—from his regular employment and engages in a diversion or recreation of any kind the word avocation applies to such diversion or calling away. The recreation may be of a very serious nature, as some profound study or arduous work, but it is not his vocation. The schoolboy has no vocation. He is fitting himself for one. But he may have many avocations. Gladstone's vocation was statesmanship; among his avocations were the study of the classics, making translations and sometimes chopping down trees.—London M. A. P.

A Small Girl's Philosophy.

The small daughter of the house was sent to bed early the other evening as punishment for some act contrary to rules and regulations. After she had been tucked in bed for some time and was supposedly asleep the youngster called her father and told him she wished he would go ahead and spank her and have it over with instead of sending her off in that way.

"This lying in bed never's going to make me any better," she said, "and a good spanking would. Besides, it makes me so mad I can't sleep, and so what's the use of it?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

SIMON'S FORCES GAIN STRENGTH

Haytiens Flocking to Banner of Leader of Revolutionists

GOVERNMENT FORCES BEATEN

Three Divisions of Troops Guarding Approaches to Capital, Upon Which the Enemy Are Now Marching--Indications That Engagement Will Be Serious--Steamers Are Freely Touching at "Blockaded" Ports

Port au Prince, Nov. 30.—The revolutionists, under command of General Simon, the former commander of the department of the south, following up their victory over the government forces at Anse a Veau, are pushing on to Port au Prince. They have driven back the government troops many miles and have seized the towns of Miragoane and Petit Goave.

It is believed that General Cyriaque, minister of war, who took refuge in the German consulate at the former town, is still there, but it is feared that there will be many defections of Haitiens to the revolutionary army.

President Alexis has energetically rejected the suggestion which has been made to him that he give up the struggle, and the government is now actively engaged in organizing its forces for a strong resistance. Three divisions of well-disciplined troops, under command of General Andre, minister of the interior and police, occupy a position about six miles outside of the city. These troops are entrenched at the convergence of three roads and they hold a commanding position.

The south approach to the city is being fortified, and forts Bizoton and Mercredi, mounting modern artillery, command the road.

Just how long it will take the revolutionists to traverse the road from Miragoane, which is about fifty miles from Port au Prince, is a matter of doubt, but since there are no government forces to check them they are likely to reach this city within forty-eight hours. The engagement will be serious, and it is thought that forces may be landed from the warships now in the harbor for the preventing of pillage and injury to the foreign residents.

At present there is considerable excitement in this city, for, while there have been many revolutions in Haiti, none has been so successful at the outset as at the present. General Simon, who was commander of the department of the south for twenty years, is recognized as a strong man and an exceedingly popular one. He was ordered about a month ago by President Alexis to come to this city to confer with the president on political matters, but, fearing that if he did so his life would be in danger, he declined to obey the order and made ready to repel any attack by the government.

General Simon had a strong following at Aux Cayes, and when he was declared a rebel thousands flocked to his banner in that town and the towns of Jeremie and Aquin. His success in forcing General Laconte and his followers to flee from Aux Cayes, having been sent there by the president to overcome the revolutionists, and his later successes in routing the forces under General Celestin at Anse a Veaux has probably brought many more Haitiens to his command.

Besides this the sea blockade of the three ports instituted by the government has proved a failure. Steamers of the regular lines are touching freely at these ports, and it is a blockade in name only.

The United States cruiser Tacoma and the French training ship Duguay Trouin are now in the harbor, and the British cruiser Scylla and the Italian cruiser Fieramosta are expected to reach Port au Prince within a few days.

It is impossible to ascertain the casualties of the recent engagement at Anse a Veau, but it is understood that the government forces lost many in killed and wounded. A large number of the wounded have been brought here by the Haitien gunboat Centaire, but the government is using all endeavors to keep all information regarding its defeat from the public.

Acute Stage Is Reached

Washington, Nov. 30.—United States Minister Furniss at Port au Prince, in a dispatch to the state department, confirms the press reports about the defeat of the government troops at Anse a Veau. The cruiser Des Moines has been ordered from Guantanamo to Port au Prince. Dispatches which have reached the state and navy departments indicate that the Haitien situation has reached an acute stage. Furniss strongly advised the necessity for foreign warships.

The foreign minister of Haiti has requested that a new cabinet be appointed, two members to be named by President Alexis and two by General Simon, and a fifth member by the diplomatic corps, as a measure of restoring peace. It is also proposed that a new election be held in January to elect Alexis' successor. Furniss, as dean of the diplomatic corps, laid these propositions before Alexis, but the president turned a deaf ear and said he would fight to a finish.

Commander Hood of the cruiser Tacoma sent a report to the navy department to the effect that the province of Aux Cayes is in the hands of the revolutionary army, numbering 5000, well supplied with ammunition. The Tacoma will remain at Port au Prince to protect the American legation and the lives and property of foreign subjects.

Panic at the Capital

Paris, Nov. 30.—Dispatches received here from Port au Prince say that a panic reigns in that city because of the approach of the insurgents. The Haitien cabinet, the dispatches say, is urging the American minister to demand the resignation of President Alexis and is seeking also the formation of a provisional government on the part of the United States.

TO COMBAT TUBERCULOSIS

Practical Methods Demonstrated In Show Opened at New York

New York, Nov. 30.—The tuberculosis show of the international tuberculosis congress, recently held in Washington, was opened here today with public ceremonies, Governor Hughes and Mayor McClellan delivering addresses. Both officials dwelt on the great importance of the efforts being made to combat tuberculosis and predicted that the show would prove an important factor in the international war that is now being waged on the disease.

The purpose of the show is to give a demonstration of the methods in use in this and other countries to prevent and cure consumption. The exhibit is housed in the American Museum of Natural History and is open to the public from 10 a. m. to 10:30 p. m. and on Sunday afternoons. The exhibits will remain on view six weeks. It is expected that hundreds of thousands of persons will visit the exhibition.

While by far the larger number of the nearly 450 exhibitors are from the United States, there are many from South America, Europe and even Japan. Most of the states of the Union have separate exhibits; some, like New York and Pennsylvania, have extensive official exhibits, flanked by the exhibits of progressive anti-tuberculosis societies, sanitariums and hospitals.

LARGEST DEFICIT IN ITS HISTORY

Postoffice Department Shy to Amount of $16,873,223

Washington, Nov. 30.—A deficit of $16,873,223, the largest in the history of the postoffice department, is shown in Postmaster General Meyer's annual report. This report covers the fiscal year ending June 30, 1908. The deficit of 1909, it is estimated, will exceed $16,000,000.

One of the most interesting features of the report deals with a suggestion that congress authorize a limited parcel post on rural routes. Meyer says such a system would add milions of dollars to the revenue, and adds:

"The special parcel post will enable the farmers to have small parcels delivered at their gates, to live better, and to obtain easily the necessaries of life."

Permission is requested to establish experimentally a limited parcel post in not to exceed four counties in order to demonstrate the practicability of the plan.

Recommendation is made that the leave of absence with pay allowed by law to employes of the postal service be increased from fifteen to thirty days whenever the postal revenues warrant it.

The postmaster general also recommends that railway postal clerks be given annual leave of absence with pay for thirty days, and that when so seriously disabled as not to be able to resume duty at the expiration of twelve months, they may be granted disability leave with pay at 50 percent of their regular compensation during such disability for not exceeding twelve additional months.

Bullets For Wife and Self

Lowell, Mass., Nov. 30.—Mrs. Romelia Beaulieu, aged 19, who was shot in the throat by her husband, Wilfred Beaulieu, late Saturday, is still alive, but her condition is very critical. She is at St. John's hospital, where her husband, who is 21 years old, is also under treatment for self-inflicted bullet wounds in the head. Physicians say that he shows evidences of mental derangement. The shooting is attributed to jealousy.

Hydrophobia Kills Little Fellow

Manchester, N. H., Nov. 30.—Neil Rosseau, 2½ years old, died of hydrophobia. The child was bitten by a bulldog about a week ago and for the last three days suffered fearfully. In his agony the boy dug his fingernails into the face of his mother, causing her face to be so badly swollen that it was feared she would become a victim to the dreaded disease.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Major Charles F. Larrabee, assistant commissioner of Indian affairs and for twenty-eight years connected with the Indian service, has resigned because of ill-health.

Fire of supposed incendiary origin did damage exceeding $200,000 at the car shops of J. G. Brill & Co. at Philadelphia.

The body of Sergeant Alonzo P. Allen, a Civil war veteran and for over thirty years since the war in the regular army, was found in Portland, Me., harbor. Coroner Rich decided that death resulted from accidental drowning.

CHILD NURTURE CLUB.

A most enjoyable evening was spent last Wednesday, by about seventy Wollastonians at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Pinkham, who kindly opened their house to the members of the Child Nurture club and their friends. Mrs. Oscar Allen Blaisdell, president of the club most happily introduced Mr. Joseph Lee of Boston, Vice President of the Playground Association of America who had been invited to speak. Mr. Lee held the close attention of the audience for almost an hour while he told them what play does for the child and showed how necessary playgrounds are for the proper bringing up of children.

Mr. Lee spoke of the bill to make playgrounds obligatory which is to be balloted for in Quincy at the next election, he hoped all who had votes would use them to help carry this bill through, and that those who had none would help it on by their influence. The speaker divided the life of the child into three periods, and spoke most interestingly of the needs of the child, in the line of play, in each of these periods.

At the close of his talk, a number of questions were asked and quite a lively discussion ensued. A delightful part of the occasion was the music furnished by the Wollaston Masonic quartet, who most generously gave their services to add to the interest of the evening. The quartet consists of Mr. Bullock, first tenor, Mr. Moulton, second tenor, Mr. Follett, first bass and Mr. McGowan, second bass. The quartet had promised two selections "Vocal March" by Dow, and "A Southern Medley," but they most kindly responded to several encores and closed by singing the beautiful anthem "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy Youth."

GRADE CROSSING HEARING TODAY

Estimates of Cost by The Railroad Plans

After numerous postponements the hearing before the special commission, appointed by the superior court, to determine the manner of separating the grades at the Water and Savill streets railroad crossings was held this morning, in the Council chamber, at City Hall. The hearing was set for 10 o'clock but it was 15 minutes later before the commissioners arrived.

City Solicitor McAnarney in opening said it was understood the railroad would furnish some figures at this hearing as to cost by its plans. Col. Benton counsel for the rialroad said the estimate for the Water street crossing was $141,624. The items that went to make up this amount were given in detail and included $52,109 for land damages.

The basis of land damage was double assessed value for land taken and 60 per cent for land on which grade was changed.

The estimate for Saville street was $17,586 which included a land damage of $11,610.

Mr. Morrill the railroad engineer explained the plans for the two crossings. These have already been described in detail in the Daily Ledger. In brief they are as follows:

At Water street, the street is closed at both sides of the present crossing and a new crossing by overhead bridge made further south of the present crossing. This is reached by a new way parallel with the present tracks.

At Saville street the street is closed at the crossing and a new way built from Granite street to connect with Irving place.

In reply to a question by City Solicitor McAnarney, Mr. Morrill said the difference in damage by 4 or 2 tracks would be but little different.

Mr. McAnarney said he proposed to let City Engineer figure on these estimates, which he had for the first time. Later on he might wants to ask some questions.

In reply to a question by ex-Governor Bates, chairman of the commission Mr. Morrill said the estimates were made last January.

Mr. Morrill was then examined by City Solicitor McAnarney as to how the estimates were made up.

In reply to various questions Mr. Morrell said that the centre line of Irving place was moved to the west to avoid an acute angle and to get in two additional tracks. Irving place, for 300 feet from Saville street is left as it is now. On the four track scheme a subway under the tracks, but that does not come in under the abolition of the grade crossing.

City Solicitor McAnarney then said this plan was not one on which the city could make estimates as he knew all along that the railroad had another plan that had not been shown.

Col. Benton said the cost of the abolition of the crossing was divided between the three parties but the providing for four tracks was something the railroad must pay for.

City Solicitor McAnarney.—Our Our engineeer in making his estimates took into consideration a four track system, but if this is not to be considered in the abolition of the crossings he wanted to revise his figures.

Mr. Burdett, counsel for the Old Colony street railway, thought it should be understood that the figures given should be to retain present conditions and not to a four track system. Therefore the figures given by the City Engineer could not be considered.

G. B. Bates desired to ask the railroad engineer some questions but was not permitted to as a private citizens, Col. Benton objecting to it.

Mr. McAnarney—According to your plan you do not provide for passengers coming from Boston to Quincy Adams to go from the west to the east side of the track.

Mr. Morrell.—No, that is not a part of the abolishing the grade crossing.

Mr. McAnarney.—By this plan then passengers would have to walk 1000 feet to get across the tracks.

Mr. Morrell—Yes.

Mr. McAnarney—According to this plan the track to the freight yard at Quincy Adams crosses at grade?

Mr. Morrell—Yes that is a siding track.

In reply to further questions Mr. Morrell said the plan contemplated keeping the Quincy Adams station where it is today.

Chairman Bates would like the railroad engineers state objections to the city plans.

Col. Benton replied he did not want to state his objection at the present time. He did object to city plan as it was different from theirs. We say our plan ought to be accepted.

Chairman Bates—The city plan is cheaper than the railroad at Water street and city claims it is more satisfactory.

Col. Benton said he wanted the railroad engineer to make the objection. He was now before the railroad commissioners.

Mr. Burdett suggested that city should give the detailed cost of their estimate at this time.

Mr. McAnarney We made our estimate for a four track scheme. To change our plans at Saville street to a two track basis will reduce cost over $200,000.

As to Water street it will cost much less than figures given. For a two track basis we would be under the railroad estimate. City has no figures on a two track system.

Col. Benton—If you abolish the crossings and leave it so you can not build two additional tracks you damage our property.

Chairman Bates asked for the detailed figures of the city.

Mr. McAnarney said however that the figures on Saville street would be useless without revision.

It was then decided when an adjournment was reached that it be until Monday, Dec. 7.

The Commission stated that it desired all parties to have their evidence ready at that hearing so that the public hearings, other than the arguments might be closed.

GRAND RALLY AT MUSIC HALL

No License League Make Final Appeal to Voters

The grand rally Sunday evening at Music hall under the auspices of the Citizens No-License League was one of the most successful ever held. Fully one thousand were present. Many of these were young men. In fact there were more young men present than usual.

George A. Sidelinger president of the league presided and on the platform aside from the speakers were Rev. Dr. E. N. Hardy, E. B. Gay, Mayor Shea, Eugene R. Stone, Arthur W. Newcomb and Henry M. Faxon.

In opening the meeting Mr. Sidelinger said many had asked why so much work was put into these rallies when it seemed to be all right for no license. Such a condition as now was not reached by accident or chance but by hard work.

A man having built up a business would not become lax. The Citizens' No-License League has built up a large business and propose to keep at it. There are 750 new voters on the list and these and the 650 stayaways we want to reach.

John R. Anderson the first speaker said the liquor business was different from any other kind. In most business the finished product was worth more than the raw material.

It was not so in the liquor business for the raw material, the young men, were worth more than the finished product the drunken brute. Our country is not rich enough to sacrifice 100,000 lives a year as the finished product of the liquor business.

Tuesday the question is shall the licensed saloon be returned or shall we put a foot on its neck and say never again? If it builds up mankind we want it, but if it curses and degrades there is no room in Quincy for the saloon.

Some may say that there is just as much liquor sold as with a license. The thermometer of license are the number of arrests.

He then gave figures showing the number of arrests in cities like Lynn, Haverhill, Worcester and Brockton under license and under no-license. Manhood means more than money.

Do not blame the foreign born for the lax vote. They have paid a big price for the prililege of voting when they leave the mother country and swear allegiance to this country. He would be ashamed to go to the polls and not know how to vote. He thought more of a man who says yes all the year and votes yes than the man who talks no, then goes to the polls and does not vote.

Henry L. Kincaide spoke for the business men. He said he was sure he expressed the sentiment of the business interest when he urged no license. He then spoke of the old days when liquor was sold in Quincy and the scenes of that time. We know there is some liquor illegally sold but the police have brought twenty cases in court and 16 were found guilty.

He suggested that the no-license league take some steps to see that the wholesale places in Neponset near the Quincy line was done away with. Most of the liquor brought into Quincy comes from there. Keep away the saloon and we keep away temptation. Quincy expects every man to do his duty on election day.

C. A. Warren of Chelsea spoke of the liquor question as a financial problem. The state makes laws for the purpose of making it easy for men to do right and hard for them to do wrong. Laws have been made for the benefit of all the people generally. We have passed a law that it shall be unlawful to sell intoxicating liquor unless a city or town desires to become an exception to the general law.

You are to say if it is wise to become an exception to the law. He had never heard of any public meetings in favor of the public saloon. We do hear rumors that some cities need the sum it would receive from the saloon.

Each saloon in Quincy would mean $15,600 and thirty saloons to which Quincy is entitled would mean $468,000 to come from the pockets of the people that the city may receive $35,000.

The financial question is an old skeleton. when the saloon pays $1000 for the right to take many thousands from the pockets of our people. You in Quincy are called upon to say whether or not your city shall be an exception to the general law and have the saloon.

Arthur Brault and Winthrop Safford the prize winners at last year's prize speaking contest then gave the selections that won the prizes.

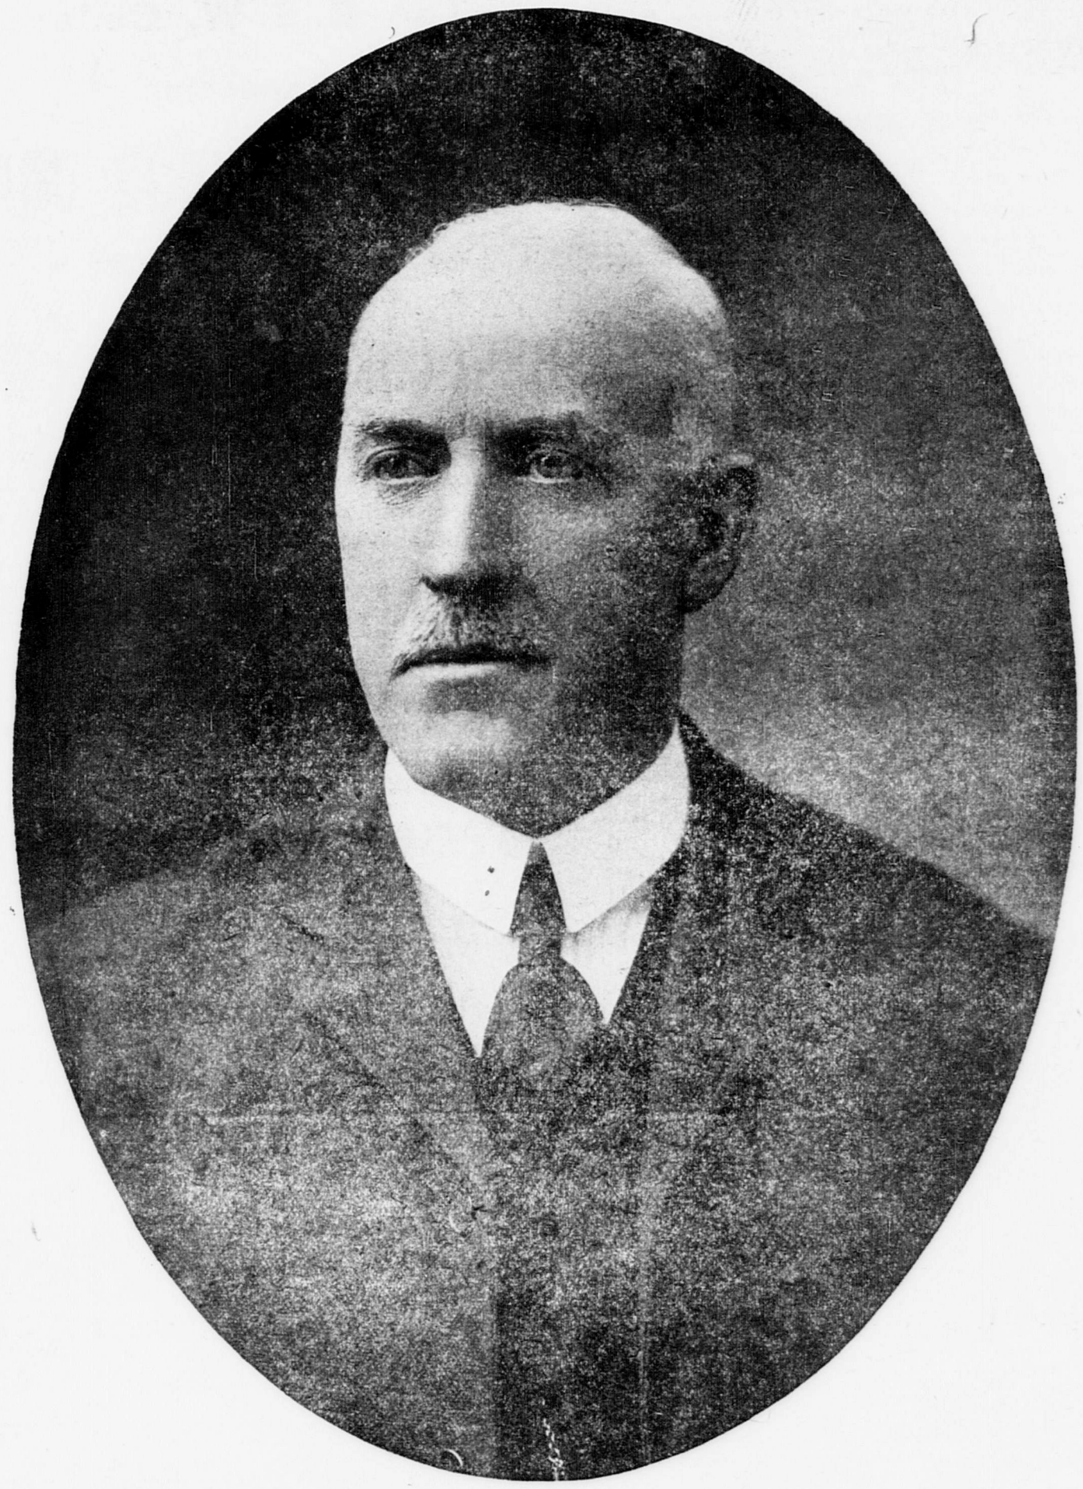

During the speaking there was music by the Y. M. C. A. orchestra. The Beethoven quartette also sang, "Onward Christian Soldiers" "Who will stand for the right" "Rock of Ages" and "Comrades firmly stand."

Indorsed By J. L. Miller

HON WILLIAM T. SHEA,
QUINCY, MASS.

DEAR SIR:

I HAVE WATCHED YOU AS CAREFULLY AS I COULD AND I BELIEVE YOU HAVE KEPT YOUR PROMISES AND HAVE GIVEN OUR CITY A GOOD CLEAN ADMINISTRATION, WHERE WE HAVE GOT MORE VALUE FOR OUR MONEY ON OUR STREETS THAN FOR THE PAST TEN YEARS. I HAVE DRIVEN OVER MANY OF THE STREETS THAT HAVE BEEN BUILT AND CAN SAY THEY ARE SPLENDID, FOR INSTANCE, SUMNER AND COMMON STREETS. I AM TOLD BY A MEMBER OF THE FINANCE COMMITTEE OF THE CITY COUNCIL THAT THE COST WAS A LITTLE OVER HALF WHAT SIMILAR WORK HAS COST.

I HAVE ALSO EXAMINED THE NEW CODDINGTON SCHOOL BUILDING MANY TIMES DURING ITS CONSTRUCTION AND HAVE NO HESITATION IN SAYING THAT IT IS THE BEST BUILT SCHOOL BUILDING OF ALL OUR NEW SCHOOL BUILDINGS. THE GRADE CROSSING QUESTION HAS BEEN CARRIED ON IN A CONSERVATIVE MANNER AND FOR THE BEST INTEREST OF THE CITY.

NOW SIR, I DID NOT VOTE FOR YOU LAST YEAR, BUT FULLY INTENDED TO UNTIL THE LAST FEW DAYS OF THE CAMPAIGN WHEN I WAS ASSURED THAT CERTAIN CHANGES WOULD BE MADE, AND AS YOU WERE THEN AN UNTRIED QUANTITY I CHANGED MY MIND. WHILE I HAVE NOTHING BUT GOOD FEELING FOR MR. STONE, BUT WHEN A MAN HAS LABORED NIGHT AND DAY TO GIVE A GOOD HONEST ADMINISTRATION AND HAS SUCCEEDED I CANNOT FIND IT IN MY HEART TO TURN HIM OUT AFTER ONE YEAR, JUST WHEN HE HAS LEARNED THE ROPES AND THE CITY HAS ALL TO GAIN IN THE SECOND YEAR BY YOUR EXPERIENCE OF THE FIRST. I SAY, "TO THE WIND WITH PARTY POLITICS IN CITY AFFAIRS," AND LET US VOTE FOR THE BEST MAN AND ONE WHOM WE HAVE TRIED. PERHAPS MR. STONE MIGHT DEVELOP TO AS GOOD A MAYOR, BUT AGAIN HE MIGHT NOT AND I CAN'T THINK OUR BUSINESS MEN AND THE TAX PAYERS WILL APPROVE THE RISK.

I AM VERY SORRY, BUT IT LOOKS AS THOUGH I WOULD BE COMPELLED TO LEAVE FOR CALIFORNIA BEFORE ELECTION DAY. YOU AND I HAVE KNOWN EACH OTHER FOR OVER THIRTY YEARS YOU IN ONE PARTY AND I IN THE OTHER, BUT I HAVE NOTHING BUT ADMIRATION FOR YOUR CONDUCT ALL THAT TIME AND SINCE YOU HAVE BEEN AT THE HEAD OF THE CITY GOVERNMENT YOU HAVE BEEN A CREDIT TO THE CITY AND AN HONOR TO YOURSELF. YOU HAVE A BATTLE AHEAD, BUT WHEN I THINK OF THE THOUSANDS OF DEMOCRATS WHO VOTED FOR GOV. HUGHES BECAUSE HE HAD GIVEN AN HONEST AND FEARLESS ADMINISTRATION, I CANNOT THINK OF OUR REPUBLICANS DOING LESS THAN TO SUPORT YOU FOR ANOTHER YEAR AND ALLOW YOU TO CARRY OUT YOUR POLICIES TO CARRY THE GRADE CROSSING QUESTION TO A SUCCESSFUL ISSUE, WHERE A CHANGE AT THIS TIME WOULD MEAN DELAY AND GOING ALL OVER THE GROUND AGAIN.

SOME UNTHINKING PEOPLE BLAME YOU FOR THE HIGH TAX RATE FOR THIS YEAR, BUT WHAT THE MAYOR HAS TO DO WITH THE TAX RATE IS NOT QUITE CLEAR TO ME. PAST CITY COUNCILS AND MAYORS HAVE LOADED US DOWN WITH THE PUBLIC DEBT UNTIL WE MUST RAISE SOME $80,000 TO PAY INTEREST ALONE, WHICH MUST BE PAID OR THE CITY WILL GO BROKE. THERE IS ALSO A CONSTANT DEMAND FOR EVERY THING THAT BOSTON HAS WITHOUT A THOUGHT OF WHERE THE MONEY IS COMING FROM, SO I FAIL TO SEE HOW THE HEAVY TAX RATE CAN BE LAID AT YOUR DOOR. IT IS MUCH FURTHER BACK.

I HOPE YOU WILL EXCUSE THIS LONG LETTER, BUT I CAN NOT GO AWAY WITHOUT TELLING YOU HOW I FELT AND IF I HAD A HUNDRED VOTES YOU SHOULD HAVE THEM AS A PARTIAL REWARD FOR YOUR PAINSTAKING ADMINISTRATION THE PAST YEAR AND ALL I CAN SAY IS TO STAND FOR THE RIGHT AND TAKE NO BACKWARD STEP.

YOURS VERY RESPECTULLY,
J. L. MILLER.

"No Fault to Find With the Present Administration"

EUGENE R. STONE, THE REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR, SPEAKING AT A REPUBLICAN MEETING IN WARD 4, THURSDAY EVENING, NOV. 19, IS REPORTED IN THE QUINCY DAILY LEDGER OF FRIDAY, NOV. 20, AS SAYING: "HE SAID HE INTENDED TO CARRY ON A CLEAN CAMPAIGN AND HAD NO FAULT TO FIND WITH THE PRESENT ADMINISTRATION."

WHY, THEN, VOTE FOR A CHANGE IN THE PRESENT ADMINISTRATION?

IF THE PRESENT ADMINISTRATION HAS BEEN SUCH AS TO WIN PUBLIC COMMENDATION FROM MR. STONE, THE REPUBLICAN MAYORALTY CANDIDATE, WHY NOT CONTINUE MAYOR SHEA IN OFFICE FOR ANOTHER TERM?

IF THE ADMINISTRATION OF MAYOR SHEA HAS BEEN SUCH AS TO WIN THE ABOVE PUBLIC ACKNOWLEDGMENT FROM HIS OPPONENT, MR. STONE, THERE MUST BE SOME MERIT IN THE CONDUCT OF AFFAIRS THAT MADE SUCH AN ACKNOWLEDGEMENT POSSIBLE. NEVER BEFORE IN THE HISTORY OF THE CITY HAS SUCH A CONVINCING STATEMENT BEEN MADE BY AN OPPOSING CANDIDATE.

IF YOU WANT BUSINESS METHODS TO PREVAIL IN YOUR STREET BUILDING DEPARTMENT, THE LETTING OF PUBLIC CONTRACTS AND THE OTHER AFFAIRS OF A BUSINESS CORPORATION LIKE QUINCY, ENDORSE THE POLICY THAT HAS BEEN PURSUED THE PAST YEAR, THE POLICY THAT COMPELLED CANDIDATE STONE TO PAY PUBLIC TRIBUTE TO IT, BY VOTING FOR

VOTE FOR EUGENE R. STONE FOR MAYOR

In the Daily Ledger of Saturday, Nov. 29, appeared an article signed by Mr. McGilvray the President of the Democratic City Committee stating that Eugene R. Stone had said he " had no fault to find with the present administration."

Mr. Stone denies ever making this statement. No less an illustrious gentleman than President Roosevelt has characterized such a statement as this as "a lie" and it is not necessary to follow his example in this case, but it is necessary to place before the voters a few facts and let them judge as to whether the administration of Mayor Shea has been good and should be continued or not.

Previous to Mr. Shea's election last year, over his personal signature, he said: "I believe no contract should be given as a reward for political services."

The contract for furnishing chairs and desks for the new Coddington school was awarded to one of Mr. Shea's endorsers, at a figure several hundred dollars higher than the bid of a regular and reputable dealer in school furniture, whose product was as good or superior, in the judgment of competent authorities, as that furnished by the one who obtained the contract.

Purchases of material have been made from Falconer & Co. Mr. Alexander Falconer, a member of Falconer & Co., is a member of the present City Council and is also a signer of the appeal to voters to re-elect Mayor Shea. Are these "rewards for political services?"

He says: "I believe in strict enforcement of the No License Laws." Seldom, if ever, has there been a year in which the liquor laws have been so laxly enforced as during Mayor Shea's term.

Fewer raids have been made and less prosecutions started than in past years.

He says: "I believe that the head of each administrative department should be held responsible for the success of that department."

It is a well known fact that the Commissioner of Public works has been hampered by subordinates who have acted without his approval and against his orders. Is this "prudent and business-like methods?"

The Mayor cannot escape responsibility for the appointment of the present Board of Assessors, whose disatrous blunder, owing doubtless to their inexperience, in raising valuations have saddled upon the tax payers a a who!!y needless burden, as all metropolitan and state taxes are based largely on upon valuation and the increase instate and metropolitan taxes brings no benefit to citizens of Quincy which they did not enjoy before, forless cost.

IS THIS "GOOD BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION?" DO WE WANT MORE OF IT?

He says: I believe that no official should be permitted to build up a political machine."

It is not just clear what a political machine may be, but the public impression doubtless is that this declaration was meant to convey that his appointees should not be active in political work, nor use their influence upon their friends to promote his political interests and ambition. ONE OF HIS APPOINTEES circulated and solicited signatures to the letter of endorsem entpublished in the Ledger, and also his nomination papers, AND OTHERS ARE ACTIVELY ENGAGED in his CAMPAIGN WORK.

THE CITY PAY ROLLS show a large increase in the number of laborers and mechanics and it is fair to assume that these men will be influenced by City Officials to vote and work for Mayor Shea's reelection.

IS THIS BREEDING "A POLITICAL MACHINE?"

Instead of appointing a City Engineer, the Mayor's brother Michael, was placed upon the City's Pay Roll, and the Mayor recommends to the City Council an appropriation of $5000 for Engineering services in relation to grade crossing matters, which any competent City Engineer could have rendered without any additional expense to the taxpayers. IS THIS AN "ECONOMICAL AND BUSINESS-LIKE METHOD?" Fortunately the City Council refused to countenance such an unwarranted expenditure of public money and cut the figure to $1000. Nothing has yet been done in this matter.

EXPENDITURES ARE BEING MADE in a lavish way, and without regard to financial consequences. OVER $9,900 have been expended in the Gypsy Moth matter alone.

Mr. Stone is engaged in the business of installing Heating and Ventilating apparatus particularly in public buildings such as schools, halls, etc. During his four consecutive years in the City Council the plans for the High, Atlantic, and Coddington Schools were adopted, and new heating apparatus installed in the Willard School. Mr. Stone refused to figure on any of this work simply because he was a member of the City Government.

Nobody can successfully impeach his honesty nor can any one mistrust his motives or doubt his ability. If Mr. Stone is elected he will have the courage to show the citizens the exact financial and other conditions which face us January first, 1909.

Elect EUGENE R. STONE for Mayor

WILLIAM M. CHASE, 192 Davis Street, President Republican City Committee.

DEATHS IN MINE WILL REACH 138

Result of Explosion In World's Model Mining Town

DEFECTIVE CHECK-OFF SYSTEM

Accurate Statement as to Fatalities Cannot Be Secured--Mutilated Bodies of Twenty-Three Men Brought to the Surface, While Bodies of Men Who Were Suffocated Were Not Even Scratched

Pittsburg, Nov. 30.—Fifty-two bodies, all but two of them horribly mutilated, have been removed from the Rachel mine of the Pittsburg-Buffalo Coal company at Marianna, where a terrific explosion occurred Saturday, killing many men and casting gloom over what was then considered the model mining town of the world. A number of other bodies have been found in the workings and are being brought out as rapidly as possible.

There is no doubt that the death list will reach 138 men. Officials of the company admit that 138 men went down the shaft to work Saturday morning. According to miners and others familiar with the number of men generally employed in the mine, the death list will exceed the company's estimate by at least fifty.

As in nearly all mine disasters, there seems no way at present of knowing how many men went to work. The number check-off system has again proved defective and from no source can an accurate statement as to the fatalities be secured. It is possible that the exact number of men killed will never be known. Arms, legs or heads are missing from some, and the trunks of others are burned, bruised and cut.

Two of the men taken from the mine were suffocated and their bodies were not even scratched. One of these was John Ivill, who was employed as head time-keeper. Ivill's body was found beneath a coal-digging machine and it was apparent that he crawled there in a vain effort to escape the deadly fumes. The body of the other man was found near Ivill. The unfortunate had placed his face in a pool of water, which all miners are advised to do when an explosion occurs, in a desperate attempt to fight off suffocation until rescued.

The opinion is expressed by a number of expert miners that the mine will not be cleared of victims for several days. A small fire broke out in the mine yesterday. Several fire losses, properly equipped, were hurried into the mine and succeeded in extinguishing the blaze before any serious damage was done.

Reports are in circulation that a second and more terrific explosion is likely to occur at any moment. The company officials assert this is not true. There is considerable gas in the mine, however, and there is undoubtedly danger of a second explosion.

Conditions about the mouth of the mine were disagreeable Sunday. A drizzling rain fell and the weather grew cold. Many relatives of the victims stood all day close to the ropes around the shaft, but there were few of the harrowing scenes usually associated with a mine explosion. Most of the relatives are English-speaking people who bear their grief in silence. It is estimated that one-fourth of the victims are Americans.

As rapidly as possible the work of recovery is being carried on. At short intervals new men are sent into the mine to relieve others searching for the dead. Owing to the dangerous gases and the mass of wreckage in the mine, the work is slow and is being carried on with great precaution.

Notwithstanding the isolation of Marianna, thousands of persons found their way there yesterday. One boarding house near the mine was almost wrecked by persons seeking meals. The small house was packed almost to suffocation.

Whenever possible, the bodies are being embalmed. The bodies recovered yesterday will be buried before tonight, owing to rapid decomposition. Around the mine's mouth and the boiler-house, nearby, which is being used as a temporary morgue, there is a sickening odor. Disinfectants are being used in large quantities and the situation is greatly relieved by the change to colder weather. It is feared had the weather remained as warm as Saturday an epidemic of disease would have resulted.

The only man who escaped from the mine after the explosion, Fred Elinger, sustained injuries from which it is believed he cannot recover.

Castro on "Diplomatic Business"

Basse Terre, Guadeloupe, Nov. 30.—President Castro of Venezuela arrived here on board the steamer Guadeloupe, on his way to Bordeaux. In reply to interviewers Castro declared that the object of his journey was to settle some diplomatic business with the French government.

Nothing For the Press

London, Nov. 30.—The opening meeting of the international conference on maritime warfare is fixed for Dec. 4. Representatives of the newspapers will be excluded from the meeting and no statement will be issued to the newspapers during the progress of the conference.

BRAINTREE.

Antietam camp, S. of V., No. 32, at the regular meeting Tuesday night, was inspected by Division Inspector Cook of Whitman. A very creditable showing was made. The large attendance was augmented by a number of visiting members of the G. A. R. from Braintree and surrounding towns. After the inspection the new officers were nominated.

A special car carrying a twelve-inch rifle to be placed on the battleship Dakota, was detained at the repair shop at the station until Tuesday night, when it was shipped to the Fore River works.

Thomas Margeson of the U. S. S. Salem, is home on a furlough and is spending the time with his relatives. He talks interestingly of his late experiences in Cuba.

J. F. Sheppard & Sons are making extensive repairs on their ice houses having practically rebuilt the whole of the woodwork.

At the last meeting of the Sunset lodge, N. E. O. P., at Odd Fellows' hall, District Deputy Merriman and his suite of Boston were present. Also visiting members of Pilgrim lodge of Randolph, who, with the deputy assisted in the initiation ceremony. At the next meeting it is expected that the degree staff of Pilgrim lodge will be present and do the initiatory work on several candidates. Officers for the ensuing year will also be nominated.

A number of the members of Sunset lodge visited Peerless lodge of Holbrook Monday evening to assist in observing the twenty-first anniversary of the foundation of the order of the N. E. O. P.

Quite a number of people witnessed the foot ball game on the common Thanksgiving morning. The South Braintree team defeated the Quincy team 10 to 0.

Members of the club whose gunning stand is at Great pond, report an unusually successful season of ducks and geese.

Mr. Edward F. Watkins of Washington street, has the sympathy of the community in the death of his daughter Marion, who passed away after a short illness at her home Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. M. Alonzo Minchin of Middle street, is out again after her recent illness.

Hiram Kelley of Washington street, left Friday for California, and his many friends wish him a pleasant winter.

One of the most rascally acts committed in this town for years occurred at an early hour Sunday morning when some villian or villians broke the lock on the door of the hen house of Charles Pace on Commercial street and taking all his hens ten in number, half killed them and left them strewed about the yard. The humane society should get after the rascals who committed the deed.

The Union Literary circle met on Tuesday evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Crane of Quincy avenue. Mrs. Eleanor Holmes gave a fine paper upon "New Plebianism versus Old Gentility." The next meeting will be held with Miss Jessie Macgregor of Liberty street, Dec. 8.

Mr. and Mrs. John O'Rooke of Bowditch street observed the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage last Wednesday evening. Many relatives and friends were present.

Messrs. J. F. Sheppard & Sons bestowed a turkey on each employee according to their time-honored Thanksgiving custom.

GRADE CROSSING HEARING.

The hearings before the special commission appointed by the superior court to determine how the grades at the Saville and Water street crossing of the railroad have been so long drawn out owing to frequent postponements that interest in the subject seems to have grown luke warm.

There has been no question before the citizens for a long time more than this for it means the separation of the grades not for a few years but for all time.

Opinion is divided as to the better of the two plans proposed, raising the present grade of the tracks or lowering them. Which ever plan is reported some one must suffer injury to their property. The only question is to accomplish the desired end, with as little damage to property as possible for this enters largely into the cost.

Someone is bound to be injured what ever plan is adopted. At Water street it has been practically agreed that the proper method is to cross the tracks by an overhead bridge. The proposition at Saville street is an entirely different one. The cost of lowering the grade of the tracks at this crossing has been estimated by the engineers at $350,000. Should the tracks be raised the expense will be very much less.

At the hearing, Nov. 7, which was continued until Monday Nov. 30, at the request of the commonwealth, City Solicitor McAnarney gave notice that at the hearing set for Nov. 30, he should move that the hearings be closed as at that time the city would have completed its case. This hearing therefore should be well attended.

ARM BADLY LACERATED.

Ralph Doble of South street had his arm badly lacerated Friday evening by having it caught in the machinery at the Boston Gear Works. When the accident happened his fellow employes seemed to be panic stricken and but for his own presence of mind in stopping the machinery he would have lost his arm.

After his arm had been released a tourniquet was applied to prevent his bleeding to death. Physicians were called and the young man was removed to his home in the police ambulance.

The unfortunate accident broke up a jolly party of young people who were to attend the Assembly ball.

CONVINCING FACTS.

There is no use denying the fact that Johnson Bros., are surely giving genuine bargains in food values. It will be hard indeed to find a store that is giving such excellent quality at such low prices.

Everything the best that money can buy, is their standard; and their customers know from past dealings that that is absolutely true. Now with our discount system, it is still more of an inducement to trade with us, and you will be surprised to find how fast your discount checks will count up.

We are displaying every day a choice assortment of Cut Meats, with the prices marked in plain figures, so that every one can see what they are paying for or we will cut it to your order, whichever you prefer.

We are pleased that so many of our customers have helped us to make this system a success, for it means a whole lot to them as well as to us. We do not think that any one objects to carrying home a purchase especially when they are paid to do so, which we are doing, with our discount check system.

We are receiving new seasonable goods every day, and it will be to your interest to visit our store and do business with us.

Beef, Lamb and Fresh Pork are all lower and we have a choice lot of Fresh Killed Chicken and Fowl constantly on hand, direct from William A. Drake of Braintree.

A tempting line of New Canned Goods, packed expressly for us.

An excellent stock of New Cereals, Buckwheat, Pan Cake Flour, and all the leading brands of Bread and Pastry Flour.

All kinds of Bottled Goods, Jellies, Jams, Olives and Pickles.

Fresh Hot House Lettuce, Choice Celery, Radishes, Cucumbers, and Fruits of all kinds.

Remember, that every day is BARGAIN day at Johnson Bros., so keep in the road, for all roads lead to our store.

And, remember that we give you 5 per cent discount on all cash purchases, if you take the purchase home, or 2 per cent discount when you ask us to deliver it.

Yours for Quality,

JOHNSON BROS., City Square, Quincy.

This excursion will cover about seventy days. After this they plan to visit European countries. They will enbark Feb. 4th for the old world.

KEEP OUT THE SALOON.

Eternal vigilance keeps Quincy in the van of no-license cities of the commonwealth. Each year questions of candidates and platforms occupy the attention of the people for a time to the exclusion of all others, but the temperance question is always brought to the attention of the public before election. All the churches refer to it, and one big union no-license rally is always held Sunday evening preceding election.

Time was when the liquor interests although dismayed, looked with a degree of philosophy on no-license victories, feeling sure that in a short time the tide would turn back to saloons and drunkenness. It is not so now. Quincy's no-license majority is continually growing, and will continue as long as the temperance advocates maintain their vigilance.

Whatever differences of opinion may exist regarding parties and candidates, all citizens ought to agree on no-license and cast an avalanche of votes Tuesday against the saloon. saloon.

CONTINUING THEIR STUDIES.

That our High school is taking a high standard as a preparatory school for those who intend to continue their studies has become an established fact and is shown by the large number of students in the High school last year who are now continuing their studies in higher institutions of learning.

The following is as near a complete list, as possible to obtain, of all those continuing their studies. The members of the class of 1907 mentioned are those who were in school for either a part or the whole of last year.

1907—Ruth Bean, Mass. Normal Art School; Harold Curtis, Tufts Dental; Stanley Duncan, Tufts Medical; Mary Agnes Henchey, Bridgewater Normal; Ethel Humphrey, Bridgewater Normal; Theodore Marceau, Mass. Inst. of Tech.; Robinson Murray, Harvard; Max O. Pinkham, Brown University; Elsie Woll, Mass. Normal Art School.

1908—Alfred J. Barnard, Oberlin College; Angelo P. Bizzozero, Mass. Inst. of Tech.; Jennie Cumming, Bridgewater Normal; Elizabeth Duran, Chandler Shorthand School, Lucile Elwell, Sargent School for Physical Education; Marion Farwell, Mt. Holyoke College; Gladys Howe, Chandler Shorthand School; Ruth Kemp, Bridgewater Normal; Walter H. Lacey, Harvard; M. Grace Larkin, Bridgewater Normal; Imogene Livermore, Tufts Medical; Katherine McDonald, Chandler Shorthand School; William J. Nolan, Yale Law School; Grace C. Parker, Boston University; Rosanna Picard, Miss Symond's Kindergarten; Jessie Pratt, Radcliffe College; Stanley Sherman, Amherst College; Roberta Smith, Bridgewater Normal; Caro Summer, Sargent School for Physical Education Brewster L. Walker, Mass. Inst. of Tech; Blodwen Walters, Bridgewater Normal; William Weeden, Colby College.

HOUGHS NECK ASSOCIATES.

A very pretty dancing party was held Friday evening at Associates hall, Houghs Neck, under the auspices of the Houghs Neck Associates. Nearly fifty couple were present. The floor was in charge of George E. Urann and William J. Hudson. Music was furnished by the Houghs Neck orchestra. Dancing was enjoyed until eleven.

WITHOUT RISK TO LIFE OR LIMB

Great Things Expected of the Bell Flying Machine

Halifax, Nov. 30.—Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, the famous inventor of the telephone, has completed his experiments at Bras d'Or lake with his flying machine, the aerodrome, as he names it, and is ready to make a public trial of the machine this week. He is confident that it will surpass the recent records made by the Wrights and others.

Professor Bell proposes to launch his aerodrome by means of a platform placed on two powerful racing motor boats. The boats will run up into the outer Bras d'Or lake, and when a speed of 18 knots is attained the aerodrome will be released. It will then, according to Professor Bell, soar into the air and fly away at the will of the man at the helm. The inventor declares the flight will be made without the slightest risk to the life or limb of the operator.

GATHERING OF PROTESTANTS

Distinguished Delegates to Federal Council at Philadelphia

Philadelphia, Nov. 30.—This city will be the scene this week of one of the largest religious gatherings ever held in America. It will be the meeting of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, representing almost all of the Protestant denominations. Of the large churches of the country the only one not represented in the council is the Protestant Episcopalian. Twenty-eight leading Protestant churches will send 366 delegates to the convention.

Governor Hughes of New York, as one of the thirty-two representatives of the Baptist church in the council, will participate in the discussion of topics bearing upon church federation and will address one of the mass meetings. His theme will be "Civic Righteousness."

Among the other distinguished lay delegates to the council will be Governor Ansel of South Carolina, Governor Hoch of Kansas and Judge Grosscup of Chicago.

Has Lived 107 Years

Oxford, Mass., Nov. 30.—Mrs. Catherine Suay passed the 107th anniversary of her birth at her home in North Oxford yesterday. Propped up in bed, where she has lain for the last four years, partly paralyzed, she received the congratulations of many callers. Beside her on a stand lay her smoking materials, for she has been a user of tobacco for ninety-six years. Much of the time the aged woman lies apparently unconscious, but occasionally her eyes brighten up with a gleam of recognition as a caller greets her and she speaks of happenings of half a century or more ago. The present is to her a sealed book.

To Reorganize Navy Department

Washington, Nov. 30.—President Roosevelt soon may appoint a commission to investigate the entire system of the navy department, looking toward a reorganization of that department and the establishment of a general staff to act in an advisory capacity to a civilian secretary of the navy. It is authoritatively learned that Secretary Root has been asked to accept the chairmanship of such a commission.

Keeping Secrets to Themselves

Berlin, Nov. 30.—American consuls in Germany are having slight success in obtaining replies from German manufacturers respecting the cost of production of their wares, how wages are distributed, etc., for nearly all of the manufacturers are quietly combined to resist the inquiries which the consuls were ordered by the state department to make for use by the house ways and means committee in revising the tariff.

Auto Struck Telegraph Pole

New York, Nov. 30.—One man was killed and six others injured in an automobile accident in the Bronx. The car was thrown against a telegraph pole by the explosion of a tire and its seven occupants hurled out. Harry Greenhood, 42 years old, sustained a fracture of the skull from which death ensued a few minutes later. Addison Wade, the chauffeur, was arrested and held in $5000 bail.

Guarding Against Cattle Disease

Bangor, Me., Nov. 30.—At a meeting of the Maine state board of cattle commissioners last night it was decided to declare a rigid quarantine against all cattle from other states or countries until further notice by the board. Chairman Beal said that this action had been taken to guard the herds of Maine against the foot and mouth disease which is prevalent in other states.

Would Further Cut Expenses

Boston, Nov. 30.—The finance commission, which is investigating the departmental administration of the affairs of the city of Boston, last night rendered its report on the public buildings department. It finds that the present superintendent has reduced expenses the past year over $42,000, but recommends further cutting.

The Weather Forecast

The weather will be fair in New England; slightly colder in north portion.

The Observations In the Daily Walk

James G. Welsh of the Downs Cash grocery is in New York for a few days.

Mrs. E. A. Snow of East Elm avenue is visiting her sister Mrs. Robert Cobb of Providence, R. I.

Roger the young son of William S. Stone formerly of Braintree is at the Quincy Hospital for treatment.

Rev. Nathaniel J. Sproul pastor of the Water street Presbyterian church has been extended a call from the First Presbyterian church at Newport, R. I. He has not decided as yet whether or not he will accept.

The W. C. T. U. will hold its next regular meeting on Thursday, Dec. 3, in Protection hall at 3 P. M. It is hoped that all members will be present as business of importance is to come up before the meeting. The L. T. L. will meet the same day at 4.15.

The report in the Boston papers of the death of Robert, aged four, son of Harry and Isabel Linnell of of Dorchester does not mean Robert, son of Harry and Isabel Linnell of of Norfolk Downs. By a strange coincidence all names are alike, causing much anxiety and sorrow to some of the friends of the latter family.

FOOTBALL CHAMPIONSHIP.

In a letter to the Daily Ledger James D. Kent, Jr., formerly connected with Adams Academy of this city, but now located at Detroit University school, wishes to inform the people as to the correct standing in the football championship of the Middle West.

Mr. Kent's letter was occasioned by the appearance in a Boston newspaper of an article stating that Englewood High school team of Chicago, champions of the Middle West, was to play the Waltham High school team.

It is stated by Mr. Kent, that though he is an Easterner, his work keeps him in the West nine months of the year and he knows exactly the standing of the teams in that section of the country. He adds that the only claim the Englewood team has to the championship is a 6-6 tie with Grand Rapids High of Michigan, the team that Detroit university school defeated 67-4.

Thus Mr. Kent claims that Detroit school is the champion team of the Middle West and bases his claim on the fact that his school has scored, in seven games, 467 points to 15 for the opponents. Mr. Kent would like to have this known in the East so that there will be no misunderstanding in regard to the real champions.

PROBATE COURT.

Judge Flint held probate court at Dedham on Wednesday and transacted the following business:

Wills allowed: Of Emily A. Doherty, Milton; Mary E. Brown, Foxboro; Elijah W. Moffatt, Hyde Park; and Ann Bowen, Brookline.

Trusteeship granted: To Edwin H. Jose of Cambridge, of certain estate given in trust under the will of David F. McGilvray, Brookline, bond $20,000.

Administrations granted: On the estates of Oscar W. Grad, Hyde Park; John Kent, Brookline; Frank A. Sonia, Quincy; Thomas Meighan, Hyde Park; Mary F. Mason, Medfield; Daniel Murphy, Wellesley; Ellen O'Donnell, Medway and George O. Kingsbury, Needham.

Accounts allowed: On the estate of Dorothy B. Jones, Brookline, for $33,011.07.

Guardians were appointed over several children in this county.

RALLY AT HOUGHS NECK.

There was an attendance of more than seventy-five at the rally for Mr. Stone at the Houghs Neck Associates Friday evening and the remarks of the candidate were listened to with much interest. Edgar B. Farmer presided and introduced Mr. Stone as one who had done much to help Houghs Neck when he was a member of the City Council.

Mr. Stone said he favored a public landing at Houghs Neck, also other improvements there, and said he would do all he could to make that section of the city a desirable residential locality.

Tonight's meeting of the Citizens' Association will probably determine how much general interest there is that the City Charter be amended. The association has had this question before them for several months. They have had several public meetings at which out of town speakers made addresses and have held several special assigned meetings of their own.

Yet for the most part they have been but slimly attended and there has seemed to be no general interest or demand for any radical change.

All of the clubs and organizations of the city have been invited to send a committee to the meeting called for Monday night to discuss the two proposed plans.

The response to these invitations should determine just what public interest there is in the matter. If no more interest is shown than has been in the past the question would better be dropped until there is some more urgent demand for a change than there is at present.

BECHARD—HAMEL.

Henri P. Bechard, Esq., of Lewiston, Maine, and Miss Rose E. Hamel, a niece of Fr. Hamel of St. Mary's parish, were married Wednesday morning at 10.30 o'clock at St. Mary's church, Rev. Arthur A. Hamel performed the ceremony with the high nuptial mass with the assistance of the deacon and sub-deacon of the church. No one was present at the ceremony except several priests and the choir. Prof. Henry F. Roy presided at the organ.

Following the service a wedding lunch was served at noon at the rectory of Father Hamel. Mr. and Mrs. Bechard left in the afternoon for Quincy, Mass. Later they will visit in Boston, New York and Washington, D. C. Upon their return they will make their home at Mr. Bechard's fine home on Pierce street.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hamel of Quincy, Mass. She has unusual musical ability and has been organist at St. Mary's church. Before coming to Lewiston she resided at Augusta where her uncle had a parish. Mr. Bechard has been a resident of Lewiston for the past eighteen years. He is a lawyer of ability and has been prominent in the Democratic party. He is a member of the Lewiston lodge of Elks.—Lewiston Sun.

GRIFFIN—CLINTON.

A very pretty wedding took place at the parochial residence of the church of the Sacred Heart, Weymouth, Wednesday evening, the contracting parties being Miss Margaret E., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Clinton of Quincy avenue, East Braintree, and Mr. Thomas E. Griffin a well known traveling salesman of Weymouth.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. B. Holland.

The bride was attended by her sister Miss Mary O. Clinton and the groom's brother was best man. A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents on Quincy avenue.

On their return from a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Griffin will reside in Boston.

WILL HOLD THREE CONCERTS.

The Milton Education Society has announced for its fourth season three concerts of such remarkably high order that they will awaken interest throughout Greater Boston. Monsieur Charles Gilibert of the Manhattan Opera Co., a singer deservedly ranked among the really great artists, will give a recital on December 7, assisted by Madame Gilibert, and accompanied by Mr. Alfred de Volo. On February 1, Mr. Ossip Gabrilowitsch, the Russian pianist, who is this year making his fourth American tour, will give a recital, and finally, on April 12, will come the Adamowski Trio.

Of these concerts the Boston Transcript says that the quality is, as heretofore, "unique in such ventures." The same article calls Mr. Gabrilowitsch a pianist who is "now by full title of progress and achievement a distinguished virtuoso and notable in particular for the fine fibre of his artistry and the continence of his feelings," and calls M. Gilibert "a true and widely ranging master of the art of diction, with his work in New York," it continues, "he sings seldom hereabouts nowadays, and in Milton, Boston, so to say, will have its only opportunity to hear him in concert, and especially in the humor, the light feeling and the playful imagination of his old French songs. "In conclusion the writer says: "Oftenest suburban concerts have little interest for a metropolitan public, but recitals by Mr. Gilibert and Mr. Gabrilowitsch are as truly metropolitan in Milton as they would be in Boston or in New York. Such concerts near large cities usually seek and gain the commonplace. Those in Milton steadily avoid it. It is the custome to say that suburban life dulls liking for the arts. In Milton it seems to stimulate it."

BRANDENBURG IN COURT

Faces Judge Today on Larceny Charge For Cleveland Article

New York, Nov. 30.—Broughton Brandenburg, the author and journalist, faced the court today on a charge of larceny in the second degree in connection with the sale of the disputed Cleveland letter which caused a sensation during the recent presidential campaign. The letter, which purported to be the views of former President Cleveland on the issues of the campaign, attacked William Jennings Bryan and his views.

BROUGHTON BRANDENBURG.

The paper which published the interview declared that it was purchased from Brandenburg after assurances from the executors of Mr. Cleveland's estate that it was genuine. These assurances were afterward withdrawn by Mr. Hastings, one of the Cleveland executors, and it was then declared that the interview was a forgery.

Brandenburg was arrested in Dayton, O. He waived extradition and was brought to New York. The charge against him is similar to one of obtaining money under false pretenses.

MEN WITH GOOD ATHLETIC RECORDS

Entered For Indoor Championships at New York

New York, Nov. 30.—The indoor athletic championships of the Amateur Athletic union will be held in Madison Square Garden tonight and tomorrow night. It is confidently expected that several records will be smashed by the athletes who have entered their names for the various events.

Con Leahy, the Irish jumper, has sent in his entry. Leahy has been training hard in order to get in good condition for this event and will endeavor to win back his laurels from Harry F. Porter, who defeated him last year. Porter is also entered, as well as a score of other well known jumpers.

Mat McGrath, the giant policeman, who competes for the New York A. C., will meet some well known weight tossers. Last year McGrath broke the record for this event, and it is likely that he may set up a new record this time.

For the first time in the history of the indoor championships the colleges will take part in the meeting.

Woodruff Gives Way to Root

Hot Springs, Va., Nov. 30.—Timothy L. Woodruff, chairman of the New York state Republican committee, withdrew yesterday from the United States senatorial contest in favor of Secretary of State Root. This action was taken after a protracted conference with President-elect Taft and was followed by statements by both Taft and Woodruff. Aside from these statements, each of which concedes Root to succeed Platt on Jan. 19 next, no details of the conference were made known.

Millionaire Shot to Death

Havana, Nov. 30.—Tirso Mesa, a multi-millionaire and a member of the London board of directors of the United Railways of Havana, was shot and killed on his estate in Matanzas province by Ramon F. Victorio, a local merchant. It is supposed that the trouble arose through a business quarrel. Mesa, who was a sugar planter and the owner of much real estate in Havana, received five shots, causing instant death. His assailant was arrested.

An Alleged Jewelry Thief

Boston, Nov. 30.—John Kadera, aged 20 years, who has been held in the East Cambridge jail awaiting trial on the charge of larceny from a building in Framingham, was placed under arrest last night as a fugitive from justice. The Boston police claim Kadera is wanted in New York on the charge of grand larceny of diamonds and jewelry, valued at $1800.

St. Pierre's New Governor Arrives

St. Pierre, Miq., Nov. 30.—The French warship Admiral Aubo, with the new governor of the colony, Paul Didelot, on board, has arrived from France. The new official received a hearty welcome from the townspeople. It is understood that Didelot will immediately take up the school question, which caused the recent demonstrations here.

Quincy Locals Briefly Told

The Quincy Day Nursery association will meet on Tuesday, Dec. 1, at 3 P. M. in the Woman's clubhouse. Everyone interested is invited to attend.

Extra Ledgers will be issued Tuesday night giving the returns from the several precincts and wards as fast as received.

Owing to the rush of political matter Saturday, that came in late several columns of live news matter that was in type was crowded out.

There was a pleasant gathering of relatives and friends at 22 Broadway Sunday evening, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Falconer, at the christening of their daughter, Lillian Esther, by the Rev. Alfred R. Atwood. Both young people are very popular among the residents of the Point, many of whom were present at the christening party. After the ceremony refreshments were served.

John Mahon, well known in Quincy musical circles, who has been away for the past few months for his health, has returned to his home. John is now the picture of health and has put on many pounds of weight. His friends will be glad to know that he has so improved in health.

SCHOOLS DIES IN HOSPITAL.

That scores were not killed outright was due probably to the fact that the rear of the car was not crowded, but there was plenty for the rescuers to do and more than fifty injured were taken from the car. Although some were thrown to the floors in the other cars, none was seriously injured outside the occupants of the telescoped car.

Revision of City Charter.

For the purpose of finding out whether there is a general demand for a new charter for the City of Quincy or for a revision of the present charter, the Citizens' Association has asked representatives from the various associations to meet the Charter Committee at the rooms of the Granite Manufacturers' Association, Adams Building on Monday evening, November 30th, 1908 at 8 o'clock.

Citizens are cordially invited to attend this meeting and present their views on this subject.

TO HIS HONOR.

To the Editors of the Quincy Ledger.

Gentlemen: On Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday of last week I published information concerning the administration of Mr. Shea. Although he had the public records at his elbow with which to refute my statements, if not ture, he has not attempted to contradict me in any public way. The public may decide whether or not my statements are truthful and fair. Had they been otherwise how quickly would his endorsers rush into print and nail the lie."

Although after my first publication I was threatened with all sorts of trouble, I was not deterred from what I believed my plain duty.

Now that Mr. Shea has been publicly endorsed by a number of men, most of which are directly or indirectly connected either through relationship or friendship with the appointees of the administration, leads one to wonder why only so few of the names of the prominent Quincy business men appear on the list. This is significant, inasmuch as Mr. Shea has had a whole year in which to prepare for this contingency, and I am surprised that so few are willing to publicly declare themselves in his favor. Why is it that the name of only one business man from his own ward appears.

I have publicly declared myself knowing the emnity I would incur. I have presented the facts as I conscientiously viewed them without malice or predjudice.

Foot Ball And Other Sports

John Linn, the former Adams Academy and Boston College athlete, now a student at the St. Anselm's college, Manchester, N. H., who has been spending his Thanksgiving recess in Quincy returns to college today. "Jack" was considered a "find" on the football team, doing all the kicking this season. He is quite a basket ball player too and will probably be seen on the college team this year. At baseball Jack shines and in the box will be the mainstay of the team.

Quincy friends of Carl W. Gram of Wollaston are rooting for his success on the indoor track the coming winter. Carl is captain of the M. I. T. track team and is one of the speediest men on the outfit and is the New England intercollegiate 220 yard record holder.
